Another Holston original, "Phyco" exhibits the "unique tenor lead as employed by Woody Herman." The FSU interpretation will feature the tenor sax of Manuel Vega and the trumpet of Harold Alexander.

Another original by Holston is titled "Decorum." The tune has the typical "Stan Kentonish Style," the program states. It features a trumpet solo by the composer.

Other arrangements include "I Love You," by Bill Holston, "Embraceable You," by John Baxley and "For You," also by Baxley.

The band, composed of five trumpets, four trombones, five saxophones, four rhythm instruments boasts a tuba. Musicians "Seek a way to apply the fundamentals of harmony and composition learned in the University classroom to the American jazz idiom."

Says Bill Holston of the band, "We realize that jazz plays a big part in the daily life of millions of Americans . . ." How else can we continue and improve our American jazz field except by studying and working with it. . ."

According to Braunagel, the band is building up a library to cover a variety of musical sounds . . . and incidentally, to provide opportunities for students in the Music school here interested in dance band arranging.

The experimental orchestra is one of few in the nation, according to Lab Band spokesmen, which operates within a university organization.

The Monday night concert is free of charge to everyone.

Concert Scheduled By Sauter-Finnegan Next Friday, 6 p.m.

The Sauter-Finnegan orchestra, contracted for the IFC dance next weekend, will present a public concert next Friday. The concert is slated for the Outdoor Amphitheater at 6 p.m., according to Pete Nimkoff, publicity director.

The Symphony in jazz will also include judging of candidates in the "Queen of the IFC" contest, reports concert chairman Charlie Miner.

The Sauter-Finnegan band, according to IFC spokesmen, have rocketed to national prominence in recent hit records like "April in Paradise," "Nina Never Knew" and "Midnight Sleighride."

Introducing new instruments and "new sound" to the pops field, the Sauter-Finnegan band earned comparison in Metronome Magazine to the Goodman Band of 1935, Glenn Miller of '37, and the second Herman Herd, it was noted.

Ed Sauter, it is reported, wrote many of Swing King Benny Goodman's arrangements. Bill Finnegan arranged for Tommy Dorsey and handled arrangements for Glen Miller. In the current movie on Miller, the new "Little Brown Jug" arrangement was done by Finnegan.

Historical Meet Slated Today For Longmire

Registration for the Florida Historical Society two-day meet started this morning in the Longmire Building. The meet is sponsored jointly by the Tallahassee Historical Society and Florida State University, spokesmen revealed.

All programs and sessions will be held in the Longmire Building, which is convention headquarters for the group. Among the speakers for the event will be J. Velma Keen, president of the Tallahassee Society and second vice-president of the state society.

This morning's session will include several Tallahassee area papers.

Other speakers besides Keene will be Dr. R. L. Goulding on "Extracts from a Key West Diary;" Dr. Mark Boyd, "Ft. Scott: A Window Overlooking Florida"; and Mrs. Julia Herring, "The Plantation System in Leon County, 1838-1848."

The meet is reported to be highlighting early activities in St. Augustine, Key West, Tampa, Pensacola, and Tallahassee areas.

Scheduled to give the welcoming address is President Doak S. Campbell. Dr. Sam Neel, FSU chaplain, will give the invocation.

Other speakers on the program are those representing the University of Miami, and the University of Florida.

They include Dr. Herbert J. Doherty, University of Florida, "Richard Keith Call, Pioneer Floridian"; Dr. William J. Schellings, University of Miami, "Tampa in 1898"; and Dr. Lyle N. McAllister, University of Florida, "William Augustus Bowles and the State of Muskogee."

John S. Blocker, president of the state organization, will be toastmaster at the banquet tonight to be held in Suwannee Room.

Yesterday, the group went on historical tours of Tallahassee as a prelude of the program. R. A. Gray, Secretary of State, and Dr. Mark F. Boyd were in charge of the tours which included government buildings and the Natural Bridge Battleground.

The group will be entertained at a tea at "Goodwood," historical plantation, home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hood, this afternoon, officials said.

The states at large, from the territorial days down throughout the plantation and Civil War eras will be discussed at tomorrow's sessions.

Saturday morning addresses will be given by Dr. Charlton W. Tebeau, University of Miami, on "Marco Island, Recent History," and Dr. J. Ryan Beiser, University of Tampa, on "The Tampa Morning Tribune and National Issues, 1900."

The meeting will adjourn at luncheon tomorrow.

Dean Charles S. Davis of the FSU College of Arts and Sciences is program chairman for the current meeting. He and Keen, two of the 18 directors of the state society, are in charge of all arrangements.

The state society was organized before the civil war in 1857, and incorporated in 1905, it was disclosed.

BAND FESTIVAL

The Florida State University sponsored Band Festival will commence tonight at 7:30, said J. Dayton Smith of the Music Department yesterday. Mr. Smith noted the weekly Fun and Functions and This Week publications originally stated in error that the events would start here Saturday at 7:30.

Constitution Compromise Seen As Senate Considers Changes

Student Senate and the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs may reach a compromise on the long-debated finance article of the proposed Student Body Constitution.

Unofficially presented to the Student Senate at Tuesday's meeting by Vice-President Gene Lawler, the compromise would give the students a strong means of expressing their beliefs on how student and university activity fee money should be budgeted.

Lawler reported that the joint student-faculty committee considering 79 changes made in the proposed Constitution by the Faculty Committee had agreed on a tentative compromise. A joint student-faculty finance committee, according to Lawler's unofficial report, would be set up. This committee would recommend to the Student Senate how it should budget the $13.10 used for "student-initiated" activities, and the budget would be official if reviewed and found satisfactory for the faculty.

The committee's recommendation on how the remainder of activity money—roughly equal to $44—would have to be submitted to the President of the University or a committee appointed by him.

Lawler announced he would present a written report to the Senate next week, at which time it will take official action.

The students had originally asked for complete jurisdiction over activity funds.

Considering other disputed changes made by the faculty committee, the Senate decided to reject changes giving power of review to the faculty and administration on Student Government. The Senators replaced the changes with clauses providing that decisions of the Senate and of the Executive branch may be reviewed only under conditions by which Senate legislation may be reviewed now.

According to the present constitution, as printed in the POW-WOW, Senate legislation may be reviewed only if it pertains to areas of student life under administrative jurisdiction, namely health, safety, public policy, maintenance of university property, academic policy, and public relations, and such other areas as may be specifically denoted in the constitution of the Florida State University or by the Board of Control.

Student Party Officers View Future Aims

Student Party candidates took a majority of offices in the recent Student Body elections race for top offices in the University's Student Government, it was disclosed following official ballot counting Tuesday.

Garnering top honors in the two-party races was Student Party's Pete Nimkoff for Student Body President with a margin of 455 votes over his opponent, John Howard.

Said Nimkoff shortly after official notification of his election, "I'm very grateful to the voters of the student body for their trust in today's elections."

Nimkoff went on to say, regarding his party feelings, "The important thing now is to keep the Student Party above the status of a political machine."

"I sincerely hope those qualifying for election under sponsorship of the Student Party will do so earnestly and with all good intentions of carrying out their party's platform . . . I certainly intend to next year . . ."

Following close behind in Student party honors, according to spokesmen, is Coyle Moore, unopposed, who sought and won Student Party endorsement a few weeks ago, by acclamation of all delegations.

Bob Folsom, Student Party's nominee for Flambeau editor, commenting on his victory over State Party candidate Orchid Alonso, reiterated his previous statements promising the Student Body here a "Flambeau with the high standards reached this year under the present staff, many of whom will be back next year."

Frank Shaw, Student Party Chairman, said yesterday in commenting on elections results, "Speaking for the entire Student Party, I am gratified at the majority response shown to our party's candidates."

Shaw went on to assure the Oil Issue, Everglades Park Gain Prominence In Governors Race

By WARREN L. VERGASON

Florida should carry out any obligations it made to the Federal Government pertaining to the expansion of the Everglades National Park.

Dr. Henry Becker, head of the FSU Department of Geography made this statement as the oil issue climbed in prominence in the governorship campaign. Becker has made numerous studies of Florida's natural resources.

"The natural solution to the Everglades problem is an agreement between the state and Federal government which wouldn't harm the park and wouldn't stymie any future attempts at getting oil," the geographer explained.

Becker cited an address by John D. Pennekamp, member of the Everglades National Park Commission which stated, "Unless Florida oil is produced in extraordinary gusher proportions, the park will be more valuable to our state and union than will oil."

Discussing the low-grade asphalt base oil now being pumped on the outskirts of the park, the FSU scientist pointed out that oil is now being exploited naturally does not compare favorably with Texas oil.

"But we can't think only of the present," he said. "When the supply in Texas runs out we may need more oil. It has always been the case down through history—we get the easiest first, and when its gone we look around for more."

Asked to comment on the farming possibilities of the park as portrayed by some factions, he said, he believed the park should be left in its natural state as nearly as possible, not only to preserve wildlife, but to maintain a water level sufficient for South and Central Florida."

The Central and South Florida Flood Control plan has acquired 1500 square miles of land, he said, and is in the process of enclosing it with levies to impound a great reservoir of water.

This impounded water will be unloosed to raise the water level in dry seasons and retained to control the level in wet seasons.

"Since the impounded water

IBM Tally Puts 'Students' High; Party Cops 14

Gaster, Rice Emerge Victors for Staters; Some Votes Close

Voters Tuesday pushed into major Student Body offices 14 Student Party Candidates out of 16 winners in the annual Student Body Elections. Student Party candidate Peter Nimkoff was elected as next President of the Student Body.

President-Elect Nimkoff, who notched 1,058 votes to his opponent, John Howard's, 603, declared that he was naturally very happy and appreciative over his victory. "I'm sorry the campaign became unpleasant at the conclusion and hope that we can work in harmony in the Student Government next year," he set forth.

Bob Folsom, successful candidate for the FLORIDA FLAMBEAU Editor, registered the highest margin with 1,148 to State Party Candidate Orchid Alonso's 471. The closest margin was in the Men's Vice-President race, with the State Party's Gordon Gaster winning. Gaster acquired 850 votes to Jimmy Joanos' 831 for a difference of 19 votes.

Flambeau Editor-Elect Folsom reiterated his stand for continuing present Flambeau policies. "I hope the vote the students gave me was only a confirmation of the high standards the Flambeau has given them this year." Loser Alonso congratulated Folsom on his victory. "I consider the Florida Flambeau one of the top college newspapers in the country. I know Folsom will continue to give us a top notch, well managed paper, and I'll be in there helping him do it in every way possible."

John Howard, the loser in the Student Body Presidency race also had praise for his winning opponent, saying "My best wishes to Pete in the coming year and I think he will make an exemplary president that we can all be proud of." Coyle Moore, Student Party candidate for Vice-President, ran without opposition, registering 1,517 votes when the 1,746 ballots cast were counted.

Moore commented "I hope we can make progress in Student Government next year. There are two objectives I will be working for. The first is more authority for the Senate, and the second is to motivate members of the Senate to take a more active interest in finding out the needs and wishes of the Student Body, and bringing their findings back to Senate so they can be translated into action."

Secretary of Elections Bill Stancik today issued a directive to all candidates in the recent Student Body Elections to remove all campaign literature including posters, signs, handbills and the like from buildings and other areas around campus. He urged all past candidates to comply with this ruling of the Student Government here.

Official returns listed the results of the other races as follows: Chief Justice of the University Court, Jerry Meyer, 789, and Bert Miller, 728; Women's Vice-President, Joan Tavel 948 and Joan Halford, 687; Secretary of the University Senate, Mary G. Shoemaker (unopposed); Chairman of Judicial Court, Dot Cooke, 1,480 (unopposed); Chairman of Traffic-Safety Court, Wardlow, 1,445 (unopposed); Sandspur Chairman, Frances Stokes (unopposed); President of the University Recreational Association, Joan Guard, 888 and Anne Winter, 892.

Editor-in-Chief of SMOKE Signals (magazine), Bob Rice, 1,035, and David Drels, 809; Editor-in-Chief of Tally-Ho (yearbook), Tom Woods, 891, and Jim Broderick, 847; Business Manager of the FLAMBEAU (newspaper), Joe Caldwell, 750, and Pat Robson, 891; Business Manager of Smoke Signals, Nan Hillman, 951, and Jean L. Stigler, 538. The office of Business Manager of Tally-Ho had no qualified candidates, but Barbara Yost was the unofficial winner, according to elections officials, with 38 write-in votes.

Election Chief Bill Stancik said that there would be no second primary since not more than two candidates had run for any one office. He reserved special comment for members of the Sophomore Council who managed the polls election day. "Sophomore Council is to be praised for the great work they are doing as a service organization and appre-

Quick Counting, Too Little To Count

Other than any pseudo-political interpretation we might try to pass off, we believe Tuesday's election proves a couple of things.

First ,the IBM system of voting is here to stay. The speed and general efficiency of the electronic counter machine is unsurpassed. Involved, including Elections Secretary Bill Stancik himself. Many candidates and interested parties, hoping to soothe frayed nerves, went to the basement of the Speech Department's production of The Heiress during the early part of the evening. When they returned to Education building, the scene of the counting, they found the show had been over for some time.

Our hats are off to Stancik, his committee and the test service bureau officials who initiated and made workable this unique system of balloting. The machine is far more accurate than human counters, having a possible error of only about one half of one per cent. And its speed is now unquestioned.

It is unfortunate for the elections committee that one race should be so close that a recount has been requested. It seems to us that this request in no way invalidates the value of the new IBM counting system.

This matter of a close race brings up our second point. FSU students again proved themselves lethargic enough to let a minority make their choices for student government and publications officials. Only 1061 votes were cast in the most highly contested race, out of a total of about 4200 regular students. This is a rather miserable 40 per cent.

On most races, the results were quite clear, and if more had voted, then it is likely the winners would have been the same. On a couple of tight races, however, trends were not at all obvious, and more votes could easily have swung the tide. It leaves a bitter taste in our mouths to think that people took no more interest than they did.

It is possible that The Florida Flambeau did not fulfill its function of informing the students sufficiently on the candidates, and it worries us that this might be. Before the class elections, we will try more diligently to give the backgrounds of the various candidates.

Reverse Justice

The report we received a few days ago from the National Association of Manufacturers concerning their two-year investigation of education in the United States displays a rather odd sense of justice.

Along with such matters as minimum standards for schools, they touched on the "reds" in our schools.

They opened with a "liberal" statement: The public should beware of sweeping indictments about left-wing influences in our schools, they said.

But then came the joker. At the same time, they warned that we should not "smear" the groups making such accusations. "Charges which cannot be substantiated should be refuted," reads the report.

This seems to us justice in reverse gear. We had always believed the American system demanded that the burden of proof lie on the accuser. Educators would have no time for anything else if they had to spend the time required to defend themselves against the numerous crackpot accusations flying about today.

Need More Plays?

It appears the Department of Speech is limiting its dramatic activities. Once this department was much busier with about six plays in rehearsal at once.

The Freshman Play's absence this year after successfully making it an annual event was quite noticeable. From this play came many performers who added prestige to the department's dramatic center. It also gave freshmen a chance to act in a production with his co-players who were also freshmen. It is hoped that the annual event will be restored.

One of the most popular events the Department of Speech ever staged was the experimental series which produced short plays of note. There was never a small crowd at these showings and every one on the invitation list was honored to attend. The Art Museum provided suitable arrangements for the series and if possible, we are certain it will be available for the return of experimental plays.

Four productions a year is not enough for FSU theater-goers who praise the Department of Speech's fine technical and dramatic excellences. It is not enough for the aspiring actor and if anything, the interest in acting should get together and bring the department back into the spotlight.

False Premises

Teaching is undemocratic.

We're not complaining, understand. In fact, what we object to is the notion that teaching is democratic.

Democracy is a popular concept in the United States. We pledge almost 100 per cent allegiance to it. But that is the case with many popular things, we do not understand the thinking and reasoning underlying the principle.

There are many situations to which democracy does not appertain. One would not ask the employees of a bank, for instance, whether had elected the president of the organization.

The method of teaching is an even more basic example of a case where democracy does not apply. The great spokesmen for democracy have declared that the theory cannot apply until there is an informed public. The whole premise of teaching is that the teacher knows something more than the pupil. He must somehow impart his knowledge. If he does not lecture or lead discussion, the class will be fruitless.

We certainly do not advocate a return to the old-fashioned schoolmaster with a gag back whip. Nor would we remove the very important discussion of the student to disagree and enter into classroom discussion. And we definitely are not saying that teaching should not prepare students to understand and live in democracy.

But we do believe that the practice of allowing students to be teachers in classrooms, while the teacher sits passively by, is a misapplication of the democratic ideal. It ignores the fact that people must be educated before taking part in governing their own affairs.

Heiress Hustle Mad Money; Stewart Stages Mellow Music

She couldn't say no—to Robert Mitchum, that is.

Jean Simmons finds it difficult to resist the small town doctor who has firm convictions on love and life in She Couldn't Say No, which plays Sunday through Tuesday at the Florida Theater.

The Howard Hughes production casts JEAN SIMMONS as a wilful heiress who tries to play Good Samaritan by sending $1,000 bills to the people of Prezzone, a small Arizona town.

The results of her charitable intentions provide humor and drama as she and the doctor clash in their views.

Woulfe was trying to get an idea of how a jacket would look on the star while she was sitting down. Each time Miss Simmons sat on the lounge, her poodle jumped up on the back of the lounge and draped herself around the neck of her admirer much to Woulfe's annoyance.

"That's the cutest dog I ever saw," said a wardrobe woman helping with the fitting.

"That's no dog," smacked Woulfe. "That's a frustrated fur piece."

Currently playing at the State Theatre is the GLENN MILLER STORY, starring the romantic team, JAMES STEWART and JUNE ALLYSON. The life story of Glenn Miller, famed band leader who died in an airplane crash during the second World War, the production is more than a musical calvacade.

Another famous blonde of the screen comes to Tallahassee next week in It Should Happen To You. She wasn't born yesterday but she got the academy award for pretending she was. Judy Holliday co-stars with Peter Lawford in the Columbia Picture's new comedy. The story and screen play are written by Garson Kanin, who also wrote Born Yesterday. Judy's academy award winner.

The film introduces a comely newcomer, Jack Lemmon, with TV, Stock comedy, and Broadway stage background. Lemmon is one of Miss Holliday's three costs in life—fame, fortune, and fellers.

It Should Happen To You will come to the Florida Theater March 31, for a four-day run.

Men Can't Be Happy If Non-Existent

By BRUCE GALPHIN

As usual the obvious is not obvious. I would say that I considered a straightforward enough line in our last column. So much has been said about it now that I'm doubting myself.

Speaking of the awesome particular explosion in the Pacific on March 1. I said, "It would seem to any sane person realizing that Russians also have the hydrogen bomb that a war has come to outlaw nuclear warfare."

"Why" is the universal question. I tried to make it clear I was not being moralistic but simply self-preservationistic. People who want to prevent war are morally pathetically laughable. They join societies dedicated to peace, and they write essays. They think all they have to do is think about it and war will disappear. If enough people are convinced of the inhumanity and pointlessness of war, they mean people will simply stop fighting.

What such people usually ignore is that war is useful in very important sense. It is playing a part in a universal tendency to unite all people under a single government. This tendency is as old as the days of primative man, it was true in the empire of Greece and Rome.

It was true in the coast-to-coast movement of the United States, and it will doubtless be true in the future.

Such general movements go on whether we "like" them or not. Miserable specks of dust that we are, we like to inflate our positions of importance in the universe. So we say we have "control" over the future of nature, and we bolster our belief with the many inventions of modern science.

We do not ordinarily realize that we have completely lost reality, made useful generalizations about EVENTS and neglected the individual.

We have not defied reality. We have not changed the universe. We merely work within the framework of certain convenient "facts," as it were.

It is possible to convince people that we cannot defy the law of gravitation, salvation or the chemical law of combination. But this case we pass from the physical to the social sciences, we stir up tremendous ire. People seem to think scientists are violating all sorts of holy laws when they state general propositions about human behavior and the movement of the culture. Or rather in the days of primative man, it was true in the empire of Greece and Rome, equally heretical that man's social organization is a function of his technological development.

None-the-less, general laws about man and culture can be stated, and they can be projected to the limits of other scientific laws. One of these principles is that the culture wave to make man's life happier is more efficient. Now efficient man cannot be happy or efficient if he has not organized, and the new weapons are playing with his big potentialities of reducing us to ashes and burns.

As reports leak from the Pacific, we must conclude more and more that even the scientists are frightened at what they have done. Just before World War II, many clear scientists joined in a move to outlaw atomic war. It is now "horrible," they said. Now we have bombs at least 500 times as powerful.

I maintain that there is a distinct difference; if not in quality then in quantity, between the weapon and old ones. If mankind is to survive, these weapons had better not be written off as "horrible." Like it or not, we are in the atomic age, and we're playing with his big potentialities of reducing us to ashes and burns.

If we don't report his condition and they are tainted, then he has a bad ill thing by having a rough time lately worrying about the whole thing.

The Student Senate has the pressure shouldn't be the subject that's been the stalemate just because they are exposed to children. Think how many other people are exposed to children, or the other way around. Think of mothers and fathers, homeowners and businessmen; all come in contact with children. They don't have also belonged to the Textbook Committee at this time. They should also be made to sign the questionnaire. And it should be the same employee oath.

We remember the furor caused in Georgia recently by the segregation issue raised in the U. S. Supreme Court decision. Just last week in the Georgia legislature to remove their positions if the Court ruled a certain way.

Lately it seems Georgia has been the South's forerunner in handling matters like the above in a patriotic and democratic way.

Yes, it seems Georgia is leading the way and doing it well. Presently, right towards April Fool's Day.

Yes, Guv'nah, Georgia Is Loyal State

By BOB FOLSOM

Georgia has a new loyalty questionnaire form.

If any state employe does not sign it by April 1, Gov. Herman Talmadge is going to write him off the payroll.

He said, "I can't conceive of any good citizen refusing to respond to the questionnaire."

Attorney General Eugene Cook and Dr. Harmon Caldwell, Chancellor of the University System of Georgia, concur in the request by a group of college professors for extention of the fifth deadline.

He said "I filled out the questionnaire myself in a few minutes."

Let's see . . . Chancellor . . . uhh yes—you're right.

It is reported that the questionnaire was modeled on the anti-Communism measure. Its six letter-size pages contain 25 questions. Each employee must answer whether they have ever belonged to, or attended meetings of, any Communist or Fascist organizations. They also give detailed personal information about themselves and reveal whether relatives have been connected with any subversive organization or activity. It is patterned almost exactly after Federal security forms.

Spearheading the opposition to the questionnaire are professors of Georgia Institute of Technology, the University of Georgia and the Atlanta Division of the University of Georgia.

Hasty and over-zealous measures is the statement which they declared. "might restrict the freedom to speak or write him off the payroll.

Actors Get Applause, Director Work

By DAVID DREIS

Dis ever read the cast of characters who play the important parts in a movie? Nope, don't mean the actors. These are the behind-the-scenes fellas names you probably look at, but don't recall. It's very important to note some of their names, for it's a clue to how good the film is.

For instance let's take producers. These are the fellows who arrange the deals of the technicians, the props, cameramen and of course the actors.

If you want to see a suspenseful film or one that has human interest, then be sure to look for Stanley Kramer. This young producer has yet to make a poor picture although I thought THE WILD ONE with Marlon Brando came pretty close to it.

He won an Academy Award on one of his first trys. Cyrano De Bergerac, and Jose Ferrer copped the Oscar for acting. Kramer is a youngster compared to his associates. In the 30s, he wears a crew-cut and modest clothes, drives a convertible coupe and has a pretty wife, Karen. Other epics have been great too. The Sniper, My Six Convicts and The Blue Veil.

Trap, Home of the Brave, and a few others. He's tops and will be offering plenty more in good entertainment.

Ida Lupino, a film star herself, is president of The Filmmakers Corporation which makes pictures out of social problems. Her entertainment is Belly Forrest and Keefe Brasselle have teamed in a couple: Not Wanted, and The Hitch-Hiker of an un-wed mother, The Young Lawyers, a romantic gaiety over her paralysis. The movies received fine reviews and Miss Lupino made her name behind the scenes as bright as before them. Her newest, The Bigamist, was raked pretty high by most New York papers. It stars Edmond O'Brien, Ida, herself, Joan Fontaine and Edmund Gwenn.

If you want to be on the edge of your seat waiting to walk out see a Sam Katzman film. Katzman advanced from Saturday matinee serials to full-length features. The latest was for Corporation which was JACK MACALL, DESPERATE JAMES and Producer George Maniganey as Jack Macall shoots through the heart. Katzman called Phil Hicket. Yes, it's true that Katzman has also produced Howard Keel and even Bill Elliot to say nothing of Albert Dekker who starred three of his kot to the bill. We know that a headin movie star. Katzman shut Wild Bill in the back and our hero Hickok, but' had to shoot Bill Elliot to kill him this newest film, he's a crook. Katzman has yet to get a film on the draw. Oh, well . . . it's too confusing, but if Katzman will get back to basics and produce I won't bother him again.

Producers sometimes take a wealth of pains to put out duds. Dore Shary, production boss of swimming and games of the different movie countries of the MGM on eve of anniversary of members.

A picnic lunch will be served and members may bring guests, according to Herpie Dee Hawkins, chairman of the social committee.

To The Editor

Here To Stay

Dear Editor,

We can all heave a sigh of relief that the elections are over—for the time being. But elections are coming up again soon.

The State Party is grateful to the candidates and their backers for their efforts. We are sorry that our fine candidates were not all elected, but under the circumstances, we consider the results satisfying.

It is indeed gratifying, and we note with pride, that win or lost, our people are still our people. They are behind us.

It is students of this sort that make a deep campus worth-while. They are certain of one thing, and that is not personal gain. What they are certain of is that the campus needs and deserves a democratic two-party system.

In the words of Student Party's Charlie Lamar, "We'll be back next year after the results of last year's elections where out of a total of 79 offices, they were opposed in only eight races."

The State Party is here to stay—or the party system is gone forever!

Sincerely,
Jack Hunter, Chairman
State Party Steering Committee.".

VISIONS OF VICTORY

Of Human Bandage (Tape Me Away)

By DICK VICTORY

The first time the doctor told me I didn't believe him. Then he said I should. "No, you can't get an exclusive from the infirmary. You weren't here that day." As he said it he threw a paper at me. I jumped behind the screen door and stuck out my tongue at him. "Yes, but I was in my room, too sick to move."

"That's no excuse," he screamed. You should have called the campus cops. They would have come and gotten you.

I could argue no longer. I remembered that I had a Zoology laboratory. I turned over to it and got there just as the professor was saying, "Today we will deal with some live specimens of the animal kingdom. Boo hoo. I thought.

As the lab progressed I was puzzled. I knew they would have some live animals here, but I thought they would be small ones like rats and guinea pigs. Instead, I hear lion and elephant roars. I asked the guy sitting next to me about it.

He said me a sour lime look and replied, "Funny boy. Everybody knows it's your stomach growling."

This was bad. I could think of only one word. "Relapse." Although the noises made were getting louder, I got and started to walk out as casually as I could. I made through the side door I looked back over my shoulder. Everyone said that I was where you're going' look on their faces.

But I fooled them. They didn't know at all.

Finally I staggered to a nearby telephone booth. I remembered what the doctor had said, he'd call the campus cops. After I did, I was so weak that I collapsed and lay prostrate in the bottom of the booth. Try it sometime. Semi-conscious, I heard one of the cops say, "Probably just another guy that got his finger caught in the ferris wheel. Let it bleed out again.

When I awoke I was in the infirmary. I tried to move my arms and legs but I couldn't. I looked at myself. My entire body was wrapped in white strips of cloth. The doctor was standing over me.

"Well, the dummy finally woke up, eh?"

"Mummy's the word" I corrected.

He slapped me across the face "We know what to do with wise guys like you' he snapped. He walked from the room.

It went an like that for weeks. And then it had its good points too. I got plenty of sack time. Every night the groans and screams of the other patients used to help me to sleep. Not only that, but one of the mistresses of merry ruined me back to health. I'll never forget her, Florence Nightmare.

The doctor was insanely jealous. He was happy when the day came for me to leave. As he took the chains that bound my legs to the bed of, he said: "This is the first time I ever wished a guy would stay sick awhile. I don't want to see you here again. Now get out."

Some days I still get sick. When I do I think of the make pit and swallow a bottle of aspirins and hope for the best. After all, the sun is shining.

Heiress Puts Best Foot Forward In Technical Effects, Not Acting

By DAVID DREIS

The story of a dominant father's effect on his daughter was unfolded in the Coral Theater last Tuesday night as "The Heiress" by Ruth and Augustus Goetz wound up its four-day run.

As a whole, the play was fair to good with technical effects far outshadowing the actors in many scenes. The lighting, under the direction of Charles Reimer, lent a touch of professionalism to the production, especially in the scenes where an oil lamp was to give the whole light to the scene. The other lights were carried in and out and seemed to follow the lamp giving a stunning dramatic effect.

As for the acting, a few performers stood out as exceptional while others were awed in spots and bad in spots. Nancy Dickenson was consistently convincing as the wide-eyed aunt to whom the heiress confides. Miss Dickenson seemed to give the play a lift when all there was to see was the dialogue.

Although acting a small part, June Mistell was a standout as the maid Maria. Her lines were said with an acute sense of realism.

There were times when the heiress, played by Katherine Culpepper, and the fortune hunter, Morris, played by Franklin Adams, were unconvincing in their attitudes toward one another. The by-play in their scenes when they were talking to each other lacked warmth and at times were said just as "lines."

Individually though, throughout the production, they added a great deal of realism to the story. Miss Culpepper's highpoints was in the scene where she waits for an elopement with Morris Mr. Adams held his audience in the scene with the father, Robert Strane. Where he asks for permission to marry the heiress. Both these scenes were done exceptionally well and Director Paul Davee deserves a great deal of credit for his fine direction in them.

Robert Strane as the domineering father played his role to the hilt, but this reviewer, at times, wanted him to slow up in his delivery and relax a little more. His movements were too fast and gave a feeling of Mack strong nervousness. At ever, Mr. Strane's articulation was the best and every word was heard distinctly.

Three newcomers spotlighted the production. Barbara Graham, Diane Smith and Barbara Waddell. Miss Graham shows a theater background and Miss Smith and Miss Waddell added to the perfection of their scenes.

Lloyd Kay, though his role was smaller than in previous productions this year, walked with ease throughout his scenes and seemed to 'know' the Augustus Goetz character.

Costuming by Douglas Russell was again of high calibre and appeared to be picked accurately for the 1850's when the story was laid.

Scenery, we felt, should have been more drab to give a more realistic effect, but possibly we felt this way because of our knowledge of the Broadway scenery and the Hollywood film. Other technical effects including the use of a new previously mentioned, were as realistic as you care to have. Shadows falling rain outside the window, sunlight streaming in and lighting the room and even the door latch sound effxtsare were quite effective.

Director Davee's second production since Life With Father has given a great deal of work, especially in the staging of characters. When they walked they seemed to know where they were going and when they spoke they were placed in a position to be clearly seen. "The Heiress" after a distinct semi-climax to the Department of Speech's season ending on April 30, May 1, 2, 4 with The Insect Comedy.

Letters Of Thanks

Gaster

Fellow Students:

Wednesday morning my only thoughts were of thanks and appreciation to the many friends who stuck with me throughout the campaign. It is with deep appreciation that I say "thank you" to these wonderful people.

I am greatly honored that members of the student body see a willing to give me this opportunity to serve them. It is with this in mind that I make my only campaign promise. I will do my utmost to fulfill the confidence placed in me by the students.

I wish to express my admiration to my opponent for his clean, and well fought campaign.

Sincerely yours,
GORDON GASTER.

Nimkoff

Dear Bruce:

May I take this means to extend my deepest appreciation to the students who suggested I seek the presidency of our student body, to those who assisted me immeasurably in my campaign, and to those who voted for me Tuesday.

I appreciate what I consider the Flambeau's accurate and impartial presentation of the election issues and statements. I know that Editor-Elect Bob Poisson will serve to maintain the exceptional standards which the Flambeau under my bia attained this year. I hope he will offer criticism wherever it is called for, even if it is directed to the executive branch of our student government.

I hope too that in the forthcoming class elections the present high decree of interest in campus politics will continue and the campaigning will be waged without resort to slander and falsification.

Sincerely,
PETER NIMKOFF.

Joanos

Dear Students:

I am deeply grateful to those of you who supported me in my recent campaign for Vice-President of Men's Affairs. I sincerely appreciate your hard work in my behalf. Do not feel that because I was not elected that our efforts were all in vain. In my campaign we tried to bring attention to the facts that Men's Senate needs improvement and I feel that everyone should strive harder to achieve a truer vision of what FSU student desire. In these efforts we have succeeded. I ask you now, on my behalf as well as that of students of FSU, to join along with me and get behind Gordon Gaster, a very capable man, and the other newly elected officers in their efforts toward the progress of our student government.

I will always remember the last few days as a period of valuable experience and much enjoyment. Looking forward to a progressive year for student government, I remain

Sincerely,
JIMMY JOANOS.

Folsom

To the students:

I deeply appreciate the vote of confidence you gave me in May particularly gratifying to have such an overwhelming majority.

You can rest assured I will give you a good student newspaper next year. With your help, I am sure this aim can be realized.

Sincerely,
Bob Poisson.

Pupils From Florida To Attend Summer Science Camp Here

Eighty outstanding high school students from all over Florida will participate in the second annual Florida State University Science Camp this summer, according to camp committees.

Dr. Sam Myer, head of the Botany Department and Dr. Harry Walhorsky of the Chemistry Department, will be co-chairmen of the camp. Scheduled for June 13-26, the camp will be an expanded version of the first, which was started at FSU last summer because of the shortage of science students enrolled in colleges and universities.

By going to the high schools for recruits, officials of the camp aim to catch the attention of promising students before they graduate. Various aptitude tests are given to help the juniors and seniors decide which special fields they are interested in.

Last year the camp was attended by 66 and was judged to be highly successful. Subjects covered included astronomy, biology, chemistry, geology, meteorology, physics, mathematics and psychology. Anthropology has been added this year.

The idea of the Science Camp is to expose the participants to the atmosphere of higher learning and to give an insight into the more practical aspects of science, according to sponsors.

GIRL SCOUT WORK

Miss Dorothy Kirkpatrick of the Girl Scouts National Field Staff will be an campus Thursday and Friday, April 1 and 2, to talk with young women who are interested in professional girl scouting. Miss Kirkpatrick will describe Girl Scout professional work at a meeting to be held at 7:00 p. m. on April 1. Individual interviews will be held on the following day. Further information may be obtained in the Placement Office, 203 Westcott.

School Initiates New Curriculum For Modern Life

BELOIT, Wis. (I.P.) — A far-reaching experimental curriculum program, designed to provide Beloit College students with a broader background of general education, and to better fit them for roles in a modern industrial society, has been approved by the school's faculty.

The experimental program, one of the most sweeping curriculum revisions in the 107 year history of the school, will require electives to a minimum, at least during a student's first two years in college. In place of electives, the new plan offers a number of required courses that reach across departmental lines in presenting knowledge as an integrated, interrelated unity.

The experimental curriculum was proposed in a 350 page report by a faculty committee called a committee on self study, set up almost a year ago under a $25,000 grant from the Fund for the Advancement of Education. Beloit was one of 31 schools across the nation to receive grants to complete self study programs. The report is expected to be inaugurated as soon as curriculum details can be worked out by special committees.

The Ford committee study calls for an annual maximum of 75 incoming students, and participation in the program during a five year trial period. At the end of the five years the faculty will decide either to make the new curriculum permanent or to return to, let it continue as an option or to abandon it.

The wording to assess the role of liberal education to an individual, the committee on self study committee report recommends curriculum revisions which would enable the student to achieve a broader, more integrated education than offered by the school's present "cafeteria" requirements system.

The committee report calls for the following ideas and goals:—A clear declaration of a definite statement of educational objectives. To emphasize the interdependence of knowledge—the humanities, language, social processes and structures, and the physical universe and the processes of learning. In direction, it is similar to general education programs developed in recent years at Harvard, Columbia and Amherst.

The experimental curriculum concentration on four broad areas of learning—the humanities, language, social processes and structures, and the physical universe and the processes of learning. The self study committee recommends a three hour "core" curriculum embracing these major areas. The self-studying student would take 60 hours in the first two years, and at least four hours in the senior year.

The senior "capstone course" would attempt to show the close relationship of various fields of knowledge, to study certain current problems and institutions, to bring the student actively to formulate his opinions as a qualified participant in modern problems, and to help the student find a way to establish an adequate relationship between himself and the complex world in which he lives.

Governor Pays Visit To Club Meet Here

The Johns for Governor Club, during its regular meeting Tuesday, played host to Charley Johns himself. Johns made an unexpected visit to the club meeting and gave a brief talk followed by a question and answer period. Later Johns accompanied members of the club to the Student Center and West Hall.

During the meeting Roy Chapman was confirmed as chairman of the group and officers were elected. Arnold Metcher will handle publicity, Hana Tiers, rally, and Vern Williams, finance.

Club members will accompany the governor on his west Florida speaking tour Saturday. Any student interested in accompanying may do so by notifying Roy Chapman at 4871 before 6 p.m. today.

Debaters Split Even At East Tennessee

FSU debaters recently broke even in two debates with East Tennessee State College in what learned here yesterday.

Representing FSU on the affirmative side of the free trade debate were Dave Woods and Herb Lacayo. Bruce Fletcher and Fred Roberts debated the affirmative team. It was coached by Emil Carroll and Silas Smith.

Dr. Bill Schmidt and Jimmy Ison, son of East Tennessee in a non-decision debate. They said:

Dr. Schmidt is a graduate of FSU and is currently working on his doctorate degree at Ohio State University. Ison is a graduate of Florida State University and is now working on his doctorate degree at Ohio State University.

Barry Keating's New Pamphlet Views American Student Government History

By IMMANUEL WALLERSTEIN
Campus Feature Service

A stimulating pamphlet has now been made available on the history of the student government movement in America. It is written by Barry Keating and recounts the growth of national federations of student councils in the United States.

Mr. Keating finds the source of student government in four separate traditions: direct citizenship training, debating societies, extra-curricular activities, and independent student action.

From the formation of the National student Federation of America in 1924 through the radical days of the American Student Union in the 30's to the post-war development of the National Student Association, the author leads us through a hectic history at a hectic pace.

As sheer outline of the story, this pamphlet probably has no competitor. It is filled with dates, names, and organizations. The story of international student groups and the influence they had upon American students government is traced as well.

But as an interpretation of this history, the pamphlet is to some extent an exercise in adjectives. The author himself implicitly acknowledges this at one point. And as a rather lengthy addenda, he modifies one section with the comment that "there are too strongly worded."

Perhaps the largest criticism one can make is that Mr. Keating stops before the end. There is no critical evaluation of the role student government played or might potentially play in American student life. It may be that the omission was deliberate but it is surely a subject worthy of some consideration.

What are some of the broader questions that the reading of Mr. Keatings' pamphlet brings to mind? The first is whether students play a "symbolical" role in our society akin to that of farmers, businessmen, and workers.

Such a conception of the student as a group with views and aims of its own is not mentioned among the author's four traditions that led to the growth of student government. This formulation is seldom avowed, and even occasionally rejected. Yet it is the traditional concept in Europe, where students have been considered almost a social class apart.

This question is not merely theoretical for it has some practical implications. One concerns the degree of bettimeste and gulley jollying that goes on in the university and in the society at large.

Should the counsel of students be formally sought, for example, when a tuition increase is planned, or a speaker denied a right to speak before a student organization? Do students have the right to strike? and if so for what kinds of causes? the City College of New York strike of a few years back revolved around the issue. And it is rather charged with practicing religious and racial discrimination in demic decisions.

Another implication of such a symbical conception lies in the economic sphere. In many countries, students have extensive economic privileges involving reduced rates for various facilities. NSA once attempted to establish a program, known as the Student Discount Plan, in cooperation with local merchants towards this end; but it is surely a subject worthy of some consideration.

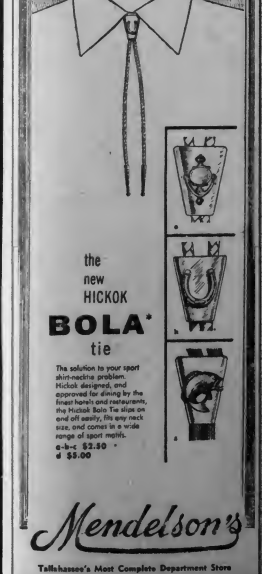
Another question that bears discussion is the relationship of student organizations to student government. In many cases, there simply is no relationship at all. Yet the student organizations contain many of the most active students on campus, whose energies might fruitfully be utilized by student government.



On some campuses, of course, the student government does as much as it can to finance independent student groups. On others there is a strong antagonism between the two, sometimes the result of drawing personnel from very different social sources.

One last question that could well be pursued is the question of what exactly do we mean by the international student area. There has been considerable discussion but little consensus, and the issue seems to become more indecisive as the post-war years go on.

Of course these questions are being raised and talked about—but by a very small number of people. Student governments might well exert some extra energy once again to solicit widespread debate on issues on these issues. In such a debate, Mr. Keating's pamphlet would be excellent source material.

Student Scholarships Available At Stetson for Christian Lawyer

Students at Florida State University interested in a career as a Christian lawyer are invited to compete for ten National Scholarships valued at $1,500 over a period of three years at the Stetson University College of Law.

These scholarships, just announced by L. Heyoz Hitchbaugh Sr., and planned by the Hitchbaugh Foundation of Louisville, Ky., may be used beginning in September when Florida's oldest college of law opens on its new $2 million dollar campus in St. Petersburg, according to Dr. J. Olin Edmunds, president of Stetson.

In buildings constructed as a luxury hotel, Stetson is planning "One of America's Most Interesting Law Schools" one patterned after the famous "inns" system of England where students and faculty live and study together.

The law school has, in addition to offices, classrooms and library, 100 bedrooms with private or connecting baths built around a patio in which there are three foundations. A swimming pool and tennis courts are on the grounds, an 18-hole golf course adjacent to the campus and the gulf beaches a long distance.

Thus combined for the first time are a fully accredited college of law unique in America's legal education circles, professional facilities and attractions plus the health-giving Florida sun. Enrollment will be limited so the personal relationship between student and teacher, used so successfully by Stetson in the last half century, will be continued.

Director Poses Several Changes In Draft Policy

WASHINGTON, D. C. (I.P.)— Revamping of the manpower aspects of the nation's defense program, Dr. Arthur S. Flemming on leave as president of Ohio Wesleyan University to serve in President Eisenhower's cabinet as director of the Office of Defense Mobilization, stated that the Department of Defense estimates that the strength of the armed forces can be pared from the current 3,500,000 men to 3,000,000 by 1956 However, he termed the present reserve training program as "completely inadequate for an era of peril."

Dr. Flemming disclosed several recommendations he has made to President Eisenhower based on the findings of two civilian committees on national manpower needs. One recommendation on a military service calls for the establishment of an "adequate reserve" as the first group called for short service. The second reserve would be in reserve for the first group to receive training.

Dr. Flemming indicated that women will play an important part in the nation's future mobilization plans. For example, he said college girls will be encouraged to take courses in view of the increasing technical aspects of national security. He said the size and composition of the reserve forces cannot be estimated until the National Security Resource Council projects the country's manpower needs. Dr. Flemming said he had recommended that the question of Universal Military Training be considered until results of the proposed reserve training program materialize.

Speaker Prophesies More Hotel Buffets At Recent Seminar

Stuart Hockenberry, vice-president of American Hotels Corporation told a seminar of Florida State University departments of Restaurant and Hotel Management that "Hotels will be serving more buffets in the future, because buffet-type meals are an answer to the problem of higher labor costs."

Even though a buffet may run a higher-than-average food cost, it reduces the labor cost percentage," said Hockenberry. "On also buffets when the kitchen and dining room staff are not busy a buffet will build volume," he explained. The staff is there anyway and by increasing the dollar volume the labor cost percentage is reduced for the week."

Hockenberry also explained the banquet selling system which aids in making sales and avoiding banquet errors. He showed the students a new chart developed by the Rohlouck Hotel for computing the number of drinks to serve at a cocktail parties. "Larger parties," said Hockenberry "consume fewer drinks per person than do smaller ones. As parties last longer fewer drinks are taken per hr. In a minute period than are taken at a party not lasting so long."

Hockenberry urged the students to become well versed in food, wine and liquor appreciation if they were to be successful hoteleo.

FSU Credit Union Boasts 38 Members; 3 Loans Are Granted

Florida State University's Credit Union, newly organized cooperative promoting savings group among faculty and staff, now has 38 members with shareholdings of approximately $736, reports indicate.

The cooperative also provides loans for faculty and staff.

William C. Holt, Credit Union treasurer, announced three loans have been granted There are also four loan requests totaling $860, to be met as soon as more money is available." Holt said yesterday.

The Credit Union's board of directors discussed the possibility of establishing a credit union for all funds from a downtown bank. However, a short period enough funds would be available from the "members who haven't exercised their privilege of withdrawal" the reports Richard L. D. Morse president.

There has been a general fear among faculty and staff that the Credit Union could not loans. Dr. Morse, professor of Political Science said that "The experience of the first week shows the definite need for a Credit Union. The idea the

At 8:30 p.m. there will be a concert in Opperman Music Hall featuring the University Singers, "The Woman's Glee Club and musical and instrumental soloists.

University Singers will sing "Del Cielo de Puerta" and Brazilian Psalms by Jean Berger, a sacred song with Latin-American rhythms.

The weekend will be complete with an informal dance at the Student Center.

Competitive Exams For Teachers Set Here For April 13

The competitive examinations to fill vacancies for General Scholarships for the preparation of Teachers will be held on campus April 13. The examination will be held in the Education Room and will begin at 8:30 a.m. according to Dr S. Lastinger, associate professor of education.

Dr. Lastinger pointed out that all students enrolled in the school of education who are eligible to compete for the $400-a-year General Scholarship if they have lived in Florida for at least one year.

Dr. Lastinger also noted that a holder of the scholarship must promise to begin teaching immediately following graduation from college and will be expected to continue teaching until he has taught the same number of years that he received scholarship aid.

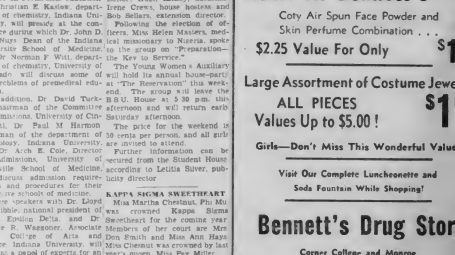
Supply of application forms will be on hand at the office of the Dean of Education at 301 Education Building. Students who compete should complete application forms in advance of the examination date and present them to the examiner when they report to take the test.

Tips For Veterans Asking Home Loan Given By VA Office

Veterans planning to buy homes under the GI loan program should pin this bit of Veterans Administration advice to their cuffs for ready reference, states the VA office at Pass-a-Grille.

1. Make sure your home is near enough to transportation, and shopping to suit the needs of you and your family.

2. Be sure your income is large enough to pay all costs of home ownership, including loan principal and interest, taxes and insurance, utilities and maintenance, and anything you are buying on installment.



3. Make certain your interests in such matters as deposits, purchase agreements and contracts are fully protected before you make a deposit or sign any document.

4. Be sure you understand the many advantages of GI loans. If you have to scan when you make final settlement" or "close the deal."

5. And remember, a GI loan may cost more than others, but you many advantages, but like any other debt, they must be paid back on schedule.

Details on this bit of advice and many others of value to veterans thinking about buying a home with the aid of a GI loan are explained in the pamphlet VA pamphlet "To the Veteran-Veteran," available as any VA office.

Mr. Dickensheets said that tests and scholastic examinations would here for April.

From The Sidelines

By Ken Kingery

Flambeau Sports Editor

Stock, Cooper Enter NCAA . . .

Two Florida State swimming stars will represent their college at the NCAA Championship Meet at Syracuse, New York, Friday and Saturday night.

Ernie Stock, star breaststroker for the Seminoles, will be competing against many Champions in the 100 and 200 yard Breaststroke event. Some of the finest competitors of the modern day swimming world will be trying for the champion crown, one of the many is Dave Hawkins from Harvard University. Dave is the current AAU 100 yard Champion and will be favored to place in the first three, in both the 100 and the 200 yard events.

Ernie

Another headache for our swimmer will be the well known John Dueck. Among other titles, John holds the NCAA championship in the 100 yar breaststroke, plus being the Big Ten champ for two straight years.

George

George Cooper, outstanding backstroker also from Florida State, is the other delegate that will be trying for top honors tonight and tomorrow night. George will really have a job as he will go against the best backstroker in the nation. This boy, who by the way is a native of the Hawaiian Islands, is not only the NCAA Champion, but the AAU Champion to boot. He is from Ohio State University, where outstanding swimming teams are just normal things.

Ohio State Contenders Rank High

Five of the boys on the present FSU swimming team are natives of Ohio. Coach Bim Stults, who will be tutoring his boys tonight, is also from Ohio State. Coach Stults was assistant swimming coach there until he took the job of swimming coach here at Florida State.

Another contender for the 100 and 200 yard event is Army's Pete Witterwead. Pete's time in both events betters George's best time by a fairly wide margin.

The boys left on Eastern Air Lines yesterday at nineten in the morning. They arrived at six-ten in New York. They will join their coach there and will return Sunday at 11 p.m.

They Will Have To Be At Their Best

As far as chances go, the boys will be hard to best, that is if they have a good night. Both these boys have bad nights, and fortunately it has been against minor competition. With a good night, Ernie could place in the first ten, with a bad night, he may not even get into the finals. The 100 yard is his best chance at the moment. George, even though he is the South's best Backstroker, will find the finals hard to get into. George hasn't had anyone to push him in so long he may get lost in the rush.

No matter how they do un there, we'll always know, they're two of the best swimmers the South has ever seen.

FSU Profs Begin Softball . . .

The University Professors will begin training for another year of city wide softball, as they have done for nearly nine years.

Practice is expected to start next Tuesday, that is if the talented crew that got the word, Mr. Miles T. Dean, counselor at Senior Hall will be the man to see if you have any interest whatsoever. The FSU Profs will be covered by the Flambeau, so if any male faculty member would like to see him name in print, remember Tuesday is the day, call Mr. Dean at 5061.

Play Amherst Monday

Indian Nine Face Fast Improvine Rebels Tonite

Florida State's surprising baseball team goes after a "grand slam" victory here tomorrow night when the collegiates meet the Class B Tallahassee Rebels in the second of a two-game exhibition series.

Game time at Centennial Field is 8 p.m.

FSU shocked Manager Johnny George's new Florida International League entry, 8-4, in their first meeting 10 days ago. The game was played, however, in 40-degree weather when the Rebels had only a week or so of spring training behind them.

Both clubs are much farther along now than they were in that first clash. Since dumping the Rebels, the Seminoles have numbered among their victims SEC champion Georgia, Tennessee, and Davidson.

FSU Coach Ralph Matherly plans to use two or three pitchers against the Rebs. The likely starter is sophomore Jim Atwood, a strapping right-hander from Hollywood. Atwood gained a 7-4 decision over Tennessee last Saturday with a neat, six-hitting relief job in his early 1954 appearance.

The Seminoles are getting ready for their toughest one-week stand to date. They host Amherst College and Duke University in two-game series here next week.

ALPHA XI'S PLEDGE

Alpha Xi Delta, social sorority, recently pledged five girls. They were Joan Scott, Corrinne Mason, Barbara Evans, Ann Murray and Mae Nell Williams.

Delegates to the national sorority meeting this weekend in Tennessee are Madalyn Ricker, Pris Holmes and Eleanor Reid, alternate.

SIGMA DELTA PI

Mrs. Lois H. Boggs, head of the Leon High Language Department, addressed the members of Sigma Delta Pi, Campus Spanish Honorary at their regular monthly meeting.

Mrs. Boggs spoke on Spain illustrating her lecture with slides acquired on her recent trip to Europe.

FSU Golfers Take 2nd And 3rd Victory

Coach Don Veller's golfers took their second and third dual meet at they defeated Western Illinois and Davidson last Monday and Tuesday.

Sparkled by the sensational shooting of Bunk Berry and Jack Verbitz, the Seminoles took the match with a overwhelming 21 to 6 victory. Tied for medal honors with Verbitz and Berry was Elmore Reese Crevetti with a 71. Verbitz had a 21, one over the course record, for the back side. The front side seeming a little harder to Jack required 40 strokes.

FSU's Jimmy James and visitor Ron Hanlon had 72's, while Vernon Edgar and Randy Church of the Seminoles came in with 73's.

THIRD STRAIGHT

Warming up for the scheduled match with the Rolling Tars this Saturday, the Seminole golf team came in with three even-par rounds to defeat Davidson 20½ to 9½. The match was held at the Tallahassee Country Club course last Tuesday.

Vernon Edgar, Bunk Berry and Jack Verbitz matched scores with a very good 72 to pace the victory. Not too far behind the leaders were FSU's Jimmy James and Bob Sikeman. Graham Keith was low for Davidson with 73.

The Seminoles, who also defeated Auburn and Western Illinois, travel to meet the trouted Rolling Team in Winter Park Saturday.

FSU Netters Trim Davidson In Fourth Victory Of Year

The Florida State Seminole tennis team won their fourth game of the early season Tuesday, as they swept every single match except one from the Davidson College squad.

Coach Keith Pitchford's netters, who will entertain the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets tomorrow afternoon, almost lost their hard-earned victory when the Davidson team took every one of the double engagements with Davidson's Corky Clark leading the way.

Captain Hal Schaus defeated Lacy Kessler in three sets, while Tom Condy won over John Kessler in two. Dave Kennedy won easily over Dan Johnson in two fast sets, winning 12 games to Johnson's 5. Don Wyly and Jack Egan were the other winners on the squad as they defeated George Sneaz and Leighton Green in fairly easy fashion.

In the Double events, Bremer-Kessler defeated Cundy-Harris in two hard fought-for sets. Johnson-Clark had trouble handing Schaus-Egan a defeat as the match lasted into three. In the last match of the evening, Kennedy and Wyly made a Davidson couple of Snead and Green work for their victory, as the FSU combination fought into anovermatch and then finally losing nine games to seven. They scored 18 games to Davidson's 20.

The timing was 9-4 in favor of the Seminoles.

Trackmen Set For Florida Relays

Opening the spring track and field schedule, a twelve-man squad of talented but inexperienced trackmen left for Gainesville and the Florida Relays at noon today. Scheduled for March 27th, the tenth running of this annual state classic appears likely to be the largest to date. Some 600 high school and college athletes are expected to converge on Gainesville, and in the college division entries have been received from Maryland, Duke, Georgia, Auburn, Georgia Tech, Tannessee, Alabama, Loyola, and other southern schools in addition to the state entries—FSU, Florida, and Miami.

The Seminole thinclads, dominated by freshmen, will probably show best in the sprint medley relay. Coach Ken Miller believes his combination of Jimmy Castell, Joe Davis, Carlos Fraundorfer, and Larry Houghtha is as good as any entry except the Maryland powerhouse.

In addition to the sprint medley, Florida State will enter the mile relay with an all-frosh team composed of Joe Davis, Frank Bright, Charley Watson, and Jimmy Casteel. This aggregation is not rated as a strong contender, but they place if the breaks fell right.

Frosh Get Test . . .

Florida State's untested freshman baseball team opens an abbreviated schedule tomorrow against Barin Field in Foley, Ala.

Nineteen Baby Seminoles will make the trip, with Coach Ken Smith, an ex-Seminole star, planning to use as many players as possible.

Smith indicated pitchers Tony Avitable, Tom Nunnabki, and Gerald Rooks would work against Barin Field.

The FSU yearlings will entertain Fort Eustis, Va., in a single game here Saturday at 2. Fort Eustis is the service club that Willie Mays, of New York Giants fame, starred on before rejoining the Giants.

Carlos To Enter

FSU will post entries in most of the individual events. Team captain Carlos Fraundorfer will compete in his specialties, the shot put and discus, and he will be supported by Sonny Titus in the discus, and Mike Smith in the shot. Junior letterman Ken Jarrard will compete in the open two-mile run, and Ron Weever will enter the javelin competition.

Frosh hurdlers Tenney Brown and Charlie Watson will enter the high hurdles, and Brown, ex-Bradenton flash, will also compete in the high jump. Lloyd Lassen, promising freshman jumper, will compete with Brown in the high jump.

"We certainly have what we consider fine men and women carrying our party's name through Student government here."

Shaw said announcement for nominating conventions for the forthcoming Class Elections has not yet been made as plans are not complete. He promised, however, that details for the Student Party's stand in the up-coming races for sectional seats, class offices and judicial seats will "soon be made public."

The Student Party head closed with an admonition, echoing the wishes stated previously of Pete Nimkoff, that prospective candidates for the Class elections it was noted, is to secure data to be used in future campaigns and party nomination if they can't be present at the meeting and ask a friend to represent them.

FSU Registrar Sets Dates For Required, Exemption Exams

The Day-and-a-half long Graduate Record Exam, required of all students here, will start today at 1:30 and continue through tomorrow with two sessions tomorrow, at 8:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

The three sections of the comprehensive test include a profile rating, the graduate aptitude test and the advanced test given by the major department of the student's study.

According to the registrar and head of the Graduate School here, the Graduate Record Exam is "to be used by all graduate students prior to or during the first semester of graduate work."

A $5 fee is charged to cover costs of the examinations, administered under local auspices, but graduate students are exempted from paying the fee if they have already taken the exams.

Application blanks for the tests may be obtained from the Educational and Testing Service in Princeton, New Jersey.

Dr. Stanley Marshall, registrar, said it was noted, is to secure data to be used in future campaigns and party nomination if they can't be present at the meeting and ask a friend to represent them.

System. — Instead of classroom teaching According to Senate Bill No. 8, passed Tuesday, each class section will vote at the start of the semester on whether or not to have an honor system. If the vote is not unanimous for an honor system, the class must be proctored.

If a student sees cheating occur, he is not morally obligated to report the offense to the Honor Court, although he may do so if he wishes. He must, however, draw a line through the honor pledge required by the bill. The professor, seeing the line, arranges for the Honor System to again be explained to the class.

The class then votes again on whether to use the honor system. The vote must stand be unanimous. If classroom cheating occurs again, the class loses the privilege of having the honor system and must be proctored.

Two appointments of President Carothers were approved. Mayo Andrey Whitehurst was confirmed as Honor Court justice and David Lang as Secretary of Organizations.

The Senate tabled a motion by Senator Frank Shaw to define academic averages required for office-holding in the proposed constitution by changing 1.3 to 1.308 and 1.0 to 1.006, thus establishing rounding-off of grade averages.

Senator Gordon Gentry argued against his proposal, claiming that grade requirements should be done away with entirely. He claimed that they keep qualified students from running for office. Senators, arguing that the purpose of a university is education' claimed a qualification for office should be at least the minimum average required for graduation.

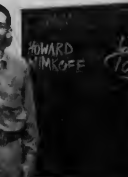
Personnel Officials Schedule Interviews Here Next Week



Personnel representatives from Davison-Paxon, Goodyear, Prudential, Proctor and Gamble, and the Florida Alcoholic Rehabilitation Program will be in the placement Office next week, according to Dr. Glover E. Tully, director.

On Monday, March 29, Mrs. Ruth Drennon, training director for Davison-Paxon, Atlanta, Ga., will talk with men and women interested in retailing. On Monday at 8 p.m. representatives from Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. will hold a smoker meeting in 303 Westcott to explain Goodyear's management training program, and on the following day at these men will hold individual interviews with senior men majoring in the liberal arts as well as business.

On Wednesday Mr. Al Empfaze of Prudential Insurance Co. will hold a meeting in 303 and business majors for management and secretarial positions. The Prudential representative is also in Jacksonville.

At 8:30 a.m. on Thursday, April 1, Mr. Chase Bishop of Proctor and Gamble will hold a group meeting in 207 Westcott to describe P & G's sales training program to interested men. Individual interviews will be held later in the day. On Friday Mr. E. A. Shepherd, director of the new Alcoholic Rehabilitation Program in Alum Park, will interview men and women trained in psychiatric social work.

Applications for all these representatives may be made by calling Ext. 371 or visiting the Placement Office.

cially the week they have done at the ballot boxes."

Stancik said the News Service Bureau was "wonderful" in their co-operation and added that he hoped both students and candidates liked the new IBM ballots. "I believe the counting was faster and more accurate since all results were tabulated by 7:30 Tuesday night."

Except for the lack of many party affiliated candidates, the Student Body Elections were reminiscent of last year's race when the Student Party also captured the majority of the winning candidates, according to elections officials. (See story on this issue.)

Few of the candidates could be contacted after the counting was over. The two winning State Party candidates, Bob Rice, Senate Signals Editor-elect and Gordon Gaster expressed happiness over their success, Gaster saying, "It's the first time I've been excited all week. I'm very happy and I intend to put my best effort forward in the coming year."

Rice summed his feelings up by stating "I'm surprised, but happy," while loser David Dreis congratulated him. "I know he'll do a good job" said Dreis.

Joan Halford, who lost to Joan Tavel in the race for the Women's Vice-Presidency, told the FLAMBEAU "I'm certain that Tavel will do an excellent job as Women's Vice-President. I will seek re-election to the Senate in the coming class election."

Jim Broderick, losing to Tom Woods in his race for Editor of Tall-Ho, avowed that he would try again. "I appreciate the confidence of the voters and I'll run again next year."

Elections officials said they would try to confirm Barbara Yost as Business Manager of Tall-Ho as soon as possible.

Florida State University's "Flying High" circus takes to the road this weekend to perform in Albany and Columbus, Georgia. The regular "road show" composed of 50 performers, will leave Friday at one p.m. and will return Sunday at six, spokesmen said.

The Circus will perform under the sponsorship of the Rotary Clubs of Albany and Columbus, it was noted. The show consisting of 24 acts will start at eight p.m. both nights and last for two hours. Friday night's performance will be in Albany and Saturday the group put on the show at Columbus.

Members of the troop who will make the trip are Sarah Atkinson, Shirley Beuiaire, Carolyn Calhoun, Ann Callahan, Sandra Carlton, Mary Ann Cosnell, Esther Fackler, Sue Fain and Libby Ferguson.

Also Jean Ford, Ann Fraser, Sally Fussell, Janet Graff, Rene Hall, Frankie Harrison, Rue Herndon, Dean Jackson, Lilly Johnson, Norma Marshall, Jean Northrop, Mary Nell Williams, Mary Ed Williamson.

School of Education Passed by AACET

The FSU school of education has been accepted as a member of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education, it was learned here yesterday.

The announcement was made by the AACTE's secretary Edward C. Pomeroy who advised Dean Ralph Eyman of the school of education that the application had been "unanimously accepted."

"The AACTE," the letter continued, "welcomes the interest of a Florida State University and looks forward to the active participation of your institution in the Association's program for the improvement of teacher education."

Whitcomb Leads Concert Group Tomorrow 8:15

Ensemble Presents Delightful Program For College Student

The Florida State University Concert Band, under direction of Manley R. Whitcomb of the FSU faculty, will present a concert tomorrow evening at 8:15 in the Opperman Music Hall on campus.

Free and open to the public, tomorrow night's program will feature marches, symphonic pieces and folk tunes, reports are included on the evening's program are such selections as Colonel Bogey," a march by Alford; "Come Sweet Death," a chorale melody by Bach and "Symphony No. 1 in E. Flat, a finale number by Saint Saens.

Other numbers on the program will include "Tap Roots" by Bainter; a march "National Emblem" by Bailey and "A Westchester Overture" by Grundman.

Rounding out the program, it was noted, will be Rodgers' selections from "The King and I" popular broadway musical, "Brian Tane" from COUNTRY DERBY by Grainger and "Lisbe for the Wrangler," by Hill.

The 68-piece ensemble, heard tomorrow night, is one of a group of four of the Florida State University bands, numbering 280, handpower in all, who play publicly during the year. Other sections include the Marching Chiefs who perform musical marching maneuvers at most outdoor grid functions, parades and the like.

The Circus Band is a 26 piece unit picked "To delight the hearts of the Florida State University Circus," it was noted. The symphonic Band of 78 pieces "Is a concert ensemble with the highest musical standards" it was written over. The Concert Band, which will be heard tomorrow night, emphasizes lighter music and provides a program for the general college student."

Westcott Auditorium Ready For Fall Opening

By JOYCE POTTER

A new Westcott auditorium which was once only a dream has now become a reality as it goes into the final stages of construction. According to business manager, Rod Shaw, it will probably be ready for use next September when school opens.

About this time last year the work of demolishing the old Westcott auditorium got underway. Students plagued with spring fever watched as the heavy "ball and chain" on the huge crane swung back and forth, destroying the old building which held many memories of the past in its massive walls.

Forty classes of graduates had marched down the aisle to receive their sheepskin. For 42 years it had reigned as a setting for the artistic productions, spurs, lectures and large scale theatrical productions.

Legend has it that once during one part of the very solemn graduation ceremony, it was suffiingly hot. All the doors and windows had been opened to let in as much air as possible. The Dean continued down the list of names uninterrupted until he reached the name of Marion Hale. Before Marion could get up to receive her diploma, a stray Pekingese bounced across the stage to the podium. The Dean was completely lost for words.

The old building was built in 1910, but in 1922 stage and back part were added. In the late twenties the walls began to develop cracks. After investigating, it was found that the whole building had been constructed on the site of a fortification believed to date to Spanish Occupation time. An underground network of trenches wound back and forth under the massive auditorium causing it to sink more and more each year.

About three years ago it was declared unsafe and its doors were locked and the great task of demolition began.

The new auditorium will seat the same number as the old one, about 1,400, but it will be slightly larger. Some of the features will be a balcony, complete equipped modern stage up-to-date lighting and air conditioning.

There also will be a projection booth where the lighting will be controlled. A new feature of the dressing rooms will be dual plumbing fixtures.

Whereas the entrance to the old auditorium was on the same level as the main entrance to Westcott, the new entrance is on the basement level. The entrance directly in front of the marble steps leading into Westcott will lead to the balcony.

Dr. Meyer Views Modern Science At Lecture Series

Dr. Samuel Lewis Meyer, head of the Florida State University Botany Department recently gave his views on modern science in a lecture sponsored jointly by the American Studies Program and the Humanities department.

In his lecture, Meyer analyzed the role of science in American civilization, giving the scientist's viewpoints as to whether it is a menace to mankind, an instrument of nationalistic power or the last hope of freedom loving men.

Dr. Meyer rejected the idea that there can be an American science. "Science is universal," he said. "The laws of nature are the same everywhere, and so is the scientific method of describing them. While each things as the Russian biology of Lysenko exist, they are still not science. All truth have contributed their share of scientists—nobody has a monopoly on science."

Meyer pointed out that basically the same as that found anywhere in the U. S., but has a slightly different emphasis. Dr. Meyer noted, "The Russian belief in practical applications on technological applications on inventions and gadgets, disregards pure science which is cupied more with basic principles." He pointed out that Russian science shows signs that a similar tendency is beginning to show here, he said.

The role of science in America, according to Dr. Meyer, is to act as a tool, to provide a method and techniques for technicians and experts, giving them honesty, so men may live long and well and obtain control over nature." The attitude in all men as attitude of impartial, thorough study, objective, honest searching for the facts, so that they may be able to solve the social problems effectively.

Dr. Meyer pointed that science, like all instrumentalities, may be used for human weal or woe. Atomic power can drive the engines of production or destroy a city, he said in closing the latter, he who applied it for good should be blamed, not the scientists themselves, he added.

But in cultivating the scientific attitude, science appeals to Dr. Meyer to be an unadulterated good, a major hope of mankind.

"Its spirit of free inquiry by individuals is the essence of democracy," he said. "If scientists are allowed to train their minds to develop the scientific method and attitude in all fields, there is hope for us. In law courts, and everywhere else, our human problems will be more easily solved.

Unfortunately, however, while the supply of new teachers of science steadily decreasing, and the enrollment in all schools is increasing enormously, the output of scientists is indeed inadequate, Dr. Meyer said. "Is socially-minded citizens is indeed discouraging," Dr. Meyer said.

Freshmen Choose Whittle, Hill To Reign At Annual Carnival

Betty Lou Whittle and George Hill were chosen as King and Queen of the Freshman Carnival as a climax to the annual Freshman class-sponsored affair Saturday night.

Hill, president of the Freshman Class, and Miss Whittle were crowned by last year's monarchs, Miss Toni Leto and Charlie Binger, and were chosen from approximately 50 entrants in the Queen competition and 25 aspirants for the Kingship.

Jean Tedder, Chairman of the King and Queen Selection Committee, stated "We were all very pleased with the carnival. I was amazed and proud of the way our class worked together and produced something so big."

Carnival activities were staged around the theme "The Old Time Fashion," which pretty is not revealed until the opening of the carnival. Events included game booths of many varieties and competitions.

Each year a cake contest is held in connection with the carnival with sororities entering decorated cakes which will be sold. Copping the prize for the best cake in the contest was Alpha Gamma Delta, closely followed by the entries of Tri Delta and Alpha Delta Pi, which received second and third prizes respectively. During the activities following the contest the cakes were sold in cake walks. Jean was Miss Tedder's president of the Freshman class.

Overall chairman of the carnival was Ken Nelson, Jim Fadigan, Jolane Taylor and a can-can line were featured in the floor show following the coronation, staged during the carnival dance.

Beauties Judged For IFC Queen At Free Concert

Sauter, Finegan Play For Formal Dance Scheduled at 9 P.M.

Candidates for "Queen of IFC" will be judged Friday at 6 p. m. when the celebrated Sauter-Finegan orchestra appears at Florida State University's amphitheater in a public concert heralding the annual IFC formal dance slated for 9 p. m. Friday.

Contest chairman Charlie Milner, president of Alpha Tau Omega said yesterday "Many beautious co-eds will square for judging and one will be chosen to reign at the Friday night dance."

Staged by Florida State's interfraternity Council, the dance is well specially the music of the fast-rising Sauter-Finegan outfit, which has recently "rocketed to fame" with its pronouncement with hit records like "April in Portugal" and the band's newest "Midnight Sleighride."

The two men, it is claimed, have done more to influence modern American dance music Ed Sauter wrote many of "Swing Era" Benny Goodman's most famous arrangements. Bill Finegan arranged for Glenn Miller and handled arrangements for the Tommy Dorsey orchestra.

Introducing new instruments and "New Sound" to the popular music field, the Sauter-Finegan dance band earned comparison in Metronome magazine to the Goodman band of 1935, the Miller outfit of 1937 and the Woody Herman band of 1945.

Sigma Nu President Klyne Nawtin, also treasurer of Inter-Fraternity Council, heads committees for the annual weekend. Jim Crews of Kappa Alpha, President Steve Barber of Phi Delta Theta and Jerry Wheeler of Tau Kappa Epsilon are in charge of decorations, clean-up and invitations committees.

Alumni and the speakers at the event, it was learned, will be Dr. Walter J. Freudander of the New York University Institute of Fine Arts, who will be the opening speaker.

Dr John Conklin, director of the Harvard Fogg Museum, will discuss "Main Currents in 19th Century Italian Architecture" and "Virginia." The general theme of the seminar is "Main-stream and Mid-Channel Movement in the 18th Century."

Other scheduled speakers include two members of the Florida state staff at Wellesley College Sidney Prerberg and John McGovern.

FSU's departments of art and music will unite efforts to round out the educational-entertainment seminar. It was announced. "The seminar will present a concert of baroque music under the baton of Lee Kingsley of the faculty. He will be assisted by Claude Rhea, tenor and Lewis Corbett, flutist and cellist.

The players will present Karel Capek's "The World We Live In," a satire containing 16th century lore.

FSU spokesmen for the affair plan during the weekend to present competente a top project of their own schools.

Al Pierce, Gold Key vice-president, will be in charge of events, Sarpaipa said.

Past projects include the recently completed Street-naming ceremony done in connection with the Florida Flambeau, placing of Longwire and Westcott bulletin boards and Longwire mail boxes for campus convenience.

Gold Key annually taps men, outstanding sophomore and graduate males here on past records of service at Florida State University.

Biologists To Seek Rare Plant Species

Members of the Biology Club of Florida State University journeyed Saturday to Alum Bluff, in search for specimens of rare orchids for its number of rare species. The group announced yesterday.

Led by Dr. Ruth E. Breen of the faculty, the expedition party group was guided by Mr. E. D. McCombs of the Smyrna Ranch, Port Washington, to the area along the Apalachicola River bluffs, with its limestone cliffs and deep ravines, has been of interest to botanists since the discovery of Torreya, a coniferous growing no place else in the world. Torreya trees, it was said, many other plants peculiar only to this area and some found no place but in their normal range, have been reported.

Jazz Concert Rocks Opperman In 2nd Annual Musical Show

Opperman Music Hall took a rest from its customary schedule of Beethoven, Brahms and Bach last night as the FSU laboratory dance band presented its second annual jazz concert.

The ensemble derives its name from its leader, Fred Sanders, a four trombones, five saxophones, four percussion instruments and a tuba.

Bill Holston, Johnny Baxley and Tony Swain prepared modern arrangements of such American favorites as "Pennies from Heaven," "My Silent Love," "You Go to My Head," "I Love You," and "Embraceable You."

Also performed by the group were several numbers by Baxley and Holston.

The band, spokesmen said, is one of the most popular part of students in the music school and many graduates in popular music and seek a way to solve the fundamentals of harmony and compositions learned in the university classroom to the ideas of jazz.

"We realize that jazz plays a big part in the daily life of millions of Americans," said Holston. "How else can we continue and improve our American jazz idiom except by practicing and working with it?"

Under the direction of Robert Braunagel, assistant professor of music, the band is building up a library of over a variety of musical sounds and provide opportunity for music students interested in dance band arrangeing.

"Th'ye," an original by Holston, featured the tenor sax of Manuel Vera and the trumpet of Harold Alexander. "Duo-rerun," a Holston original in the Stan Kenton style featured the composer on the trumpet. Also performed was "Go," a Baxley original.

The lab band is reportedly one of only a few of its kind organized under the jurisdiction of a university school of music.

The band is in its second year of performance.

NEWMAN CLUB

New Catholic students Newman Club, Catholic student organization, will meet 6:30 p.m. Wednesday today.

Officers are Charles Jacobs, president; Charles Cunningham, first vice president; Louis Schiltz, second vice president; Barbara Rycraft, secretary; Ann Thomas, recording secretary; Catherine Hutchinson, treasurer; Bill Rehm, parliamentarian, and Helen Daudis, freshman advisor.

Move Sought In Declarations Of Candidacy

A proposal to move the period for Declarations of Candidacy for the Class Election in April up one week will be brought before the University Senate tomorrow according to Secretary of Elections Bill Stanick.

Stanick said he will make the suggestion because the present period conflicts with the Easter Holidays. He pointed out that the proposed move would allow students to declare candidacy before leaving for the holidays. scheduled for April 15 through 20. First primary for the class elections will be April 27.

Officials to be elected in the class elections are President, Vice-President, Treasurer, Secretary and Social Chairman, of Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors; three male and three female members to represent each class by the individual groups; Senior and Junior Faculty Court, members of the Traffic-Safety Court and members of the Men's and Women's Senate of the entire Student Body.

Elections Secretary Stanick expressed the hope that "In the Class Elections, through the affiliation of the Men's and Women's Parties, we can get good candidates and qualified people to come out in a large turnout to vote for their choice."

STUDENTS CAN VOTE

Special absentee ballots are issued by country officials that all Florida State University students who live out of state and who have resided in Leon County for 30 days may register and can vote in the forthcoming Quadrennial presidential election.

Students wishing to vote register at the Leon County Courthouse in downtown Tallahassee by Saturday, it was noted.

If a student has already registered to vote in his home state, he may request a letter to write for an absentee ballot from his own district, they said.

Students Give Demonstration Before Critics

Eighty-six youngsters from the Florida State University Demonstration school gave proof before 6,000 critics at the Music Educators National Conference last night in Chicago this; "youngsters with charging hearts" can sing and sing beautifully without injury to their voices despite the fervent pleas of the contrary."

Dr Irvin Cooper, who joined the FSU faculty in 1950 as professor of music education, is responsible for the organization of the usual mass work of the singers according to authorities.

Dr. Irvin Cooper's Leads has culminated in organization of the Junior High Chorus of Florida. They are unusual, authorities state, because they are especially trained singers, not picked. Personnel comprises the entire seventh, eighth and ninth grades of the Demonstration School.

According to Dr. Cooper, choral directors the world over have considered the junior high school age (or "problem child" in choral work.

"It is because of the old contention that youngsters with changing voices can't sing, and not only that, shouldn't sing for fear of injury to the voices," Dr. Cooper said.

Dr. Cooper has found that the boy's voice does not necessarily break during adolescence, and if it does, that adolescence and Cooper arrangements with four parts are for the adolescent voices—high soprano, low soprano, "caminitas" and soloists—contralto, tenor, baritone. The word coined by Dr. Cooper to describe the boyhood range of the boy's voices. It is an adaptation of the Italian term meaning changing note.

Other adults on the trip with the group were Mrs. Irvin Cooper, mot. director of music in the Dem. School; John Cooper, FSU music major and son of Dr. Cooper; George Arnot, FSU graduate music assistant; Mrs. Cooper; Jan Owen, FSU grad-student music accompanist of Dr. Cooper, and Mrs. Irvene Anderson of FSU Public Relations.

Blend Music To Color, Mood

Sauter-Finegan Pair Were Arrangers For Miller, Dorsey, Goodman Orchestras

By JAYLEEN ROBERTSON

Ed Sauter and Bill Finegan, members of the SAUTER-FINEGAN orchestra keynote the music of their new band to color and mood.

As they explain it, "everything we write will attempt to create a certain mood that is consistent with the composition and a certain color that blends in with the mood. All of this, with a strong beat, will make the public want to think is good dance music."

Arranging for the distinctive arrangements of such topflight bands as Benny Goodman, Tommy Dorsey, and the late Glenn Miller, Sauter and Finegan have created among the country's top five arrangers.

Coming out from behind the scenes, they have come up with a new type of mood music built around a hand-picked band which includes special percussion instruments, usually found only in recording studio. Thus, their music sounds the same when you are seven feet and in person.

Because they feel percussion sounds are needed to add color to the rhythm and the rhythm drum of their arrangements, they

Prep Bands Perform Last Saturday Eve

Nineteen bands from northwest Florida entertained over 600 fans at Doak Campbell Stadium Saturday night as a climax to the Florida State University Instrumental Festival.

In Saturday night's marching show, all 18 bands presented a routine, the equivalent of an 8-10 minute half time show at a football game. The show was climaxed with a mass band concert under the baton of all directors in charge of the festival were Charles Roose, band director of Leon High school and chairman of the arrangements, and J. Darwin Smith, of the FSU School of music.

Other events of the two-day festival included solo and ensemble baton twirling, vocal and instrumental solos and ensembles and a sight seeing program.

Judges for the festival were William Verran, V. D. Sturgis, Dave Herbert, Harold Bachman, Jack Renshaw, and Lawrence Tremblay.

Gold Key Pledges 9 To Spring Tap Class On Sunday

Gold Key, men's honorary service fraternity here recently pledged nine men to the Spring Tap Class according to President Paul Sorapuru.

The eight men honored are Bill Bowden, Jack Hancock, Bill Stanick, Dick Gutting, Al Shuler, Alan Sundberg, Dennis Hall, Jerry Wheeler and Dave Kennedy. Gordon joins the tap class members by virtue of being said, as a pledge from the Fall class.

Sorapuru told the group of outstanding men at top ceremonies in Longwire Building Sunday have been selected on a basis of scholarship, leadership and participation in the University. He said they will go through a six-week tap program during which time they will complete a top project of their own choosing.

Al Pierce, Gold Key vice-president, will be in charge of events, Sarpaipa said.

Past projects include the recently completed Street-naming ceremony done in connection with the Florida Flambeau, placing of Longwire and Westcott bulletin boards and Longwire mail boxes for campus convenience.

Gold Key annually taps men, outstanding sophomore and graduate males here on past records of service at Florida State University.

Electronic Gadget Makes FSU Elections Different This Month

By OLZ OLSON

A little gadget with electronic arrangements will make the student elections at Florida State University different this fall.

The little box of condensers and glowing vacuum tubes has been named the ballabulon by the long hours often fee into making it counting fingersmeared ballots.

Here's how. Before the campus election this year, Bill Stanick, chairman of the election committee, set out looking for a way to count the ballots better, quicker and without the uproar of counting ballots spread around the counting tables.

Stanick went to Mark H. Dr. Graff, director of the university's Test Service Bureau.

"I don't want to sound stupid, Dr. DeGraff," he said, "but is there any way your electronic devices can count the students' votes . . . something like during a test?"

No record of election ballots being counted in such a manner before was found after a careful check.

Dr. Graff scanned. "It's never been done before as far as I can find out, but let's give it a whirl." And Dr. DeGraff and Stanick along with Dr. Kenneth F. McLaughlin, technical assistant of the Test Service Bureau, gave up a shirt and coat and set to answer.

If mimeographed properly a standard test form used in the machines could also be used as a ballot, they discovered by the university's electronic analysts unit.

The forms had the names of all candidates on their office and party with a code number assigned to each. Students would be required to blacken a square for the candidate for whom they wish to vote.

The ballots were a success. Final election results from over 1,000 votes were out before 5 p.m. Instead of the familiar midnight or later, but only that but it was discovered a mistake than the old way of printing ballots and having them counted.

"Also," Stanick, chairman of the election committee said, there were no arguments. No one could say the machine favored one party or another. The count was accurate, impartial and that was that."

Plans are under way to continue the use of the mechanical counter this year and next at least.

To Reduce Crowded Scheduling Of Events, We Must Recognize And Face Unpleasant Facts

It always happens, and everyone always complains about it.

Every year the several hundred campus activities come into close contact, juxtaposition or even violent conflict with one another. We thought of mentioning this matter when such events and Sandspur and Tarpon weeks ran concurrently, but there was not much we could do then. The calendar of events for this school year was already made up.

But now, when the schedule for next year is still in its formative stages, we want to make some observations and suggestions.

First and most obvious, there are too many activities. We know every group on campus likes to have some sort of function during the year, but we maintain that a good half of them are really unimportant. We could be more specific and name a dozen or more queen contests and balls. We could name quite a number of other events, but we leave these to the readers' experience.

Having so many activities makes it inevitable that there be several activities during one weekend. Often an attempt is made by officials to prevent too much overlapping. That is, they schedule events so that not many people will be involved in more than one of them.

But even the student who is not involved directly in any activities during one weekend is clearly reminded of them. Without meaning to seem inhospitable we point to last weekend as an example. We had:

(1). The Florida Historical Society. This group is made up of adults, mostly college professors. This sort of meeting is what one might expect on the college campus and for the most part did not conflict with the normal functioning of the university. They did, however, hold up the Music-Longmire parking lot for a day and a half.

(2). The Third Annual Spanish Weekend. This affair included a large number of students who not only were housed in the dormitories where they raised considerable ruckus, but jammed the campus eating places.

(3. The Sixth District Instrumental Festival. These students, while housed downtown, not only crowded into the various caferterias and snack bars but also forced classes out of the music building.

In addition to these activities brought here from the outside, we also had two days of graduate record examinations and the Freshman Carnival.

There are no signs that activities will slack their pace before the end of the year. There's hardly a large meeting place that will be available for the next month.

We have a few suggestions which, though they will not please everyone, seem in order to alleviate the situation.

We must eliminate many existing campus organizations. There is a staggering number of these groups, most of them never heard of. We urge student government to pass legislation making it more difficult to form officially recognized organizations. Present organizations should be more strictly forced to justify their existence.

Next we should stop inviting so many high school groups to the campus. In many cities, such meetings are handled through the local high schools, and there is no reason why many of them cannot be treated in the same manner here. We realize having high school students on our campus is an excellent advertisement for the university and wins us many students every year. But we can't help feeling they make it rather rough on present students. Perhaps it would be possible to arrange for the local high schools to sponsor the events but also have guided tours of the campus.

Finaly, once a good number of activities have been weeded out, care should be exercised in scheduling the remaining events so as not to have two big events on one weekend.

Much of this advice may sound harsh, but it seems to us necessary to prevent a steadily worsening situation.

Scissors At Sunrise

Dear Mama Seminole

Dear Mama Seminole,

Big Chiefs up in Washington still talk on government big lake in Tennessee . . . One brave get up and shout that those who would curb it are only looking out for interest of Big Business. Another brave who stand up and shout that those who would expand it want socialism. Georgie find that while fuss over TVA continues, Big Chief give billion dollars for new project by government. Who can say what best? Who know truth of actual situation? Me know government no supposed to compete with "Big Business." Who is real benefactor of government power? How far should government go into business? Me hope student on campus and brave on reservation consider problem. Maybe Mama Mama let Georgie know how braves feel?

Georgie think that McCarthy needed on Seminole campus. Not investigate subversive organizations but surplussive organizations. Many name have little organization many organization have little purpose, many purpose have competition, many competition useless. Student need organized organization of organizations. Please, not many requirements on what organization do but just that they do. Maybe College Ave. Hitch-hikers League, Westcott Pool Pushers or Longmire Lounge Lizards be worthy but see that they do something other than clutter records and books.

Love all,
Georgie Seminole.

No Sympathy

Are our faces red!

We're not quite sure how it happened, even now, but last Friday's issue carried a headline " 'Pop' Numbers Are Highlight of Sympathy". Now we must apologize with all humility. After all, we do not know whether the symphony needs sympathy. We hadn't even heard the performance at the time.

Reforms In Government Not Feasible Until Public Is Informed Of Causes

By HAROLD RUSSELL

Corruption in government has been headlined so sensationally in the last couple of years that the public has almost forgotten to look for solutions to the situation.

A few men have searched for the causes of corruption, of course. Men like Lincoln Steffens, through years of experience, came to see what corrupted public officials. But until a large number of ordinary citizens can connect generalizations such as Steffens made with their own experiences, there is little chance for improvement.

I have no doubt that an ordinary man, even a supposedly uneducated one can understand the problem. My experience with Peter Larson convinces me of that

Larson was a big blond, red-faced second generation Swede who had never finished high school He had earned his way since he was 13 year old, wandering from one job to another in the northern part of mid-western United States I met him in the railroad yards of Detroit where I was doing summer work and he had a job in one of the huge round-houses.

Being a bachelor, Larson was a lonely man despite an agreeable manner that won him friends wherever he went. As a result, he struck up a conversation with me shortly after I arrived at the yards, and we soon became good friends. I spent many evenings in his room or he in mine, drinking beer and talking about a hundred and one things.

One of the things that surprised me most about Pete Larson was his range of reading. For the most part he had read only light fiction, but he could discuss intelligently such works as Beard's history and some of O'Neill's drama

I recommended one of my favorites to him: STEFFEN'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY. He dug into the book with gusto, for Steffens is highly readable. Pete enjoyed the first few pages, but he found the philosophical discussions of Steffen's education in Europe considerably more difficult. Once through this section and into the muck-raking era, however, Larson became more and more enthusiastic. For several days he would eagerly report to me the findings of his previous night's readings. "Did you read what happened in Philadelphia?" he would ask as if it had happened the day before. "Can you beat that?"

Then for several days I was assigned work in another part of the railroad yards and didn't see Larson at all One evening I was sitting in my room writing a letter home when there was a loud noise on the stairs, followed by a quick knock on the door.

Larson didn't even wait for me to open up but pushed his way into the room. He was a memorable sight. His hair was disheveled and his face a bright cherry red In one hand he held a bottle of schnapps and in the other a piece of liederkranz cheese. Under his arm was a grimy copy of Steffen's Autobiography

He put the food aside and slammed the copy of Steffens down in front of me "Dammit, Russell" he exploded, "explain what he means about Adam and Eve and the apple and the system"

For the rest of the evening we talked about the book while Larson devoured schnapps, liederkrans and all the food in my room. I tried to state in more direct language what Steffens had said, how the apple, or economic gain, and not individuals, was to blame for corruption in government. At first he just didn't seem to get the point, but suddenly I could see realization light his face: "Oh, I get it now, it's the system . . . it's the SYSTEM.

"If we could just fix it so guys couldn't make any dough out of being in office, we'd have honest government" he reasoned. I asked him to suggest some ways, and we argued for a long time about some of his ideas.

When we had finally compromised on what seemed a workable plan I remarked, "but that would be socialism"

He looked at me blankly for a moment and then began scratching his head. "You know," he answered slowly, "It would"

I didn't see Pete Larson much after that. The wandering bug bit him again and a few days later he moved on to another job. The last time I saw him he was leaving work in the afternoon with the old copy of Steffens under his arm. I have often thought about Larson since and wondered whether he had found any sure-fire method to insure honest government Steffens couldn't and I certainly can't, but maybe some day the Peter Larsons of the world will.

Call Slips, Book Cards Serve To Help Students

By FLORENCE PAYNE

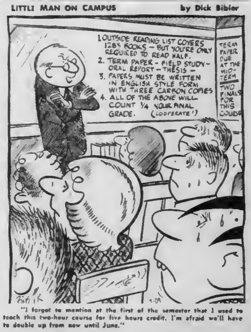
Have you often wondered what happened to those call slips and white book cards you fill out and sign at the circulation desk?

They serve a purpose. The call slip will help the circulation desk staff know at a glance how many books and which books a student has out at any given time. The white book card goes into the master card file to help the staff locate any book which has been withdrawn from the stacks for any reason.

Suppose for example John Smith wished to check out a copy of Evan Esar's The Dictionary of Humorous Quotations to use in writing a term paper. John would first go to the card catalog and fill out a call slip from the information given on the catalog card.

Filling out the call slip first will save John from trusting to memory as he searches in the stacks for his book. Having found the book, John would take the book, the call slip, and his identification card to the circulation desk At the circulation desk he would sign his name and box number on the white book card. The call slip, date due slip, and the book card will be stamped with the date the book is due back in the library.

For each student who has checked out a book during the semester, the circulation desk has a card in the student file. The call slip John Smith filled out will be placed behind his name in the student file. Should either John or the library need to know what books John has charged out to him, the information is there in the form of call slips. The white book card is placed by call number in the master file behind the circulation desk.



Should Mary Brown later wish to check out a copy of the same book, she could ask at the circulation desk and find that some one has checked out the only circulating copy of the same book, she could ask at the circulation desk and find that some one has checked out the only circulating copy of Evan Esar's The Dictionary of Humorous Quotations and the book is not due back for two weeks. She will, therefore, have to use the other copy of the book which the card catalog indicates can be found in the reference room.

When John Smith returns the book he has charged out, he will leave it at the circulation desk. The white book card will be removed from the master file and returned to the book pocket. The call slip will be removed from the student file so John Smith is no longer charged with the book.

At the revision counter, the book is checked again for accuracy before it is returned to the stacks.

Once the book has been cleared and returned to the stacks, it is again available for the next person to check out.

H-Bomb Urges Sober Policy-Making

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Some political "sage" over the weekend noted with satisfaction that the American people are not particularly excited or worried about the explosion of the latest nuclear bomb in the Pacific.

He seemed to feel this stolidity set Americans apart as a better breed of humanity. The silly little Japanese may be afraid just because their islands, fish and boats are being contaminated. The ridiculous British may be nervous because they are such a sober-sided lot anyway. But Americans are not scared.

They're too ignorant to be afraid.

Without meaning to seem harsh on my countrymen, I really do feel that we should be frightened. There are only two things which keep us so calm: one is ignorance of the situation and the other is an unfounded belief that we are all-powerful.

I realize that panic is the mother of unwise action, but I honestly believe a little panic would be a good thing at this point. At least it would call attention to a serious problem.

Thus I think President Eisenhower's decision to release motion pictures of the hydrogen blast in November, 1952, is a wise one. Of course this was a "baby" bomb, only some 250 times as powerful as the Hiroshima explosion, but the American people will be treated to the sight of an entire island's disappearing in a mile-wide fireball.

I hope people do have a few nightmares and sleepless nights over the sight. It's a pity the movie doesn't also inform the public of Russian progress in hydrogen weapons. After the Soviet's last hydrogen bomb test, our monitoring equipment showed that Russian scientists had been able to trigger the thermonuclear device without an A-bomb. Thus the Russians in one respect have outstripped us. Indications are that their research is not far behind us in any phase of the work.

This fact points to another unhealthy attitude of the American people: belief that everything American is vastly superior to anything else in the world. We have political institutions of which we are justly proud. We have a standard of living that is the highest in the world. We are rich in natural resources.

But we are politically immature. We have been too busy growing and building our own nation to gain the delicacy and wisdom needed in international relations. We bluster and we blunder. We turn down Russian proposals per se. Premier Malenkov will soon propose a ban on nuclear warfare, it is said. Already our politicians are preparing a blast at the Russians. They doubtless will say Russia is insincere in its desire for peace. They will make some counter-proposal no matter the logic involved.

It would be nice in one sense if we were omnipotent and could dictate the actions of all other peoples in the world but such is not the state of affairs. The times call for a willing ear, a cool head and an ability to compromise.

Many Americans believe that we now have singular possession of the world's most powerful bargaining tool. They believe that we can now demand an outright end to all types of warfare. Then all we need do is walk into Asia and Eastern Europe, where the "enslaved" populations will rise to meet us as their "liberators." We should realize that no government exists long which does not have popular support, and that most Communist governments are firmly entrenched in the popularity of their populations.

The awesome weapon, a sort of scientific reductio ad absurdum, hangs ominously over our heads. I hope it adds sobriety to our policy making.

ETCETERA ETCHINGS

Amusement Ed.: All Play, No Work?

By DAVID DREIS

MADCAP MUSINGS

Ah, the life of an amusement editor. Whether it be on newspaper, magazine or any periodical, these boys have it plush. They get to see seven or more films a week review same with unbiased views, have cocktails at fashionable places with fancy personalities and do what they feel like The business gets hard when you have to review something you're pre-judged against, such as the reviewer's job of noting Christine Jorgenson's shows in cafes, theaters and side-shows. For entertainment's sake they usually give her the most reasonable of play, but if Miami Beach is any example she still keeps customers away. Who's going to foot a huge tab to see an oddity when stellar performers are in the same area?

CRYSTAL-BALLING

Susan Ball, whose leg was amputated last month when it developed a tumor from an injury suffered in EAST OF SUMATRA, which wasn't worth the effort, will have to depend on acting ability to get any raves from her fans and her studio. She got into films by being photoed in a bathing suit after winning a cake contest. Since a wooden leg (or plastic) will be substituted, I predict she's going to go all out for drama to regain her place in movies.

BARBED WIRE

Pretty surprising finding Universal-International out with a good picture, but The Glenn Miller Story was one. Now if they only could get by without westerns and Ali-Baba fairy tales everything would be alright, but somebody has to support these 'good' pictures. James Stewart always is exceptional, especially with June Allyson who co-starred with him in the Monty Stratton Story. These two will be co-starred by Paramount in Strategic Air Command. The film will be shot in VistaVision, a tall CinemaScope.

WORDS OF WISDOM

Comedian Lou Costello is in favor of giving an Academy Award to the best movie comedian and suggests that Jerry Lewis should be given one for his work in The Caddy. Costello may have a point there, but it's always been unofficial that the top comic of that year in films be given the emcee job the night of the awards. Donald O'Connor had it this year, Bob Hope last year and Danny Kaye the year before.

To Frank Sinatra for establishing himself as more than 'just a crooner' and scoring with two records in the past year making him once again a record threat. He sold plenty of discs with FROM HERE TO ETERNITY and now is high atop the disc polls with YOUNG IN HEART. He also has the press on his side for a change and if Ava calls their marriage off, she'll be losing a lot of paper weights.

BRING 'EM BACK ALIVE

What ever happened to the good old double-feature? Yes, the old source of more than two-hour's entertainment. Maybe we have to look for it in a drive-in, but I'd like to see it in the local movie houses once more. Don't get me wrong, I'm not in favor of having one whopperoo and one stinkeroo on the same bill, but what I am suggesting is that local movie houses tie in the latest films with delayed showing films. The Florida and the State theaters once in a while have a good double feature, but it's in a pretty long while.

FINAL SHOWINGS

So the local theaters up their prices on celebrated films, eh? Does CinemaScope cost more to rent? Okay, if it does charge more, but did regular good films like From Here To Eternity and The Glenn Miller Story charge more and deserve the upper pricings? Plis—an answer plis.

'Can't You Just Sort-of Mention It?' He Asked

By ORCHID ALONSO

Sammy was a little disgruntled this morning. So disgruntled, that he splashed coffee on my typewriter and put out my cigarette.

"Doggone it. It's a shame about those little orphans."

"What orphans?" I ventured to ask.

"Why those poor war orphans who need to go to school but can't afford to." Sammy retorted.

I told Sammy that it was indeed a shame and went on to writing nasty letters to the editor.

Sammy landed on my tabulator key and disrupted me just as I was set to take a dirty dig at the Student Party.

"You know," he said, "those foreign students are really on the ball."

I stared hard at Sammy. "Yes, they're on the ball. Now scram."

"But something has to be done about those orphans, its a darn shame!"

"Look, Sammy," I said, "I know it's a shame about the orphans. And the foreign students on campus are ok joes, but forget it, will you, you're getting me confused."

Sammy muttered some more and I finally listened to him. He said that for a mere $180 a year, some organization could adopt one of these orphans and keep him through school. "And," Sammy noted, "that's exactly what the International Club here wants to do, adopt a foster child and help send him through school."

I tried to protest, but in vain. Sammy now had the upper hand, and listen to him I must.

"Colleges all over the U. S. are adopting foster children. In Iowa, the Pan-Hel and two other sororities each have one."

"Well alright," I said, "it's a fine idea and more power to them."

"But the FSU people can't do it!"

"Can't do what?"

"Adopt a war orphan!"

"Why?"

"Because they don't have the money!"

"But . . ."

"No buts! According to finance rules, organization receiving funds from the student activities can not raise money through solicitation!"

"Oh, I see. You want me to say something about it." I sneered as I said it.

"Exactly. "You see," explained Sammy, "there's really no reason why they shouldn't. Rules can be changed, and they're sort of out-dated anyway."

I protested. I can't help the International Club change the rules.

I tried to go back to my typing, but Sammy's last words echoed in my mind . . . "can't you just sort of mention it?"

From The Sidelines

FSU Relay Teams Sparkle . . . .

The showing of the two relay teams representing the Seminoles at Saturday's "biggest ever" Florida Relays forecasts a bright future for track and field at FSU if Coach Ken Miller can continue to round up freshmen tracksters for the next few years to match the group making up the large part of the current squad. With one exception, the athletes making up our two relay teams were all freshmen!

The sprint medley team, composed of Jimmy "The Starving One" Casteel, Captain Carlos Fraundorfer, Joe Davis and Larry Hountha, established a new FSU school record of 3:32.8, in taking a crowd-pleasing second place to North Carolina which posted a 3:32.5 winning mark. Hountha, 1953 New York City prep 880 champion, lived up to his advance billing with a sparkling 1:57.4 half-mile anchor lap—better than three seconds under the present FSU record for that distance. In this relay event, the Seminole thinclads defeated South Carolina, Duke, Georgia, Florida, Auburn and Tennessee. Not bad company!

The Bulk of Them Are Freshmen . . .

The performance of the mile relay team was even more of a surprise. While Coach Miller had predicted that the sprint medley team would be a contender, he felt that the mile team was out of its class. However, this all-frosh team of Joe Davis, Frank Bright, Charley Watson and Jimmy Casteel turned in the second fastest mile relay in Seminole track history in taking fourth place with a respectable 3:24.5. The lap breakdowns gave Davis :51.6, Bright :52.5, Watson :50.9, and Casteel :49.5. There aren't many freshmen teams that will better that kind of running!

Seminole Gymnasts Eye Coming National Crown

Meet To Be Held In Champaign; Penn State And Illinois Favored

By BOB GUTTING

The Seminole gym team will leave Tallahassee this evening on their way to Champaign, Ill., where they will participate in the National Collegiate Athletic Association meet April 2-3.

This year the Seminoles will try to up their last year's fifth place win. Chances are good that they will climb above UCLA and Syracuse to third place. Earlier this year Syracuse was defeated 56-40 in a squad meet the Seminole gymnasts have already won two and have managed to snag a among the top five teams in the country.

Florida State.

Although undefeated this year, the Seminoles are expected to suffer their first defeat to powerful teams from Penn State and Illinois. Penn State is expected to retain the NCAA title they won last year with their Finnish star, Cruseskeli, leading the team. Last year Cruseskeli was the NCAA all-around championship, top event of the meet.

Favored as runner up to Penn State is Illinois, with a strong tumbling block and good all around performers.

Affecting the performance of the Seminole gym team is the ineligibility of three of their top performers. Two of them—Joe and Carmine Regna—have completed four years of college competition and are therefore ineligible, and Rafael Lecuona, freshman from Cuba, falls under a new NCAA ruling that forbids college freshmen from participation in college competition.

It should be pointed out that a team only expects to win a National title once in a lifetime, but

In addition to their many honors the gymnasts have managed to add another one. During the last semester they had the highest average of any athletic team on campus. Their over all average was 1.8. Highmen of the team were Pat Signorelli and Joe Regna with a 2.900 each. They were followed by Carmine Regna with a 2.813, Don Leonard with a 2.188 and Jim Tanaka with a 2.120. These scholastic averages are quite a feat when you take into consideration the amount of time these boys devote to athletic activities and hours around the country.

At the NCAA meet Dr. Price will probably use the following line-up. Working all-around will be Pat Signorelli, Don Holder, and Jack Miles. Joe Taylor will utilize probably expert in three of the events — flying rings, parallel bars, and trampoline. Also working trampoline will be Florida this year.

State's two specialists, Dick Ireland and Jim Fadigan. Ben Wallace will compete in tumbling in addition to his specialty, the rope climb. Also in the tumbling event will be Larry Wesson, who won the Southern Intercollegiate tumbling championship recently.

The NCAA meet will be the meeting place of four of the top teams in the country. On hand will be Penn State, winner of the Eastern Intercollegiate gym meet. At this meet Penn won five E.I.G.L. titles Cronstedt won all-around honorsand also parallel bar championships, while his teammates Procopio and Wick took two other individual titles.

UCLA was the Pacific Coast Conference, and Illinois beat out Minnesota, Michigan State and Iowa to win the Big Ten meet earlier this year.

Last of the big teams on hand will be Florida State, winners of this year's Southern Intercollegiate meet. At this meet Florida State swept the field to win first in every event except rope climb National champ Jack Miles took the free exercise championship, trampoline crown and Larry Weston the tumbling championship to give the Seminoles eight titles.

With teams like these competing, the NCAA meet should be a close and interesting contest this year.

FSU Baseballers Fall Under Rebel Hitting Attack

In a fit of revenge, the Tallahassee Rebels came back with what looked like another surprising defeat, to outscore the Florida State Seminole Baseball squad 5-2.

The Seminoles put together three Rebel errors, and two Seminole hits by Fred Twomey, and Mr. Short (Cooter Mills) to win.

Pitcher Jim Atwood, held the Rebels until the fourth inning when several dropped balls and timely hitting scored the first three runs for the Tallahassee Pro Club.

They scored again in the fifth when Chuch Tuttle lifted a lazy fly to the left field wall, and traveled far beyond the outstretched glove of Seminole Bob Kendi.

The last Rebel run came in the eighth, when Conk Merriwether blasted a double off the center field wall, fouled by a fly to right.

The Seminoles will take on the Amherst team today, in the last of a two-game doubleheader.

Pierce Represents Advertising Dept. At New York Meet

Al Pierce, advertising student and news editor of the Flambeau will represent Florida State University at the Inside Advertising Week in New York.

The Association of Advertising Men and Women, New York, announced its 4th annual Inside Advertising Week to be held in New York City. Highlighted in the Week's activities, lasting from April 14 to 23, is the naming of the Outstanding Advertising Student in America.

The outstanding student will be chosen from 50 top advertising students representing schools all over the country. A $100 prize will be given to the winning student's school to further the advertising profession.

Among the sponsors of the Week are the McGraw-Hill Publishing Company and A & M Karagheusian, Inc. Twelve organizations will explain their advertising programs to the representatives of 12,000 advertising students.

During Inside Ad-vertising Week, the students will see and learn all phases of advertising through a series of conferences, tours, luncheons and dinners. Leading media agencies, advertisers, and service organizations annually cooperate with the AAM&W to put on the program.

The theme of the Week this year will be a graduation banquet in the Hotel Biltmore, April 2nd.

SHANTON CHOSEN QUEEN

Betty K. Shanton, entered by the University of Tennessee in the Intercollegiate Rose Queen contest was chosen from among five finalists at the winner of the title, staied eppnears in a recent release.

The five finalists were chosen by crooner Vaughn Monroe from hundreds of entrants from universities all over the country. Queen Shanton is a sophomore drum majorette at the school and is 20 years of age.

Excitement revealed that since becoming Queen she has been chosen sweetheart of Navy minesweepers, Varsity Man in Korea and 2 number of occupational groups in Germany.

Golfers Lose To Tars 14-13

After three successful encounters the FSU golf squad dropped its first match of the year in dual competition. A final ten-foot putt gave the Rollins College Tars a 14-13 win over the Seminoles in Saturday's battle.

The low medalist of the dual meet was FSU's Bunk Berry of Tallahassee who banged out a 69.

Berry and Jim James combined to give Tars Bill Borgess and Ledbetter a 6-3 setback. FSU's Mel Fleischer and Vernon Edgar were tied by Stewart and Kemsley at 4½-up. Dinau and Falken gave Rollins the decision when they setback Seminoles Jark Vaghte and Bob Shuman, 4½-3½.

The Seminole golfers and netters will remain idle until they meet Stetson in a home match Saturday.

Volleyball and softball will begin sometime next week in both leagues.

Spanish Meeting Ends Sunday After Two Day 'Work-Fiesta'

High School students staging the third annual Spanish Weekend at Florida State University left for home Sunday after participating in activities including a dance at the Student Center, a banquet and program in Opperman Music Hall.

Sponsored by the Department of Modern Language, the two-day program was based on a Spanish theme, and was designed to promote the understanding and use of the Spanish language, according to department officials.

Student delegates were judged in the skit competition Friday night and an extemporaneous Spanish declamation contest. Over 450 Spanish students and teachers participated in the weekend.

Saturday morning all delegates heard a welcoming address by Vice-President A. B. Martin, later seeing a movie "Maria Candelaria." After lunch in the dining hall, the students were given a tea honoring the visiting high school teachers chaperoning the week-end by Sigma Delta Pi, honorary educational fraternity.

Saturday evening the delegates attended an informal banquet in the Seminole dining hall where Dr. Victor Oelschlager, head of the Modern Languages Department presided, doling out awards to the winners of the various competitions. Master of Ceremonies at the banquet was Dr. Grayson B. DeLand, national president of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish and Portuguese. President Doak S. Campbell greeted the students.

The banquet was followed by a concert in Opperman Music Hall featuring the University Singers, the Women's Glee Club and vocal and instrumental soloists. The last item on the agenda was the dance at the Student Center.

During their stay, the students resided at various dormitories on campus, including West Hall. By the end of the weekend, many dormitory residents became well acquainted with the delegates, according to many Florida Staters.

Delegates Gather In Capital For Historical Society Meeting

Florida State University was host to members of the Florida Historical Society Thursday through Saturday when delegates from all over the state chose officials, made tours to various historical centers and held sessions for discussing Florida history, according to spokesmen.

Tours in the Tallahassee area included a visit to state government building conducted by Secretary of State R. A. Gray and another through the Civil War Battle Ground at Natural Bridge. Starting point for both excursions was the university main gate.

A welcome by President Doak S. Campbell was extended to the delegates in one of the discussion sessions in Longmire Auditorium held Saturday, followed by an invocation by Dr. Sam Neel, University Chaplain.

An address was made Friday by Dr. R. L. Goulding who spoke on "Extracts From A Key West Diary" presenting portions of a diary written by his grandfather, who live in Key West from 1828 until 1857. He declared that "many romantic tales have been written about wreckers living and slaps to river doom" on Florida keys in the pre-Civil War era but he found nothing in the diary to substantiate such stories.

Goulding discounted the existence of such practices "in view of my grandfather's strong pronouncements against fool play, injustice, intemperance and other forms of wrong-doing. The diary gave detailed instances of low malpractice, such as embezzling wrecked goods, etc., condemned by him in those days as unbecoming to those in authority and suitably punished.

Other addresses made during the convention were "Ft. Scott; A Window Overlooking Florida," by Dr. Mark Boyd of Tallahassee; "The Plantation System In Leon County, 1820-1860" by Mrs. Julia Herring, also of Tallahassee; "Richard Keith Call, Pioneer Floridian" by Dr. Herbert J. Doherty of the University of Florida; "Florida in 1846" by Dr. William J. Schellings of the University of Miami, and "William Augustus Bowles and the State of Muskogee" by Dr. Lyle N McAlister of the University of Georgia.

On Friday the delegates ate luncheon in the Suwannee Room and a tea at Gaudeloupe, historic plantation home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Reed. After the tea a banquet meeting was held in the Suwannee Room, with John C. Harrison president of the society as toastmaster.

Discussed at the meeting was the history of Florida's counties down through the plantation and Civil War years into the present time.

Dean Charles S Davis of the College of Arts and Sciences was program chairman of the convention.

Sauter-Finegan

of their musical aims. "Each," they say, "is something different in color and mood.

Here is the way they interpret a few of their many arrangements:

"DOGHOUSE FIFERS is a picturization of little mouse with beards marching through an historical town on the Potomac with their miniature instruments. It's gay, humorous and a ditty."

"AZURE-TE is an attempt to get across the way the blues feel to an American in Paris. We visualize a street musician playing over the Seine at 3 a.m."

"MOONLIGHT ON THE GANGES depicts the Ganges but not literally moonlight. We thought whimsically of a frustrated snake charmer seeking a snake to charm, but continually stymied by the Maharajah of Bahdidjeeb; and in the course of the search assuming various disguises such as a trumpet or a kazoo mixed in with the woodwinds. He occasionally tries his art on such objects as a length of garden hose and a piece of rope."

"NINA NEVER KNEW opens with the ancient solo recorder and woodwind sounding the world and possibly naive role of Nina who supposedly did not know that girls were made to kiss pasty."

But the story ends happily with Nina awakening to the manic kiss of Prince Charming (some crazy woodwinds, though, do a little background mucking).

Sauter points out "MIDNIGHT SLEIGHRIDE" as an example of their efforts to reproduce exact sound effects—in this case that of a horse galloping over packed snow.

"We were able to get the sound of every other kind of snow, but not packed snow," explains Sauter, "until we tried the concha-tis of Finegan himself! It's Bill beating on his chest with his own fine hands that gives you exactly horse's hoofs pounding in Sielskride's packed snow."

Ranging in moods from sentimental to swing, SAUTER-FINEGAN music promises to be the most of the many dance bands of this era.

Truth Key Note At FSU Meet Of Rural Youth

The seventh annual Rural Youth Conference concluded Sunday with the 40 plus delegates from state universities throughout Florida attending church in a group.

The three-day conference was sponsored on campus by the FSU 4-H Club, under the theme "What I Believe."

Dr. Sam Neel, FSU Chaplain, opened a series of conferences on Saturday morning leading a discussion on "What Can I Believe About Truth and Freedom?"

In the afternoon he conducted similar discussions on "What Can I Believe About Right and Wrong?" and "What Shall I Do With My Beliefs?"

"Truth and freedom are inextricably related," said Dr. Neel in the opening discussion. "Only as one discovers truth and brings his life into harmony with that truth, can he achieve freedom.

"A man has learned truths of the physical world, he has achieved a greater freedom in travel and communication, and a greater freedom from disease and famine in his spiritual and emotional life. Each man has found freedom only as he has discovered those truths which govern these fields."

In the afternoon discussion of right and wrong, Dr. Neel struck out forcefully against popular opinion that relativism there are no values which are universally valid for all men in all ages.

"The principle of respect for the worth and dignity of human personality," declared the FSU Chaplain, "is valid for all cultures in all generations, and all other value systems are derived from this fundamental, unchanging principle."

Saturday night the group visited the Freshman Gymnasium and the Band Festival in Doak S. Campbell stadium. A picnic supper and informal get-together at The Reservation, FSU cabins on Lake Bradford, concluded the conference on Friday.

Saturday's meetings were presided over by Ann Richards, past FSU collegiate 4-H Club president, and Steve Edwards of the University of Florida state boys' junior council president.

Liberal Art Program Undergoes Change At Columbia University

NEW YORK, N Y.—(I. P.)— The 35-year-old pioneering general education program of Columbia College, liberal arts undergraduate school for men at Columbia University, will soon undergo further development, designed to increase the effectiveness of the "Upper College" junior and senior years, according to an announcement by Dean Lawrence H. Chamberlain. He said that a meeting of the College had voted to approve the revisions, after extensive discussions going back several years.

"The philosophy of Upper College instruction," Dr. Chamberlain said, "is based upon the premise that a junior in college should be mature enough and responsible enough to carry forward his own educational development with the assistance and guidance but without the compulsion of his instructors."

The revised program, he added, would direct and test maturity by requiring juniors and seniors to do sustained work in at least one field of knowledge, at the same time demonstrate independent investigation and early stimulation of interest in a particular area. In this way, the final two years would more readily round out the Lower College preparation in the liberal arts, Dean Chamberlain pointed out.

In addition to the area of concentration which will require at least 24 points of study in one department, Dean Chamberlain mentioned that the new plan had several other features. From the list of courses acceptable for this requirement, Upper College students will be asked to take one course involving substantial independent work and investigation, such as a seminar or its equivalent.

In addition another group of courses totalling twelve points in related work in another department will be required. The faculty also agreed to allow individual departments, if they so desired, to establish a four-year course of study comprising a major in that department. This major program would include both appropriate courses, seminars and examinations which would enable a student to acquire a comprehensive understanding of his major and a considerable level. A departmental major program would also provide for related courses outside the particular department and would leave room for several elective courses, the Dean indicated.

Establishment of major programs was made permissive with each department, Dean Chamberlain stated, because of the varying needs of the several disciplines. He expected that several departments, particularly in the physical sciences, would adopt the plan during the year.

Widely copied in the past thirty years, the Columbia College program in general education has been developing gradually since 1919. More recent developments have included the adding of general education courses in the form of seminars and colloquiums in the Upper College, such as those in American Civilization and in the history and culture of the Orient.

Integral parts of the general education program are the use of the most outstanding members of the University faculty as instructors in freshman and sophomore courses; small classes of not more than 25 to 30; and the use of original source materials in the great writings of the past as required reading.

Manager Discusses Candidate's Views

Bob Folze, State Campaign Manager for LeRoy Collins, will discuss "current issues" in the Florida Governor's race at a meeting of the Florida State University Collins for Governor group on Thursday night. The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Auditorium of the Longmire Building.

Folze, former Executive Secretary to U. S. Senator Claude Pepper, will aid the FSU group in planning for the the Collins campaign here on campus. All supporters of Senator Collins are urged to attend, and the meeting is open to the public. Collins supporters stated that this will be one of the most important meetings of the Collins group on campus and probably the last general meeting of the organization before the election on May 4.

Spokesmen for the FSU organization said that there is "tremendous support for Collins on the campus," and that "reports indicate he is gaining ground in all parts of the state."

"Debators Rated 'Excellent'

Four FSU debaters participated in the Fourteenth Annual Conference of Tau Kappa Alpha speech society, last Friday and Saturday in Kalamazoo, Michigan.

William Twyford, leader of the delegation, and Tom Woods, Beverly Duperrouzel and Norma Trippodo won "excellent" ratings in discussion and extemporaneous speaking.

In the student congress held during the two-day Conference the FSU delegation introduced a bill on a new trade policy for the United States. The bill, introduced by a minority report from committee, failed on the floor of congress.

They were accompanied by Huber Ellingsworth of the Department of Speech, who acted as coach and judge.

E. H. Cubbon Made New Business Head

Edward H. Cubbon, former director of Physical Education for Athletics at Morris-Harvey College, Charleston, W. Va. has been appointed Athletic Business Manager at Florida State University, President Doak S. Campbell announced recently.

The appointment becomes effective April 1.

Cubbon will succeed Raiford Matheny, FSU baseball team coach and teacher in the physical education department, who has been serving as part-time athletic business manager.

In commenting on the appointment Dr. Howard Dunford, Director of Athletics here, said: "We have been attempting to operate with only a part-time athletic business manager who has had to teach classes and coach. Owing to the larger scope now to be given our operations in the field of intercollegiate athletics a full-time man is essential."

Cubbon has also served as Director of Athletics at Indiana State Teachers College Indiana, Pa., and Director of Athletics, head of the Physical Education Department and baseball coach at California Teachers College, California, Pa.

Lenten Speech Set For Ruge Episcopals

The Rt. Rev. Hamilton West will give the fifth in a series of lenten lectures tomorrow evening at Ruge Hall. The lectures are given in "Personal Religion."

Bishop West's talk will follow the regular Wednesday evening service scheduled for 7:40.

Last week a lecture scheduled to be given by West, was cancelled due to death in his father-in-law's funeral. Dr. Robert Miller of the Philosophy department, one of the Ruge Parish advisors, spoke in his stead.

Nine co-eds will find fraternity men and dates in formal attire at the Suwannee Room tonight to the music of the band that made hits of such songs as "You Never Knew," "April in Paris," and "Midnight Sleighride." Both Ralph Sauter and Bill Finegan prior to forming their own famous outfit, accented to prominence, worked as top-flight arrangers with Benny Goodman, Tommy Dorsey and Glenn Miller.

Manager Discusses Candidate's Views At Collins Meeting

Bob Folks, state campaign manager for LeRoy Collins, spoke at the Florida State University Collins for Governor rally last night. He discussed current issues in the governor's race.

Folks, former executive secretary to U. S. Senator Claude Pepper, aided the Collins staff in planning for the Collins campaign on campus. Campaign supporters attended and the meeting was held in the Longmire Auditorium, was open to the public.

Supporters stated that this was one of the most important meetings of the Collins group on campus. It was the last general meeting of the organization before the election on May 4.

Spokesmen for the FSU group said that there is "tremendous support for Collins on the campus," and that "reports indicate that he is gaining ground in all parts of the state."

STUDENT CONVENTION

Student Party delegates will convene Tuesday at 7:30 and Wednesday at 7 in Science Lecture Hall to nominate candidates for the forthcoming Class Elections, April 27.

Delegates to the Student Party Convention will hold caucuses Monday night in preparation for the forthcoming Class Elections, Chairman Frank Shaw said.

Independent men delegates, numbering 24 in all and including men dormitory residents and men day-students, will meet at West Hall at 10 p.m. Monday night. Caucus Chairman Al Pierce has announced.

Independent women will caucus Monday night at 9 in South Cawthon parlor, according to Jessie Carr, women's caucus leader. Thirty-one delegates, including five women day students, will be on hand, Miss Carr said. She urged all to be prompt.

Photos Due In For 'Ugly Man'; Deadline Today

Photographs for the Alpha Phi Omega Ugliest Man on Campus contest are due in to the Longmire building by 5 p.m. today, Pi Sigma Epsilon, June Watson, Tau Epsilon Phi, and Jacqueline Harper, Theta Chi.

Three photographs are required from each fraternity. Photos must be 4 by 5 inches and should be taken by polaroid or polling places: Westcott, the Student Center and Dining Hall for Votes will be cast by depositing pocket change in the container marked for each candidate in the Ugly Man Dance to added. These include Declaration of Candidacy forms, Expense Estimate blanks and official statutes pertaining to election laws, as compiled for the election by the Elections Committee.

Election Committee suggested that one person from each fraternity be chosen this year is for the Student Body to exercise last year's total of 1,200 ballots cast.

Pickets revealed that Nati Hillel Foundation has re-appointed Under-Secretary of Elections. She has previously resigned to run for Business Manager of Smoke Signal.

Dr. Pugh Interviews Dr. and Mrs. Starr At Informal Meeting

Dr. and Mrs. Nathan Starr will be interviewed by Florida State University faculty members at a dinner Mr. Griffin Pugh at today's English Coffee Hour.

Dr. Starr, a professor of English from 1941 to 1946, will be guest speaker at the Central Florida. He was first president of the Southeastern College English Association.

Shaw Announces Convention Date Of Student Party

Class elections activity has been limited this week, according to election officials, although convention dates for one party have been announced and a proposal to change part of the election schedule has been passed by the University Senate.

Passed by the Senate Tuesday was a suggestion by Secretary of Elections Bill Starrick to move the period for Declarations of Candidacy in the Class Elections up one week. The new dates are Monday, April 12 through deadline day April 20, at 5 p.m.

Convention dates for the Student Party are set for next Tuesday and Wednesday, the first at 7:30 and the Wednesday meeting at 7, Both will be in the Science Lecture Hall, Chairman Frank Shaw reports.

Shaw stated that the party will select its candidates for Senate offices at the meeting. The Student Court at the Tuesday convention will nominate for class offices Wednesday. "I hope that there will be a turnout as big as last time," he declared.

At this writing, times for the State Party caucuses have not been decided. Chairman Jack Hooser stated that a meeting of the State Party Steering Committee was scheduled for this yesterday afternoon at which time the dates were to be decided on.

Jack Pickett, Sessions Committee worker, revealed that the only change in the committee's duties available at the student body office, 214 Longmire Building, he added. These include Declaration of Candidacy forms, Expense Estimate blanks and official statutes pertaining to election laws, as compiled for the election by the Elections Committee.

Election Committee suggested that one person from each fraternity be chosen this year is for the Student Body to exercise last year's total of 1,200 ballots cast.

Pickets revealed that Nati Hillel Foundation has re-appointed Under-Secretary of Elections. She has previously resigned to run for Business Manager of Smoke Signal.

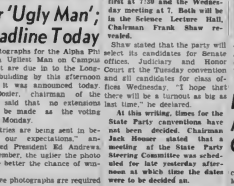
"MAKING WITH THE HOT RIFFS"—Florida State University's unique "Lab Band," studying and performing experimental and original jazz and original arrangements go through the paces Monday night in the recently styled Opperman Music Classroom during the nineteen-man session, now in its second year here, to be one of "very few such groups in the country organized under full support of a University School of Music. Featured in the Monday performance were such favorites as "Pennies From Heaven," "My Silent Love" and "You Go to My Head." Original music included "Frankie Speaking," "Go," "Pivot" and "Decision," all by student-composers who think along the jazz lines.

Hall Featuring Music 'Switch' Of Piano, Cello

Featured at the Faculty Recital to be held in Opperman Music Hall April 9 will be music written for cello and piano played by a trombonist and a pianist, according to spokesmen.

Numbers on the program will include two by William F. Cramer, trombonist, and assistant professor of Music at Florida State University, and Robert Gleitsbach, pianist and instructor in Music.

Cramer and Gleitsbach will play the selections, Sonata I by A. Vivaldi and Suite II in D by J. S. Bach. Cramer will play the cello part on the trombone.



"The Sonata I by Vivaldi will open FSU cello wail, I think," Cramer said. "Of the other, the Salle II in D Minor by Bach, I am not sure. It is a tour de force, in fact it is literally impossible. Only genius can be played at one time an the trombone, and, of course, there are four strings available on the cello and the score is written for the cello."

Another special feature of the recital will be Sonatine for Trombone and Piano, written for the program by John Boda, FSU instructor in music. Other program selections will be Ten Variations On An Air of Charley Wag-ton to be played by Gleitsbach and Sonata in D Major, Opus 28 "Pastorale" by Beethoven to be played by Cramer.

DEBATORS CLOSE SEASON

Four FSU debaters closed out their 1954 debate season yesterday at Emory University when they participated in the Southern Tournament there.

Bruce Fletcher and Fred Roberts spoke on the negative side of the free trade question and Silas Smith and Earl Carroll, on the affirmative, representing FSU. They were accompanied by Dr. Grove Potter, associate professor of speech.

Barbara Waddell, Helen Dardis, Barbara Rynsky, L. F. Lopez

Tickets may be obtained from any Newman Club member or at the dance, at the Amber House, Jimmies Music Shop and Seven Seas Restaurant. Admission is 50 cents for students and 85 cents for non-students, according to Charles Jones, Newman Club president.

FSU's Junior Singers Perform At Chicago Music Conference

By BETTY PARKER ANDERSON

CHICAGO, March 29—Dr. Irvin Cooper and his Florida State University junior high choir performed before a thousand music educators with a choral classroom demonstration, and Chicago electrified the Tallahassee singers simultaneously with 6 inches of snow.

The Florida demonstration was held in the grand ballroom of the Conrad Hilton Hotel which holds 5,000. Music teachers and critics stood around the walls and overflowed into balconies as well as filling the entire ballroom. The hotel is headquarters for the Music Educators National Conference now in session.

The group very grateful to Florida for sending us Dr. Cooper and his young singers to illustrate how everyone can assist in the problem area of the changing voice," Dr. Alex Zimmerman of San Diego, Calif., said.

Dr. Zimmerman, who is chairman of the National Vocal Association and on the editorial board of the Music Educators National Journal, introduced the Florida singers. He was responsible for their invitation to the Chicago conference.

"With his cambiata (a word coined by Dr. Cooper meaning changing note) Dr. Cooper has proven to us that the long considered problem with changing boys' voices no longer exists," Dr. Zimmerman said.

"He's terrific." "The singers are terrific." "Dr. Cooper is a great teacher and a great showman," were comments made on the FSU singers by music instructors at the conference from points as scattered as Canada, California and Texas.

Tam Whitworth, FSU graduate assistant, music, was providing chairman for the Florida program. Jean Owen, FSU graduate student in music, was pianist and directed one of the spirituals.

Order of the Florida program had to be changed because the Delta Mills Band of Cleveland, Miss., and eighty grades of Suburban Chicago, who participated in Dr. Cooper's demonstration clinic, were delayed in arriving because of snow.

But the program made a tremendous hit with the music conference crowd although six other major musical events were scheduled for the conference at the same time.

All musicians in the audience stood up when the FSU singers closed their program with "Ride" and applause was unanimous.

After the program Chicago photographers and feature writers followed the Florida youngsters and took the most unusual them pelt each other with snowballs while still singing "Dixie."

Temperature of 40 and with a prediction of 20 by night. Winds coming from Lake Michigan to 15 miles P.H. Ten inches of snow are predicted.

Ed. Note: Author Betty Anderson, a member of the Public Relations staff of Florida State University accompanied the singing youngsters to Chicago. By her permission it was received here by wire a few hours after the conference.

RAVENS PLAY

Women of Theta Landis and men of Senior Hall will co-sponsor an informal dance at the Florida State University Student Center tomorrow night from nine to 12. It was revealed yesterday. Music will be furnished by the Ravens, campus dance band, and all are invited to attend.

A&M Students Asked To Quit Jazz Concert

Four Florida A and M students were asked to give up their seats at Opperman Hall's Monday night performance of the Florida State University Lab Band Concert, according to spectators. The visitors were later allowed to sit in side-entrance upon intercession of several students.

Seated in the front row, the visitors were asked by Lab Band Director Albert Mangelsdorff shortly before the performance began, is there Said Dean of the School of Music Kuerstiner of Brannard's account, "I think Brannard acted properly, courteously and unselfishly in speaking publicly to the four students and asking them to leave the Music Hall." He noted he was informed of a Board of Control Regulation stating students of A and M University may not come to this campus unless special arrangements have been made. As far as he knew, however, the A and M student had made "no arrangements at all" for visiting the FSU campus.

Commenting on the presence of A and M University people here, the Music School chief said students and faculty members of A and M have been guests in the Music Building but never at a FSU concert. He noted the visiting students of A and M might come to a performance of this nature, but stressed Brannard of the Board of Control ruling beforehand.

He asked for comment on the interchange of visitors between FSU and A and M University. Dean Kuerstiner said that

Exams Begin April 13 For Annual Grants

Florida State University education students will compete April 13 for 150 state scholarships available this year for degree students all over Florida. Last year, authorities noted, FSU students won 163 of the 184 available grants.

Exams will begin in Suwannee Room at 6:30 a.m. on the 13th, said Dr. Lastinger, associate professor of education here, and director of the competition. He pointed out that all students enrolled in the School of Education are eligible to compete for the $400 a year scholarship if they have lived in the state one year.

Scholarship holders must promise, Lastinger said, to begin their professional work upon graduation and to continue until they have taught the same number of years that they received scholarship aid.

Application blanks are available at the office of the dean, School of Education.

Dr. Lastinger urged students planning to compete in the forthcoming examinations to act as soon as possible in advance of the exam. All are requested to present applications to the Florida state department of education, April 13.

SOCIOLOGISTS GIVE PAPERS

Two Florida State Univ. faculty members presented papers at the Annual Meeting of the Southern Sociological Society in Atlanta recently. Dr. John L. Roberts on an interpretation of his work on "Warner and Centers on Social Class: A Comparative Study" and Professor Robert McGinnis examined his paper on "Homogamy In Background Characteristics and Differential Fertility."

Accompanying on the trip were Professors Francis Allen, Lewis Killian and Warner Wells—all of the FSU department. Graduate students attending were Sarah Gibbons, Carolyn Wehle, Dorothy Dynes, Carolyn Smith and Vincent Todd.

Senate Accepts Bill To Qualify Grades Question

Shaw's Bill Passed Tuesday Revising 1.3 To Read 1.300

A bill by Senator Shaw was passed 15-4 in Tuesday's senate which clears up the controversial grade qualification question that came up during the last election. The constitution will now read 1.300 and 1.00 for 1.3 and 1.0 respectively.

During the recent elections a court ruling decided that a 1.3 could be interpreted as a 1.256 or above.

Senate opposition to the motion was offered by Senators Coaster and Hollis, who maintained that grade qualifications should be done away with completely, since there are many leaders on campus who do not have a high scholastic average."

Hollis argued that he would "rather have an officer with poor grades like me in the army, than a person with a high scholastic average who was not fit."

In line with the grade issue, Vice-President Gene Lawley addressed the FLORIDA FLAMBEAU yesterday that the University Court was being asked to interpret the constitutional ruling on the grades. Offierce seeking clarification on the exact class elections will abide by the present constitution. The grade changes go into effect with the new constitution that is now before the Senate.

A spelling reporting of the senate was called yesterday afternoon following extended discussion of the proposed constitutional change

Lawley explained that this was necessary, since the senate was to remain on schedule discussing the proposed changes in future immediate faculty review board plan.

The Tuesday meeting ended with a successful attempt by Coaster to appoint a grade defeated motion for further reconsideration.

The question involved, according to C. Moore, whether men's and women's grades should be figured to the status of a "committee."

Moore charged that giving senate power to disapprove of a men's or women's senate action through r majority ruling would invalidate the effectiveness of the two groups.

Moore's proposal that this action require a two-thirds majority was defeated 6-7. A faculty review board suggestion to do away with the grade requirement by was also directed.

Shaw explained that a majority of the senate "should be sufficient to decide whether the senate's decisions were wrong. And if the majority of the senate decides it was wrong, will then its wrong," he contended.

It was mentioned that many regulations governing student senate activities affected the men students also. Especially noted was last year's investigation of cheating that first semester freshmen were given disciplinary penalties for cheating by 10:30 on week nights.

The penalty definitely affected the men students," Shaw ra-marked.

The 10:30 ruling last year also extended to all women 10 minutes after the closing of the 10:30 hours after formal dances.

Gaster's successful motion to open the question for reconsideration was followed by a move to table the issue until the next meeting.

Earlier in the meeting Senator Young announced that his special committee on parking problem would recommend that freshmen and sophomores not be allowed to bring cars to the FSU campus beginning directly in front of Longmire.

Young noted that such a move would be beneficial to upperclassmen by limiting parking problems for juniors and seniors." He also pointed out that stickers for parking would be issued and registration could signify the class standing of the owner i.e., freshman, sophomore, etc.

The senate unanimously approved a recommendation allowing University Court Justice-elect Jack Pickett to be appointed a month early, since there was no senator to be appointed to fill the vacancy left by Richard Jackson's official resignation last week.

Sheline Gives Reactions To Hydrogen Bomb Blast

By BOB FOLSOM

The scheduling of more hydrogen bomb tests in the Pacific later this month focuses attention on the vast, mysterious world of the bomb explosion, one FSU physicist has revealed.

Dr. Raymond Sheline did basic research on the atomic bomb at the University of California during World War II, and at Los Alamos, New Mexico.

He is there when the A-bomb was exploded? "No," he said. But the host was an intense from the blast that portheir fellow scientist turned in class. I do have some of the Dr. Sheline, a slightly balding, amiable man, leaned back easily in his swivel chair, and spoke with a somewhat grim tone. "The A-bomb blast is a model-T compared to the H-bomb"—he hesitated for a moment, and then smiled—"I wonder if people have the nerves to call it a bomb. I check myself sometimes to see that I'm getting

"As much as possible I keep from working on the bomb now," he said. "There are a tremendous number of scientists today who feel that about working on the atomic bomb. Atomic power has tremendous possibilities for good, and up to now it has been used for bombs and war."

Dr. Sheline's description of the hydrogen bomb in the Pacific was much more powerful. "The scientists had anticipated. As a matter of fact, the explosion of Eniwetok were expected to radiation when their weapon Pokaryu Mara, was observed with practical naval particles. Could he explain this?

"I can give you only a guess. The fallure—if you call it that is due to one of two things. One, either the efficiency of the H-bomb was underestimated, or

Many Students Object to Ruling

An Open Letter to the Editor of the Flambeau by William Smith

Last Monday night there was exhibited by a member of the FSU faculty an injustice that will take a long time to be expelled from the minds of many. Four Negroes walked into Gupton auditorium, sat down in the front row to one side, and settled back to listen to a progressive music concert. Before the concert had gotten under way, a member of the School of Music had ushered them out and around to the side of the stage where they were given seats to listen to the music. We owe these boys an apology.

Not two weeks ago a group of about fifty students went over to Florida A&M University to listen to a jazz concert by Lionel Hampton, and that was the last honestly say we were shown the finest courtesy possible. We were given seats in the first rows and in general felt as though we were welcomed.

This certainly does not show the true spirit of democracy, nor does it help the relations between the two schools. As students and future leaders of the United States, we should take the initiative that the older generation does not seemingly want to take, and try to promote better relations among the two races.

What happened Monday is exactly what Communistic propaganda thrives upon. They can make what appears to be a small matter into a boiling pot. This is exactly what we are fighting today, and instead of improving the homefront, we disrupt it by being narrow-minded and prejudiced. Upon being interviewed, these four young men showed no signs of bitterness and even assured us that we would be welcomed at their college at any time. If they were still men enough to extend to us this invitation under the circumstances then we, the students, should not sit back and let dormant as we have done in the past, but instead we should think of exactly what we are letting happen to ourselves and our campus. Open your minds and think of the relationship. We can do nothing about the problem, or we can do our parts to help this problem and correct the error in the minds of that part of the Negro is not equal to us.

Let us be the leaders in the crusade for better relations between the two schools and perhaps other schools will take up the challenge. If the relations that do exist between the two races will be that much lessened, rather than have it said that we are a backward race, let progress already built up by people who for years have tried for this better relationship.

Added note: By no means am I trying to break down the segregation element in the South. This I realize will be a "long term deal"; all I'm trying to do is bring to the students an injustice and try to promote better relations between the students of the colleges.

Another Step

Dear Editor:

An apology: From the Caracas convention in Central America, John Foster Dulles came back with a red face. It seems that the U. S. was put on the defensive about a number of things.

One of them was racial discrimination. And now, FSU's face should be red!

The concert was area—and I'm sure our A&M friends would have enjoyed it. Don't look now, Deep South, but I think your younger generation is ready to take a few more steps in getting over the racial barrier.

ARDEN WRIGHT.

Humiliating

To the Editor:

This is my fourth year at Florida State University, and, until this week, I could truly say that I was proud of this university, its faculty and students.

Last Monday evening I attended the Lab Jazz Concert. I paid special notice to the A&M students who filled in and sat in the front row, not because they were Negroes, but because they were dressed so well and acted like well bred adults. The contrast between them and many of our own students present was obvious.

Then they were asked to leave. Just like that. I doubt very seriously that anyone else that has ever happened to FSU students attending A&M functions. But what we have done has been embarrassing to our citizenship, and I am ashamed to exhibited poor manners on their part.

This happened two different times Monday evening. The first time the A&M students left, but the second time, after the orchestra, a boy and a girl, followed the A&M students into the lobby and took them back stage where folding chairs were set up for them in the wings.

Is this an official policy of Florida State University? If it is, I consider it disgraceful to the school and humiliating to the intelligent persons attending the school.

Sincerely,
JIM JINDRA

PS—Does the Flambeau know that one of the members of the A&M All-American swimmer? Tuesday's issue made no mention of the fact.

Another Example

To the Editor:

What do you think?

The lab band was a tremendous success and it too bad that the A&M students who came to sit in the audience on Monday night couldn't have enjoyed it as most human beings like to.

However, before the curtains lions, lab bands were ushered out of the auditorium

It seems surprising to think that such prejudice exists in an institution of higher learning

We are setting an example and it is inexcusable to be so narrow-minded. Our education is defeating its purpose if we can't practice good democratic principles on the campus. This is another incident similar to many that have happened on campus before.

DICK BITTNER.

No Originators

To the Editor:

It is a sintuitively shameful incident when the organizers of our Jazz concert didn't allowed to listen to a Jazz concert. Perhaps the students in the lab band will play a concert a: A&M, and this will scarcely atone for the disgrace caused by asking the Negroes to leave the concerts.

If this disgrace was caused by a personal prejudice, the person is the blame, if by school regulations, the school law is need changing; if by state laws, the state law needs revision.

Let's do something about it!

POLLY SWAIN.

H-Bomb

Foul, Malignant

Mr. Bruce Galphin

An FSU student has called my attention to your article in the current issue of the Flambeau, entitled "H-Bomb".

The entire article is irrational and smells of moronism. It should be painful even were it a literary product of a grammar school student.

You are positively asinine when you say that the reason why we Americans are not scared is because we are ignorant. You should like an invidious, half "educated" British "Limey" or a stinking, ungrateful "Pro" We Americans are not afraid because we are realistic and have properly appraised possibilities. We know we are superior in thinking power, have more money, and produce more of virtually everything, have a preponderance of scientific know-how, and we do possess the world's most destructive weapon, far in advance of anything Russia has. And we have more of them. In short, we know our enemy. So why should strong people quake like silly mice (as you, for instance—

I observed your evident sarcasm when you employ quotes in referring to the Reds as "enslaved," and we "the Americans" as "liberators."

I also noticed your nincompoop people are not familiar with and her satellites as having popular governments. Popular in whose mind? Even the Red governments are so damned peculiar, why they not ever dare free elections?

Galphin, you have laid yourself as a total moron as you are a foul, ha,-brained Communist dog parading uncler the skin of an American. You are a d----d bloody fool and a traitor to your country. I would like to take the matter up with FSU authorities. You should even be investigated by the FBI, sir-ity. I'd like to see them deport you to Siberia, you fool, malignant a-s!

Irrespectively yours,
Disgusted Student
Discretion of Editor.

Editor's note: We print the above letter in accordance with our policy of accepting all signed letters. We have taken the privilege of abbreviating words which might be considered offensive.

We sincerely agree with our correspondent that Americans are free people and the United States the best nation in the world. We have worked under the proposition that even the best can stand improvement, however, and that unless the people are informed of new situations in advance they will not be able to cope with the problems when they arise.

We wish we could believe with our correspondent that Americans have better thinking power than older peoples. We fear that scientific abasis simple are above the ability to many of our fellow citizens. Not unintelligent in any situation, it is because they are better informed. That is unfortunate, but wishful thinking, would seem to be more fruitful material for a newspaper to publish.

We wish also, that Russians were not so advanced in their methods of producing nuclear weapons, but the facts seem to point in that direction. Again, official has said that there isn't much comfort in being able to destroy Russian cities three times while they only destroy ours once. We Americans just rather not be destroyed at all.

In addition, for the convenience of possible investigators, spells out his 'treason' in today's Free Lance.

Overcrowding

New FSU

Dear Editor:

I was disappointed in your failure to see clearly the real issues involved and the proper solution in the editorial concerning overcrowded scheduling of events at our university.

You went as far as to suggest that we stop inviting so many high school groups to the campus. This suggestion at best could not get at the root of the problem, and I was amazed at the your shortsightedness at not seeing the broader implications of this situation.

After careful observation over a period of several years, it seems to me that the following solution would be more adequate and satisfactory to all concerned: (1) Give Florida State University exclusively to the high schools of the state for the convention and festival use. The name of the institution could then be more appropriately changed to FSUC, Florida State University for Children. This would be jointly controlled by the present administration, the Old Guard of Tallahassee, and certain individuals of the state legislature. (2) The present student body and faculty could move in a group to more civilized land of the state and establish NFSU, New Florida State University. This move would allow the new institution a chance to create at least a little intellectual spirit on the campus and find a more mature concept of values both on the scholastic and social levels.

Sincerely,
REGINALD ADAMS.

We Don't Miss Unknown Privileges

By BRUCE GALPHIN

The behavior of people varies considerably from culture to culture, but there are certain similarities which we ordinarily overlook.

Our belief that people in other nations are essentially different creatures can often lead us to grief, particularly in these days when world politics are in such delicate balance.

One unfortunate belief we Hold is that the majority of people in the Communist nations are anxious to throw over their government and set up a regime friendly to the United States, as even fostered by American propaganda services.

It would contribute materially to our national safety if we could understand how attitudes are made. We should know what freedom means to people.

First let me say I would not like to live in a Communist nation at present. If my sources of information are correct, there are many civil liberties which I could not enjoy there. I am used to those liberties; I would miss them.

But we should all understand an important fact: we do not miss things which we have never had or been acquainted with. Freedom is not something that exists autonomously in the "minds" of men. It is a part of American culture, just as our religion, our dressing habits and our tastes in eating are part of our culture. Furthermore, we have some kinds of freedom and not others.

Suppose a student of the University of Argentina should say to us, "You mean you can't run wild in the streets? Everywhere I go I must obey traffic signals! You poor, enslaved students.

I bet you're just waiting for a chance to revolt, aren't you?" We would just laugh at him. We aren't used to this kind of "freedom," so we don't miss it.

Similarly the Communists say we are not free because we allow private owners to control much of our economic life. "The Americans are the puppets of Wall Street Imperialism," they claim, using many of the same processes of distorting the truth that our propagandists do.

So freedom is a relative thing, and not sharply defined. We need not expect the masses of Russia or the Communist bloc suddenly to desire something they never have had. Many people are fleeing Eastern Europe, but these are the ones who object to the privileges of political liberties or the power of economic influence. I am sure they are not typical. That is why I said in my last column that the Communist controlled people do not consider themselves enslaved. Neither do they consider us as potential liberators. That is why it is not likely for for us to be a revolution any time soon. The Communist governments enjoy the popularity of indifference, if no other kind.

Americans like to think they are immensely popular throughout the world. Unfortunately we are not, even among our supposed allies. We might act politically more wisely if we realized different peoples of the world are used to different things. Such realization alone would make us more popular.

Writing Is One Way to Aid Education

By BOB FOLSOM

A. Whitney Griswold, a recent report to Yale alumni, sounded the call for American education, which he says is a steadily worsening situation. It is:

The report is very fine and thorough. We want to learn more of it because, simply, it should be heeded by all, and second, is pertinent to what we want to bring in.

He commences the report by pointing out, complete with figures, the shortage of elementary and secondary schools resulting in "overcrowding, double and often triple sessions, fire and health hazards, and consequent deterioration in discipline and instruction. Far worse is the shortage of teachers.

These two points lead to a third: the decline of the liberal arts as a force in our national education system. These studies are disappearing under a layer of vocational and other substitutes like a landscape in the ice age, only this glacier reaches from coast to coast and border to border.

The purpose of the liberal arts is not to teach businessmen business, or grammarians grammar, or college students Greek and Latin which have disappeared from their required curricula. It is to develop the powers of the intellectual and spiritual powers in the individual before he enters upon his chosen career life greatest gifts are those of intelligence, resourcefulness, judgement, and character. It is, as John Stuart Mills' telling phrase to make 'capable and cultivated human beings.' Men are men. Mill said, 'before they are lawyers or physicians or manufacturers, and if you make them capable and sensible men they will make themselves capable and sensible lawyers or physicians'."

He says further that the term "liberal arts has given way to the technical academic usage to the term 'general education,' with the obvious broader implications as to content and method."

• Mr. Griswold's article is only one of many, many which have appeared in print in recent years to sound out and help American education. The good majority of these articles, written by educators, appear often in such periodicals as The Atlantic, Harper's Magazine, and Saturday Review, to name only a few examples. Robert Hutchins just recently had a piece in Look concerning the problem of teachers who feel unappreciated.

What these educators point out is not new. Actually, they are only saying what has been written before, which may echo in voice today but not in effect. But their attempt to keep a light apparently keeps getting dimmer. This asks the question: How much good then do their articles do? How much power do they have to open over and over's documented truth; a truth that is crippling American education?

Take the above instance: Mr. Griswold confronts us with the way liberal arts is losing out in education today. Tentatively or unfortunately, depending on your concept, vocationalism is the dominant goal. But as many universities, it already has. Stop and look around you. Shakespeare is going back into the files, and accounting and meat cutting is out in front. Notwithstanding, there

Butterfly Net: Somebody Bad Stole...

By DICK VICTORY

My name's Webb. I'm a spider. This is my partner Sylvia. I hasten to add that he's a bug.

This is the country. The time is 2 p.m. and we're on patrol in one of the squad cars. Suddenly, the radio blares:

"This is the chief. Better get right over to the Hall Museum. It's a case for you."

"First I gotta get the facts. What kind is it?" Webb asked.

"Butterfly net over." That's what I liked about this force. Briefs were always short.

DUM DE DUM DUM.

It didn't take us long to get there. We sat down at the entrance and went to work on the case. We had hardly tasted it when the Head Librarian came running out in a dither. She looked terrified, so I asked her what the trouble was.

"Somebody's stolen my reading books."

"Which ones Mam?"

"Those by Jesperin and Curme's The Grass Harpe," she said. Then she added: "What worm would do a thing like that?"

"Those worms from A&M," I told her and we both spoke at the same time. "Who else? Clemson? Florida State?"

"Boy." Red continued. "for once we get to work on a 'hot' case."

Sylvia looked the case, then I looked at him. "You let that case get hot," I said, "and I'll bust you. Now let's get down to the station."

When we got back the chief said he was going to have to ask for outside help on the case. Federal Bureau of Insects. He asked for more suggestions.

I had an idea. "Why not call in Mr. Chamvleon?" I asked.

"He's an outsider," he said, "and besides we can't afford him. We're already spending too much on departmental overtime."

I smiled and gnashed my hands deeper into my pockets. It looked like it was up to us and the F. B. I.

Weeks went by, then months, but still no word on the case. The trail went on. Then one day, two years later, Red and I were sitting in the office talking about it.

I pounded my head on the desk. "There has to be a stumuck. All detective stories have them. There's got to be a case for us."

"Yeah, I know, but what is it?"

Red looked up with a couple of minutes. For me that was pretty hard. Then it came to me.

I have it. What idota we've been."

Red leaped forward and started shaking me by the arm. "What is it, what is it?" he pleaded, please give me the facts" he pleaded.

"It's about time," I said, "the reason we couldn't find the worm is that . . ."

"You don't mean . . ."

"Exactly," I said, turned."

DUM DE DUM DUM.

That night we had only one thing to do. "Call out the Insectidal Squad. And tell them to bring along their Butterfly Nets."

After we threw out the net it didn't take long to bring him in. He just wanted to know one thing.

"How did you pick me out of all these other butterflies?"

I wasn't his best friend so I told him. "You're a queer color."

"What's that got to do with it?"

"You've got the third chapter of The Grass Harps all over the side of your mouth."

DUM DE DUM DUM.

In a moment he made a full of the case, but first a word from our sponsor, Hollow Tube cigarettes.

"Cough!"

As a result of the case Spider Webb got loaded.

Next week: A Grim Fairy Tale.

To Be or Not to Be 1.3; That Question is Settled

By ORCHID ALONSO

The grade issue, or to be or not to be a 1.3 was finally settled in this week's senate session. A motion by Senator Travis Shaw was passed 15-4 calling for the committee to read 1.300 and 1.00 respectively for grade qualifications.

Sammy noted that considerable opposition was offered by Senators Hollis and Gautier. Gaster last week made the practical suggestion to do away with all grade requirements.

He dropped the subject this week but Hollis came in with a few introductory remarks that were promptly refuted.

Said Hollis, "There are natural leaders on this campus who do not have a grade average."

Sammy says that he agrees with the others, who stated that this could the student body respect of a leader who could not maintain grades.

"He might even have to leave school."

Highlighting the usual rabble ann ranting in Senate this week was a fight to literally make Red's and women's senate committee." The whole fight came over a faculty recommendation for a proposed constitutional change.

Senator Shaw led the fight to reduce the individual senate's powers, because as he put it, regulations made in the individual senes affect the body."

Shaw seemed a little upset over the fact that last year, women's senate was changed ruling and required first semester freshmen women to be at 10:30 rather than 11 on week nights.

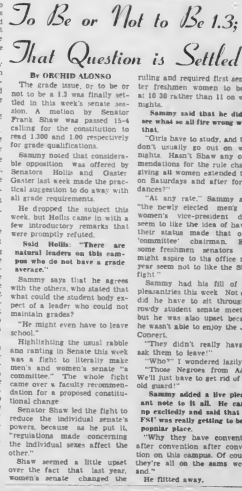
Sammy said that he didn't see what so all fire wrong with that.

"Girls have to study, and they don't usually go out on week nights. Hasn't Shaw any commendations for the rule change giving all women extended time on Saturdays and after formal dances?"

At any rate," Sammy said, "the newly elected men's and women's vice-presidents don't seem to like the idea of having their status made that of a committee" chairman, Rvery some freshmen senators who might aspire to the office next year seem not to like the Shaw fight.

Sammy had his fill of unpleasantries this week Not only did he have to sit through a rowdy student senate meeting, but he was also upset because he wasn't able to enjoy the Jane Concert.

"They didn't really have to ask them to leave."



"Who?" I wondered lastly.

"Those hoodlums from A&M We'll just have to get rid of the old guard!"

Sammy added a live pleasant note to it all. He came up excitedly and said that all FSU was really getting to be a popular place.

"Why they have convention after convention after convention on this campus. Of course they're all on the same weekend."

He flitted away.

"Run down town and get 100 pounds of hamburger, some buns, an' make 50 gallons of coffee—and hurry—just got word they're having another one at those high school meets."

Marriage: Double or Nothing Routine

By DAVID DRESS

Marriage may be a rest period between romances to some entertainers, but to many it is the route they travel to find matrimony with assurance. The performers who added jets to their career with marriage are great in number.

George Burns and Gracie Allen started their husband and wife radio series in 1942, but before that had been known as an astounding comedy team for many years when they first teamed and 1926 when they married, the couple have made movies and shows and are considered the number one husband and wife morning radio team in the country. Recently radio's Boston Blackie found a clue in Dorothy's column, and was the guest on the program and helped Blackie find the criminal. Boston Blackie was played by Richard Kollmar.

Jack Benny and Mary Livingston have been together ever since he discovered her as a saleagirl in the May Company department store. Mary became a regular part of the program about ten years ago. Fred Allen's Portland Hoffa is also a part of his married life as well as his programs.

Alice Faye was Fox's number one star when she quit the films to become the devoted wife

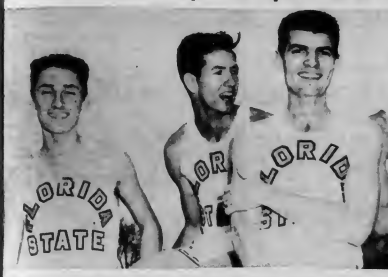
"I'll write you every day."

Ozzie Nelson and Harriet Hilliard went on radio in 1944 portraying the married life adventures. Now their children are included in the radio cast playing themselves. Ozzie was quite a known bandleader before he married Harriet, his vocalist. Then they settled down to even more fame than they had known could exist.



Columnist Dorothy Kingallen and Radio-Actor and Producer Richard Kollmar sit around their home discussing the day's happenings with each other, and talk about world affairs, the latest books, the latest movies and shows and are considered the number one husband and wife morning radio team in the country. Recently radio's Boston Blackie found a clue in Dorothy's column, and was the guest on the program and helped Blackie find the criminal. Boston Blackie was played by Richard Kollmar.

FSU Thinclads Face Mercer In First Dual Meet

By JIMMY JOANOS
Sports Staff Writer

A freshman-packed FSU track squad will journey to Macon, Georgia, tomorrow for an encounter with the Mercer Bears in the Seminoles first dual meet of the 1954 season. This is the sixth consecutive year that a dual meet has been held between the two schools. The Seminoles are seeking their 5th victory of the series.

When the annual affair was first held in 1946 the Bears overwhelmed FSU by a score of 82-49. In the four annual battles that followed the Seminoles Cindermen emerged the victor by scores of 89 1/3-41 2/3, 80 2/3-50 1/3, 78 1/3-51 1/3, and 85 1/3-45 2/3.

Seminole attention is centered around the 880 yard dash event where it is likely that an FSU new school record will be established by Larry Hountha. The freshman who hails from New York City unofficially covered the distance in 1 minute and 57 seconds in a leg of the sprint medley as the Florida Relays in Gainesville last Saturday. The current record was set by Bill Wagner in 1952 who covered the half-mile in 2:01.3.

An FSU workhorse of the day will be Captain Carlos Fraunfelter who is slated to participate in four events, the 100 yard dash, the shot putt, the discus throw, and the broad jump. The durable Junior at present holds FSU school records in the shot, the discus, and the broad jump.

In addition to the school record likely to be broken by Hountha the two meet records are expected to fall at the hands of the Seminole thinclads. Jim Casteel, freshman from Avondale, Georgia, will challenge the 51.0 quarter-mile runs against Mercer University in 1953 and 1952 by Woody Parker of FSU. It is also highly possible the Indian Mile Relay team will shatter the mark set by FSU in 1952.

Ken Carpenter, an ineligible transfer, will enter the Mile and Two-Mile events unattached. FSU track followers look forward to the time in the future when the jaunts of the "Yanker" distance man will bring in points for the Seminoles.

Florida State probable entries are as follows: 1 mile run, Ken Jarrett; 440-yard dash, Casteel, Frank Bright; 100 yard dash, Joe Davis, Fraundorfer; 120 yard high hurdles, Tinney Brown, Charles Watson, Donald Heidel; 880 yard dash, Larry Hountha; 220 yard dash, Casteel; 2 mile run, Jarrett; 220 yard low hurdles, Davis, Watson, Heidel; relay, Brown, Frank Bright, Hountha, and Casteel; shot putt, Fraundorfer, Tom Smith, John Robbins; discus throw, Fraundorfer, Smith, Smith, Thiele; high jump, Brown, Lloyd Lassen, Heidel; pole vault, Warren Strickland; broad jump, Fraundorfer, Casteel; javelin throw, Ron Wood, Bob Verbanic, Frank Kircher.

INITIATES HONORED

Pledges and new initiates of Kappa Delta, social sorority here, were honored last Tuesday night with a banquet held at a local restaurant.

New initiates, according to reports, include Ann Baldwin, Cynthia Baskin, Judy Bishop, Lee Brown, Molly Carry and Bennie Jo Comart. Also, Libby Ferguson, Jean Ford, Frankie Harrison and Margaret Hearn.

Mary Rose Heintz, Lucia Nell Highsmith, Emilie Hudson, Shirley Ann Hyde, Shirley Morgan, Tanny Perkins and Cheney Sanderson. Also, Shirlene Sasser, Millicent Smith, Joan Secker, Ann Alexander, Priscilla Andrew, Camille Fuss, Virian Bernheim, Barbara Musselman and Ruth Williams.

BENRY PROMOTED

Captain Rex T. Henry, assistant professor of Army ROTC here has been promoted to Major. It was revealed recently.

Following consideration by a U S selection board in February, Major Henry received his promotion from the office of Secretary of the Army.

Missourians Shown Lab Inner Workings

A delegation of students from Central College in Missouri was on campus this week inspecting the Florida State University Marine Laboratory, according to spokesmen.

The delegation was composed of twelve students majoring in Biology and Dr. and Mrs. Walter Brown of Central. Dr. Brown is head of the Biology Department at his college. Also on the trip was a tour through south Florida and the Bahama Islands.

Brown revealed that this is "the third straight year" that the Marine Laboratory at Allgakie Point has been included on the annual Biology field trip of Central College."

While in Tallahassee the group attended a party at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Meyer. Dr. Meyer is head of the FSU Biology Department, and received his degree from Central College in 1930. He was later awarded an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws by that institution.

Duke Bats FSU 8-4; Indians Dump Jeffs

By KEN KINGERY
Flambeau Sports Editor

The Florida State Baseball club found the bats few and far between and the errors all bunched together, as the Blue Devils of Duke University whalloped them 8-4 at the FSU Diamond yesterday.

Jim Atwood, showing perfect form and speed, held the Dukes to one run in the first six innings of play. Tiring, Atwood was hit fairly hard and with some costly errors, the visitors ran the score to 5-3 in the big seventh frame.

They bumped on Seminole Pitcher Bobby Walles for three more in the final inning. The Seminoles netted two runs in the first frame, one in the sixth on Hudson's triple to deep right center, and one in the eighth. The stands were packed to see the contest. Max Long is expected to take the mound duties in today's game. Bill Atwood's first loss of the season. He struck out ten Blue Devil batters.

FSU 11 — AMHERST 3

Led by the hitting and pitching of Seminole Starter Max Long, the Florida State baseball nine trounced three Amherst pitchers, to trim the College Lord Jeffs 11-3.

Long went all the way for the Seminoles allowing nine scattered hits by the visitors. It was his fourth victory of the season, against no defeats.

Shortstop, and last year's captain, Coster Mills hit a scratched out single in his last trip to the plate, to extend his hitting streak to 16 straight games.

Coach Mashery's boys went held scoreless in the first inning, but erupted in the next four to score nine of their 11 runs.

Center-fielder Bod Hudson put wood to Amherst pitchers, and rapped out two hard-hit doubles. Fred Twomey, star first sacker, banged out a jarring triple and a clean-cut single to share hitting honors with Hudson and Long.

Ken Boyce and Twomey drove in two Seminole runs each, with Billy Campbell, Gary Ashley, and Hudson accounting for the other five.

FSU 10 — JEFFS 6

Completing their two-game series with the Amherst College Lord Jeffs, the Florida State Seminoles rallied in the late innings to defeat the visitors for the second straight time, 10-6.

Seeming out of fresh pitchers, Amherst, who had a commanding 6-0 lead in the bottom of the eighth, found themselves in the middle of a typical Seminole scoring spree.

The FSU nine started out with five singles off the bats of Billy Campbell, Bob Hudson, Bob Bonell and Bobby Wales. Aided by three walks given up by the Jeff's pitchers, Coster Mills annexed a screaming triple, to drive in three Seminole runs. Mills has now hit safely in consecutive games to boost his average to .415.

After a quick conversion from the Basketball court to the baseball diamond, Helms All-American Paul (Hank) Wernke was the victim of a six-run attack by the Amherst nine. George Hetherman relieved Wernke in the sixth and held the visitors scoreless. Hetherman won his first ball game against no losses.

J. Campbell had the best day, by hitting two for two. Mills tagged two for four. Ken Boyce appeared again in left field, pounded the ball with no mercy, as he laced a driving triple.

This gives the Seminoles a 5-1 record against college competition.

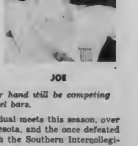
Stock, Wernke.....ALL-AMERICANS

Ernest Stock, versatile Florida State University swimmer, has made All-American honors. Ernie took fourth place in the recent NCAA Meet in New York, as he finished less than two second behind Ohio State's winner, Dave Hawkins.

With hopes of just competing in the final six men, Stock came from behind to finish three tenths of a second behind University of Florida's Teddy Robinson.

George Cooper, the other FSU entrant found the going mighty tough as the backstroker failed to qualify for the finals.



Helms Picks Wernke for the Second Time...

Peul (Ham) Wernke, who is probably the finest basketball player ever to come to FSU, was picked for the second time on the Honorary All-American team by the Helms Foundation organization.

Ham was presented the acknowledgement yesterday by FSU Athletic Director, Howard Dunford, at the opening game between the FSU Baseballers and Duke.

JOE TAYLOR LOOKS FOR STILL RINGS CROWN —

The Florida State Seminole Gymnasts will be trying to win their third National Crown tonight and tomorrow night. FSU will rely on Olympic ace Don Holder and Joe Taylor for the most of the points.

JOE

The wire squad members, plus Coach Hartley Price was able to get yesterday for practice before the preliminaries this afternoon.

Taylor's specialty event is still rings, where he has a great chance to cop the finals. Holder on the other hand will be competing in the horizontal and parallel bars.

FSU is unbeaten in four dual meets this season, over Georgia Tech, Syracuse, Minnesota, and the once defeated Swedish Olympic Team. With the Southern Intercollegiate, Florida AAU and Alabama Invitational Championships, the gymnasts will be trying to win the NCAA Title back, as they took the '51 and '52 titles. They are the current NAAU Champions, and they will have to defend their title in California some time in late April.

le a place for vocationalism. It is the student's choice. But it is also the student's choice to select liberal arts, too. How can he select it, though, when educators attempt to do away with it?

Vocationalism is certainly not what the world traditionally calls an education. It might not stop thinking, but it does not and cannot awaken and develop as free thinkers as the liberal arts.

This leads back to the question—what good do the articles do?—We think they do some good, but nothing is changed or redeveloped overnight. If problems such as the above are continually brought to light, certainly some progress will be made for the better.

The articles do combat the educators, for example, who want to shove the liberal arts program down the drain. To write about it is one way of helping. To look around you, and see, what is going on, then giving it nourishing thought, is helping in another way—you are recognizing that the right to free thought is being taken away from you. These two ways are a part of a combination of ways, if applied constantly, in which we can recognize whether we are moving toward a goal or retreating from it.

Marriage Double

of bandleader Phil Harris. Now the team is on radio rating as one of America's top shows. Alice gave up her Fox stardom and made way for Betty Grable who has since quit the company to make way for Marilyn.

Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healy have been together for a while and were known as single comedians before their marriage. Since Peter is a handsome fellow and Mary one of the prettiest light-comedians to come along in a long time, the two make video and movie successes pretty easily.

Fibber McGee and Molly—Jim and Marian Jordan—would be nowhere without each other, but the point is their husband and wife comedy show is on the best ten lists every year. It's all situation like when a decorator (he'd hired complained about the closet that Fibber has been known for cluttering up. Fibber fired him saying, "What's that fay tryin' to do . . . ruin my life's work?"

So you see, marriage is not just a business where the husband is the silent partner nor is it the romantic story where the hero gets killed off in the first act. To marry in showbusiness it is a form of sambling . . . double or nothing.

Larsen Addresses Business Fraternity On Insurance Sales

More changes in insurance- legislation than in the last ten years, than happened in the 100-year period, Comptroller, State Treasurer, P. Larsen told Delta Sigma Pi members last week.

Speaking at the monthly professional meeting of the business fraternity here, Mr. Larsen's topic was "The State's Responsibility in the Regulation of Insurance." He noted that the State of Florida receives 2 per cent of all insurance premiums collected, adding that over $5 million was taken in in this manner last year.

Enumerating the duties of the Insurance Commission, Mr. Larsen said there are 626 insurance companies in Florida wishing to do business, whom the Commission must regulate. He noted the Commission is also charged with receiving and auditing the annual reports of insurance companies' business transactions.

Commenting on the volume increases in insurance sales, the speaker said that in the last 12-year period, there has been an increse of premium collected amounting to over 387 per cent.

It is also the Insurance Commission's duty, the Treasurer stated, the approve the rates of companies in insurance business. He went on to say that the body approves or disapproves all accident and health policy forms besides playing a large part in examination of companies within the state.

In addition to serving as State Treasurer, Mr. Larson is State Insurance Commissioner and Fire Marshal.

Mail Boxes Placed By Gold Key Taps

Two mail boxes for "campus mail only" have been placed in "strategic" places on campus through the efforts of Gold Key taps this week, according to Tom Simmons, an initiate.

The mail boxes, located in Lonmire and Westcott, "were established to meet the need and to suit the convenience of the student body for the depositing of campus mail and notices in the eastern area of the campus."

The taps responsible for erecting the boxes expressed the hope that many long trips to the post office would be avoided by students in the future through the use of the two boxes. "It is hoped that the faculty and the administration, as well as the students, will make full use of this convenience."

Simmons revealed that mail will be picked up from the boxes several times a day. He reminded students that "The regulations for campus mail are that to be eligible it must be either written on a 3 by 5 card or submitted in an envelope, and notices written on small or flimsy paper will not be acceptable."

It was a blast 500 times—"No, no," he corrected, "700 times"—as powerful as the atom bomb. "The two bombs are very different; the nucleus in the A-bomb splits in two, while in the H-bomb the two nuclei join together to form a bigger nucleus."

His face struck a grim smile. "The fantastic thing is this: when a neutron produced by the H-bomb hits the surrounding area of cobalt it produces radioactivity and a four-ton hydrogen bomb, surrounded with this cobalt, can produce enough radioactivity if spread evenly around the earth, to kill all human life, with the exception, maybe, of the ocean life."

And the radioactive dust appearing in the air? "The amount of radioactivity appearing in the air has increased noticeably in the past few years. It is not dangerous though, but it has interfered with scientific research."

He looked around his small office, the shelves along the wall filled with science volumes and physical chemistry magazines containing material pertinent to the atom and its might. "The salient fact remains, nevertheless, that we have a tremendous scientific plant that can provide the energy for what we really need —electric power, etc.—but only a minor effort is being made to use it for constructive means. I wish we were doing more with atomic power that would indicate our need will but we don't seem to demonstrate this . . ." he broke off.

"I'm going back to Oak Ridge this summer. I'm not going to work on atomic bombs," he smiled. "I'll work on basic research."

Houser Reveals Dates For State Party Conclave

Tentatively Slated At 7:30 in Lecture Hall and Longmire

The State Party convention to select candidates for class offices, Senate, Judiciary and Honor Court is planned for Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, Jack Houser, party chairman, announced recently.

Houser stated that the convention, tentatively planned for 7:30, may be held in Science Lecture Hall the first night and Longmire Auditorium the next.

We'll work right down the slate," Houser said, noting that the convention will begin with Senate candidates, Honor Court and Judiciary members and end with class officers, accomplishing as much each night as possible.

"We'll nominate as many officers as those that are wanted for," Houser said, commenting that his party will not seek to nominate candidates if none seek the nomination, merely to oppose Student Party candidates.

He was unable, at the time, to officially state the date for the nominating speeches.

A major point on the order of business will be the selection of a next year's party chairman, treasurer, corresponding secretary, recording secretary and party executive committee members at the first session.

Asked if he would accept the chairmanship again, Houser commented at the time that he had "no plans as to any official action in the party next year."

Houser noted that the next few days after the State Party conclave will represent their organizations at this convention. Living units are allowed one representative per 50 residents, sororities and fraternities one each, and each organization with more than 50 members one delegate each.

Houser added that the purpose of giving organizations this privilege is to "maintain interest on the part of the campus organizations."

After predicting close nominating races in the senatorial and class presidents departments, Houser expressed optimism over the future of the State Party.

We're optimistic," he commented. "We believe the State Party is here to stay, and that the two party system is also here to stay. We have memories about the past student body elections because anything that benefits on the campus had to be sold and fight its way to the top. The State Party will do the same."

He added that there is nothing to the story that was published in the Student Party nominating races from seeking nomination on the State ticket.

An estimated 125 delegates are expected at the Convention.

ELECTIONS CANDIDACY

Declarations of candidacy for the upcoming Class Elections will open Monday according to Elections Secretary Bill Stancik. Stancik said it is necessary for every candidate for an office to fill out a declaration with the Secretary of Elections prior to election. He noted any candidates having questions regarding the elections should contact him for clarifications. Election rules are also available in the Student Government offices to anyone wishing to see them.

Overflow Crowd Hears Sauter-Finegan Band

By AL PIERCE and BETTY BISHOP

Jam-minded students at Florida State University packed the Music Building outdoor Amphitheater Friday night to overflowing to hear the Sauter-Finegan outfit in a special concert of popular music.

Brought here by the FSU Inter-Fraternity Council to play for its annual formal dance that night, the popular orchestra which has garnered national fame with novelty tunes, brought loud applause from the estimated 1,600 people in the audience. Also attending the F-dance affair were many faculty and administration members.

Filling the outdoor stage with such unusual instruments of the trade as kettle and muzzle drums, bells, chimes, a harp, celeste and an outsize baritone, the 15-man ensemble presented an all-modern appearance, both in music and in dress. Band members were Kelley green jackets with plaid lapels and black trousers. Bill Finegan, the leader, was dressed in a contrasting conservative brown suit. Finegan, incidentally, graduated as valedictorian of a FLORIDA FLAMBEAU reporter, that he is presently traveling with the band for a month. He said he and Eddie Sauter, his "better half" take turns on the road for a month at a time.

Amazing the audience with novelty tunes like "Doodletown Fifers" and "Honey Jump," the versatile outfit later spellbound listeners with renditions of "Serenade to Love," "April in Paris" and "Stardust." Beginning with novelties, the band members were soon to be playing three and four different instruments in the course of one number. In "Doodletown Fifers" alone, it was noted, the sax men doubled on the flute, clarinets and kazoos. Many were heard to exclaim over the versatility of the musicians.

Following the Stan Kenton idea of using microphones and other amplifying equipment for various tonal effects, the Sauter-Finegan group placed several "mikes" throughout their band, enabling the more difficult musical passages of the "multi-colored" instrumentations to be produced.

Employing "everything from toy drums and cymbals to sleigh bells and kazoos," the outfit, according to listeners, fulfilled their promise of modern, exciting arrangements and variety.

Their arrangements rendered Friday included "Gambler's Guitar," "I Like New York in June," "Autumn Leaves" and "Body and Soul."

"Eddie and the Witch Doctor" was a progressive number later explained by star drummer Joe Venuto to be "A conversation between two drummers. This particular piece Joe said, happened to be "a little argument." Venuto, notable for progressive drum and percussion work in highly imaginative Latin beloved the marimba rendition of "Stardust," accompanied, in the Sauter-Finegan style, by the celeste and bass fiddle.

The concert closed in appreciative applause with their scrupulously arranged "Stardust," which, said Finegan before-hand, "takes the listener on a highly imaginative Caribbean Cruise." The semi-symphonic piece was highlighted with Latin musical themes.

Pulling back on their wealth of instrumentation, the band then fielded, having worked with Goodman, Miller and Dorsey, Sauter and Finegan have the ability to and attained their unlimited capacity for musical versatility in the percussion arts and the unique handling of several instruments at once.

Florida State University has already seen a "Type Flyer" band in Sauter Finegan this year.

Fifteen Entered In APO Contest For Ugliest Man

The Alpha Pi Omega-sponsored Ugly Man Contest began yesterday morning with 15 candidates entered by various fraternities and dormitories on campus and spokesmen expect a successful contest.

Ed Andrews, APO president-remembered that he expected a good turnout at the ticket booths, adding that the Friday night senior dance held in connection with the contest, should be a "big-number."

As of Monday afternoon, the only voting booth put up by APO was in the Union Terrace Terrace, but those in the Dining Hall and Student Center were scheduled to be put up this morning.

Andrews revealed that the name of the Ugly Man Contest would be announced and crowned at 11 p.m. during the Senior Dance. The winning organization will receive a beautiful bronze figurehead as a trophy," he noted, "and the winning contestant will be awarded a genuine silver Ugly Man Key."

Voting values were listed by APO as one cent for one vote; 25 cents for 25 votes; a $1 bill for 100 votes and $5 for 500 votes. Tickets for the quiz were also available at the voting booths for 50 cents each. They will also be sold by APO members until 11 p.m. that night.

The members will wear blue arm bands, said Andrews, for easy identification and tickets will also be sold at the dance.

Commenting on voting process so far, Andrews declared that the competition was "keen" and that at least two minutes after the polls were put up and if the late rate continues the contest should be a large success. "At the least it should make our expenses."

Qualified candidates for the Ugly Man Contest and sponsors are Jim Crews, Delta Delta; Gary Lipe, Delta Gamma; Mary Jane Bowen, Delta Zeta; Vernon Edgar, Kappa Alpha Psi; Chris Cross, Pi Beta Phi; Harvey Hall, Zeta Tau Alpha; and Jim Broderick, Alpha Xi Delta.

Duane Purvis, Delta Tau Delta; Tommy Watts, Kappa Alpha; Bill Dunnavant, Lambda Chi Alpha; "Boo" Sharpless, Phi Kappa Tau; Eddie Jones, Kappa Alpha; Beryle Scarboro, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Al Pierce, West Hall; and Jim Hendricks, Alpha Phi. They are listed in the order appearing on the voting booths.

Andrews noted that several entries were not made until after the deadline and were automatically disqualified. "We have not only planned, but succeeded in our quality of pictures entered."

Andrews stated that all members of APO would manage the polls at one time or another.

Vance Says 'Good Citizenship Demands Being Well Informed'

Good citizenship today demands that one spend a great deal of time just on the business of getting informed, Earl Vance, professor of journalism at Florida State University, told the Tallahassee Junior Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon meeting at the Cherokee Hotel yesterday.

Speaking on the subject, "The Business Man and the News," Professor Vance said it is relatively easy to keep up with world news events such as earthquakes, crimes, and prize fights but good citizenship today demands that one be prepared to make intelligent decisions on matters which are often set simple or spectacular.

He gave as an example the annual budget now before congress and which is so complex that it would be difficult for the citizens to make an intelligent study understanding it. It is the business of newspagencies. he said, to assist people in understanding such matters by giving them as much information and interpretation as possible.

Other complex topics mentioned which the public must somehow try to understand are the Indo-China situation, Iran, Egypt, the atom-bomb controversy, the problem of foreign trade, India, and Pakistan. All these problems are vitally important to America and what we think and do about them will depend on what we know about them.

"On all these problems", Professor Vance said, "it is possible to take either of two attitudes. We can, as it were, close our eyes and ears and let the swallow—following whatever is given us and hope for the best. Or we can open our eyes and take the time to try to inform ourselves so that we can be intelligent and do our share in the welfare demand the latter."

MEALS FOR MILLIONS

Methodist students will hold a "Meals for Millions" dinner at this Sunday's Methodist Student Hour. Multi-purpose food will be served to show members how it can be used as cost effective substitutions

Reservations for the church group said members will be asked to donate funds for the meal. They expect the 75 cents is sufficient to feed 25 starving people with the multi-purpose preparations.

Martin Shows Concern Over Paper's Tone

Vice-president A. B Martin expressed concern over the tone of campus publications last Friday in a meeting with Student Editor-in-chief Bruce Galphin and Dean Campbell, Dean of the School of Journalism.

Martin said he did not know how much interest the students had in the existence of the campus publications or in the authorities as the State Board of Control. He stated that The Florida Flambeau had been "all right" until the last five weeks or so. Since then he felt there had been too much criticism.

Asked by Editor Galphin for the specific cases upon which he had been abrogated, Martin said that in the open letter to President James A. Sharp Jr. and to numerous letters to the editor which appeared in the issue of four A&M students from a Dade county last week.

Martin said that Flambeau had not considered proper channels in writing the letter, saying that the paper representing in Faculty Senate meetings. As for the last editorial entitled "Let's Have a Party," Martin said that he thought it was possible the whole matter had been prearranged, including the letters to the editor. In this case, the Flambeau might have been used as a "mouthpiece" for extremists.

Both Martin and Dean Campbell said they did not consider it necessary for the Flambeau to submit all material to the editor.

The two stated that there had been trouble with the Flambeau every year under the present system of having a newly elected editor and a completely student-run editorial staff.

Dean Campbell said that the present system did not work, then

Women's Club To Meet Here; 1,000 Are Due

State Convention of the Florida Federated Women's Clubs will assemble at Florida State University April 19 through April 24. Over 1,000 members are expected to attend this 50th annual convention.

Main headquarters for similar club registration is the Florida Union and the Student Center, and the Duval Hotel. Mrs. Walter Jones of Jacksonville is state president. Mrs. Frank Lee of Tallahassee is state convention chairman. Hotels already filling rapidly and all social affairs will be held on the campus.

Mrs. Martin Dashar is president of the hostess club and Mrs. Doak S. Campbell, chairman of the consultant department, has appointed representatives.

"Personality I feel need of help from the student body and faculty as hostesses and guides for the convention," says Mrs. Campbell, She requests everybody on campus, staff, faculty and students that live nearby to save parking space by leaving their cars at home.

The Womans Club requested a convention in the summer, because many members have children attending school at that time. Many parents of students will be here.

Meals will be in the Suwannee room and general sessions will be held in Opperman Music Hall.

Monday night a concert will be given by the orchestra under Dr. Ernst von Dohnanyi and Dr. Wiley Hazenwright director. Tuesday night, Admission for this concert will be by badges. On Wednesday night at the Doak S. Campbell stadium, "Flying High Circus" will be presented. Admission will be by badge but reserved seats for non-club women will also be admitted. The performance is not open to the public.

Mrs. Campbell feels that this is a marvelous opportunity for students to see what is going on. Florida is setting a unique example to understand the use of some of the tax money. All come together for educational purposes that stimulate women to be better citizens.

Fifteen Entered In APO Contest For Ugliest Man

Pretty Carol Fulkerson of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, and Lambda Chi Alpha's entry in competition for Queen of the Interfraternity Council, receives the crown at Friday night's formal dance from IFC President Ken Chadwick of Delta Tau Delta fraternity. The 19 year-old co-ed was chosen from a field of sixteen entries in the annual contest.

IFC Crowns Carol Fulkerson Queen At Dance Friday Night

Sophomore Carol Fulkerson was crowned Queen of the Inter-Fraternity Council at its annual dance, staged last Friday night in the Suwannee room.

The highlight of the evening came with the crowning of the Queen, sponsored by the Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity, as the Inter-Fraternity Council's choice for the coming year.

Miss Fulkerson's court consisted of the four top girls chosen by judges at the sunset concert in the outdoor amphitheater which featured the Sauter-Finegan ensemble. In the court was Elizabeth Brown, sponsored by Sigma Phi Epsilon; Sally Hass, sponsored by Delta Tau Delta; Sara Slaughter, Sigma Nu; and June Watson, sponsored by Tau Epsilon Phi.

The girls were each given a bouquet of roses by Charlie Miner, chairman of the committee and presented to the audience by Ken Chadwick, president of the Inter-Fraternity Council.

Following the crowning of the queen, the Sauter-Finegan orchestra played a special piece composed for the new queen and her court.

The FSU Inter - Fraternity Council is composed of the University's 15 fraternity presidents. Ken Chadwick is the president of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

Kirne Newtin, Sigma Nu president, was chairman for the weekend. Charles Minner, Alpha Tau Omega president was concert and contest chairman.

President of the Kappa Alpha fraternity, Jim Crews, was in charge of the decorations. Publicity chairman Pete Nimkoff, acting president of Sigma Chi fraternity.

IFC spokesmen extended special thanks to Bob Rice for the aid he rendered in securing the band for the dance and also to Bob Rhodes and Jim Rine for his splendid decorations.

Speech Slated By Henderson Next Monday

Ed Henderson, Executive Secretary of the Florida Education Association, will speak at the April program meeting of the Florida State University chapter of American Association of University Professors, according to president Neisan Marshall.

Slated for Monday April 12 at 8:45 p.m. in the Student Center Trophy Room, the meeting will be held to discuss "The Florida Education Association and Higher Education in the State."

Marshall revealed that the meeting would be a buffet supper at 8:15 will be open to all members of the FSU faculty and staff. "The talk is scheduled at 8 so that those who want people to come though they may find it impractical to attend the buffet supper," he added. The program will end in time for the Sigma Xi meeting at 9 p.m.

Marshall noted that a business meeting will be held by the FSU AAUP next Monday at 7 p.m. in Longmire Auditorium. "Several items have accumulated and it is desirable to devote an entire evening to chapter business."

Tentative agenda for the business meeting will include recommendations stemming from the report of the salary and fringe benefit problems concerning the Florida State University system.

Marshall suggested that members of the faculty and staff plan to attend the meeting scheduled for the 19th. "Henderson is quite a prominent person in the state," he declared.

Proposed Budgets Revised By Group

Asking budgets for the coming year have been reviewed by the Student Budget Committee from all campus groups receiving monies from Student Activity Fees, Chairman Ed James revealed Saturday.

James stated that changes were made by the committee on each budget, depending upon which copies were sent to the groups. There are 15 copies of which 12 are to be filled out and returned before Monday, April 12.

The Faculty and Student Budget Committee met Monday, April 13 to render the final decisions on the returned operating budgets, James added. Results of the meeting will be effective during 1954-55.

ALPHA GAMS ELECT

Mary Belle Twitty was recently elected president of Alpha Gamma Delta social sorority here.

Judith Ash will serve as 1st vice-president, and Barbara Ann Tribble as 2nd vice-president.

Other newly elected officers include Virginia Phillips, recording secretary; Carol Barder, treasurer, and Donna McNab, assistant treasurer.

Cases Reveal Strict Limitations Placed On Wayward Students

(Editor's Note — This is the second in a series of articles written from actual court records of student misdemeanors which appeared in the Florida Flambeau in 1953-1954. Names have been changed to protect those persons involved.)

Case Two — (November 4, 1953)

"Naughta Jones appeared before Committee Monday, April 12 to render the final decision on the returned operating budgets, James added. Results of the meeting will be effective during 1954-55.

Verna Backwoods and Bertha Collarbone were called in separately and gave the same testimony. Case dismissed.

"Tor committee decided that Verna Backwoods and Bertha Backwoods be campused for two weeks as they were old girls and knew better. Bertha Collarbone was to be campused four days."

Case Three (November 10, 1953)

"Cheta Chem was reported for getting information in Chemistry 101 by unauthorized means. She appeared before the committee. The president stated the charge. She stated that she was questioned by committee. She stated that she had to get some help, that she asked only one question of Jane Green, which concerned the pronunciation of equations by the instructor. She also lifted up her head to see whether to find out the fourth question, as Flora told her she might. She asked Flora not to spell a word. She was asked by one of the committee if she would tell the story."

She replied in the affirmative. On being asked if she had looked on Jane Green's notebook, she said she had. She was dismissed temporarily and Flora Green was called.

"Flora Green denied giving Cheta a help, denied speaking to her, except for spelling a word. Her attitude was satisfactory to the committee.

"Cheta Chem was then called in and each girl was asked to repeat her story; their testimonies were practically the same as before. Dismissed temporarily."

Committee Discusses Program Of Personnel And Guidance

KENT, Ohio (I.P.)—Kent state University students recently were under fire at a discussion panel conducted by a faculty committee pertaining to the University's program of personnel and guidance services. The panel, composed of Dr. C. B. Allnach, registrar; Dr. Elizabeth Lund, head of secretarial science; Margaret Swanson, Dean of Women, and about 25 students, listened while several voices claimed many advisers were either overloaded, uninformed, or too busy in regard to their duties with the students.

Some students said they received little or no help in making out their schedules and received practically no useful information about their majors. It was pointed out that advisers had to put upon themselves to inform the students touched on registration. Some thought that registration was too complicated and involved too much shuffling in line. Dr. Allnach answered this with a plan which would allow the University to make up all class schedules so the student could simply pick up his schedule and go to class. The students immediately reversed their field in the ignorance of students about what their functions are supposed to be. Delegates Meet In Science Hall Tonight, 7 P.M.

Student Party Holds Convention To Pick Remaining Officials

Student Party delegates will convene tonight at 7:45 and tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in Science Lecture Hall to nominate candidates for the forthcoming Class Elections.

Party Chairman Frank Shaw said today about 66 offices are to be filled in the elections, with candidates to be named from all classes. He noted nominees will be picked tonight for Senate, Judiciary and Honor Court offices, and tomorrow night for class offices.

Nominating speeches, the Party chairman said will be limited to three minutes for tonight's nominees and for class presidents and vice presidents. Other class officer seekers will have ten minutes tomorrow night.

Shaw stated that the Student Party's new chairman will be selected "probably late tonight." He also noted that the elected chairman will take the gavel tomorrow night, if selected by the party.

Asked by The Florida Flambeau if he would accept the chairmanship, Shaw stated that he would be unable to do so, due to his graduation in June.

He was unable to indicate any possible successor.

The name delegates who attended the last Student Party convention, at which Party Body officers were nominated, will represent the delegations at this convention, Shaw noted.

Informed party sources announced that registration of delegates will begin each night fifteen minutes before the convention comes to order, setting the convention for tonight at 7:30 and tomorrow night at 7:45.

STUDENT PARTY

Final arrangements for tomorrow and Wednesday Student Party Conventions have been announced by party chairman Frank Shaw.

All those attending Student Party nominations for any one of the 66 offices in the forthcoming Class Elections should see Gremaine Murray at the Kappa Alpha Fraternity house or Joyce Dickinson at the Alpha Gamma Delta house to have their names put on the slate. This should be done immediately, Shaw said.

Convention delegates tonight will register at 7:30 at the Science Lecture Hall, Shaw said. Convention will begin at 7:45 p.m. sharp. Tomorrow, registration will begin at 6:45 p.m. and the convention will get under way at 7. All delegates are requested to be prompt.

Party said Graham Church-ers is in charge of the convention arrangements. Anyone wishing further information should see Carothers at the Kappa Alpha House.

All women delegates will have special 12 o'clock late permission, party said, as this has been arranged for all conventions in cooperation with the Dean of Women.

Students Nominate Royalty For Prom

Juniors and seniors may nominate candidates for king and queen of their annual prom today and tomorrow, according to Lis Vang, publicity director for the event.

Ballot boxes will be located at both Student Supply, Bookstore Room and Westcott for nominations.

The prom is slated for May 1, but May 2 as stated in the Fow Word, it was noted.

It was announced that April 12 will mark the first election-free day for Student Party officials held in April 30.

Chairmen of the various committees will be announced. They include Shirley Traxler and Harry Stewart, decorations; Virginia Phillips, court; Shey Arnold, voting, Barbara Riddle, invitations; Bonnie Parks, refreshments; Franklin Adams, posters; and Jim Rine, publicity.

Mary Grace Shoemaker, social chairman of the junior class, is in charge of the overall plans, meeting of the dance it was announced.

THEOLOGICAL CONFERENCE

Four students from FSU attended a conference on "The Christian and His Daily Work" at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Virginia, recently. They were Jim Hendricks, Jimmy Harmon, Gwyn O. Campbell, Elvyne Brady Newton and Charles Huber.

Alsops Think Nuclear Secrecy Carried To Dangerous Extremes

The United States' policy of ultra-secrecy in nuclear weapons was termed "silly" by the Alsop brothers in their syndicated column last Saturday.

The original purpose of restricting information was to keep a potential enemy from gaining new information, they pointed out.

In the previous administration the policy of secrecy was a reasonable one. A writer about nuclear weapons was allowed to submit his copy to the Atomic Energy Commission. Whether the Commission liked the article or not, they passed it anyway, provided it met one simple test. The author had to show he had obtained his information from public sources or by scientific analysis of unclassified material.

Since Admiral Louis Strauss has become chairman of the AEC, however, a much stricter policy of censorship has been adopted. Today a writer is liable to prosecution if he does not submit his article to the AEC, even though all his information is strictly unclassified.

The Alsops note that Soviet intelligence agents must know considerable information about hydrogen bombs already. Not only does Russia possess the type of hydrogen bomb itself but Russian monitoring devices are able to deduce considerable information about our own work.

But, according to the Alsops, "In the opinion of Strauss . . . what the Soviet intelligence must certainly know is much too strong meat for the people of this country."

The net effect of secrecy of this type is not to prevent leaking information to Russia but to keep the American people in the dark. Without knowledge of our present stage of development the American people are unprepared to deal with the situation which soon will be arising. The alternatives are either utter confusion when the facts are forced upon us or else dictatorial policy-making by our officials.

Say the Alsops:

"When Strauss proudly announces, as he did the other day, that we now have a hydrogen bomb which can put out a city as big as New York, he is in fact practicing a glum deception on the American public. What he says is true, of course. But this truth in the American hydrogen bomb cannot be seen in accurate proportions unless the truth is also told about the Soviet hydrogen bomb.

"The truth about the Soviet hydrogen bomb and atomic stockpiles . . . (is) precisely what Strauss holds to be too sensitive for public discussion. The country is left in intentional ignorance of the most important single problem that faces us. If this kind of thing goes on much longer, the ballot box will soon be outmoded."

Needs Illumination

It certainly is nice to be able to see things at night. Why, for some years now we have been stumbling around campus at various dark spots. It was terrible.

Slowly but surely those dark spots have disappeared. People tell us there's hardly one left on campus.

One of the worst stumbling spots was the music amphitheater. The unfortunate people who went there for — well, not intimate, but private — relationships just couldn't see what they were doing.

Now those lucky people have the assistance of several thousand candle power to help them see what they are doing. Now they can tell that BIG BROTHER IS WATCHING THEM.

We have noticed one more place on campus that needs the privilege of brilliant illumination, though. Ever looked under the Social Welfare building at night?

"Drop Dead"

Dear Mama Seminole

Dear Mmna Seminole:

Braves and Mnidens in Longmire Tepee very disrespectful of Georgie, have no conception of reason why Georgie is George or exactly bow or where he exists.

Spring really here. Polititions popping out all over with election fever. For campus race, still more should come. New faces and new ideas needed.

Flambeau staff go to coast for big party. For face, red instead of white and for the gills, purple instead of green.

On trip back from reservation, run car into gas station far out in country. Attendant in easy-going local style steps up and starts to clean windshield. Pulls out newspaper from hip pocket and spits on the glass. Just as he makes his final moisturizing phut, a local foul sails over head. Quickly cleaning the glass, tite old farmer leans in the window and says, "Pardon me mishtm. Rekon I will have to see the Dr. after all. Ma wife tol me I wuz sick this mornin but I didn't believe her til jest now."

All braves seem to have troubles but not half as many as Eduction Reservation have if present policy continues. Seminoles no like because Big Chiefs no let Blackfoot friends visit Seminole braves. Big Chiefs might find an enlightened self interest. Changes no just come. Somebody must advance. Only when changes are suppressed do they come violently. Change is on the way. What we do with it when arrives Chief?

Mama write letter back on reservation that warriors there think time for gradual change. When old fogies you Mama, change views, then Big Chiefs really antique.

Conditions Cause Change, Not Ideas

By BRUCE GALPHIN

When segregation ends in the South, it will not be so much because people have preached it or harangued on the subject but because people have become accustomed to the idea of mixing the races.

In fact, it would be more accurate to say that people are preaching and haranguing because their social environment has reached a state of evolution wherein segregation is fading. The philosophy is a reflection of changing social conditions, not something that directly is going to bring about any change.

That people's ideas have changed in the South is unquestionable. This can be explained on a shallow level by saying that Southerners are being influenced by propaganda and education. It is more fruitful to analyze the change in other ways, however.

For instance, one can point to the large influx of Northerners to the South. One can note the influence of federal government rulings against segregation in the armed forces and Civil Service. Even more important is our state of industrial development which is making a subservient, slavelike class economically unimportant.

Such conditions as these bring about a change in the attitudes of people and thus create the philosophies which say segregation is unjust. A successful philosophy does not precede its "time" by very much.

This is not to say that writing and speaking for a change does not have any effect on people. Ideas, philosophies, religions can even drive men by the thousands to kill themselves. But it gives a proper slant on interpreting events to see that ideas follow material changes.

When the United States Supreme Court finally rules on the matter of segregation, it will have to take the preparedness of the South into consideration. It probably realizes laws are expressionless of the needs of the society and not truths that stand immutable. When a law, such as prohibition, does not have popular acceptance, then the law has to be changed. If the passionate demand for segregation is cooling, then it is time for a change in interpretations of the laws.

The Supreme Court naturally does not want to throw a large segment of the nation into chaos. When it considers the "legal" aspects of segregation, it will also be taking into account the readiness of the South to assimilate change.

It is hard from this point of view to guess how the Court will rule. Among the older people of the South, segregation is still a part of the "natural order" of affairs. For the most part, these are the people who govern us.

Among the younger generation there is a definite undertone of attitude, though. I do not say, and I do not believe, that the majority of young Southerners are prepared to do away with all phases of segregation. Even on this campus, where a couple of incidents have given students an opportunity to air their views, it is doubtful that the majority are willing to give the Negro equal social status.

But I am certain young Southerners are ready to participate in many activities with Negroes. They are willing on this campus, for the most part, to allow Negroes at concerts. They are displeased when an injured Negro is not treated in an emergency at White hospital facilities.

So there is some question whether the Court will consider the South really ready. I do believe that if segregation is ruled out and White youngsters begin attending schools with Negroes, the present "grudging acceptance" will change in a generation to almost complete acceptance.

The real determinants, however, are economic and other social conditions.

Cremata Will Study Crow, Cheyenne In Ethnological Study This Summer

Vincent Y. Cremata, Jr., senior in anthropology, will spend the summer among Crow and Cheyenne Indians in Montana on an ethnological project for on an ethnological project for Social Science Research Council undergraduate research grant.

Cremata will work on the reservations with Dr. Robert Anderson, who has been assistant professor in the Department of Anthropology and Archaeology here.

Plans FSU student's interest in the Plains Indians began as an assistant to Dr. Anderson and as a student last summer at the Linguistics Institute at the University of Indiana, where Crow and Hidatsa information were provided for training an anthropological linguistics. Cremata and Anderson drew up a research training project which they submitted to the Committee on Undergraduate Research Training of the Council.

The Crow Indians, who live on a reservation in southeastern Montana, are a former hunting tribe who have turned to cattle-raising and farming. It is Cremata's intent to compare parts of the aboriginal culture are in operation and are effective today, and to attempt to explain why these portions of the culture have been retained while other portions have been substituted by white traits.

In preparation for the hopeful award, Cremata has spent a year under Dr. Anderson's direction reading all available material on the subject and mapping out his approach. In February he presented the gist of his study plan in a paper before the Florida Anthropological Society at Miami. He also did directed study in ethnological field techniques last semester and this semester is studying the recording and interpretation of kinship.

Cremata will start for Montana at the end of the semester and will do his initial work with the Crow alone. Dr. Anderson will join him later, and the two will check the results with the situation on the neighboring Cheyenne reservation. The latter has spent two seasons in Montana excavations and restudying his work under the Crow tribe.

Award of the undergraduate training stipend makes Cremata eligible for application for an SSRC graduate scholarship in his field. His present plans are to take up graduate work in anthropology at the University of Michigan and at Yale.

Cremata last summer was married to the former Mary Ann Sanders, attended Florida State University.

Taylor Views Impact Gandi's Ideas Would Have On American Education

By HAROLD TAYLOR
President, Sarah Lawrence
Campus Feature Service

Any philosophy which hopes to influence the progress of civilization must meet directly the human needs of the society in which it operates. It must give a creative outlook to face the negative parts of life, illuminating human possibility rather than warning against human failure. The creative mood in which Gandhi approached the needs of his own time and the needs of his own country has produced a cluster of ideas for educational reform and thus for social change. If we are wise enough to listen, Gandhi's philosophy can give a sense of direction to American thinking.

Mahatma Gandhi says, "I do not believe that the multiplication of wants and machinery have contributed in taking the world a single step nearer the goal. I whole-heartedly detest the mad desire to destroy distance and time to increase animal appetites, and to go to the ends of the world in search of their satisfaction.

The age in which we live is one which often seems designed to multiply human wants at the expense of the human spirit. There is no particular virtue in making a modern society more complex than it has already become. If we are to believe that Gandhi we must think continually about how to change the complexity of modern life to the simple modes of human experience in which the deepest human satisfactions come.

In education, as in society in general, Gandhi teaches that the center of living must be found within the small community. We need a center for our own lives, both as individuals and as citizens, which will be the source of social groups and dispersed himself among the variety of activities that he loses his own identity. He then fails to establish a direct and personal relationship with the other individuals who make up his own community.

If we were to take Gandhi's philosophy seriously in the United States, we would oppose a system of education in which the student becomes an anonymous unit in a mass of academic machinery, grinding out as education in small pieces. We would refuse to believe that the busier the student becomes the more academic recognition he receives for his competitive success as a prize winner, whether in athletics or academics, the better his education is. We would go back to our own roots within each community and build upon the experience of young people in the creative arts, in the ideas and interests with which their lives will be filled as they grow into their own future.

We would oppose the control of larger forces of students and citizens by rule. We would work against the centralization of our educational system. Whenever the increase of material advantage was seen to be the purpose of an educational program, we would work against it and substitute in its place the achievement of those emotional

Foreign Students Arrange Native Land Displays

By FLORENCE PAYNE

A treasure of information is about to be uncovered on the Florida State University campus.

It all began on St. Patrick's Day when Miss Aileen Murdock arranged a display of travel folders and pictures brought back from Ireland last summer.

Mohamed Shams Eldin Ahmed, better known as "Shams," a graduate student from Cairo, Egypt, suggested a display be arranged in the library on Egypt.

The suggestion was enthusiastically received and it was decided the display would be placed in the reserve room.

The suggestion was such a goof one that the reserve room staff contacted Ezat S. Younahan, also a graduate student from Cairo, Egypt, and President of the International Club, to see if additional displays could be arranged. Mr. Younahan liked the idea and has since contributed greatly to the success of the program.

All foreign students have been invited to contribute materials and arrangements for future displays and they are assured of the hearty cooperation with both suggestions and materials.

Last Friday the displays on Egypt were arranged. They will remain on display in the reserve room for two weeks. One can not question the Egyptian pride in their country when they see how generously these students supplied the reserve room staff with postcards, magazines, pamphlets, tourist guide books, maps and pictures.

The Egyptian students' pride in their country is well justified.

Cairo, Egypt, the capital of the country and the largest city in Africa, called by the fiery "Mier-el-Kahira," is over 1,300 years old. Cairo is the delight of winter tourists, who flock to it by the thousands every year; for here East and West meet, and the cosmopolitan atmosphere of the place presents an everchanging panorama.

Cairo is on the River Nile, 150 miles from the Mediterranean Sea at Alexandria, and eighty miles west of Suez. Parts of an ancient wall still stand and several well-defined sections, the result of growth through the centuries and the assimilation of nationalities, are clearly evident. Cairo's rank high as an education center.

After the Egyptian display, the students of Thailand will feature items of interest from their country. Every two weeks a new country will be featured. It is the hope of the reserve room staff that the foreign students will continue to provide materials for displays this summer and next fall.

We can learn much from these students who bring us first hand information from countries many of us will never see.

Movie Magazine: Exclusive Slush

By DAVID DREIS

I do believe you can find everything about anyone who's anyone in the movie business from a movie magazine.

Want to know what Lassie eats for breakfast? Maybe knowing what kind of men Lauren Bacall prefers? Well, if you're one of us fellow travelers who really doesn't care, you've got no business reading fan mags.

The movie magazine is a phenomenon of show business. Ever since PHOTOPLAY started the trend many years ago, it has been the source and time and place for movie-star items. Each having an "exclusive" story of a star or an "exclusive" interview.

Marilyn Monroe recently listed her ten favorite men which included zombies in all forms of business. Joe DiMaggio was on the tail end of the list. Poor fellow, just doesn't have it.

One issue really had an interesting four-way discussion with four of movieland's top new stars. The questions were all on dates, kissing and the first date scene and the usual rot. Piper Laurie, Debbie Reynolds, Terry Moore and Lori Nelson answered all very casually. They harrumph-avoided the big questions.

Rush down today and get the latest issue of Photoplay so you can send off the coupon with your opinion on the very important question, "Should Young Actors Marry?"

This blank has you fill in such information as, "Who is your favorite young actor?" and "If he were married, would you like him?" You can also rate the answer with a check mark over "As well" and "Better." I can see it all now when the boys get deeply in love wanting to get married to the girl of the house and as the lights are low he explains about their proposed marriage, "Let's wait until the votes from the outlying districts come in."

Of course, what movie magazine would be complete without a story about Tony Curtis and Janet Leigh. One movie magazine has Tony writing the article about Janet and another has vice-versa. I'm so sick of it all, I hope they get divorced.

In one informative magazine, an established star is answering the questions of the people who write in. I'd trust this ex-divorcee with my love problems like I'd trust King Farouk with my girl friend.

An interesting piece of gloob is the article called, "Hollywood's Stay At Home Beauties." It's written by Sheila Graham who strides the gals up into categories. The Pure in Heart, the Broken Heart, the Light of Heart, the Lonely Heart and the Happy Heart. Really gooey, but a must on your reading list.

That's about enough to spend on the movie's greatest publicity manual, but in closing remember, the magazine has to be on hand with pictures at all the premieres. How else can a movie star show off her new husband?

'Beneath The 12-Mile Reef' Filmed At Tarpon Springs In CinemaScope

CinemaScope takes movie-goers beneath the sea this week in the technicolor production "Beneath the 12-Mile Reef."

The Epiphany scenes include the ceremonies of "diving for the holy cross," filmed both above and below the water.

Scenes of the famed sponge-divers of Tarpon Springs bring the wonderland of peril and beauty beneath the sea to the screen. Beneath the 12-Mile Reef plays at the Florida Theatre for an entire week beginning tomorrow.

Jack Palance, the gunfighter in Shane, and the title killer in Sudden Fear, takes the role of murderer Mike, the notorious woman-killer, Jack the Ripper.

Panoramic Productions has produced a new treatment of The Lodger, the famous Jack the Ripper story by Marie Belloc Lowndes in Man In the Attic, which plays for the last times tonight at the State theater.

Co-starring with JACK PALANCE are CONSTANCE SMITH and BYRON PALMER, the lovely lady the killer falls in love with and the Scotland Yard Inspector who tracks him down.

Playing with Man In the Attic, is a second feature, Man Crazy, a story of three young girls which deals with the problems experienced by rapidly maturing teen-agers in our society.

The loves of Cleopatra are bared in Cleopatra Pictures' Serpent of the Nile, starring Rhonda Fleming, William Lundigan, and Raymond Burr.

Rhonda Fleming as Cleopatra takes the Nile valley by storm, capturing the hearts of men, including Marc Anthony, Caesar and Herod.

The technicolor production stars William Lundigan as the young Roman soldier, one of Cleopatra's many loves.

EDMUND O'BRIEN, BARRY SULLIVAN, and JOCELYN BRANDO star in CHINA VENTURE, a dramatic story of an actual war incident heretofore unrevealed. It is the story of the Naval intelligence "secret" team that pierced Southern Chinese jungles for an important war secret which Washington cannot confirm or deny in its truth.

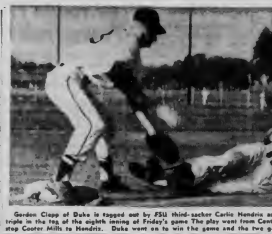
The feminine lead is played by Jocelyn Brando, sister of Marlon, and a star in her own right. She takes the role of a Navy nurse in this, her first film.

China Venture plays with Serpent of the Nile Wednesday and Thursday this week at the State theater.

FSU Golfers And Netters Trounce Stetson, 13-5, 10-0

The FSU Golf and Tennis teams routed the Stetson Hatters out of the win column in two convincing victories in separate matches Saturday.

Seminole Freshman stand out Bunk Berry, notched a one-under-par to take the low medal crown in Florida State's 13-5 victory over the Hatter Netters. Following close behind for the honor was Jack Verbie, who scored a very good 71 one-under-par at the Talahassee Country Club Course. Tied for the 3rd place slot was Seminole Jimmy James and Hatter star George Herndon with 74.



Berry and James teamed together to score a 6's to 1's match over Stetson's entrants Georgie Herndon and Pete Vas. In the other foursome match, Jack Verbie and Bob Schuman combined talents to tie the visiting Hatter two 4's to 1's, members of the Stetson in the last match was Jim Bryan and Dave Howard.

FSU's powerful tennis team overwhelmed the Stetson University golf squad Saturday afternoon by ham. 6-0, 7-5.

a score of 10-0 for its second victory of the year over the Hatters.

The win was FSU's sixth of the season against only two losses. In addition to the two victories over Stetson, Coach Keith Pitchford's netters have beaten the University of Tampa, Florida Southern College, Davidson, and a strong Georgia Tech team. The lone two Seminole losses have been suffered at the hands of Rollins and Miami.

In Saturday's one-way encounter Capt. Schaus FSU) defeated Norden, 7-5, 6-4; Tom Cundy (FSU) defeated Erickson, 6-2, 6-2. Shelby Creagh (FSU) defeated Decker, 6-0, 6-2; Dave Kennedy (FSU) defeated Dave Driver, 6-4, 6-4; Don Wyle (FSU) defeated Smartt, 6-4, 9-7; Tom Morgan (FSU) defeated Gibson, 6-1, 6-1; James Crowther (FSU) defeated Frith, 6-2, 6-2; Cundy and Joe Harris (FSU) defeated Driver and Holley, 6-1, 6-4; Schaus and Duane Gordon (FSU) defeated Norden and Smartt, 6-2, 6-2; Jack Kean and Morgan (FSU) defeated Ericson and Durden, 6-4, 6-2.

Gordon Clapp of Duke is tagged out by FSU third- sacker Carlie Hendrix as he attempts to squeeze out a triple in the top of the eighth inning of Friday's game The play went from Center Fielder Bob Hudson to shortstop Cooter Mills to Hendrix. Duke went on to win the game and the two game series.

FSU Thinclads Win First Dual Meet; Casteel Stars

By JIMMY JOANOS

The FSU and field team, Saturday, proved to be "too much" for Mercer University cinder men. The Seminoles defeat ed the Bears in Macon, Georgia, by a score of 84-47.

In the 880 yard dash event the FSU school record was shattered by freshman Larry Hounthis. The New York City "Machine" covered the two laps in one minute and 59.6 seconds to slice 1.9 seconds off the former record set by Bill Wagoner in 1952.

High-point man of the day was FSU's Jim Casteel with 16½ points. The "Freshman Flash" racked up three firsts in the 440 dash, 220 dash, and broad jump events and anchored in the winning mile relay team. Casteel's 440 yard dash time of 50.2 seconds set a new FSU-Mercer meet record.

Seminoles capturing first places were Ron Weaver (Javelin Throw); Mike Smith (Shot Put); Hountha (880 dash), Joe Davis (100 Dash), Charles Watson (120 High Hurdles and 220 Low Hurdles); and Casteel (440 Dash, 220 Dash, and Broad Jump). The first place Florida State Mile Relay team was composed of Tenny Brown, Frank Bright, Hountha and Casteel.

The Seminole thinclads compiled 10 first places, 10 seconds and 4 thirds to their opponents 5-8, and 18.

FSU Soccer Team Tied By Panama City

The visiting Panama City soccer team, put together a fairly fast squad, plus several very experienced men, to bat the powerful Florida State International Soccer team 9-0, last week.

In the offensive meat of the time, the Internationals tried desperately to score early in the game Breaking through the Panama line time after time to score, forwards Lupino, Mussio and Shirley, found the going tough, as their goalie, B. L. Sosa (USA) stopped every effort of scoring. With only 15 minutes gone, newcomer Mussio kicked the ball through the goal, only to have it hit the post and to be called back.

On the defensive side, Larry Zoller, and Norman Burth carried the heavy burden with errorless ball playing. Burth, who spotted the visiting goalie in dependability, showed excellent form in several would-be points.

Mussio was injured with 40 minutes gone in the first half and was forced to leave the game. Captain Del Risco and Mussio played on the same high school team in Peru.

In the second half, things got a little rougher, as both teams were looking for some kind of a chance to score. Playing good ball for the Internationals were, John McGlynn, Seri Vejjaliva, Mike Dewey, and William Johnson.

The Internationals will break the ice between the University of Florida and Florida State, when they travel to Gainesville next weekend, to face the Gator squad and be their guest for the whole weekend. A university has the time, the money and guests, it will be expected to serve, Saturday morning sometime.

Panama City has invited them for a return match in Panama City, the weekend following the Gainesville.

After the Revolutionary War, the first nation to recognize the new United States was Holland which provided a three million soldier loan.

Duke Whips FSU Two Straight

By KEN KINGERY
Flambeau Sports Editor

The Florida State Baseballers didn't even have time to lick their wounds from Thursday's 8-4 defeat, as the Duke Blue Devils hit their way through a spirited Seminole Squad and win an easy 6-2 As the other defeat, all, or the larger share of the runs came in one or two innings without warning.

Coach Matherly, zigging deep into his mental masters, came out with Bearded Mo x Long, sporting a fine 4 and 2 record. The loss can only be blamed on the failure of hitting the men on base.

The Blue Devils had trouble with the Seminoles in the early part of the game as the hustling State's led the ball game until a sudden three run spurt had the Seminoles behind the rest of the game There were only three errors in the whole game, two of which on the FSU side.

Pitching-by-play, is how the final game went:

The Seminole baseball team found the Blue Devils fairly easy on the defensive in the first inning to score a one to nothing lead, after setting the Dukes flag down in April order, in the top half of the first.

In the second inning, Pitcher Long threw out, and struck out 2nd and 3rd men, after the first man lined on first, due to Hendrix's error. The next batter flyed to Moore in deep left. No hits, no runs, no errors. Bottom half of this second saw Hendrix fly out to right, Long's liner fall into the glove of the centerfielder, Ken Boyce, attempted a bunt, and was thrown out. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Top half of the third inning, Roddie smashed a line drive to Seminole second baseman, Billy Campbell. Pitcher Goodman grounded to Campbell. All-American Al Spangler, the third man up, and at the count of 3-2, hit a bounding ball through the infield defense, and on into right field for a base-hit. Brewer then grounded to Hendrix for the final out. No runs, one hit, no errors.

The bottom of the third, Campbell flyed to the right-fielder. Mills flyed to the second baseman. Hudson walked, Tywmey smashed a single to left, Moore got on with an infield hit, threw on, and Wynn grounded to the third baseman. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Top of the fourth, Kirkpatrick flyed to Boyce, Smith fell safe to Long's outsider. Tarr doubled to center and advanced to third on Hudson's throw. Poeperman grounded to Campbell. No runs on one hit and one Seminole error.

Bottom of the fourth, Hendrix lined out to the right-fielder again, Long grounded to the second baseman, Boyce walked and Campbell grounded to the pitcher. No runs on no hits and no errors.

Bottom of the 5th. Mills led off with a ringing single to left, Hudson got on with a fielders choice, Tywmey grounded to the shortstop, Moore fired in the left-fielder. No runs on one hit no errors.

Top of the 6th, Corso in for Moore in Leftfield, Clapp grounded to Hendrix, Twomey made a brilliant stop of intended hit, Goodman grounded to Mills. No runs on no hits and no errors.

Bottom of the 6th, Wynn hit Texas-Leaguer to left, Hendrix forced Boyd to center, Long hit safely to left, Ken Boyce on with the aid of an error, scoring Wynn. Long thrown out at third, Campbell grounded to second. One run on two hits and one error.

Top of the 7th Spangler grounded out to Long, Brewer safe on an infield hit, Kirkpatrick smoted to right, Smith

From The Sidelines

By Ken Kingery
Flambeau Sports Editor

The Florida State Seminole Baseball team has gone through more than half of their regular schedule. On April 12th and 13th, the highly touted Stetson Hatters will invade the FSU diamond, to compete in an intra-State series with Florida State Club.

The Seminoles have been hitting their share of balls, even off the better pitchers in the State, however they lack in the runs batted in column. Coach Ralph Matherly will attempt to get the boys in a good batting order.

Last year's captain, Cotoer Mills, is leading the pack in batting, and has proved to be the man in the clutch. Before the first Duke battle, Mills was batting a ripe .415, and holding on to a hitting streak of 11 straight games. He failed to deliver in that game, thus breaking his marvelous batting feat. Cooter led the Seminoles in hitting last season, with a .319. This fell short of Billy Campbell's school record of .394, which was set in 1952. Mills also led the team in the number of walks last year, with a total of 26 free trips.

Present Captain, and one of the leading power hitters, Bob (Rock) Hudson, hit a total of five triples last year, to set a new school record. Hudson hit a very dependable .243 last year for the Seminole squad.

The entire Seminole squad has to win more than 17 games and not lose no more than 4 games if they hope to break the standing school a record, which was also set last year. Their school records say, the longest winning streak was seven and their longest losing streak was three. Since 1948, the rest of the season.

favor of the freedom of choice idea and the fact that commuters and working students could never accept it.

While the plan was not seriously considered, the argument showed the apparent willingness of the students to brave the restrictions laws if only the system can be made more efficient. Suggestions along this line included making a map of the gym showing the registration set-up so the student would know exactly where he was going.

In remard to pre-registration, Dr. Atkinson said he was planning to have students pre-register by course numbers instead of class seniority, putting it on a first-come, first-served basis.

DELTA SIGMA PI

Fifteen new members were initiated into Delta Sigma Pi, professional business fraternity on April 4. Alumni and faculty attended a banquet in honor of the new members at a local restaurant.

Initiates include Ernest Stevens, Al Valliant, Willis Bellar, Wayne Edris, Jack Lane, Thurman Mock, Greene Harrison and Ben Powell. Also Arthur Ely, John Mecanan, Al Holderbach, Curly Narraine, Harry Petry, Vern Williams, and Fran Sherman.

FSU Women's Dean Visits Washington

Dean of Women Katherine Warren and Assistant Dean Elisabeth Lynn will return this week from Washington where they were attending a meeting of the National Association of Deans of Women.

While in Washington, Miss Warren, who is Chairman of the University Section of the Association, presided over meetings in her area.

Miss Lynn was a panel member in a discussion of foreign students' problems at American Universities.

The entire association, according to Dean Warren's office here, is concerned with problems and business with deans of women all over the country, in both collegiate and preparatory educational institutions.

Twenty-five male students of the School of Business and the Department of Economics have pledged to Alpha Kappa Psi, professional business fraternity at Florida State University, according to spokesmen.

It was noted that the pledges will be initiated into the fraternity in ceremonies slated for April 14.

The pledges are Aquilla Marshall, J. T. Williams, Ralph Sala, Ramsey Hill, Billy Mills, Dean Harlan, Bill Hoffman, Kent Edwards, Donald Sweet, and Ralph Pickard.

Also, Dana McKinnon, Kermit Kindred, Rick Benson, John Greenbrese, Robert Schlipf, and Hanson Herring.

Cases Reveal

Case Continued November 11, 1913:

"The meeting was called by President in order to continue the case of Cheata Chem. The President showed the committee Miss Cheata's examination paper, pointing out evidences of help. Cheata was called in. She was asked a few pointed questions, but still maintained she was innocent. She was showed the paper.

"Little by little by insistent questioning, she confessed what she had done, until finally the whole truth was revealed.

"She said she was sorry and hoped the committee would be as lenient as possible. The President gave her a severe lecture on the nature of her misdemeanor and she was dismissed.

"The committee decided that she undermo the following punishment, if Dr. Conradi approved it. That she apologize to her class for being dishonest; 2. that she take a second exam; 3. that she sit either on the front seat or near the front.

"Adjournment."

Case Four November 17, 1913:

"Mischefa Inclination was reported for the third time for keeping on lights. She was summoned before the committee. Her excuses were various and under. It was decided that she be compelled one week.

Case Five November 17, 1913:

"Squrala Black reported to one of the committee that she saw Corrupia Porrure on a Special exam in French 1. I look in her book. She was called before the committee and confirmed same.

"It was decided that Corrupia Porrure would not be called up again until after a thorough investivation had been made.

Case Continued Nov. 24, 1913:

"Corrupia Porture was called before the committee. The president told her she had been reported for receiving information on a French test. She confessed that she had looked up the word in book, had crammed very little and knew very little about French. She confessed no further help but by her manner she showed her guilt. After being shown her paper, she seemed more ill at ease but stuck to her former statement. She was dismissed.

"After a long and fervent discussion the committee decided, that the following announcement, if Dr. Conradi approved, be read in chapel executive committee of the Student Government, recommends that Corrupia Porsure for obtaining information from her book in a French test, take her examination over."

and intellectual satisfactions which can only come from learning to live in principled ways and learning the value of simplicity. We would remove our emphasis upon the external values of success and prestige and concentrate on the development of an inner life which can give to young people the confidence and security of those who know a great deal more than they need to talk about.

Gandhi says, "Democracy can only survive—in fact it can only be born—if the population which rules is composed of individuals who are each ruling his or her own life." No person can be truly educated for an enlightened society unless his attitude is others is one which does not seek to manipulate, to exploit, to use human beings to achieve his private ends. It is for this reason that society must be decentralized in order to enable the individual to achieve his own destiny.

The greatness of Gandhi's philosophy lies in the fact that it establishes moral and spiritual values as the basis for social and economic change. Those of us who accept this inevitable as the beginning of our own thinking and who have been privileged to learn from Gandhi's teaching wish, with him, to establish an educational system and a society where, in his words, the population is composed of "individuals who are each ruling his or her own life."

'Mr. Formal' Preliminaries Open Today; Finals Begin April 20

The search of the season begins today—to find the "Mr. Formal" of Florida State. The contest is sponsored by "After Six" Formal Wear, and similar contests are being held on campuses all over the country.

Judging is based on each man's appearance in the "After Six" dinner jacket. The face will not help in the forinne, for each contestant will be considered solely on what he does for the jacket.

Points to be judged are fit, neatness, and the general all-around appearance created by the contestant.

GAMMA PHI BETA

The Gamma Phi Beta sorority recently pledged Martha Jo Little. It was announced.

Also announced were the new pledge class officers. These are Beverly Bickaler, president; Johnnie Foster, vice-president; Sandra McEwan, secretary; Sonya Fletcher, treasurer; Nancy Herold, scholarship chairman; and Margaret Stewart, activities chairman.

The sorority recently entertained the Kappa Sigma fraternity at a western party.

Going higher 100 feet is equivalent to going north about 70 miles.

Student Senators Give Newspaper Confidence Vote

Holford Resolution Supporting Galphin Receives Approval

Declaring the right of free criticism essential to a democracy, the Student Body Senate Tuesday unanimously passed a resolution expressing confidence in The Florida Flambeau editor Bruce Galphin.

The action followed a news story in Tuesday's Flambeau, headlined "Martin shows concern over state," and relating charges made to Galphin by vice-president A. B. Martin that the past five weeks or so the Flambeau had done too much "digging".

After Senator Joan Holford introduced the resolution, the article was read aloud by several senators.

A Flambeau reporter explained that the letters-to-the-editor on the segregation question objected to by Dr. Martin, were non-editorial and that the Flambeau's coverage of that question had been conservative. Dr. Martin had suggested the matter had been pre-arranged.

Senator James Moore, calling attention to Senator Holford's resolution which agitated Flambeau's freedom to criticize, asked that the Senate consider the resolution without debating the specific issue.

"The right to criticize is what we want," added Senator Frank Stark.

Let's stick together," commented Senator Gordon Gaster. He and Senator Holford pledged to stand back of the Flambeau.

After unanimous passage of the resolution, Galphin spoke briefly before the Senate, thanking the solons for their vote of confidence. He was answered with applause from the floor.

The other highlight of the session came earlier in the meeting when the lawmakers rumped consideration of the budget constitution and the changes made in it by the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs.

The faction supporting complete autonomy for Men's and Women's Senates and the group opposing vesting power in those two groups continued to argue on that key legislation passed by the Senate two weeks ago and reviewed by the University Senate sitting as a whole, according to provisions

"To get a student interested in a subject," continued Mr. Mittleman, "you must first show him that it has some practical use, and that he might gain something by applying it to his everday activities." In the speaking minutes of his economics classes, Professor Mittleman usually conducts a short discussion of the current economics problems.

Once a week the class discusses the present economic recession and he and Mr. Mittleman find that are turning up on the recession. The class usually is required to read such business magazines as Fortune, Newsweek, and US News and World Report, thereby gaining background information for these discussions.

Class participation as a method of vital instruction was defended today by Florida State University professors in answer to a recent survey of the student opinion which objected to student self-government in classes and the use of students as instructors.

Student reporters this week made a mirror to various departments to learn the methods being employed to make courses more interesting. Generally, the lecture methods was subscribed to, but many professors advocated panel discussions, student projects, films, and class discussion of current events relating to the subject matter of the course.

Delegates Are In 3-Way Fight Over Student Party Chairman

Student Party delegates Wednesday night departed from the routine business of nominating election candidates to deal with a three-way struggle to elect a party chairman. Election of the party chief however, failed and was put off until the Thursday session.

Dave Kennedy, Charlie Miner and Bill Stancik were named Wednesday at the closed Science Lecture Hall, site of the convention, as nominees for chairman on the eligibility of each. Miner was named first by ex-party official Alan Bashaw, then Kennedy by Pete Nimkoff. Following Kennedy's nomination, a dark surprise note was injected into the segregation. Frank Shaw, present Party chairman, stepped down from the podium and delivered a pro-nominating Bill Stancik for the office.

Stating he "Wants a strong man for the party I help support," Shaw continued, "I want to see three," Shaw urged delegates to "Give your vote to Stancik and forget your past deals." The party chief cautioned delegates that Kennedy, onetime freshman senator, had been up for impeachment for not attending meetings.

"This is no slam," Shaw noted. "Just a point of information."

Speaking to Kennedy's defense following Shaw's statement, Day Student delegate Gene Lawton stated that the convention's candidates could be completed.

One of the candidates not elected was party chairman. Ex-party head Jerry Bass, After a controversy over the party chairman nominating speeches, Senator Jack Jackson, who had previously been nominated for Student Body Honor Court, refused the party's support.

Jackson, a member of Sigma Nu fraternity stated that he was retiring from the party because it's support "On grounds that there has been too much vote-swapping and dirty deals."

Student Party nominees for Men's Senate Judiciary are Jake Wheeler, Greta Sims and Ben Bell. Nominees for Junior Judiciary, Jean Carr, Lisa Jean Pruitt and Susan Stone. KA's Hold Annual Rebellion; Parade Launches Big Weekend

By JAYLEEN ROBERTSON

Society Editor

Colonel J. Munday Crews, Commander of Fort Kappa Alpha at FSU told the Florida Flambeau today that the south will rise again at 4 p.m. this afternoon when the Confederate forces from the union in front of the mansion known as Bryan Hall.

"When in the course of southern events it becomes necessary for the gentlemen of the South to dissolve the relationship with the so called union—I say gentlemen here and now that a secession must occur . . . By command of the Honorable Jeff Davis, President of the Confederate States of America." So state the articles of secession posted about campus.

A colorful parade will precede the Kappa Alpha Bryan mansion, starting from the Florida Field at 3 p.m. The KA's will add officers and enlisted men's Confederate uniforms to their fraternity and sideburns for the weekend.

Southern gentlemen and their belles dressed in Old-South costume will ride buggies, carries, a covered wagon, and a calvary to parade down Monroe St. to the capitol, around the Capitol Ave. and up Colissa Ave. to Bryan Hall where the secession ceremony will take place.

The annual Kappa Alpha Rebellion Ball takes place tomorrow night at the Kappa Alpha House and her court will be introduced.

Colonel Crews stated that a series of General Orders had been sent to all southern forces to begin the annual festivities of the Kappa Alpha Southern Society.

Written in true southern hospitable and gentlemanly style, the General Orders read as follows:

"As Commanding Officer of Fort Kappa Alpha, I take great pleasure, in behalf of the Officers and Enlisted Personnel of my command, to personally welcome each of you here at Fort Kappa Alpha, and extend to each of you our heartiest and most professed invitation to take part in the An-

Name Contest Begins Today

See Ballot on Page 8

Student body president Milton Carruthers announced that a contest is underway to determine the name of the new athletic field opposite Campbell stadium.

Completed this summer, Carruthers said the name is necessary in order to send out publicity releases with another name other than "new athletic field."

Comprised of a varsity baseball diamond and two softball diamonds, the field has been named in the names of those served by the FSU nine, it was noted.

Carothers explained that since the field is for student events, students should be the ones to name the field. Students having suggestions for a name are urged to fill the blank provided in today's The Florida Flambeau. Ballots will be placed in the student government officials have received a space so that students can give their reasons for selection.

Suggestions for names are to be brought to second floor Longmire outside the student body office, or to the parade desk, by April 14. Winners will be announced at Coffee Ave. and up Colissa Ave. to Bryan Hall where the secession ceremony will take place.

Helms Retracts Winning Story; Vie Re-Opens

The Smoke Signals second annual literary contest has been reopened, according to editor-in-chief Jimmy Helms, and contributions of any length will be accepted until 5 p.m. Wednesday, April 14.

The contest, which originally ended midnight March 23, was reopened, according to Helms, because the winning manuscript was withdrawn.

Miss Frances Helms, authoress of the manuscript, declared that she had decided after entering that she did not care to have that particular work entered for the contest. She also stated that she had no idea that her work would be the manuscript chosen.

"I shall enter another manuscript in the contest, but will definitely not enter the same piece she is reported to have said.

MRS. CAMPBELL SPEAKS

Democracy and Brotherhood was the theme of the address by Mrs. Dora B. Campbell to the International Students Club meeting held Tuesday night.

Mrs. Campbell's two sons, Bells were hosts to 80 members of the club and some guests, according to spokesmen.

"Democracy," said Mrs. Campbell, "is not a democracy unless based upon brotherly love, justice and humanity. America is not a democracy but a republic. But the American way of life and the American thought is democratic."

Florida State Homes Miss King Koo Boonock

Florida State University is serving as headquarters for Mild Bill Boonock while she is in the state studying Florida's medical facilities.

The Mutual Security Administration and UNESCO branches of the United Nations brought her to the United States for six months of observation in public education methods. A nurse educator in Thailand, Miss Boonock said that she felt very much at home in Florida because the climate is so much like Florida's Thailand.

"I like the beautiful flowers and the South more, and the quietness of Florida.

Dr. Mary Louise Smith, head of the FSU Health Education Department, is directing Miss Boonock while she is here. Part of Miss Boonock's plans include visits to both white and colored schools in Leon County and around the state to observe teaching and the health services and the school systems.

She will also visit classes for exceptional children such as the mentally retarded and the handicapped.

The nurse has visited the Leon County Health Department and has some with nurses to visit sanitariums. Besides, she says, she lady has observed teacher education classes at the state university hospital and school of nursing and has visited the Florida Adult University.

THAI, AND NURSE—Miss King Koo Boonock, nurse educator from Thailand, consults Miss Louise Smith, head of the Health Education Department of Florida State University, who is directing her inspection of the medical, educational and health education facilities in Florida.

Other activities for the busy nurse vary from attending special orientation courses for new employees at the Florida State Board of Health in Jacksonville to a visit to Bradenton to visit the Manatee County Health Unit and teachers working on health problems in elementary schools.

After Miss Boonock had visited Drummond Park School in Panama City, the principal of the school, Lucille Moore, wrote to Dr. Smith and said that she enjoyed

Smathers Says U. S. Should Keep Able Reserves On Hand

Members of the Armed Forces Reserves are worried over the "New Look" in the U. S. preparedness program, Florida Senator George Smathers stated recently.

"For some time, many of us have been anything that will pay way to balance the budget by to substantially reduce military spending," declared Smathers, explaining fears. "Such a move would be the height of folly to abandon the American traditions of the Citizen Soldier, the symbol of America's readiness at any time to defend herself by the threat to the safety of every able citizen."

Smathers continued that the only way to reduce costs of preparedness is to retain the privately small regular force backed by a "vast reservoir of able trained citizens with a good one-tenth of the regulars." He suggested that to liquidate the reserves would be a disservice to the country.

'Barter' Overcomes Obstacles For Newman Club Production

By JOYCE POTTER

After the published preview performance last night, Newman Club play, Barter, It's hard to realize all the snags and obstacles that had to be overcome to make the play possible.

One of the major problems was acquiring costumes for the play, stating Beverly Lacoye designed all the costumes for the play in accord with members of the club. In order to save money, material was bought dyed and made into costumes by Mother Shantey and members of the cast made the jewelry.

The property consists of three different scenes, the first in a cave, the second in a tent and the Far Sea, large schooner and ship's deck. Many properties were needed. The second set is because Mildary Bo adquarters and the third is a schooner.

Many of the props and furnish- ings were borrowed from the Civic Club and the Speech department, however, many had to be made.

All "but in the Newman Club is a Catholic organization, many of the performers and backstage workers are not Catholics. Newman Club has served to bring together many types of many religions.

Many of the actors and actresses of Barter have had leading roles in other campus productions. Barbara Waddell, one of the main characters in the play, is the secretary of the Newman Club. Another Newman Club member is Bob Hogg and Steve Jones Restaurant.

Claire Durdle was in "City of Kings" last semester. The director is Bill Chavers, was director of Sandpaper.

Evrot the photographer got into the act by taking over one of the major roles. He also did the photographic work for the production.

Choreographer for the play is Sheldon Musgrove, L. F. Lopez, the costumes designer, and Bill Chavers, was director. Lighting has been finding the switch from panels to dimmers, a difficult task. Only eight candidates would be elected in the Class Elections "Regardless of party."

Attending the Tuesday and Wednesday night conventions were 45 delegates forming a total delegation of 53.

WORKERS NEEDED

The Student Cafeteria needs around 75 workers for the luncheons and suppers of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs meeting here April 20-22, according to Mrs. Anna M. Hall, cafeteria director.

Students will work in shifts of 2 hours and upon and a half hours and will be paid 75 cents per hour and will be excused from classes for the added.

Students desiring to work should contact Mrs. Hall in the office of Students Organizations, extension 4381, or Milton Carruthers, extension 4681 before 5 p.m. on Monday.

Workers are needed for the noon day luncheons on April 20, 21 and 22 from 12 to 12:45 p.m. and for the evening meals April 20 21 from 5 to 7:30. No advance

Sears Ends Issues By Resigning; Army-McCarthy Feud Unsolved

Samuel P. Sears, the Boston lawyer picked as counsel by the McCarthy subcommittee to investigate charges thrown by the Army and Senator McCarthy, and who subsequently came under fire as being pro-McCarthy, cleared up his own plight last Tuesday by resigning.

After being selected by the subcommittee, Lawyer Sears was subjected to heavy criticism. He was accused of supporting a fund drive in behalf of McCarthy when the latter was stumping for Senator in Wisconsin in 1952, and also, of seeking the job as counsel rather than the committee seeking him.

No one can judge whether this would have influenced Sears' handling of the inquiry, and it would be difficult to justify an answer. He has a high professional reputation and is a former president of the Massachusetts Bar Association. As a lawyer it would have been his duty to lead the inquiry in the most objective manner possible.

The fuss became brought to bear against Sears because of these associations obviously forced him to withdraw. It was a wise decision, but inevitable, in the face of the doubts brought about by those associations.

We are slightly dazed at the speed the Senate subcommittee took in naming a new counsel. They had taken sixteen days to name Sears, and upon his withdrawal, it took twenty-four hours to select Ray H. Jenkins, a Knoxville, Tennessee lawyer as replacement.

The overall picture of Jenkins places him as an uncontroversial figure, as concerns the inquiry. He is a former president of the Knox County Bar Association, and when he insisted on a thorough investigation of himself, the subcommitee conferred by telephone with 10 Tennessee state and federal judges, 30 lawyers of Knoxville and several newspapermen.

The behind the scenes wrangling, the withdrawal of Sears, the naming of Jenkins, and televised hearings scheduled to begin April 21 has taken one month and one week since the subcommittee originially voted March 16 to name a counsel for the inquiry.

The speed with which the subcommittee moved in naming Jenkins only shows they can act when they want to. With the selection of Jenkins, who says he's "quite positive I'm not prejudiced" about Mc-Carthy, we hope a thorough and impartial handling of the case will be made, and primarily, a quick decision arrived at. The people are entitled to it.

Uniformity Needed For Delegates

The selection of party delegates to pick nominees for student government is an extreme importance, because the students life at FSU is affected by the decisions made by the delegates and by the future student body officers that are select. The need of a uniform system of picking dormitory delegates to party conventions is essential.

At the present time there are various ways of electing or selecting delegates.

Men's dorms hold an open meeting to elect delegates and discuss known candidates for offices. Though there may be poor attendance, usually numbering 20 or 30 students, it is a democratic process. The selection of delegates at women's residence halls is altogether different. They post papers where non-sorority girls may sign if they wish to be delegates. The House Council of the halls then select their representatives. It is reported that many times there aren't enough people interested or that have the time to sign up. Then it is up to the dorm president to find delegates. The question is, how did delegates use three methods of getting delegates: electing them, the group's president appointing them, or the president going and delegate.

If women's residence halls would also adopt the method of having an open politicial meeting in the men's residence hall do, more interest in student parties, offices, and policies would be awakened.

With all the vote swapping, campaign promises, and lack of uniformity in method of delegate selection would definitely be to the advantage of group and not just individual representation.

Sensational Error Gains More Play Than Fact

A recent error by columnist-commentator Walter Winchell demonstrates how sensational half-truths often are given far more prominence than factual, levelheaded reporting.

Winchell in a nation-wide radio and television broadcast charged that a new antipolio vaccine was a "killer" instead of a cure. As "evidence" Winchell cited a report by the United States Public Health Service saying that out of 10 batches of vaccine, seven had been found to contain live, not dead, polio virus.

Dr. Jonas E. Salk, who developed the vaccine, explained the experimenters were well aware of the condition of the samples. These were pilot batches which went through merely to measure how long it would take to complete tests for mass production.

"We knew that several of the pilot batches were inadequately treated," Salk explained. "They were sent to the National Institute of Health with the expectation that larvae might be detected."

Harry J. Loynd, president of a company that produces the vaccine, assured that unsafe vaccine would never leave his laboratories. Winchell "must have been talking about material that either would have been discarded or processed and tested further for fitness," said Loynd.

Salk has already given shots to over 8,000 persons, including his own three children.

The point is not just that an error has been made and corrected. Winchell reached millions of listeners with his report with his comments. He undermined public confidence in what might prove to be a great weapon against polio. The correction story we noted was on page 19 of the Tampa Morning Tribune. Only a relatively few people will see the story.

Great harm has been done both because a man did not bother to gather the proper scientific facts and because he played his misinformation up sensationally.

Newcomers Order Of Day In Movies

By DAVID DEEIS

Take a look at the billboards and advertisements announcing forthcoming motion pictures and you'll find that now, more than ever before in movie history, the newcomers are breaking through.

Paramount and Universal - International, although in different ends as far as quality is concerned, are way out in front in this newcomers parade. Universal - International probably has the best set-up.

They have a form of educational arrangement where a young star or starlet is given class every day and plays in motion pictures on the side. An average class consists of about twenty-five students who every semester graduate and give a variety show for their fellow workers at U-I, of course their classes are concentrating and theory principles. How would you like to be in a class taught by Wilbur Laurie, Ruth O'Brien, Tony Curtis Rock Hudson, Julia Adams, Mara Corday, Mamie Van Doren and others at your class party. Pretty good, eh?

Paramount, as the other hand is getting its new stars from other fields and there's none the worse for it.

Pat Crowley, the young miss who was seen in Forever Female was taken from television where she played Judy Foster on "A Date With Judy". Another client soon to be seen is Red Garters with Jack Carson and Rosemary Clooney, also a film newcomer from records, was a night club product. These are just two of the new stars Paramount is unfolding to the public.

MGM is also on the road to bringing new stars to the fore—with Rick Jason, seen in Somebree, Audrey Dalton of Pleasure Island and Betta St. John of All The Brothers Were Valiant. Edward Purdom was in a principal part in Julius Ceasar . . . now in The Student Prince.

Neighborhood Notes

Dear Mama Seminole

Dear Mama Seminole,

Susie makium more trouble. She receivum call from Charlie Sapp, her brave. She call number left for her to c'all. Askum if Charlie there—Charlie come to phone. "Who is this?" say Charlie. "Susie Seminole," answer Susie. "What do you have on your mind?" say Charlie, "Nothing much, what do you have on yours?" "Dodging mud," say Charlie—pause—"This is Charlie Sapp isn't it?" say Susie—"Nooo—(respectfully), "That is Charlie Johns." "Cops?"

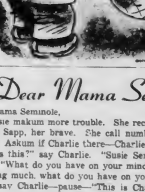
George find basis for braves senate representation very weak. Senator look out for interests of group. Whole class (year) has such organization as to have interests. People who have interests are those who live or work together. George observe that more logical representation h from tepee or even school of study which could muster far more interest than present represented groups. George compare elections on campus to election of big Washington Chief from California to action by all braves from 30 to 40 moons of age. Georgie recommend localized elections with intra group conventions and election, instead of nomination by interest groups.

Maybe, think George, strict regulations cause strain and tension which cause more serious troubles. Georgie can no plead woman sufferage, they suffer enough now. Discrimination between sexes. Please Mama! Let squaw back home know that they cause maiden rules.

Love all,
Georgie Seminole.

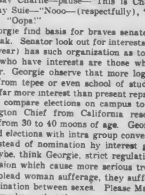
conrad and simon

By CON HOEN



I am enclosing some letters that I think you will be interested in. Lately I have been finding one in my typewriter every morning, always signed by an unusual mouse named simon, who claims to be a typewriter repair man who got in Give A Girl A Break. Carlos Thompson was brought over by Yvonne De Carlo.

Of course, two Academy Award winners Shirley Booth and Audrey Hepburn came to Paramount from the stage. Maudie Mazenara from THE MOON IS BLUE is also here temporarily on loan and THE MOON IS BLUE was one of her first Broadway roles.



A really beautiful gal is one called Matt Blanchard who has everything on the ball. This girl with U-I and has been made a Goldwyn Girl, a Copacabana girl, a Vita de Bagdad, she was a dance hall queen; in Abbott and Costello Go To Mars, she was a leader to Venus beauties. In Wac from Walla Walla and Joe Best at the Front, she was a pseudo-spy. What a dish.

Debra Paget on your list of future stardom—he played the young singer who won him the Army in TONIGHT WE SING. For the arts and crafts movie division . . . he's mighty good looking. Lori Nelson is on her way up at U-I with success after success in their films. Richard Allan also on the getting biling in Twentieth Century Fox's rosters.

Comparing the stars of today's pictures with those of the years past, you really wonder where all these newcomers came from. I don't believe that a picture quality should be impaired by using these new people, but they should be cast with top names who are already established and that way there'll more on the rungs. Give Universal credits, if not for quality, plenty of training of promising newcomers. Paramount's keen mind for bringing one media's stars to another also deserves plaudits.

McCarthy Record Needs Publicity

By BOB FOLSOM

Senator Joseph McCarthy remains in the news, and that is just what he wants. His present exploits, soon to be heard by the Senate subcommittee, will only show once again he will come out the winner and still champion, as he has done every time when backed into a corner with no obvious means of escape.

One day he is going to be caught up with. There are recent events which point to evidence that more people are recognizing Senator McCarthy tactics. Even a pro-McCarthyite, George Bolotsky, expressed concern by stating we are in "the midst of a critical political issue which may destroy the career of Senator McCarthy . . . "

At the Fair Deal Rally, Sunday a campaign aimed at recalling McCarthy from office was formed March 28. A newspaperman initiated the campaign. 258,000 people have already signed the petition. 604,000 more are needed within a 45-day period, it was reported.

And now, finally, the April issue of The Progressive, a liberal magazine, has pinpointed the McCarthy record. It is a documented report that covers thoroughly the career from a Wisconsin judge to U. S Senator. It is a hair-raising, heartsick attempt with meek effects and false charges, but a documented report covered with examples exposing McCarthy's unethical and dishonest conduct. It is a record showing a person merely out for personal gain.

The magazine said: "In publishing this special issue of The Progressive on McCarthy's record we are mindful of the fact that we shall be subjected to sneers and thoughtful Americans who share our repugnance for McCarthy. Their position, we suggest, will be based on their belief in coercion that we are aiding and abetting him by giving him more publicity' and building him up by taking him seriously."

"We can respect and sympathize with this point of view because we held it once ourselves. It is mistaken, however, when the facts proved us wrong. It is a dangerous error, we are convinced, for the forces of decency in America to fail to regard the man and his 'ism' with deep seriousness. His power today comes in great measure from our failure to fight back earlier. The evidence is overwhelming that McCarthyism cannot long survive when the people are given the truth about the character of his crusade."

How many people know that McCarthy, while a Wisconsin judge, ran afoul of the highest legal and judicial agencies of his state, and finally was condemned by the Wisconsin Board of Bar Commissioners? The board said in part: "Knowingly and willfully placing his gratification of his personal ambition above the interests of the public and the rights of litigants."

He has boasted of a record in his ivy League he said the leg was "badly smashed up, burned and broken." His fellow gunners said he got his leg while they were going through the intricate manuevers of backing when crossing the equator. A McCarthy subpoena sent to the Milwaukee Journal: "McCarthy was coming through his investigation when he was told he was going down a ladder with a bucket fastened to his foot when he slipped. His other foot caught on a lower rung—an inch or a few inches from the steel bulkhead—and he fell over backward, hitting his head."

There are many other like episodes: His list of discommendable which finally equaled zero. The famous Lustron deal . . . his case he would not answer questions on. His financial transactions and income tax reports, which a congressional committee investigated, concerning his finding by the Hennings Report. The charges made by the Hennings Report still are unanswered by McCarthy. His attack on General George C. Marshall and Nathan Pusey, and on and on. THE PROGRESSIVE brings all of this to light.

Anyone who even has a shred of belief in McCarthy should read the report in the Progressive. It is a record of a U. S. Senator who has left a trail of lies, deceit, smears, and what is blackest of all, he is still continuing to do it.

VISIONS OF VICTORY

Grim Fairy Tale: Don't Criticize Art

By DICK VICTORY

Once upon a time there was a boy who wanted to get away from it all. He was tired of hypocrisy and wars and other such necessary things so he got his belongings together and went out to seek his utopia.

He climbed many rolled mountains and visited islands but it all seemed to no avail. He couldn't find a trace of opc. But, strangely, he continued to search for it. After all, he was a young man, he had world enough and time.

However, at last the young man grew tired of hunting for something he couldn't find. He returned from where he had begun. Once there, he settled down to be a normal, well-adjusted life.

Then, one day he was looking in the mirror. And since he was a normal, well-adjusted person he looked for quite a while. But this time he was very happy. He was happy before. It was his reflection. It was his utopia.

He was strange, unpredictable, forbidding, yet with so affinity he couldn't escape. He didn't hesitate. He stepped into the mirror and entered the world of art and other such institutions.

When he got inside people came running to see who he was. They were very friendly. They could be, for they could take him in their leader.

The leader appeared to be amiable enough. His name was King Arthur but everybody called him Art. He was the young man on a comdicted sour and explained to him how the domain was run.

Although he was the leader, he did all the work — physically as well as mentally. He scrubbed, and labored, reaped and sowed, and commercials. Did everything else, too. The people just watched.

"But then," he would say, "I'm just a figurehead. The real top man is the Crime Minister."

The Crime Minister was an old cuss and who had long since been inactive. He lived in the biggest hill in the largest house in the vicinity.

When Art introduced the young man to him, the old man was sitting in a rocking chair, looked at him and began scratching his head. Then he began to laugh. He didn't laugh for a long time. Then he did. And he laughed.

Finally the young man was glad when they left.

Soon Art and the young man grew to be fast friends. Some day Art would become Crime Minister and somebody else would have to take up for him.

Years passed. It joked like the young man would be the man for the job. The young man was very happy. Here he was, a newcomer, being asked to be Crime Minister. Then it hit him. Work? What was the idea? A leader work?

The young man left the Art and thus was the tradition. Art thought about it for a while and then he, too, left to take it to the Crime Minister if you want me to."

That is what the young man wanted.

Back up at the hill the old man was laughing and rocking. His laugh grew higher and higher into a cackle as he rocked faster and faster until his legs form appeared fused with the rocker.

Soon Art returned. He had a smile on his face. He was still smiling when he took out the knife.

As the bullet ripped through she young man's very sympathetic nervous system he knew Art would make a good Crime Minister someday. Moral: Don't ever criticize the work of art.

ON A PEDESTAL

College Newspaper Needs Editorials

By NICK REEVES

In the last issue of the Flambeau, Editor Bruce Galphin reviewed a national magazine article criticism from an irate reader concerning his article on the Hydrogen bomb. The reader's indignity opposed the views of Mr. Galphin. Well, it is a matter understood if any ventured opinion by a fellow student on any subject would be a welcome change in commentaries. It is not unusual for readers to disagree with columnists, editorial writers or reviewers, for that consists of opinion and fact. But, when the preponderances in opinion, there would be no use for editorials, columns and reviews.

There are many individuals on campus who have very strong and prejudiced opinions on the Florida State extension activities on outside influences in the Southern Junior senator from Wisconsin, the Hydrogen bomb and the dismissal of Negroes from the music auditorium. These individuals should be given an opportunity that a college newspaper should certainly afford to them. Issue alone and leave the outside articles to outside newspapers. Stress local problems with this opinion except it is local.

A college newspaper should report the news of the college, but its editorial page should express the student's viewing on anything he feels important. How he feels in accordance with integration, discrimination, the influence of Joseph McCarthy, or the increase in tax revisions should be included in every issue. Year after year, the same vrends take shape in this campus. A student has already formed opinions concerning same. He should not be compelled to read editorials and columns on team spirit, pep rallies, homecomings, presidential dinners. The system now used on the campus periodical is not solely used here. It has been used with great success at Harvard, Yale, Princeton and many other northern schools. The University of Chicago Maroon has always been a newspaper which has predominately student views on adult news.

The columnists on the Flambeau, except a few, are mostly of the young man of not, are men, who, perhaps too, of a variety of interests from book reviews to news of the movie stars and their doings and sayings. I do not believe that every column will be appreciated by everyone, but under this present theory I do believed that each column will have a considerable audience.

There is some talk that in the near future the Flambeau may be published more than twice a week. If it does, and now the Flambeau is the only semi-weekly college periodical in the state and it brings to my mind dismay from fellow collegians that the Flambeau should not be so done If the publication would make a possible three issues a week schedule, with the additional news and editorials would have no inkling.

THE MIDDLEMAN . . .

(From the Oracle, Tennessee Polytechnic Institute)

Somebody said the back seat of a car is the only place where you can get a room cheaper than eating a college newspaper.

. . . You're always in the middle. The private has to answer to the sergeant, the sergeant is responsible to the president. The president has to worry about the vicissitudes of the voters. And the editor gets it from both sides.

. . . Before we took over we heard students gripe . . . about "spineless, scared" editors. So we vowed we wouldn't be like that. We wrote a few mildly controversial pieces. We got hell from the water with the powers that be . . . but nothing from the students except an occasional "nice job, keep it up behind you."

We finally decided we were too polite to wage single-handed battles against customs, traditions and such things. We gave afraid . . . So we had fun. We didn't wage any real campaigns. We didn't advocate firing anybody, or locking up the lawbreakers in the county jail . . .

Maybe someday we'll grow up and be that inspired, crusading journalist we've always dreamed of being. But probably we'll always be a spineless automaton. But we reposed, we've had fun. . . .

NO BUSINESS LIKE SHOW BUSINESS

(ACP)—Putting their spring show production under the motto "making but a gritty revue," student planners of a campus presentation at Michigan State College have banned "smutty skits."

Leering men's suits and salacious costumes were prohibited by the committee in charge of the production. One skit banning suits were accepted, but two piece suits were okay. Men's bathing trunks were banned unless they were the boxer type.

"Several acts had to be completely revised," according to Jim Buchanan, one of the planners who helped ban smutty clothing. "Many times groups forget their themes and dress some girl in a sexy costume just to get attention."

Members of the 30 participating groups had designed costumes centered "too much" on the spectacle chairman.

Letters to the Editor...

Serves Purpose

To the Editor:

It was with extreme distaste that I read in last Tuesday's issue of the Flambeau reference to the recent "improper" tone of the Flambeau.

The Flambeau is the only college paper that I have ever had occasion to read. It is the only college paper I have ever seen that serves a useful purpose in making students interested in fundamental social issues, in the conditions under which they live, in their student government, their college administration, and their country. This, I feel, is one of the most important functions of a college paper.

This incident bears an exact parallel to a recent article concerning a college paper in Spain. It is similar, too, to events that occurred in connection with the founding of the nation and of other democratic nations, and to incidents that are occurring even now in Communist nations.

Totalitarian administrations cannot support student governments; they are hardly good examples for students who need to learn to defend our democratic ideals. If students are taught that such things are right and good, is it any wonder that some of the less individualistic are willing to accept the same principles later, under the name of Communism, Nazism, or Fascism?

You are doing a fine job, Dear Caldish. You have my deepest admiration and my earnest support, however weak that may be!

Cordially,
John G. Marsen.

No Strings

To The Editor:

Looking objectively at the present gubernatorial race, I have tried to select my choice of candidates. Often times, candidates make promises to one interest group and contradictory promises to another. I have observed, listened and read materials pertaining to each candidate. Mr. Odham charged my choice because he offers me nothing in the way of promises but GOOD GOVERNMENT.

Mr. Odham has said, "I'd rather be free than be governor," meaning that if he gains office it will be with no "strings attached." He will not have to cater to the whims of some particular interest group, but can devote his energy toward the betterment of our state and the general welfare of the people. I can see how a candidate can ride into office, pushed by some powerful minority interest; but how that same candidate, bound by obligations to special interest groups, can provide good, clean, open government I will never be able to see.

If Mr. Odham gains office, he will do it the hard way. Elected as the people's choice of the people, not by pressure exerted on the voters by powerful minority interests.

Sincerely,
CLARENCE F. GRANTHAM.

'Concern' Disturbs

To The Editor:

I must say I was much disappointed to read about the "concern" expressed over the tone of the Flambeau. Therefore, I have written this letter.

As I see it, the concern centers around what is called "too much prejudice in the Flambeau." I certainly would not call it "griping" when the good Southern Democrats forever debate and filibuster for "states' rights." These men surely believe that certain rights and independence should be reserved for the states.

The views also intimated to the student publications that they either "toe the line" or else be taken from student hands. This hint of suppression of opinion is directly opposed to the spirit of America and the Bill of Rights. John Stuart Mill says in his Essay on Liberty, "The peculiar evil of silencing the expression of opinion is, that it is robbing the human race . . .

"If the opinion is right, they are deprived of the opportunity for exchanging error for truth; if wrong, they lose, what is almost as great a benefit, the clearer perception and livelier impression of truth, produced by collision with error."

Certainly, one cannot disagree with this.

Furthermore, a university should be a free opinion, a place where new ideas arise, not where old orgs are perpetuated to the exclusion of all others. That is what good universities have done and what they always will do.

Sincerely,
WALLACE NORTON.

University Of Oslo Plans Study Open To Advanced Students

A conference at the University of Oslo, Norway, for the discussion of planning of new municipal setups in Norway this summer is open to Florida State University students advanced in municipal planning training, stated school spokesmen recently.

The two-week conference will be held beginning August 1 in Oslo, it was revealed, under the auspices of the Norwegian Town-Planning Association. It is intended for "advanced students of municipal training, urban geography, sociology, architecture, engineering and professional workers in the same fields."

The conference, "Town and Regional Planning in Norway," will be divided into two sets of seven lectures each: "General Background of Planning in Norway" and "Planning in the Oslo Area." Those attending the conference will take one of the two.

Both groups will take five field trips in the Oslo area. "This constitutes the basic program and will cost $42," announced spokesmen. "Included in this price will be housing, breakfast and lunch every day (plus dinner the first and last days), and the cost of registration, lectures and three weeks' health insurance in Norway."

It was added that an optional five-day guided tour will be offered. It will cover Trondheim, Kristiansund, Molde and Bergen, lasting from August 11 until 15. Cost will be Approximately $60 and will cover all transportation fares and meals.

Application forms may be secured from "Oslo Summer School Admissions Office, c/o Mr. Odal College, Vaill be of Minnesota, it was announced. Completed applications should be sent to "Summer School Administrative Office, University of Oslo, Karl Johansgt. Oslo, Norway.

Officials require that the application be sent to the latter address before June 15. They urge that they be sent as soon as possible since the maximum number of participants allowed will be 20.

4 Pt. Program Lends Encouragement To Colonial and Undeveloped Areas

By BILL FRIEDLANDER
World Frontiers

Many observers of the American student scene in recent years have announced their dismay at the political and social apathy which they find.

They have been accurate in their appraisal of the effect a rapidly disintegrating world and an unparalleled drive toward political and intellectual conformity have produced on our generation. And I share their dismay.

But while the majority have averted their gaze from the signs of today's trends, an entirety too small but still significant number of young people have looked, and been willing to see the way the signs point.

They point to struggles equal as great as that between America and Russia; struggles furthermore upon which our great wrangle is every day more obviously largely bi-sect. For these are the struggles of the vast majority of our fellow beings who live in colonial or economically underdeveloped areas.

We know nothing about all these people, save that they are poor in a kind of poverty we don't know: that they have skins of many shades, few of them white: and that they are somehow unfair.

So exasperated are we in our ignorance that we have taken to calling these people "teeming" when we refer to them by the hundreds of million and "inscrutable" when we think of a single face.

Yes we are beginning to know that all these of our fellows, with all their nationalities and hues and traditions, are fair with a new and great belief.

This belief is that they — most of the people on earth —have been victimized by rich and haters, that they need be so me mere, and that they do not intend to be so any longer.

A small but significant number have seen this belief as perhaps the paramount fact of our century. They have done so almost despite the efforts of American 'leadership' working through the media of mass communication.

Thus, of the appallingly little interest that goes beyond the campus, a percentage of it is focused on Point Four, work in foreign countries, travel abroad, and the like.

Amidst discouragement with the world and our reaction to it, this is heartening.

Heartening, too, is what would seem to be a "happy combination" of demand and supply. On one hand is a large part of the world which demands that it be allowed to develop itself politically, economically and in some sense socially. And on the other is our country, which considers itself thus developed: has a supply of trained people who wish to aid in this development.

More exact scrutiny, however, reveals several problems. First, most of the world is poor and of it is going to have to pay for technical assistance, it wants only the best.

Second, most young Americans have little to offer beside their good will. Third, the vital supplement to good will, namely training, experience, and frank research afterwards to participate actively in world development is extraordinarily difficult to achieve.

Is this "happy combination" then to be wasted? Perhaps. But maybe not completely.

For one thing, there are professions for which one can get in, training and experience of a valuable, culturally transferable kind in relatively short order.

Two that come to mind are teaching, especially teaching of science and allied technical subjects, and nursing and public health work.

Furthermore, many work camps and other voluntary projects exist and can use relatively unskilled workers. This area is realistically capable of expansion.

The sources of information about this kind of work are numerous. Among the best are the American Friends Service Committee, the International Development Placement Association, and the National Council of Churches.

It is important to sound a final cautious note. Those who follow the bold light of history will not change the world much. Their most devoted work will be lost in immeasurable point on the scale of world development. But it will be a good point that they have made.

Let us have enough of this caution. Let us, in the words of Stringfellow Barr, "join the historic race." And inevitably we will help other Americans to join it, too. Thus we per. mit ma.k is a matter of pride to have belonged to our generation.—Copyright Campus Feature Service.

Arbuckle Emphasizes Problems Of College Religion, Athletics

BOSTON, Mass. (I.P.) — Colleges religious services and emphasis on athletics are faced acutely as two important aras that of concern in the new book Student Personnel Services in Higher Education by Dr. Donald Arbuckle, director of Boston University. He maintains that "religion is a controversial issue only because of the immaturity and inability of man to live by his own religion."

In writing the first book in the area of student personnel services from a "student - centered" point of view, Dr. Arbuckle, director of student personnel at the University's school of education, says that many practices in schools in some of today's schools

In citing a solution to the problem, he declares, "every attempt should be made to have athletics become a part of the total student body, rather than have individuals who stand set in a favorable or unfavorable light. An admissions committee representing students and faculty should be aware that the athletic philosophy with regard to athletics is known and acceptable to all students and faculty members.

The religious program of the modern inter-denominational colleges should go far beyond the mere encouragement of belief from their own religion, rather than trying to convert them from one belief to another."

Journalists Convene At FSU To Study Publication Needs

Student publication problems will be studied when the Florida Scholastic Press Association meets at Florida State University, April 23-24.

Convention plans are being arranged by the School of Journalism with the cooperation of Lee, Utah School and the Florida High School, according to Dean Lionel C. Campbell.

Six talks on careers in journalism will be featured. They will deal with opportunities in advertising, public relations, radio and television, magazines, newspapers and special fields.

The PSPA Tourney will provide entertainment at the convention in straight news, sports features, feature interview, editorial, and poetry, advertising, yearbook layout and yearbook theme.

Special speakers will be featured at the opening session, the banquet luncheon, and the PSPA dinner, he said. Awards will be presented at the closing session on Saturday. Delegates will visit the Tallahassee Democrat plant.

Science Fellowship Awarded To Three Graduate Classmen

Three Florida State University graduate students were accorded National Science Fellowship awards and three other FSU students were awarded honorable mention honors, it was announced recently by Dr. Milton Carothers, Dean of the FSU graduate school.

The three, selected from a field of 2,865 applicants, were among the 867 students receiving fellowship awards. They include Herbert Curl, Joe Cable, and Charles Crane.

Those receiving honorable mention were David Dever, Dean Kenily, and Henry Thompson, others said.

Carothers noted that another part of the fellowship was an FSU graduate. He is Ralph McWilliams.

The awards, according to the Dean, vary from $1,400 to $1,800 and applications may be made for renewal. He said that allowances were made for dependents, tuition and other normal expenditures.

Carothers added that any accredited non-profit institution of higher learning in the United States or abroad, may be attended by the recipients.

Green Opposes Present Status Of Orientation

WATERVILLE, Me. (I.P.)—A new approach to the perennial problem of freshman adjustment was recently tackled at Colby College with the help of Professor Theodore M. Greene of Yale University. Dr. Greene, a philosophy professor, deplored the "typical freshman indoctrination" in college in an address here last spring and suggested at that time a Freshman Convocation.

"We fail to use imagination to get inside the minds of the newly arrived freshman," he charged. "We lend either to lecture at them or to shake their hands and pump them full of ice cream. There ought to be a time for the beginning of the kind of mature conversation which . . . four years of college ought to mean."

The Convocation, held last month, Dr. Greene's words was "to give the freshman an opportunity to find himself as an individual and, in so doing, to adjust himself and accept the responsibilities of college life." In his three-day visit, Dr. Greene addressed an All-College assembly, spoke informally at classes, before fraternities, conducted Chapel and was featured in the Freshman Convocation meeting and panel discussion.

Mr. Formal' Search On Here; Face No Drawback Say Rules

By DOT DEKLE

The big search of the season begins Tuesday, April 27, when Mr. Formal' No. 1 starts entering men. Gals underway to find Mr. Formal" on the Florida State University Campus. First to win the Jackpot will be a 24 complete "After Six" summer formal outfit. Other prizes include a Roman Adonis lighter, a complete Pioneer formal set and a Ravenette white brief pipe. Sponsored by "After Six" Formal Wear, the contest at FSU is one of over 100 similar contests to be held on campuses in every part of the country.

Applications for the "Mr. Formal" contest will be accepted from all student organizations, fraternities, athletic or independent groups. Each group should choose one man to represent them. Each entrant will be photoed at a social affair to be sponsored by "After Six" Formal Wear Jacket. Then, final judging will be scheduled to determine who will be "Mr. Formal" at FSU.

Judging is based on each man's appearance in the "After Six" dinner jacket. He is known to wear your "face need not be your fortune," for each contestant will be considered solely on what he does for the jacket. Points to be judged are fit, tastiness, and general all-round appearance created by the contestant.

For details on entering men should contact Steve Zatyko, 823 Pensacola St., or phone 2-9355.

Four participating local dealers in the "Mr. Formal" contest are Nick Tsoussy, Alford Bros., J. W. Wilson and Turner's.

Previous "Mr. Formal" contests were held on many major campuses. Thousands of men in schools from Princeton to the University of Washington turned out for the event.

PREVED, ANTONY

At the University of Toledo, Ohio, the campus Collegian's inquiring reporter sought students' views and faculty members' views. Here are some of the results:

"Teachers fail to realize that they have been teaching the same subject for a number of years," says one student. "They think we should know as much as they do in a much shorter time."

On the next part, complains an English professor, "it is the lack of curiosity which I object to. Students are not interested in learning just for the sake of learning; something, everything must have a practical application."

Another professor terms "lastness" his pet peeve. "College students are the only people in the world," he says, 'who pay for something and then do their best to cheat themselves out of it."

When you come right down to it, you smoke for one simple reason... enjoyment. And smoking enjoyment is all a matter of taste. So, when you light one in a cigarette. And Luckies taste better.
Two facts explain why Luckies taste better. First, L.S./M.F.T.—Lucky Strike means fine tobacco... light, mild, good-tasting tobacco. Second, Luckies are actually made better to taste better... always round, firm, fully packed to draw freely and smoke evenly.
So, for the enjoyment you get from better taste, and only from better taste, Be Happy—Go Lucky. Get a pack or a carton of better-tasting Luckies today.

APO Requests Those Listed To Get Money

Alpha Phi Omega Book Exchange head Don Van Nus today issued names of all students having unclaimed money still with APO.

Van Nus said these people have money due them for books sold this semester. First policies, he said, were sent by mail on white cards, second notices on blue.

Those appearing in the list, he said, can collect at the Book Exchange in the Longmire Building basement Monday or Wednesday from 7 to 8 p.m. He noted the book store will be open the rest of this semester at this hour. He urged all to bring receipts if they wish to collect money due them.

Latimer include Mary Anderson, Joan Brasel, Laurel Boggs, Lena Cochran and Roy Chapman. Also Mary Pre Dale Johnson, Mildred McCary, Ervin F. McCawley, Roberta Pere W. R. Patterson and Elaine S. Peek.

Also Joan Crandiff, Diane Jones, Wayne Linkleman, Sheldon Musgrove, Nancy Mayer, Fred Roberts, Ronald Rackleff and Morris C. Sea.

Betty Spence, R. M. Simmons, Barbara Yetter, Susan Weisenbarrer, Loretta Woods, Jerry Wattes and William Wesson.

IN A PIG'S EYE

Students at the University of Rhode Island were spurred when they spotted a little piggy bank resting in front of the cash register at the student canteen.

In front of the bank was a sign saying, "Save your Piggy's Dollars to the Piggy Reclamation Fund!" Though there is no such fund—at least not at the University of Rhode Island—students contributed $2.

Delegates Struggle

peachment proceedings would have gone on to Minor court.

Immediately following Chairman Shaw's call for a polling of the delegations as the three Sigma Nu delegate Curtis Jackson, shortly after receiving party nomination for Junior Men's Honor Court post, announced he was withdrawing from the party and refusing nomination. Jackson gave as his reason for the un-precedented move "Too much maneuvering and vote-swapping in the delegations". He said he knew of several "Dirty deals" in the convention hall.

Polling of the delesntions was begun and Kennedy was leading when Stancik announced he was withdrawing in "Favor of Chancellor Miner". Stancik urged delegates to re-cast his votes for Miner, which they did, giving Miner a simple majority of one vote over Kennedy.

Pollitos to the Party constitution, however, Lawler brought to light the fact that it requires a two-thirds vote to elect Party Chairmen and Secretary. West Hall immediately moved to do away with the constitutional ruling in this instance and moved for a majority vote, which was passed. The delegations were again polled.

Kennedy moved ahead of Miner the second time around and totaled 43 votes to Miner's 38. Majority vote reqnired 45. Following diversion, delegates moved to continue with the other nominations, putting off party chairmanship until last night.

Later apologizing for any personal offense, Shaw said: "I pushed only to expers my opinion. If I hurt anyone I'm sorry not for what I said, but how I said it."

Delegates moved into the last stages of the convention last night and votes were not obtainable by Flambeau press time.

All students are invited to attend the special study in Baptist Student Union methods. This will be held Monday from 7:30-8:15 p.m. and Tuesday from 5:45-6:30 p.m. Dr. Preston will be guest of honor at a coffee-dessert from 6:30-7 p.m. and will then speak at regular Vespers Service from 7-7:30.

HILLEL

The topic of Rabbi Kravetz' sermon at this evening's Sabbath service is the "Life of Benedict Spinoza," the 17th century Dutch philosopher. The service begins at 8 p.m. at Temple Israel.

At the same time and place, but on Sunday evening, Dr. Raymond K. Sheline, Associate Professor of Chemistry, will speak to the Hillel group on his "Experiences in Work Camps." All students are invited to attend these lectures.

CHURCH NEWS

PRESBYTERIAN

Friday evening members of the Presbyterian Westminster Fellowship will gather at Silver Lake for a conference on Christian Vocation.

Leaders for the affair will include Dr. Ray Sheline, of the Chemistry Department, Dr. Howard Taylor and Dr. Nicholas Heerema of the Mathematics Department, Dr. W. T. Martin of the First Presbyterian Church, and Miss Dorothy Boardman, Director of Religious Education for the First Presbyterian Church.

Jerry Jones, FSU junior from Lake Alfred is general chairman of the planning committee for the conference. Other members of the committee are Klyne Nowlin, Charles Huber and Tom Simmons.

Approximately 35 students accompanied by Miss Miriam Wilson, Director of Westminster House, will attend the conference.

BAPTIST

Dr. William Hall Preston, Southwide Baptist Student Director from Nashville, Tennessee will be the installation speaker for the Baptist Students Union Executive Council, Sunday evening at 6 p. m. at the First Baptist Church.

Theme of the installation service will be "Your Life—and Christ." Dr. Robert Schmidt, incoming faculty advisor will lead the Invocation.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Ainsworth, student director, will present the new council members Jerry Portune, outgoing president, and Betsy Jean Nichols, incoming president, will extend the challenge.

Dr. Preston will be a guest of the student house Monday and Tuesday. He will confer with all new council members during this time.

METHODIST

The curtain will open tonight on the Easter play, "The Terrible Meek," at 8 p. m. in the Methodist Student House. The one-act play by Charles Rann Kennedy takes place on Calvary.

The play is under the direction of Donn Teal, a member of the local chapter of Wesley Players. He has written and directed a number of plays since he became a member of the organization a few years ago.

The local chapter of the National Society of Wesley Players was organized in 1947. Both one-act and three-act plays are presented several times a year. The purpose of the organization is to provide worship through drama in Methodist Student Organizations on university campuses. This is done by plays, choral readings, living worship centers, skits and other forms of dramatic worship.

Comedies are not left out, as they add to a well-rounded organization. John Roddenberry is the newly elected president of the Wesley Players.

EPISCOPAL

Services at Ruge Hall will open in Palm Sunday here. The 7:30 and 11 o'clock services will present the story of Holy Week in hymns and scripture. The Meaning of Redemption will open with the Palm Sunday procession followed by the blessing and distribution of holy palms. The choir and congregation will portray the story of Christ's last day at Calvary. Services will close with a joyous note of Easter.

There will be an Easter egg hunt on the south lawns at Ruge Hall Sunday evening at 6 o'clock, followed by a picnic supper on the green.

Ruge Hall is making plans for the remainder of the spring semester and the fall semester. Students elected officers and organizing committees to carry out projects. The Canterbury Council members recently appointed are part of this group. Following are the new council members: Worship Chairman, Phil Whitehead; St. Matthews Guild, Spencer Roads; Altar Guild, Betty Andrews; Canterbury Tales, Margaret King; Food Chairman, Jean Conners; Choir Directors, Susan Limebaugh and Jack Jarrett; Publicity and Public Relations, John Curtin; Study Chairman, Lorraine Wood; Membership Chairman, Lucille Turnage; Librarian, Winona Marvin; Social Chairman, Bea Thiterson, and Program Chairman, Beverly Cox.

CATHOLIC

President and Mrs. Doak S Campbell and Mrs A. B. Martin, wife of the Vice-President, were guests at the Chickory House at the Newman Club Tuesday afternoon.

President Campbell encouraged the religious organizations on campus, stating that these groups were important in building the student body together.

The Chickory Hour is a weekly coffee hour on Tuesday to provide students with an opportunity to meet over a snack after classes.

The choir at Newman Club is now holding rehearsals for an Easter Mass under the direction of Dr. James V. McDonough.

sion of what he is learning.

Then it's the kind of materials that the schools use. Text books are often poor. Rogers declared cinated with her. The only that all the instructor can do is "give a quiz." Commenting further Dr. Rogers said, "A textbook course to me is not a suitable course to run discussions in."

The next reason given was that the classes were too big. And Rogers pointed out, "People don't do their work in advance."

Another difficulty is the student who monopolizes the discussion. "The other students get sick of hearing their voice all the time," which, declares Dr. Rogers, is "the fault of the instructor." He continued saying that there too, is the other extreme, students, who never talk.

Explaining further further objection, Dr. Rogers said that many educators believe that the coverage of material is most important. He felt, however, that this is not a legitimate reason.

Dr. Rogers believed there are two types of discussions, guided and permissive. In a guided situation the professor would follow an outline and know ahead of time the conclusion that the students would reach. The permissive discussion group is allowed by the instructor to ramble off the topic.

DELTA ZETA SILVERED

Delta, Zeta, social sorority at Florida State University was awarded a silver tray by women of the Tallahassee Pan-Hellenic Association for the highest academic average of all FSU sororities for one year.

First award by the women's group of its kind, the tray will be given each year by the women. Pan-Hellenic said yesterday the group receiving the award for three consecutive years will be allowed to keep the tray permanently.

Also at the recent meeting of the Tallahassee association, Co-Eds Simmons, Delta Zeta vice-president, received a silver necklace for maintaining the highest individual average from Delta Zeta this past year.

MILLER'S Footery

College Ave.

From The Sidelines

By Ken Kingery

Flambeau Sports Editor

Frosh Tracksters Spark Team

All fall and winter, track coach Ken Miller has been saying about his fabulous group of frosh tracksters, and of their great potential ability. Since the performance of freshmen athletes is notoriously inconsistent, however, many FSU sports fans have adopted a wait-and-see attitude. As of this date, with the season well underway, it must be conceded by all that these freshmen are truly top-notch. Better, perhaps, than any other freshmen collection in the southeast!

Look at the record of these men after only three weeks: Joe Davis, freshman champion low hurdler of the Athletic Coast Conference Indoor Games, with a new record performance; Larry Hountha, who has run the 880 in 1:59.6 and 1:57.1 in his last two outings, the first time was a new school record; Jimmy Castel, apparently one of the best quarter-milers in the south already, broke the Mercer School record last week, by sprinting the distance in :50.8, even on a poor field!

Ken Segner Looks The Best . . .

When these three men are grouped with the other freshman thinclads like Ken Segner (ineligible, transfer), Coach Miller says this man is potentially the best of the lot. Consistent Charley Watson, who is the most versatile of the current frosh; Mike Smith, who should hit at least 6-6 in the shot put before the year is over; Shot-putter, Jerry Robbins, the most improved man of the squad; Bradenton's Tenney Brown, hurler and high jumper; Warren Strickland, who is beginning to hit his pole vaulting form again after a severe early season ankle sprain; Boyd Lassen, improving high jumper; Don Heidal, hurler; and Frank Koircher, Javeline thrower—well, then the coach's enthusiasm is understood, and certainly quite justified.

Miller Gives Credit to Staff . . .

"Credit for the large share of any success attained by this years track team must go," says Coach Miller "to assistants Mike Long and Walter Grage."

According to Miller, "The job of working with a team almost entirely made up of freshman would be an impossible task without the loyal assistance and enthusiasm of these two men." Miller makes quite a point of the fact that his two assistants are outstanding teachers of objectives of athletics other than the obvious one of physical skills. They're developing athletes, but they're also ending up with better men socially, morally, an dethically. Coach Miller praises his staff in saying "I'm in a very enviable situation in having two such outstanding assistants."

Team Gets Triple Chance . . .

In individual event sports—such as track, swimming, as gymnastics—assistants don't enjoy the work of the Head Coach as much as they allow the team to get proportionately more attention, work, and skill development. For the benefit of the layman, one track coach just can't be in the rounds of the meets in which he is entered with optimum frequency. Sprinters, hurdlars, distance runners, broad jumpers, high jumpers, shot putters, discus throwers, javelin throwers, pole vaulters, and relay men all require different work on different locations of the track and field area. And all at the same time! So since one coach is physically limited to how many things he can do at the time, and how many places he can do them in, track coaching presents a problem not encountered in the team sports such as football, basketball, and baseball. With Miller, Long and Grage all snaring the coaching duties, squad members are getting triple value from their participation.

Spotlight . . . Long and Grage

Walter Grage is a Graduate Assistant in Physical Education, and is a former all-round performer on the FSU track teams of 1951 and 1952. Although currently working toward his M. S. in Physical Education, Coach Grage plans to enter Emory Dental School next fall.

Mike Long, Instructor in Physical Education who also served as an assistant coach in football and basketball this year, comes from a long succession of Scout Masters and Sarasota High Schools. He is a graduate of the University of Minnesota where he was a stand-out pole vaulter.

Relay Teams Off to La. . . .

The two crack relay teams of Florida State, will compete in the 36th running of the Southwestern Louisiana Relays at Lafayette Friday and Saturday.

While the freshman quartet is showing their wares out of town, the remainder of the Seminole track squad will face a visiting Service team at the West Campus Varsity Track.

Composing the powerful relay teams will be Charlie Watson from Ft. Myers, Nimmy Castel, Georgia Cracker, Hurdler Joe Davis from Orlando, and New York City's flash Larry Hountha. "They will have a very good chance of wining these events," so says Head Track Coach Miller. The four youngsters whipped around the track at Gainesville last week at the clip of 51 seconds per man. This final time was 3:24.5, which was the second fastest mile relay in Florida State history.

Future Volleyball Star

Florida State's Volleyball coach Bill Odenal is the proud father of a future spiker and all-star baby boy. Born last Saturday, William T. Odeneal Jr. is the second offspring of the Odeneal household. The first little one to bless the FSU Coach and his wife was a pretty little girl, who's name is Cindy. She is now four-years old.

Netters Slated To Face Emory, LSU This Weekend

Florida State University's improved tennis team will try to better its respectable 6-2 spring record this Saturday afternoon against Emory University and Louisiana State.

The Friday match with Emory is set for the varsity courts at 1 p.m. Saturday's clash with LSU will start at 1:30.

FSU will stak a four-match winning streak against Emory. The Seminoles have taken seven of eight matches since their series with Emory opened in 1946.

Coached by Keith Pitchford, the Indians will have a revenge try against LSU. The Bayou Jays, Bass, Theo Morgan and Joe Scoggin, perennially tough in Southeastern Conference play, toddled FSU with one of its only two setbacks last spring.

Major factors in FSU's hopes for a well-end sweep are team Captain Hal Schaiss of Mansfield, Ohio, Dave Kennedy of Tampa, and Tom Cundy of Bellevue, Ky. That trio has won 18 of 24 singles matches this season.

Other Seminoles who will compete against Emory and LSU be Indians will have a revenge are Don Wyly, Shelby Cream, Bob Hamm, Tim Morgan and Jon Harris.

FSU Gymnasts Place Third At NCAA; Penn Takes 1st

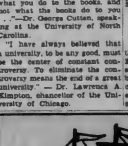
By BOB GUTTING

Flambeau Sports Writer

At the recent NCAA meet held at Champaign, Ill., the Florida State gymnasts took a predicted third place win by beating out last years 3rd and 4th place Syracuse and UCLA.

As was expected, Penn State retained their championship title of last year, with Cremsetti sparking the team to first place by winning the all-around competition.

Second place winner was Illinois, who trailed the Seminole team until the last event. The last, event, tumbling, is a favorite of Illinois, and they easily placed three men to beat out the Seminoles by a slight margin for second place.



However, in a speech at a dinner shortly before the meet began, Dr. Hartley Price, Florida State gym coach, said: "This isn't the one we worry about anyway. We want the AAU because that's always where the Olympic team is picked. This my boy, Don Haider. He was on the last Olympic team. He'll be beaten here this weekend, but he won't lose to any of these boys at the AAU in Los Angeles. Haider has been practicing for the AAU all year. The others start next week. They can't possibly catch him in AAU competition."

In the all-around event at Champaign Haider slowly followed Penn State's star. Cremsetti to take second place, while FSU's national champ Jack Miles took fourth place. In addition to this, Don Holder won the NCAA still rings championship and Miles the NCAA long horse crown.

Although this is the first defeat of the Seminole gym team this season, it should be noted that they were competing without three of their top performers, Rafael Lecuona, captain of the 1952 Cuban Olympic team, and Joe and Carmine Ragna. All three are ineligible for collegiate competition due to NCAA rulings. However, these men will be on hand at the NAAU meet at Los Angeles April 29 to May 1.

Scores of the gymnasts in other events were Holder 6th and Pat Signorelli 8th on side horse, Holder 8th on high bar and 6th on parallel bars. Signorelli 7th on parallel bars, Jack Miles 4th on flying rings, Dick Ireland 4th and Jim Fadgan 8th on trampoline, and Larry Weston 10th in tumbling.

In points Penn State easily outdanced the other 23 colleges competing with 127. Illinois followed with 48 points, six more than third place FSU.

Cooter Leads The Pack

Basket-Ball Doings

By Art Kennerly

Alpha Tau Omega strained and sweated past a snappy Sigma Phi Epsilon basketball team at the close of last week to walk off on shaky legs with the basketball crown. The score was 28-27.

Previously, in elimination bouts, the SPE's had whipped the ATO's. But the ATO outfit bounded back from the loser's bracket to beat the SPE's in the final fling. The SPE's conquered the Phi Kappa Tau's just before meeting the ATO's for the last and fatal time.

In the fraternity-intramural league, Senior Hall and the Baptists will play-off for the championship on Thursday. Last week the Senior Hallers whipped down the Baptists 31-30. But one more game between the two is necessary to determine the winner. The Senior Hall team came out of the loser's bracket to meet the Baptists and got so far as they did. Senior Hall has lost to the Baptists before, and they had to whip the Methodists to get back into the play-offs.

Softball competition among the dormitory teams will start next Monday according to the West campus intramural officials. In the fraternities, softball will begin on next Tuesday.

Dormitory entries for softball and volleyball are due tomorrow at 5:00 p.m. After that nobody gets in.

Volleyball will probably swing into action about two weeks from today. Bowling intramurals will start soon, too. And on May 18-Exodus beautiful team at the close of last week to walk off on shaky legs with the basketball crown. The score was 28-27.

Previously, in elimination bouts, the SPE's had whipped the ATO's. But the ATO outfit bounded back from the loser's bracket to beat the SPE's in the final fling. The SPE's conquered the Phi Kappa Tau just before meeting the ATO's for the last and fatal time.

In the fraternity-intramural league, Senior Hall and the Baptists will play-off for the championship on Thursday. Last week the Senior Hallers whipped down the Baptists 31-30. But one more game between the two is necessary to determine the winner. The Senior Hall team came out of the loser's bracket to meet the Baptists and got so far as they did. Senior Hall has lost to the Baptists before, and they had to whip the Methodists to get back into the play-offs.

Softball competition among the dormitory teams will start next Monday according to the West campus intramural officials. In the fraternities, softball will begin on next Tuesday.

Sigma Chis Initiate Ten Men Recently

Sigma Chi fraternity recently initiated 10 men to the active chapter, spokesmen for that group said yesterday.

New members are Donald Alford, Donald Bachmann, Robert Fallin, Chris Johnson, Gary Nachristedt, Ronald Stalton, Robert Temple, Lynn Wilder, Gene Williams and Jay Wolf.

Following initiation, a banquet was given in honor of the new members at a local restaurant.

Bechman, the spokesman said, was presented with the outstanding pledge award, while Gary Nahrstedt received the Dick Merriam Memorial Scholarship award.

Spring pledges number ten also. Jerry Gunderson serves as president of the group; Carlos Fraundorfer vice-president; Maurice Blasberg, secrrtary-treasurer and Niles Ray, social chairman. Other members include Jim Hoffman, Millard Mobin, Bill Dorsey, Joe Davis, Bob Bondi and Terry Ryds.

Frosh Baseball Club Meets Tyndall AFB

Florida State University's freshman baseballers return to action here this weekend, meeting the strong Tyndall AFB nine in single games Friday and Saturday. Both contests are set for the East Campus diamond starting at 3 p.m.

Frosh Coach Ken Smith, a former Seminole star, has nominated a pair of righthanders—Tom Sullivan and Ronnie Farmer—for mound duty against the Fliers.

The remainder of the FSU lineup will find Bill Bruner behind the plate, Harvey Sweeney or Louie Jansen, first base, Jim Kauffman, second base, Lee Colon, third base; Glayden Schafer, shortstop, Allen Claiborn, left field; Cy Elsan, center field and Jerry O'Leary, right field.

Rated one of the top service combines in this area, Tyndall boasts several former collegiate and semi-pro stars in its lineup. FSU's freshmen have won two of their three starts.

Golfers Win Over Wake Forest 18-9

The powerful Wake Forest linkers fell to the wall-rounded Florida State golfers, at the Tallahassee Country Club early this week, 18-9.

Former NCAA tournament medalist and National Amateur quarter - finalist, Arnold Palmer, sparked the Wake Forest team with low medal honors. Jack Veghe and Burke Berry, two freshmen standouts, came in right behind the Deacon, with 69 and 70 respectively.

This was the fifth victory out of six starts that Coach Vetter's links boys have racked up. They will go after number six, when the Florida State golfers on the home green, next Wednesday afternoon.

Here is how the FSU boys balanced their squad to overcome Palmer's powerful club.

Palmer and Watchman (Wake Forest) defeated Berry and James (FSU) 6-3; Veghe and Bob Shuman (FSU) defeated Joe Turner and Al Birmingham (Wake Forest) 7½-1½; Vernon Edgar and Mel Fleischer (FSU) defeated Sandy Burton and Sonny George (Wake Forest) 7½-1½.

Seminole Spotlight

By JIMMY JOANOS

FSU's 1954 tennis captain, Hal Schaus, in a recent interview, expressed his belief that amateur tennis "is on its way up in the country." He predicted that with the gradual weeding out of incapable tennis instructors and the public's "learning the truth" about the sport in regards to the recent criticisms made by Robert Kuark and others that tennis will soon reach an "all time high" in popularity.

Hal went at length to deny the charges written by people, "most of whom know absolutely nothing of the principles of tennis." He was expressed concern that tennis stars were being criticized as "bums with bad tempers." He said that all the top players with whom he had been acquainted were "as genuine and sincere as anybody I have ever met in my life." His acquaintances include such net aces as Poncho Gonzalez, Poncho Segura, Gardner Mallory, Vic Sexias, Art Larson, Kurt Neilson, and Sven Davidson, to mention but a few.

The tennis ace, whose pal sophomore who is called "Scarfield" (his middle name) by close friends, considers it a high honor to be captain of the FSU team. In praising the Seminole squad he says, "We have a good team and the boys work hard." In regards the tennis team in relation as being "on as high a plane as any other FSU sports squad." The net team's impressive victory over powerful Georgia Tech and other strong foes this year tend to support Hal's faith in the current team. At present they boast a won 6—lost 2 record.

The captain, who hails from Miamisfield, Ohio, encourages all students who would like to see some of the top performers in college tennis to be on hand at the FSU varsity courts tomorrow afternoon when the Seminole netters meet a Rollins College team. Rollins is led by Alfredo Miller who is presently rated as fifth in rank among all tennis participants of Mexico.

The FSU team opens its weekend schedule here this afternoon against Emory University. Let's all try to be on hand.

Two Reprimanded For Walking In Cemetery, Says The Record

(Editor's Note—This is the third in a series of articles dealing with actual court records of student government executive council 1913-1914; now known as Women's Judiciary. Fictitious names have been used to protect innocent persons involved.

By MARY ELIZABETH KING
Case Six (December 1, 1913)

Cornish Ainsley and Caroline Wayward were reported for walking in Cemetery Sunday afternoon. This is the second report of this kind about these girls.

They were summoned and stated that Mrs. Cawthorn had given them permission to go walking and they did not know it was wrong to go to the cemetery. They denied talking to anyone in cemetery.

Adjournment.

Case Seven (January 12, 1914)

Phyllis Upright and Ruby Goodfellow, two representatives of the Junior class came before the committee and presented their petition that they be allowed to dance at the junior prom this year. They were dismissed. After a limited discussion of the matter, the Advisory council asked for several weeks in which to decide.

There being no further business with the Advisory council they were excused. The executive committee remained in session to discuss some further business. In regard to ragging (Columnist's Note—dance as we common in 1914 with a strongly syncopated melody superimposed on a regular accepted accompaniment.) it was discussed and decided that the girls should be allowed to rag only on Saturday night. On every other night the ragging and such would be permitted. Also that any kind of dancing must not be engaged in during club hour.

Adjournment.

Case Eight (January 22, 1914)

Meeting called to order by president. Smoky Stuart and Flame O'Hara were summoned before the committee on charges of smoking. Flame appeared first, her testimony was as follows, "All that I could say is that I did it." "We did not know what we were doing. We smoked dancing must not be engaged in room and once in mine. We took two or three puffs at each time and then coughed. On the third time we smoked cigarettes but we didn't want to tell where we got them. No one in school have them to us. I am eighteen years old and am in the second year elementary class."

Smoky next appeared. Her testimony was the same as Flame's. She is classed as special and is fifteen years old.

Mary Wana, having reported herself to the committee for smoking with the girls was summoned. Her testimony — "About a week ago we were all together in the room and decided to smoke just a little. The second time I did not take part in the smoking because I had thought it over and decided that it was not right." She apologized to the committee.

Committee adjourned to meet again Jan. 24, 1914.

Meeting called to order. After a long discussion and deliberation a motion was made and carried. "That all privileges should be taken away from Flame O'Hara and Smoky Stuart for a period of six weeks and that Mary Wana should be sent to Mrs. Cawthorn for a lecture."

Adjournment.

Student Senators

it calls for the right to a two-thirds vote.

The original move in Senate was to call for review by a majority vote.

The compromise did not accept the suggestion of the Faculty Committee, which asked that men's and women's Senate not be forced to submit legislation at any time.

Senator James Moore and Senator Frank Shaw were the only members to oppose the compromise.

At a special meeting held last Thursday, the Senate had unanimously rejected a faculty change, which, if accepted, would have deprived the student body president of the right to veto actions of the "divisions" of Senate.

During that meeting the Senate had also rejected faculty recommendations that the President make no appointments or revoke them only after consultation with the three student vice-presidents.

The legislators had also decided to strike the list of cabinet officers from the proposed constitution, and henceforth create cabinet offices by statute.

At Thursday's meeting the Senate also rejected a faculty change which would have made it mandatory for the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs to review decisions of the University Court on constitutional questions "as such decisions may affect or interpret meaning and intent of constitution."

The Senate had also agreed that the faculty should have the power of review over penal decisions of the student courts.

Collins attention to the imminence of class elections, at which time the proposed constitution must be submitted to the Student Body for approval, vice-president Lawyer asked that consideration of the constitution be made a special order of business for Tuesday's meeting. His request was granted by the Senate.

An additional resolution introduced by John Hasford was also adopted, asking the secretary of the Senate to send letters to Florida lawmakers in Washington, asking them to pass pending legislation which would permit students in college to be claimed as dependents no matter what their income.

Also adopted was a resolution authored by Sen. James Moore, asking the elections committee to provide ballots for students in the infirmary.

Opera Guild To Produce 'Il Trovatore' April 30th

By ANN HOFFMAN

From April 29 to May 1, the students of Florida State University will become a part of the vast audience that enjoys Giuseppe Verdi's "Il Trovatore". There'll see a five opera, in all of its color and spirit, produced on campus, by Light Opera Guild.

First produced in 1853, "Il Trovatore" is still sung by ocean travelers and pedestrians in Italy today. For 100 years, the work has been as popular to Italians as sonnets from "South Pacific" are to Americans.

The plot of "Il Trovatore" has many gypsy, mysterious and the involved story becomes even more muddled because of Verdi's passion for brevity. Reduced to the essentials, it runs about like this:

Count di Luna, chief of a long line of Spaniards from Aragon, is busily at work on two pursuits. First, he is searching for his brother, who was carried off in infancy by a vengeful Gypsy woman. Secondly, he is trying to capture the heart of an unconquerive maiden without his gratitude.

The Maiden, Leonore, is reluctant because she is in love with Manrico, a stalwart Gypsy troubadour striving for the rights of his people.

Manrico, who was raised by Azucena, a Gypsy woman, is in reality the younger brother of the count. Azucena had stolen the infant with the plan of murdering him. But having a change of heart, she had raised him. Only Azucena knows the true identity of Manrico.

Count di Lunas' pursuit of Leonore has driven her to a convent for sanctuary. Manrico rescues the fair maiden after a skirmish with the Count, and the lovers take refuge in an old fortress where their bliss is indescribable.

Manrico then learns that his Gypsy mother has been captured by di Luna. He now hurries to her aid, but is captured and thrown into the same dungeon to await execution.

Leonore offers herself to the villainous Count in return for Manrico's freedom. When she is assured of her lover's freedom, she takes a slow poison. Then she goes to the prison to announce to Manrico that he is free. He misunderstands her, and Leonore dies in his arms.

Engraved at the death of Leonore the Count orders Manrico's execution. Di Luna finally learns that Manrico is his long lost brother, as he is dying.

This tragedy of misconceptions originated in a Spanish drama by de la Vega. Its social significance is that both Manrico and di Luna are fighting for the same ideal but from different points. Azucena, who has insight on both sides, acts as a shock absorber.

"Il Trovatore" is not an airy spun sugar candy opera as is "Die Fledermaus" by Richard Strauss, but is a more filling piece of plum pudding. The magnificent collection of arias and choruses makes a rich sauce for the pudding.

Exhibition Features Rubens' Paintings Displayed In Gallery

"Variations on a Theme by Rubens" is the theme of the University Art Gallery exhibit which will remain at the Gallery through Sunday.

The "theme" of the original oil painting by Rubens and his assistants is the marriage or mystic marriage of St. Catherine, a subject very popular in Renaissance and Baroque art. The Rubens original has been loaned to the exhibition by the Museum of Fine Arts of Boston, Mass.

In addition to this one Baroque masterpiece, seven panels developed by the Addison Gallery of Art are being shown. They graphically show the color, shape, line and other relationships in the original.

The Addison Gallery calls the exhibition "a basic lesson in abstraction, showing the permanence of underlying elements of form."

Peter Paul Rubens, greatest master of the seventeenth century Flemish art and from whose studio the famous religious paintings comes was the subject of last year's Art Seminar at Sarasota, an annual event co-sponsored by FSU.

The exhibition will be open to students and all other interested visitors. Gallery hours are: Sunday, 12-5 p.m.; Monday, closed; Tuesday - Friday, 12:30-5 p.m.; Saturday, 9-12 noon.

80 Deans Study Themselves At Harvard Experimental Meet

CAMBRIDGE Mass. (I.P.) — Some 80 deans from colleges all over the country recently completed six days of concentrated study at the Harvard Business School, according to a report released here. They were members of the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators which co-sponsored the seminar. The experimental program was the result of recommendations from a special NASPA study commission headed by Dr. John Stibbs, Dean of Students at Tulane University.

The commission was assigned the problem of how to train and develop deans. It had to face the fact that the job of a college dean isn't what it used to be. As always, the dean must be a sympathetic and understanding counselor and a just disciplinarian. He may also be the private ultimately responsible for student housing, by running what a small operation that dwarfs many commercial hotels. He may be concerned with a restaurant business that feeds thousands of students daily. He likely has a voice in an athletic program that involves hundreds of thousands of dollars in receipts and expenses. He may be responsible for a student union, built for upwards of a million dollars and housing a multitude of student activities. This puts him in the real estate management business. In addition, his deanship duties have expanded so that he probably has a number of assistants in charge of student employment, placement, testing, and study counseling.

All this means the dean must be a good administrator. He must, like the business executive, have the ability to recognize and analyze problems, determine issues, seek pertinent facts, use imagination in developing alternative courses of action, and make decisions under pressure. He must understand the importance of the human factor and draw upon the councilive of others who possess specialized skills and knowledge.

Since 1908 the Harvard Business School has been teaching the arts and skills of administration to young men planning to enter business and, in recent years, to seasoned executives as well. The core of this instruction has been the case system in which the student is placed in an actual decision-making situation.

One of the objectives of the seminar was to determine if the case method can also be used to help college deans develop administrative ability. The deans analyzed and discussed more than a dozen cases. Some of them were taken from the more than 20,000 cases on file at the Business School. Most of them were contributed by the deans themselves, based on actual experiences.

Comedy On Tap As Last Speech Department Play

'The Insect Comedy' Scheduled For April 30, May 1, 3 and 4

"The Insect Comedy," Florida State University's final Speech Department play this year, will be staged in Conradi Theater April 30, May 1, 3 and 4 speech department spokesmen said yesterday.

Directed by Dr. Lynn Orr of the department, and assisted by Edna Hollingsworth, the production follows a modern trend in satiric symbolism, it was noted.

Dr. Orr stated three reasons for his choice of production, said they want a variety of different types of productions not only for the general public to see different styles but as training for students to work in different in staging and production. "We must think a year ahead before our choice is presented at the Art Seminar in Sarasota," he said. Art Seminar's theme this year is modern and "The Insect Comedy" follows the modern trend. "I like to do a realistic piece one show that's a little out of the usual to broaden the student experience."

The author of "The Insects Comedy" has also written "R.U.R. Robert's Universal Robots" which was presented in the latter part of March by A and M University.

The same set usually is used throughout the show: a small hill with a light blue backdrop representing sky.

Cast includes Franklin Adams as a drunken vagrant, Theodore Hall as a professor catching butterflies, an set manager, E. mad scientist; Robert Straine, the butterfly and the engineer-dictator and Eli Thomas, Victor the butterfly, a beetle and an ant; Rosemary Hollander as a butterfly and ant.

Dorothy Womble as a butterfly and maid; Kelly Cobbledick as a butterfly, larvae fly, and moth; Betty Ann Rae as Iris the butterfly and a maid; Sarah Smith as Cirtilla the beetle, fly and a servant girl.

Dixie Wade as Otto the butterfly and snail and an ant; June Morris as cirtilla moth; Gerry McClelland as a beetle, scientist and woodcutter; Marion Mayo, who has been the blind antlion; Kay, ant reporter and as a fly; Jean Mc Cutchen as a fly and yellow ant commander; Joan Wisenhaver as war worker ant and cricket.

John Paul Davis as telegrapher ant; Marjorie Thomas as war worker ant; Ann Grayson as worker ant, and Gerry Frank as worker ant and woman.

ANOTHER QUEEN

Dickie Goddard, member of Delta Delta Delta sorority has been chosen "Theta Chi Queen of Curl" and will reign at the fraternity's annual week-end April 23 to 24, fraternity spokesmen said yesterday.

The "Conclave," as Theta Chi's 6th theta annual celebration is attended by fraternity brothers and alumni from all over Florida.

BRAINS, YET!

Phi Delta Theta members here received word last week that the Florida State University chapter has been awarded the Scholarship Improvement Trophy for superior scholarship.

The award, they said, is made each year by the national office to the chapter showing the most improvement in the academic year.

CANDIDATE TALKS

Ben Cattaway, candidate for State Senator in the upcoming Gubernatorial elections will speak at Florida State University tomorrow night at 7:30 in the University Senate Room.

All are invited to hear the candidate, a spokesman said.

CLUB PUSHES CANDIDATE

The Florida State University Ocham Fan Governor Club will meet tonight in Room 606 Longhurst at 8 p.m. Members will plan for the candidate's visit on campus slated for April 22.

Nancy Bass, secretary of the local club said everyone supporting Mr. Ocham in the forthcoming primaries is urged to attend the April 21 rally. She said there are many formalities yet to be formed but the students move to aid the candidate for governor.

Educator Lists Needs For Better Democracy

By ROBERT REDFIELD
Chairman of the Department of Anthropology, University of Chicago.—World Publishers

The necessity to take special measures in time of special peril is against enemies who are themselves something unpleasantly special must, of course be recognised. On the other hand, there seem to be five respects in which our efforts today to make ourselves strong within, so beyond these necessities and turn the flow we strike for our own defense inward against our own weaknesses.

(1) We have deceived ourselves into thinking that we have acted effectively when much of our action has been in fact ineffective. We have confronted the nation with a weight of security resolutions that do not make us secure. Some Americans, the improperly challenged and the improperly suspect, find their productive and honorable activities brought to a halt for months while they are questioned and questioned.

(2) We have endeavored to make such Americans assent submit themselves visible deeply cherished principles of loyalty and citizenship between an American and his government. This is government by men and not by laws.

By these means the real enemies are rarely caught. One does not detect espionage through a questionnaire or find treason in a textbook. The oath demanded of a faithful public servant is an affront to him; he will not serve the better for submitting to its compulsion.

The real injury done to ourselves by these futile measures arises from the self-deception which they accomplish. We convince ourselves that something is done by these acts we have made ourselves safe.

(3) We have allowed bad men and bad acts to pass, standing them a measure of public approval, and so have weakened the principles of good conduct which have long strengthened and guided us. Bad errors are not sanctified by good ends. We can only weaken ourselves when we are willing before and with-Communism that is an obvious cover for demagogues.

We make a related mistake when we over-value the divine right of majority of odd-time recanted Communists. We forget that their present anti-Communism does not relieve us of the duty of judging how clearly and justly they have seen it.

This same confusion of which I now speak is most obviously shown in the acceptance of guilt by association. We have allowed a reasonable principle for punishing criminals to grow into another sort of self-deceiving magic.

(4) We have allowed ourselves to become involved in fighting the battle that is now instead of the one that is before us. Men who ten years ago advocated measures which were not unreasonable then are now attacked and silenced by these acts we have made ourselves safe.

All this turns our attention away from the place where it belongs to the present situation, the current problem. We have allowed ourselves to be caught up in a wasteful controversy as to whether what parliscian men did or said ten years ago with regard to China would or would not have affected the decision in China. We also weave our enemies by fighting Communism in the old-time recanted Communists. We forget that their present anti-Communism does not relieve us of the duty of judging how clearly and justly they have seen it.

This same confusion of which I now speak is most obviously shown in the acceptance of guilt by association. We have allowed a reasonable principle for punishing criminals to grow into another sort of self-deceiving magic.

(4) We have allowed ourselves to become involved in fighting the battle that is now instead of the one that is before us. Men who ten years ago advocated measures which were not unreasonable then are now attacked and silenced by these acts we have made ourselves safe.

All this turns our attention away from the place where it belongs to the present situation, the current problem. We have allowed ourselves to be caught up in a wasteful controversy as to whether what parliscian men did or said ten years ago with regard to China would or would not have affected the decision in China. We also weave our enemies by fighting Communism in the old-time recanted Communists. We forget that their present anti-Communism does not relieve us of the duty of judging how clearly and justly they have seen it.

This same confusion of which I now speak is most obviously

Joanos Selected Party Chairman: Ticket Complete

The Student Party ticket for the April 27 Class Elections was filled last Thursday night as the controversy over a new party chairman ended in a compromise.

Compromise nominee Jimmy Joanos was elected to settle the deadlock in the party chairmanship as the last order of business of the Student Party's April session.

Party Chairman-elect Joanos declared that he considered it a "high honor" to be elected. "My purpose will be to carry out the planks of the party platform get carried out, and I expect the candidates to remember that they should support that platform."

Joanos stated that he felt that the party was harassing in the party, and that is how he thinks it is now. "I welcome any suggestions from anyone that feels the party should be run. I want to hear what everybody has to say. I want to fix functions."

Joanos emerged as winner in the party chairmanship deadlock after much deliberation among the delegates. Events started as the day started out with Bebe Busee nominated Dave Kennedy for the office, saying that his married life and other offices held by Kennedy would not interfere with his functions in the office. He declared that Kennedy, a member of the Flambeau staff team, would "Give up the sport, much as he loves it. . . We need a man who can work closely with elected officials."

Wade Cannon, who had spoken for Charlie Miner the previous night, was not present. Miner nominated himself. He stated that he believed himself qualified for the office since he had been one of the few people

State Delegates Convene Tonight In Science Hall

Tomorrow's Meet Set For Longmire Auditorium At 7:30

State Party delegates convene tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Science Lecture Hall in the first of a two-day nominating convention for the forthcoming class elections, Jack Houser, State Party chairman, announced.

The second lap will take place tomorrow night in Longmire Auditorium. Houser added. Realization will begin fifteen minutes earlier each night, with women delegates being granted late permission.

Seeking to nominate candidates for Judiciary Council, Honor Court, class officers and a party chairman, Houser mentioned that the State Party would not attempt to fill a slate for the sake of opposing the Student Party candidates.

"We'll nominate as many offices as we can," he said.

A check with other party officials revealed that there were "quite a few" delegates seeking the State nomination. Most of these names, as listed in recent rosenses led by party members, it was noted.

Tonight's activities, according to Houser, will include election of party chairman, secretary, correspondent, treasurer, historian, and executive council for next year. "If time permits," he pointed out.

It was also learned by The Flambeau last night that an attempt will be made tonight to amend the constitution regarding the assistant. The constitution presently calls for 30 day student voting delegation.

"After seeing the trouble the Student Party experienced with 30 day students, (they have 15 voting delegates) we felt it was necessary to find some kind of a check on them (the day student delegations)." Houser was referring to the party voting in several races in last week's Student election.

Tentatively, the time limitations on nominating speeches run 3 minutes for party officials, Senate, Judiciary, and Honor Court tonight; Tomorrow night 2 minutes for class presidents, two for vice-presidents and one minute for all other offices.

In a previous news story in THE FLORIDA FLAMBEAU reported close races and expressed optimism for the State Party. Houser declined to be announced, "since we believe the time is better to have a race and also the two-party system is here to stay."

It is remember the State Party was aware of any students seeking their nomination who were defeated in the Student council's steering committee member Orwell Hill letter it stated that "names are plentiful, but we have not been contacted definitely except by two persons."

Present party officials include Houser, chairman; Bob Berte, treasurer; Jaylene Harrison, secretary; and Virginia Hoover, corresponding secretary.

Over 100 delegates are expected to attend the two-minute approximately 60 offices.

Murphy Will Speak At FSPA Convention Here On April 23

Dr. Joseph M. Murphy, founder and director of the Columbia Scholastic Press Association, will give the dinner address at the Florida Scholastic Press Association's convention here this month.

The meet is slated for 6 p.m. Friday, April 23.

Since 1925 Dr. Murphy has directed the association which maintains contact with 13,000 schools. It publishes the School Press Review, critique service for student publications, and other educational activities related to student journalism.

Dr. Murphy began his career as a high school history teacher. For many years he was director of public relations at the Catholic University of America. He is a veteran's advisor at Columbia University.

A lieutenant colonel in the army air corps, Dr. Murphy was one of the men who helped to activate the college training program of the air force. From 1943 to 1944 he was director of the training-academic program at Maxwell Field.

While overseas Dr. Murphy was in the headquarters of the Allied Control Commission in Italy and then education-religious affairs officer in Austria. In both places he assisted in the rehabilitation of educational programs.

Dr. Murphy will speak at one session of the high school journalism conference. He also will meet with Columbia alumni while in Tallahassee and other Florida communities.

Students planning to do graduate work are invited to a symposium for admission to the Graduate School in the fall of 1954 for graduate work in the summer ends.

Other questions may be obtained from the Registrar, either by writing or telephoning extension 6421.

CONTEST CLOSES

The Student Drama Literary Contest Deadline is Wednesday at 5 p.m. All theses must be turned into the Alumni Building.

Graduation's Plans, Dates Announced

Plans for Commencement slated for May 29 at 4 p.m. in Doak S. Campbell Stadium, have been announced by the registrar's office.

The announcement that permission to receive a degree in absentia must be granted by the graduate committee before the filing and submitted to the office of the Registrar by May 15th.

Degrees will be conferred with the Business Office by May 15th, it was said. The diplomas fees must be paid to Student Accounts by May 1 and a fee of $10 will be charged for all certificates.

Invitations, it was noted, if purchased, must be ordered by April 15, and academic regalia (caps, gowns, tassels and hoods) arranged for with the Bookstore by April 15.

Women candidates for baccalaureate degrees will wear white dresses with long white veils and black shoes, while men receiving Bandolog Field, dress in dark trousers, white shirts and black shoes. Coats are optional. Graduate students will wear colored tassels indicating the candidate's school or college of study.

Antioch Withdrawals Examined Low Grades Principal Reason

YELLOW SPRINGS, O. (I.P.) —Recent studies based on the year 1952-53 withdrawals at Antioch have been presented to the Student Personnel Committee of the college by Dr. Arthur Coon, director of inter-college statistics. According to Dr. Coon, statistics do not make clear who with his staff made the statistics on why students leave or withdraw from college. Of the 187 students withdrawing last year (excluding graduates) 34 were asked to leave and 153 withdrew voluntarily.

Low academic performance was the predominant reason for withdrawal of 16 of the 34 in withdraw. It was observed that lack of academic motivation rather than lack of scholastic ability caused the difficulty in these cases as with the others. Of the 17 men and 2 women voluntarily withdraw, two were first year, 12 second year, nine third year, and one fourth year.

There were 13 different reasons cited for the 153 students withdrawing from college on their own last year. Finances headed the list, with 36 withdrawals; jobs caused 16 to withdraw; 29 withdrew because of marriage; military service claimed 13; health, 14; family reasons caused 7 to leave; personal reasons 11; transfer, 14; dissatisfaction with college, 6; general dissatisfaction, 11; mutual dissatisfaction, 11; study in Europe, 5; special reasons, 3; and no reason, 3.

The withdrawal turnover in the student body is higher than the college would like. Dawson described the Student Personnel Office plans to consult with each student considering withdrawal to help him see if they may improve his progress at Antioch or facilitate his transition to another college or a job. Dawson also pointed out here that there was a 21% shrinkage of the student body due to withdrawals in 1952-53, as compared to 31% in 1951-52 and 29% in 1950-51. Figures from other colleges are not directly comparable, but which do seem to indicate that as high a proportion of entering students as do many other colleges.

Easter Season Brings To Light Both World, Domestic Problems

By JOYCE POTTER

As the Easter season draws near, students are confronted with many problems. Probably foremost in their minds is what to wear on Sunday morning? The girls are wondering if it is too early to wear spring suits or if suit would be better. Most of the boys are getting a new outfit to wear to Church.

With these problems of how to dress for Easter Sunday going on most, just which is should be brought to the minds of some of the moots, the real and first meaning of Easter is pushed into the background.

Easter in the Christian Church commemorates the crucifixion and death is a life of hope and peace and joy, according to Dr. (Rev.) Thomas Hamilton Personnel Office plans to consult with each student considering withdrawal to help him see if they may improve his progress at Antioch or facilitate his transition to another college or a job. Dawson also pointed out here that there was a 21% shrinkage of the student body due to withdrawals in 1952-53, as compared to 31% in 1951-52 and 29% in 1950-51. Figures from other colleges are not directly comparable, but which do seem to indicate that as high a proportion of entering students as do many other colleges.

In the Christian Church Easter commemorates the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ. On Friday before Easter Sunday Christ was crucified and died. He was then body wrapped in linen, was placed in a tomb. A large stone served as his tomb and a stone was rolled across the entrance. Mary Magdalene upon coming to the Sepulchre early Sunday morning found the stone rolled away and the body of Christ gone.

Fearing that his body had been stolen, she began to weep. Two angels spoke to her and asked her why she weeped. Jesus then appeared and spoke to her saying that he had arisen and was ascending unto his father. Mary then went and told the disciples that she had seen Jesus so-peared before them.

Dr. Neel said that the love of God and Christ is universal and for sound like a very simple rule for follow but when it comes to the meaning of neighbor to all people, it's difficult. But, he added, "that is for only how of the world as far as peace and brotherhood is concerned.

"We are now faced with the threat of the H-bomb and a host of big bombs throughout the world," commented Dr. Neel. "Christ's message and love is the only hope for a peaceful world."

He explained that the first Easter Sunday was a day of victory over sin.

The Holy Catholic Church Easter is celebrated for the same reason as in the Protestant churches. Both of these services are similar. Although the Jewish people do not celebrate Easter they do celebrate their Passover at the same time.

With the threat of war pending in Indo China, this Easter season should be a solemn one filled with prayers for a peaceful settlement. The Korean War is over so far, but this season forces the suffering and death that occurred on the foreign battle fronts.

Nowlin Urges Student Help At Convention

Student Traffic Court Chairman Finley Nowlin yesterday requested student cooperation in traffic problems during the two day convention of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs to be held here. The convention begins the day after Easter and continues through Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

"The Student Traffic Court does not feel it necessary to reserve parking spaces," he commented, "but I do want to ask and request that the whole student body take it on their own to be businesslike and fair in this big occasion. To the student motorists I know this will mean a big sacrifice.

"It would help for those in West Hall who can conveniently ride the bus to do so, and for all others who can walk or ride the bus to do so rather than add to the crowded traffic conditions on campus during the three days of the convention that classes are in session."

Nowlin requested that students not park on the Music Building parking lot, Cawthon parking lot, the street running in front of the Music Building and the Amber House, and the street running in front of the Education and Women's Journal.

Nowlin added that attempts are being made to allow parking on the grass near Jennie Murphree Hall.

"We are indeed very fortunate in having this annual convention with about 600 of the finest community leaders from all over the state to our campus. During this convention there will be a great need for space to park their cars on campus, since many of them will bring cars," Nowlin stated.

He also asked that students be courteous and helpful to help make the visitors find their way on campus. "Let's go all out with our hospitality to make this convention enjoyable for all of our guests to stay during the four important days," he said.

Two Restricted For 'Ragging'; Men Usually Cause Of It All

(Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a series of articles dealing with the problem of student government courses which have been used to protect the rights of the individual.)

By MARY ELIZABETH KING

Case Nine (January 28, 1954)

Student Traffic Court Prosecution were reported for "ragging" on the Florida State University campus.

Iniquita Smith was brought up for flirting with boys on campus. Miss Smith denied the charge but talk to across Justine Allain and Jimmy Rowe in the Union building with me I do not know whether they talked to boys or not. I did not notice the boys before the girls on the committee came in." Miss Smith concluded that I am not my brother's keeper."

Justine Allain appeared next. Her testimony: "We are in the room spoke to the boys I heard and that she did not know that they were going to sit by them the committee would call by the way of testifying that she was not telling the truth.

Jimmy Rowe appeared next. Her testimony: "I do not remember positively whether anyone spoke to the boys or not. I do think that Justine and Iniquita had a few words to them."

They were three brought in together and made no changes in their stories. Chairman Finley Justine Allain confessed that she and Iniquita had spoken to the boys.

They were dismissed. The committee decided that Justine Allain and Iniquita Smith be charged for talking to boys on campus. That Iniquita Smith be censured four weeks for talking to boys and for lying on the truth hinders the committee.

(Case Eleven, March 7, 1954)

Iniquita Smith and Libby Mauch were reported accepting tickets from and sitting with a boy in the Student Center bar at the show last night.

Accepts appeared first—She said positively that she did not accept the ticket from the boys. And that she did not know that anything to them. Iniquita was at the window when I came in. I did not see her positively did see them speak to anybody."

Libby Mauch appeared next. Her testimony: "I do not remember

Students Found Politics Club Here; 4-Fold Purposes Listed

A group of Florida State University students recently organized a politics club, it was announced by president-elect Norman Smith yesterday.

Existing primarily for a four-fold purpose, according to Smith, the organization intends to promote "More interest in government and politics". "Aid in a better understanding of politics and its role in government and everyday life". Try speaker panels, forums, lectures and discussions on politics" and "To encourage active participation in politics on campus.

Club membership is not restricted to majors in government and politics. He added all students, undergraduate and graduate, with a major in one of the social sciences are eligible for membership.

Smith said membership will be established by attendance at any two consecutive meetings slated to be held monthly. He said students not having the major requirement, but who are interested in government and politics may petition the organization for membership after they have attended two monthly meetings.

Jean Tice was named temporary vice-president of the new group, serving in the absence of vice-president-elect Anne Kelley who is interning. Beverly Duppenau is Dolly Scribe and committee chairmen include Alan Sunders, program; Richard Wagner, membership; Al Arnold Meichler, publicity.

Smith said, in view of the upcoming gubernatorial race, with "Its many contradictions, charges and countercharges, the first topic of discussion at the Thursday, April 29 meeting slated for 7 p.m. in the Union Auditorium, will be a panel discussion with a student representative for each candidate and State Democratic Party official asked from the panel.

Smith added all students at FSU are invited to the panel discussion and the Thursday program.

FRIENDS, ROMANS, COUSTY PARTIES

Phi Delta Theta, social fraternity here wound up a round of affairs, celebrating their annual weekend. Beginning with a Roman Party Friday night in the Union House, Wildwood Drive, Friday evening. Phi Delts moved into a formal dance Saturday night at the Davis Hotel.

Sunday, the fraternity climaxed the weekend with a coast party.

Test Bureau Names April 28 As Date For Sophomore Test

Wednesday, April 28 has been selected as the date a set of Area Tests in General Education will be given to sophomore students, the office of the Test Service Bureau announced.

Spokesmen said the tests will cover the three areas of Humanities, Social Studies and Natural Science. Since they cover essentially the same areas as the General Culture Test, the Juniors the test services bureau noted, sophomores who take the test in the Spring will satisfy the General Culture requirement at the same time. Students who take the test the 30th will be excused from the regular class period. The place and time of examination will be announced be each sophomore.

FSU, according to the Test Service Bureau, is the first college on as one of a group of representative institutions to cooperate with the American Council on Education and the Educational Testing Service in establishing norms for the new Area Tests. The results, spokesmen added, will enable the student and his counselor to point a course of study which will give a proper orientation to the three principal areas of human culture.

Americans Not Facing Problem Of U. S. Intervention In Indochina

Editor's note: It has been impossible to get the staff of this newspaper to agree on any one policy about Indochina. Some members are in favor of intervention now. Some are opposed to intervention at all. Thus particular editorial represents an intermediate point of view.

It is rather disheartening to note the apparent lack of concern of the American people over the possibilities of United States intervention in the eight-year-old, Communist inspired, Vietminh-French conflict in Indochina.

Though several of our legislative leaders have heartily voiced their disapproval of United States military forces intervening in southeast Asia, only a few hundred additional Air Force technicians are being rushed from Japan to reinforce the mechanics who were sent to Indochina several months ago.

President Eisenhower authorized the reinforcements on the advice of Admiral Radford, head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, American combat aid consisting of naval who has favored sending the U. S. air, and air units. This the President has not approved of doing as yet.

Is Indochina to become another Korea? The answer to that question must necessarily be 'yes' if we persist in sending aid to the French in the form of American troops. A precedent was set in Korea, but that precedent was in the form of an intervention, which we are not even bothering to use as an excuse in Indochina. The mistake of the United States and the UN in Korea was not so much the mistake of intervention but rather an error of omission. To date we have accomplished little materially in Korea except the loss of American lives. It was not that we couldn't have won the Korean war. It was that we didn't want to. It is inconceivable that the combined military strength of the United Nations couldn't bring the Korean war to a successful close —if it had wanted to. That mistake will live a long time in the minds of many who served during the Korean war, but what is even more important is the fact that history may repeat itself in Southeast Asia.

In this case we cannot even offer the excuse of saying we are intervening in behalf of freedom. The French have only promised the native population of Indochina a "compromise" freedom within the framework of the French empire.

In this case just what are our reasons for intervention? Could it be that the American people have adopted the attitude of, "Well, it's not much of a war, but it's better than no war at all"? Do the American people think it's necessary to stem a a recession before it hit? We hardly think so. Perhaps it is just another case of the jitters, another case of the theory of stemming the Red Tide before it reaches home to us. Why our nation should feel this way is ironic, inasmuch that we possess the most powerful military weapon on earth. But we persist in the idea of diving into the water headfirst just to see how cold it is. Somehow it doesn't quite make sense if in saving Southeast Asia from the Communists we fall prey to an even greater danger; the fear within ourselves.

Cooperation Will Ease Crowding

About two weeks ago we editorialized that there were too many activities on campus. We particularly complained that too many meetings were being called in from the outside.

We want to make it clear now, if we did not then, that we were thinking about next year's schedule. We pointed to several recent conferences merley as examples. We did not intend to change anything that was already set up.

Above all we did not want to make things unpleasant now. So while we still advocate clearing the scheduling for next year, we want to make a point now of asking for cooperation for the rest of the year.

Immediately after the Easter holidays, students will return to find approximately 1,000 visitors on campus. These will be the women of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs. This FWC is an important and influential organization. The opinions its members carry away from FSU can be of utmost importance to the university's future.

Handling 1,000 extra women on campus will be difficult, to say the least. Eating places will be crowded, despite the opening of the old east dining hall. Parking will be even more difficult. The administration is requesting all students, staff and faculty to park out of the main areas on the Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday after Easter.

The cooperation and assistance of the student body can greatly ease the crowded situation.

ETCETERA ETCHINGS

All Hail PRO (With a Grain of Salt)

By DAVID DREIS

BITS OF BARBS

Publicity is a wonderful thing, and when it's handled by a public relations man there's no topping it. In Hollywood, a PRO man is really a celebrity. Elsewhere he's a pest. This column will tell why.

If you believe all you read in the papers you got a big kick out of knowing that Linner Adoe Lane takes a daily morning bath in coffee. Of course he has! Uncle Xavier Cugat's lovely wife is now under contract to Universal-International has "nothing" to do with it. Cugat's right there explaining. She usually gets up at noon, and breakfast schedule by doing this." At today's coffee prices, Cugat's going to be thrown a little off schedule as well.

Zsa Zsa Gabor's publicity man really works overtime, and the latest is that Zsa Zsa wants to change her name legally—of all the bad publicity with Perfire. As somebody said while Hitler: bad publicity is better than none at all.

Zsau Pitts because of her fascist ideas lost a lot of pals, but has finally got a part in a forthcoming picture. She no doubt got herself a PRO man because a story that Zsau was objecting to being considered a Gabor soon came out. I can't understand it . . . she doesn't even look like a Gabor—Zsau has black hair.

Corrine Calvert's publicity man made certain that her sleeping pill overdose got headlines. The cops called it "attempted suicide" but Corrine explained, "Ext was all an accident." Corrine met an reporters with negligee and all. Maybe it was an accident, but who called the cops?

Publicity made Marilyn Monroe, and her publicity man got more clients including Terry Moore, who has been getting some play as well. The shrewd comebacks used by these gals is really marvelous. When they asked Marilyn what she had on when she went to bed, Marilyn answered, "Perfume." Terry retorted, "The radio."

PRO, which it's about time I defined as Public Relations Office, is quite helpful in promoting newcomers and newsmakers. It is quite useful, too, when you read all these things in the periodicals, take along a grain of salt and take it with it.

ADDED ATTRACTIONS

Marion Brando returned to Fox after walking off the 'Egyptian' and heading for a psychiatrist. Fox let him retire and dropped a two million dollar suit in exchange—and make Desiree' playing Napoleon. This pola a delay an 'On the Waterfront' already considered Oscar potential with Brando being co-starred with Lee J. Cobb and Karl Mandjen. Director is Elia Kazan to be released by Columbia . . . Spencer Named Desiree' and 'Viva. Zapata!' . . . made by Columbia.

Glenn Ford has signed for another seven years with Columbia . . . he had his filing with index for fifteen years . . . he is back with the studio which made him a star . . . a happy guy.

. . . June Haver and Fred MacMurray a two some not new-some. . . . Fred's wife, a cripple since marriage 14 years back, died last year.

. . . June returned from the convent where she was going to "forget" about the death of her fiance . . . Same temperament no? . . . Ali Kahn to marry Gene Tierney in six months . . . he's living just below California border waiting for time to fly . . . Bing Crosby says he'll re-marry in five years. Bing and Dixie would never divorce although they had all love lost. Her death freed him although Bing wished it didn't end that way.

FINIS

The State Theater has been showing pretty fair doubles . . . keep it up. . . . Terry Como will play Russ Columbo in the film-bio on that, the singer of the thirties. The title Prisoner of Love which Josh Logan owns. . . . The inimitable Phil Springer has written a song. No, not the politico on this campus, but his cousin . . . both were named after the same person, Smith-wesson. By the way it's Lovin' Spree sung by Eartha Kitt.

Dear Mama Seminole

Dear Mama Seminole:

Since Georgie love to new tepee, ne findum many braves and maidens try to find me. Me think many find me that isn't me—hig insult. One thing Georgie know. A mouse is down-stairs.

When Georgie stay at seminole tepee near campus, he met many seminole students in heap unpleasant fix. Georgie have duty that call for catch and punish violators. Sunday, Georgie see more students in same fix. Students, unlike other students and yet no different. Why? Mama maybe tell Georgie why student who need no wampum, secretly take wampum from other hraves. Why?

Thrill? Ego? Environment? Mama need understand, problem is that of all student and all mamas back on reservations. Our own personal liberties are result of our respect for other persons property. Somewhere braves fail to learn. Chief yellow-fingers of Seminole Dining tepee will not escape Friday's deed.

Library Boasts Collection Of Early Florida Maps

By FLORENCE PAYNE

If you are interested in early American history, you will be interested in the special collections of books and maps the library has to offer.

To describe and do justice to all the maps and books in the library's special collections would be impossible. The collections are rich in the history of Florida and should be of interest to everyone.

Included in these collections are the Margaret Cotton Collection of Early Americana, the collection of Floridiana, and the large collection of maps found in the main room.

Tracy W. McGregor, of Washington, D. C., in 1934, chose this university (then a college) as one of the sixteen United States colleges in benefit by his cooperative fund plan. Both the college selected, and Mr. McGregor, furnished sums of money to be used by the college library for the purchase of rare books on early American history. This collection is known as the McGregor collection.

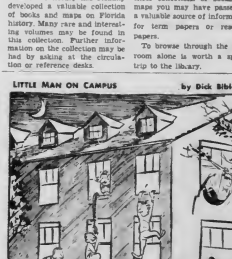
Through the untiring efforts of Miss Louise Richardson and others, the library has steadily developed a valuable collection of books and maps on Florida history. Many rare and interesting volumes may be found in this collection. Further information on the collection may be had by asking at the circulation or reference desks.

The famous Crown Collection of Photographs of American maps may be found in the map room. In this collection there are over a thousand maps covering the period in American history during the Revolutionary War. The original maps are in the British museum but the library has reproductions of these maps available for use.



The maps room is proud of its collection of early Florida maps. Recently some of these maps were displayed in the third floor corridor and attracted many visitors interested in the history of Florida. Miss Estelle Arthur, Maps Librarian, has a map to fill almost every need. In her collection of maps you will find general maps, individual state maps and relief maps. Most of these maps may circulate. The rare and more valuable maps may not circulate but are available for use in the maps room.

Among the interesting books to be found in the maps room are the World Geo-Graphic Atlas, the Atlas of France, and the World-Atlas of Epidemic Diseases.

If you have not seen or used these collections of books and maps you may have passed up a valuable source of information for term papers or research papers.

To browse through the maps room alone is worth a special trip to the library.

U. S. Should Aid Asian Revolutions

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Many Americans, conservative and liberal alike, are opposed to the United States intervention in Indo-China, both for the most part their reasoning is cloudy, to use the kindest term.

There are many Americans who simply maintain an ostrich-like attitude no matter what the situation. They prefer to ignore the existence of other Asians in the world. They don't see why we should help the French, any more than we should help anyone else.

This kind of attitude adds nothing to our understanding of the problem, however. It ignores the events of the present century.

Most Americans like to attribute such trouble as that in Indo-China to Communists and let it go at that. In doing so, they overlook the fact that there must be roots for the Communist influence in Asia.

Communism is a way of running a government. It is a device for certain kinds of problems. We dislike Communism, not for reasons we are not fully aware of. I personally am opposed to Communism for myself and my country because many civil liberties would be submerged. In effect, Communism would be a repression for the United States.

But some countries cannot pick and choose as we can. They are not so rich and powerful as we. They are not pleased with what they have, and there are very few ways they can change.

Let us consider east Asia for a moment. For two or three centuries this region has been under the domination of Europeans. Asians have been mistreated because they were so unadvanced technologically and politically.

Now things are different. Asians have a taste of Western society. They are tired of being subject peoples. The move toward Asian control of Asian affairs is unmistakable and irrevocable. The question is now one of method.

At present there are two choices before the Asians. They can continue under the yoke of European powers who have the support of the United States, or they have national governments friendly to Soviet Russia. This is unfortunate. There should be a third choice. America should be a revolutionary government which has the friendship of the United States.

The lesson of Yugoslavia shows that a nation with a government called "Communist" can get along with us if we are not opposed to the Yugoslav government does, but we can see that a strong-minded authority is needed there We see that the people are benefiting materially from Tito's regime.

Thus it seems best to us unreasonable for us to help the Asians in their struggle for self-government. Certainly America, the nation that once waged a revolution to throw off our yoke of repressive domination, should not now be aligned with the discredited fish-worm powers.

Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas is perhaps the only highly placed American to explain the stimulus as forthrightly. In his recent book, NORTH FROM MALAYA, he even advocated aid to Communist governments. Unfortunately Justice Douglas' voice is weak in the present hue and cry to inject everything with a Red tinge.

Voices of reason are not often very loud.

Students Confused On Party Tactics

By GENE LAWLER

FSU students were treated to real drama for three nights last week. Despite an occasionally blustish plot and an excess of leading players, it was still the equal of any major speech production.

Aside from the dramatic, there are some other angles . . .

A TEAR FOR LIBERAL EDUCATION:

Several of the participants at the Convention were political science students, yet their knowledge seems to have taught them nothing. Take the prevailing attitude toward the function of the party chairman. One of these students, Bob Chairman declared that the chairman must "censure" his own party's President if he didn't abide by the platform. Yet a glance at a textbook would reveal that the chairman of a national party is distinctly subordinate to the party's candidate for President, that he is limited to party affairs, organization and public relations. If there is any "censuring" to be done, it is done by the opposing party.

A BOOST FOR VOTE-SWAPPING

FSU students have a pretty high standard of political ethics. They don't even like the slightest slander, and they rebel against such seemingly unseemly things as "vote-swapping." This ethical standard would be commendable if it were not so misdirected.

A group of women leaders I heard talking the other day seemed to think that swapping votes was the same as selling them for money. At the risk of being hurled under an avalanche of criticism, I ask: just what is the difference between Jones agreeing to vote for Smith if Smith will agree to vote for Jones?

Attitudes On Exams Mirror Future

By NICK REEVES

Instructors grappled at their briefcases. The students leered at their texts. Not a word was spoken. A cough for the unusual 'hale' day had come. The day of final retribution. The day of examination.

To some, hale' day means a mere trot over to the room where the examination is held, but to others it means a cold sweat, a smile and a trek to another room where another blue composition book is present. With these students, the latter days are prominent.

Exams often, though, examination day is treated in a much different manner. The sweat which runs from the student's fingertips seems to be missing. The smile on his face is confused with answers of all sorts, some for other courses. The composition book, though distributed, he takes quick successive glances to grasp any further knowledge which might have been bypassed. As the paper reaches the student spot, a slight of fear posses over the student. The mark will set in boldly. As the last mark is made in the blank designated, a feeling of sorrow comes over him. Relief. Whether he has successfully fulfilled the course requirements, he wonders.

Of course, the thoughts, the feelings of many students who feel they have failed a 'quiz' runs in the same general direction. First the theory, then the rationalization. The belief that the educational process is used predominantly in our society is confused, misled, wrong. The class should be a preparation for future living. Who is competent to judge a student's investment, a student's mind? Is it this professor? God?

The rationalization is immaculate. The comment made is "I'll get it next time. The future success is also a clause considered. At least, he says, I have common-sense. Without that, what else can one have. Also, the student goes on his way feeling better, much better. He has given some course means nothing to the future. This course indicates no particular. In the future he'll show them. Revenge will be sweet.

And time comes again and again until the student finds that he has completed his college, but a student of life. His text-books are his progress reports. His examinations grades. He can mask mistakes in this world, but there is no second chance. His attitudes are the same. Identical in every way. His lack of perseverance, his fanatic hate. There is always future, but tomorrow's future is yesterday's past. He cannot go back.

And so these thoughts plummet through a student's mind he thinks about it all and realizes that a simple mark in the right slot will not only hold the answer for his course, but also for the future.

Letters to the Editor

Choral Union

Dear Mr. Galphin:

The Friday, April 6 edition of The Florida Flambeau contained an article on a beer party. All but "11 Trovatore," an opera to be presented on April 29, 30 and May 1. However, it is a fine singing produced by the Light Opera Guild, but by the Choral Union of the School of Music with orchestral accompaniment by the University Symphony. The production will be directed by Mr. Herman Gunter. Jr. assisted by Miss Betty Jane Grimm as stage director.

The Light Opera Guild is sponsored by Sigma Alpha Iota music fraternity and produces an opera in the fall semester of each school year.

The Choral Union is a choral group of 125 students and townspeople. It is a music course and college credit may be earned.

The article was well written and we appreciate the publicity but please——the Choral Union is producing "Il Trovatore."

Sincerely,
Loeene K. Williams (Mrs.)
Business Manager—Choral Union

Orgel Draws Study On Homing Pigeons

Results of a recent experiment entitled "A Test of the Magnetic Theory of Homing Pigeons," conducted by graduate student Arthur Orgel and a former Florida State University graduate, James Smith, show that pigeons are not sensitive to a magnetic field.

Orgel, whose field is Psychology, and Smith, now in the Armed forces, said that their results did not substantiate the theory that birds are able to find their way back home by sensing the magnetic fields of the earth.

Orgen and Smith used the conditioning technique in which the pigeons were subjected to a man-made magnetic field to determine if their reactions would be similar to those reputedly caused by the magnetic lines of the earth's surface. The results showed that the pigeons acted the same whether in or out of the magnetic field.

Band Features Spring Concert In April, May

A new series of band concerts, "Night Serenade," has been planned for Florida State University April 28, May 12 and 18, Band Director Stanley Whitcomb announced this week.

The concerts will be held in the Amphitheater and will feature music designed primarily for students, including light, popular and classical music. Whitcomb declared that he hopes to make the series an annual spring festival of music.

A special feature of the April 28 program will be "Rhapsody in Blue," played by guest piano soloist Thomas Wrighton, head of Music faculty. The Laboratory Dance Band will play contemporary dance selections at the same concert.

For the May 12 concert, Whitcomb will plan the selections visiting high school students as will be on campus to attend instrumental music festival following two days. That concert will also mark the appearance of The Collegians, men's glee club at FSU.

Senator Opines State Is High As Air Site

Florida's Senator George Smathers this week said that there's a chance of securing the Air aviation counterpart of Point here and now.

Commenting in his weekly letter to Floridians, Smathers said the newly organized Air Force academy may be located in any of many Florida towns or cities. He said reports will be made in Congress soon by a committee now in Florida surveying various state sites.

"This gives new encouragement to many of us who have been urging our state as the natural home for the academy," said Sen. Smathers, "but we must not become too optimistic. There are 44 other states complaining for the Academy and offering many natural inducements, and the Site Board has 500 offers to select from."

But it is to be hoped that the Florida areas to be looked over will be so impressed that the burden of proof" will be on other states when visits are made to us. Florida has offered many fine sites and we in the commercial delegation have always urged that they will all be considered."

Requirements for the academy, Smathers revealed, include 15,000 acres, water supply of 2,000,000 gallons daily, electric power and natural gas supply, a natural quality of setting, and proximity to transportation, educational, cultural, religious and recreational facilities as well as the favorable" four-seasonal climate without extremes of heat or cold.

Seminar Will Close With FSU Drama In Sarasota on 25th

The Florida State University Players will open the Art Seminar at Sarasota this year by presenting a drama on the start of the Seminar, April 25.

Representatives of the university's speech department and the players will present "The Insect Comedy" by Josef and Karen Capek. Dr. Lynn Orr will personally direct the performance, Seminar officials said.

During the first six years of the Seminar's history, the custom was established of closing the series of art lectures and tours with a FSU drama presentation, sources stated. Order of the play was reversed this year, they added, because the university players have other commitments.

Speech department faculty assisting in the production will be Douglas Russell, and Charles Reimer; Edna Hollingsworth and Andrew Julien, graduate students, are helping with directing and staging.

few and would do what is right. He declared that Nimkoff's terrorist speech was "Stuffing the Student Party down people's throats."

When Miner was finished speaking, a vote was taken, ending in a tie after a five-minute recess another vote was taken, resulting in a slight majority for Miner. At that point a suggestion was made that the party constitution, which called for a majority vote of two thirds, should be changed so that one or the other could win.

Chairman Shaw explained that the suggestion would never pass since the delegates who voted against Miner would also vote against the change and a two thirds majority was necessary to change the constitution.

Kennedy rose and stated that since there was a deadlock he would withdraw in favor of the compromise man if his opponent, Miner, would do the same. Miner replied that he would withdraw if a good compromise man "who will not be dictated to by a few," could be found.

Motions for another recess failed and after a brief speech by Chairman Shaw, FLORIDA FLAMBEAU Editor Bruce Gallphin quitted the convention, declaring, "We need a man whom people can trust. . . I nominate Jimmy Joanos."

Kennedy agreed to withdraw in favor of Joanos, but Miner declined, Jane Bissell, Bryon Shaw think Joanos could hold the job. "The party chairman must act as a check. . . . I don't think that Jimmy can call down publicly his fraternity brother Pete Nimkoff or any other official."

Joanos spoke afterwards on that plank he would carry out if elected as party chairman, including amendments to the constitution, such class voting on its own nomination ,through check of delegations, and a method to end the "Dickering" over voting rights of different delegations.

"I'm sorry Miner feels as he does about me," Joanos continued, "and I'll let you (the delegates) decide deservingly for the post." Miner, asked whether he had withdrawn. An election ensued and just as the two votes necessary for a majority were cast for Joanos, Miner rose stating his withdrawal. "You can't buck an organized minority. That is not democracy, just a fact. . . . I'm glad I didn't get in. I'm sure I can work co-ordinate with the two-party system by not being party chairman."

After Joanos thanked the delegates for their support the convention came to an end.

KAs Crown 'Rose' At Rebellion Ball Held on Saturday

Fe Pittman, member of Delta Delta Delta social sorority at Florida State University was crowned Kappa Alpha Rose at that fraternity's annual Rebellion Ball held Saturday night at the American Legion Home.

Flanked by her court, the 1954 queen was awarded a gold trophy marking the honor, as well as a bouquet of red roses, spokesmen said. Miss Pittman's court members included Betsy Small of Tallahassee, Betty Willson of Kappa Alpha Theta and Ferrell DeWitt, an independent.

The colorful Rebellion Ball climaxed a two-day celebration of Kappa Alpha Week-End during which time the Fraternity as a group jestingly "seceded" from the union. The start of events was marked with a parade and the College Avenue and raising of the Confederate flag and the reading of the secession proclamation in front of Bryan Hall Friday afternoon.

Members of Kappa Alpha wore authentic replicas, it was noted, of the original Confederate uniform of the Civil War period.

Two Challenge FSU Debators In Meet Here

The International Debate, in which two Florida State University debaters will oppose two students from India, will be held Tuesday, April 20, at 8 p.m. in Conradi Theater.

Doyle Moore and Bert Bradley have been selected to debate with the Indian students on the subject of India's position of neutrality in the struggle between India and West. The formal resolution "Resolved, that India's foreign policy offers the only hope for the establishment of world peace." will be supported by Ramakrishna P. Sikora, from Elphinestone College in Bombay and Mrgindra Kumar Chaturvedi from Maharaja College College in Jalpur.

Messrs. recently elected FSU vice-president of legislative Affairs, and Bradley, a graduate assistant in the Department of Speech, comprise the first FSU debate team to welcome a debate team from India. For the past four years the annual International Debate has featured British teams.

Sirker and Chaturvedi are touring colleges and universities in the United States under the auspices of the Institute for International Education, spokesmen revealed. They will visit Tallahassee from Atlanta and move on to Miami after debating here Tuesday night.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Three students of the Florida State University Lambda Chi Alpha recently returned from Knoxville, Tennessee, where they attended the Dixie Province Convocation of Lambda Chi Alpha.

Students attending were Tracy Harrison, Tommy Fountain, and "Happy" Taylor. Dr. Wesley Harris, faculty advisor, accompanied them.

Discussed at the conclave, according to reports, were financing, rushing, public relations, and ritualistic. Chapters from 7 states were represented at the meet, held April 9-11 with the University of Tennessee as host.

In their testimonies the girls at it out that Doris Admiral was with them. She was summoned. The committee questioned her very closely and told the whole story. That the two above-mentioned girls did take the tickets from the boys and that they had planned to sit together.

Case Continued (Mar. 18, 1954)

It was thoroughly discussed and decided that Accepta Tickets and Sitta Wimmle be campused for four weeks and that Accepta be chaperoned indefinitely.

Adjournment.

Case Twelve (May 29, 1914)

A call meeting of the Student Government committee in the case to decide on the case of a Classy Cutter who thinking that she was going home cut five classes Saturday May 30. It was moved and carried that she be campused until the end of school.

Case Thirteen (Oct. 27, 1914)

This case involved a girl who went to the movie with her male cousin unchaperoned. The committee took away the girl's privileges of having "gentleman callers" for two weeks.

Case Fourteen (Nov. 18, 1814)

Many girls were reported for not going to church. Some of their excuses were: "I didn't have a hat," "I didn't read the rule book" and one girl did not know they had church on Sunday. All girls were given reprimands and excused.

Case Fifteen (Nov. 23, 1814)

Irma Hotepan reported to have passed a note while at church.

Irma appeared before the committee Rose said, "Yes, I did pass a note. I knew it wasn't exactly right, but it was a very important question that I wanted to settle." It was moved and seconded that Irma be reprimanded with Christmas holidays and that she have a matron as chaperone to church hereafter.

Third Army Sends Inspectors To FSU

An inspection team sent out by the commanding general of the Third Army will inspect Florida State University ROTC facilities all day today, continuing over from yesterday, according to spokesmen.

The two-day program includes inspection of all equipment and facilities, classroom instruction and personnel. At noon today a formal review will be held on the East Campus field.

The team will rate all Florida colleges and universities with ROTC on all phases of the military training program, drill formations, military bearing, drill and classroom organization.

ADS Chapter To Be Dedicated April 22; Borton Is Honored

Dedication of the FSU Elon Borton Chapter of Alpha Delta Sigma, national professional advertising fraternity for men, will take place at a dinner Thursday, April 22, at 7 p.m. on the terrace of the Student Center, Dr. Royal H. Ray, founder and adviser of the chapter, announced.

Guest of honor will be Elton G. Borton, President and General Manager of the Advertising Federation of America, for whom the chapter is named. 'Barter' Is Entertaining Evening Technical Effects Are Standout

By DAVID DREIS

"Barter"—the Outcast pageant play produced by the Newman Club had enough surprises and enough improvement over organization's last production "City of Kings" to provide an entertaining evening.

Acting in the production was, as a rule, more pat and technical effects far outdistanced any other religious play seen on the campus. Director Bill Chesvero deserves credit on both counts.

Standout performances were given by George Goldstein in the role of Abdiel, the ambitious Jewish leader, Claire Dardis playing Judas's wife, and Sheldon Musgrove playing the traitor Judas.

Goldstein completely captured his characterization in the scene where he finds out that his daughter is a follower of Christ and that she wants to marry a Roman soldier. He lost his character and fell into over-acting through the remainder of the play. Goldstein's posture is a bit disturbing at times with his hands clutching his waist high on his chest bent downward and his head thrown back.

Miss Dardis seems to have been the most accomplished female player of the evening and quite superbly achieved the effect of the condition self-centered wife. Her lines were said clearly and convincingly as she seemed to possess a full understanding of her character.

Sheldonius Musgrove was to say the least surprising. Portraying Judas as a paranoic Musgrove executed his lines with ease and was a complete change in character from his last Newman Club part as a mischevous priest. As he tried to persuade the Roman soldier to kill Christ, Musgrove was sincere and the audience paying attention to him every minute.

Helen Dardis playing Mary Magdalene was convincing enough in her role but at times lost a severe battle with a heavy Birmingham accent. There were moments when this reporter noticed how she was saving her lines and not what lines she was saying.

Barbara Waddell seemed to be troubled by mixed emotions and ran up and down the dramatic scale all evening. There were times when one believed every word she said as Judah's daughter but there were also a number of times that we definitely strained over her delivery for the part. There was no doubt that her visual expressions were far above her fellow players but that was not enough to substantiate her role.

The role of Esther the blind daughter was played quite well by Carole Grimmer. Her lines were given with great imagination and toward the end of her role when speech was restored she was in every sense realistic.

Louis Buzone, portraying a young Jewish leader, did not best, but lackadaisical movements and slow speech hindered the possible realism his role could contain. When the scene called for tenseness which was displayed by the other actors, Buzone refused to counter with equal emotion.

Varrus, the Roman soldier played by Lorenzo Lopez, was dull when first encountered but as he got into his part, his movements livened up, his cues were picked up faster and his delivery was more forceful.

Bette Mullins and Charles Cunningham did the best they could with their roles but because of the smallness of their parts, there was little to work with. The best that could be said is that they didn't set in anyone's way and added to the pathos of their scenes. Barbara Rynski portraying the servant was fine.

"Barter" as mentioned above is a great improvement over "City of Kings" for many reasons. Lighting was used to a more fuller extent than before and a greater variety in sets especially in a magnificent prison scene. Possibly it was due to the West Campus Little Theater with its Civic Theater facilities, possibly it was due to the acknowledged help of Charles Reimer of the Department of Speech and Drama or possibly it was due to the hard work of the Martin Theater Guild, producers of the play.

The costumes were made better and looked better than before. The material looked strong-er and the doubling was made possible in costumes. This was a radical change over the last production.

Perhaps the greatest addition the group used was the music. Not only did they use the magnificent music from The Robe but they turned the piece to good use adequate—no better than that—excellent backing for the show. Louis Buzone deserves an MTG "Oscar" for that work.

Summing up, Barter was a step in the right direction for the Newman Club in showing that the organization is working. Of special interest was the fact that in this Catholic group's play, a Jewish boy, George Goldstein, had one of the leading roles and the play was directed by Bill Chavers a Baptist. There's a moral in there somewhere.

Officials Will Use IBM Ballots Again In Class Elections

Elections officials revealed this week that IBM ballots similar to the ones used in the Student Body Elections will be used in the Class Elections slated for April 27.

As primary day for the Class Elections approaches, hoopdy has been chosen to replace Bill Stanick who resigned as Secretary of Elections last Tuesday.

In his official resignation, Stanick stated that he was resigning "With deep personal regret." He later added, "I was literally sorry to resign, but under the circumstances I thought it necessary. I will try to cooperate with the new secretary as much as possible and I wish him the best of luck."

It was revealed that a vote poll will be taken during the coming elections as a project by Golo Key, men's service honorary on campus. A few questions such as "Are you independent or Greek?" will be asked, on a separate sheet.

Stanick, in charge of the project, said he hope when these questions are tabulated that Golo Key will be able to give results to the Student body showing pertinent facts about where the student strength lies on campus, who is most interested in the elections and similar information."

Purvis Edges Young To Win Ugly Man In Campus Contest

Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity's Ugly Man contest ended with a surprise Friday night when Chris Young gave up the title to Diane Purvis in the last few minutes of vote-counting. Purvis became the ugliest man with 3,602 votes to Young's 3,118.

Ed Andrews, APO president, said today that the financial records are not yet complete but the fraternity expects to buy at least three radios for the infirmary which was the purpose of the contest.

The tennis court square dance, held in conjunction with the contest, was a success, Andrews said, and the Rose Toppers string quartet was one of the best, he noted. Even though the dance had to move to a shelter because of rain.

Because the trophy, which was scheduled to arrive by plane Saturday night did not get here in time, the crowning ceremony was postponed until later. The trophy will then be passed on to other winners in the future.

Four dollars were stolen from one of the contestants in the Semi-finale room, but the money was returned in time. Small amount taken up in the contest.

NO BEARDS FOR THE NAVY

ACP—A beard-growing contest at the University of Texas has revived the blessings of the army and air force ROTC, but not of the navy.

Although the army and air force had agreed to let beard-growers bring their fuzz with them to drill the navy insists on clean-shaven cadets.

The contest has five divisions. The first will be awarded for best all-around beard, the bushiest, the sexiest, the most unique and the best peach fuzz.

The hundred runner-ups will receive cosmetic caskets. It was noted, Girls must enter by submitting a photograph along with six palmolive soap wrappers to the Ted Bates Company at 666 Fifth Avenue, New York, before June 15.

PICKET FOR PRICES

ACP—Students at the University of Kiel, West Germany, picketed their student dining hall recently in a mock demonstration of prices and raising of food quality.

The boycott lasted for one day.

Students Reminded Deadline For Name Is Tomorrow Noon

Milton Carothers today announced that students are reminded tomorrow noon is the deadline for entries to name the new athletic field.

The new athletic field, opposite Campbell Stadium, is being used by the FSU nine for its home games and is presently the baseball diamond and two soft-ball diamonds, it was noted.

The field, completed this summer, still has no name and Student Body president Carothers stated that since the students will use the field, the students should be the ones to name it.

Sponsored by the Student Body Government entries are to be placed in a box outside the student body offices on second floor Lorimire.

Students may enter any number of entries, stating the reason for his selection to aid in the judging. The winner will receive a commendation from the Student Government and be announced in The Florida Flambeau.

Ballots for the contest appears in this issue of The Flambeau and also in last Friday's.

Kansas School Opens Courses To Adults

TOPEKA, Kans.—(I.P.)—What may be a national record for increased enrollments in night and adult education courses is being set in the Evening College at Washburn University. Under the leadership of Clay DeFord, who assumed duties as director of the Evening College and adult education program at the University last September, enrollment in evening courses at the University last fall jumped 32.7 per cent over that of the previous year. Introduction of additional eight-week courses in the middle of the fall semester stepped up the increase for the semester to 97.3 per cent.

Spring enrollment in evening college courses recently completed brought an increase of 25.6 per cent over the figure of a year ago, and eight-week courses, which open here thus month are expected to bring the second semester enrollment up an additional twenty to thirty per cent.

The enrollment increase is attributed by Director DeFord to four factors: 1. The introduction of a wider variety of course offerings in the field of commerce, education, physical science and mathematics; 2. A stepped up program of publicity and public relations with use of direct mailing procedure; 3. The addition of eight-week courses to the program which heretofore had offered only courses running for the full semester.

Seminoles Edge Stetson, 4-3; Max Long Is Winning Pitcher

A triple by Fred Twomey, a single by Bob Hudson and two Stetson errors, enabled FSU to come from behind in the 7th inning and beat Stetson, 4-3. Max Long, who relieved starter Hehemen in the 7th for the Seminoles, got the credit for the win, as he pitched hitless ball for three innings.

Twomey, with a double and a single, and Hudson with two singles and 3 runs-batted-in, led the winners at the plate. Junior Mills and Billy Campbell also got two hits.

The game was marred by 10 errors by Stetson and 4 by the Seminoles.

FSU grabbed a quick one-run lead in the bottom of the first on singles by Bonzi, Billy Campbell and Cooter Mills and a sacrifice by Bob Hudson.

But the Hatters tied the game in the third with the aid of a Seminole error. The error was followed by a sacrifice and the run scored on Jim Mark's single.

For the next three innings neither was able to threaten. But quickly scored when the Hatters struck pitcher Hudson a two run outburst. Crouch ball hit by Wailes.

doubled. Roberts walked and then John Imarund, Stetson's all-around athlete, tripled.

The same track star took one run in the bottom of the sixth when Twomey singled, stole second and Hudson smoked.

Max Long replaced Hehemen in the relief for the Seminoles in the 7th inning and shut-out the visitors for the next two frames. Meanwhile, FSU went ahead with a two-run rally in the 8th, aided by some sloppy fielding on the part of the Hatters.

Twomey hit his second triple of the day to start the rally. Then he scored on Hudson's single to right, with Hudson going to third when the right-fielder let the ball bounce past him. Hudson quickly scored when the Hatters' pitcher bobbled a ground ball hit by Wailes.

Baseball, Golf, Tennis

Busy Week Ahead In Spring Sports

Spring sports activity hits its stride at Florida State University this week with 13 events on tap as the Seminole baseball, tennis, track, and golf teams vie. One of the contests are scheduled away from home.

The FSU baseballers, 6-6 on the season, try to get back on the winning side here in a pair of two-game sets with Stetson and Georgia Teachers College.

The Seminoles, who have dropped a pair to Duke and a single decision to Georgia in their three starts, face Stetson today, and the Teachers Monday and Friday. They play Stetson yesterday to open the set.

However, the busiest FSU combo this week will be Coach Pitchford's diamond squad which has the unpleasant task of playing six matches in six days—exactly one-third of its scheduled.

The Seminole netters face Georgia Tech, and Mercer in a home stand before the road for successive matches with Georgia, Emory, then Mercer in a return engagement. Saturday's action tough Rollins.

The Seminole thinclads defend Mercer in their only dual meet of the week-end, hoping to picking up points in the Florida Relays and Southwestern (La.) relays.

Rounding out the week's varied sports activity is FSU's history-making debut in a dual affair Wednesday afternoon at the Tallahassee Country Club. Coach Dave Yellen's linksters have won both the unpleasant task five of their six starts.

Senior Hall Wins Basketball Title

Last Thursday Senior Hall and the Baptist Student House-ers played the final game in the dormitory-intramural basketball league that decided which of the two teams were to be named champ of the dormitories. It is rumored that Senior Hall won. Nobody on campus except those who attended the game, knows which team came out on top.

The intramural office at West Campus does not know who's who in the two folks as Senior Hall have only limited information on what happened except that Senior Hall won by a wide margin. The Baptists revealed that they did lose the game. But the Baptists do not know what the score was and could only say that Senior Hall's Senior Hall was "probably" the high-point man.

Twomey hit his second triple of the day to start the rally. Then he scored on Hudson's single to right, with Hudson going to third when the right-fielder let the ball bounce past him. Hudson quickly scored when the Hatters' pitcher bobbled a ground ball hit by Wailes.

Up-to-date standings have not been compiled by the intramural officials. Ho-hum

AN APOLOGY: The Flambeau incorrectly reported in it's last issue that the ATO's had lost a game in their climb to the top of the basketball-intramural ladder. The ATO's were undefeated in their basketball schedule. At least Tom and Steve are more on the ball than Arthur.

NOTTINGHAM IN BLOOMINGTON

(ACP)- It was a brisk breeze that blew the month of March was the University of Indiana campus and lifted the pile of flutterred smartly in the wind.

Buttons, leaflets and hudreds of green feathers marked the arrival of "Robin Hood's Merry Men"—a group of five students with Dennis Watson the leader Joseph McCarthy.

For months the Merry Men had plotted their attack. It began when Mrs. Thomas J. White, a member of Indiana's textbook commission, demanded the removal of "Robin Hood" from state textbooks because "he robbed the rich and gave it to the poor. That's the Communist line."

The Merry Men conceived their plan over coffee cups, and this month flooded the campus with green. Students were urged to wear buttons that said, "They are your books; don't let McCarthyism burn them."

Said the Daily Student, campus paper: "When it is over the McCarthy era will leave a bad taste in the mouth. Maybe the Hoods will save some of the chlorophyll green for the occasion."

And commenced a group of 12 psychology professors: "We are glad to have this enterprise rather than a panty raid or a goldfish swallowing contest associated with Indiana undergraduates."

Trackmen Set For State A A U In Gainesville, Saturday

University of Florida Favored To Win Track Carnival
Frosh Runners Break Mile Relay Record at SW. La. Meet

The entire Florida State track team goes to Gainesville Saturday for the annual running of the Florida AAU track and field meet. As usual, the University of Florida reigns as overwhelming favorite.

Seminole track coach Karl Miller warned however that his freshmen studded squad "would take their share of first places." Miller was particularly optimistic about FSU's chances in the relays, 440, 880, low hurdles, shot put and discus. But the Gators, who will have four or five entries in each event, are far too strong in depth for any of its in-ter-state rivals.

Following the AAU meet, the track squad returns home for four straight meets beginning with a triangular affair with the Georgia Tech, April 24. This will be the first home appearance of the Seminoles since the scheduled dual with the University of Virginia Wednesday, has been called off.

Frost Set Record In La. Relays, Sat.

A QUARTET of speedy quartermilers from Florida State combined talents Saturday to set a new junior college mile relay record as the 36th annual South-west Louisiana Relays. The four freshmen — Jim Casteel, Joe Dick, Charley Watson and Leroy Hountsha—shaved 11 seconds off the old record by posting a time of 3:24. The time is also four seconds faster than the FSU varsity track record set in 1953 by Koonce, Nimkoff, Mize and Poston. The old record of 3:35 was set by Pan-American last year.

The same quartet also finished second in the sprint medley relay with Casteel and Davis running the 220 yard legs Watson the 440 and Bounsha finishing with the half-mile

COACH KEN Miller did not enter any of his thinclads in the varsity competition. And the 440 and sprint medley relay team was the only FSU entry in the Freshmen division in which eight schools competed.

Louisiana State Defeats FSU Tennis Team

The class of the Southeastern Conference Louisiana State University defeated the Florida State tennis team, 8-2, on the varsity courts Saturday. Hal Schaus, playing No. 1 singles, saved the Seminoles from a white-wash by beating LSU's Charles Pitts, 6-4, 6-4, 6-1. The Mansfield, Ohio star then teamed with Tom Cundy in the No. 3 doubles and beat Pitts and Young of LSU, 6-4 16-6.

The defeat broke a four-game winning streak for the Seminoles.

With the exception of FSU's two victories, the Louisiana squad swept through all the matches in straight sets It was the worst drubbing of the season for the Seminoles, last year, LSU was responsable for one of the Seminoles two losers.

Dave Rosenbaum, who also plays halfback for the football team, played No. 3 singles for the victors beating Tom Cundy 6-4, 6-2.

Summaries:

Singles—Hal Schaus, FSU, defeated Charles Pitts, LSU, 3-6, 6-4, 6-1; David Rosenbaum, LSU defeated Tom Cundu, FSU, 6-4, 6-3; Paul Young, LSU defeated Shelby Creash, FSU, 6-3, 6-3; Rene Fenasci, LSU, defeated Kenneth Kennedy, FSU, 6-3, 6-2; Otto Engleman, LSU, defeated Jack Kaye FSU, 6-4, 6-2, Preston Benton, LSU, defeated Don Wyly, FSU, 6-3, 6-6. Buddy Tudor, LSU, defeated Tom Morgan, FSU, 6-1, 6-3.

Doubles—Schleman and Fenasci LSU, defeated Kennedy and Creash, FSU, 6-3, 6-3; Schaus and Cundy, FSU, defeated Pitts and Young, LSN, 6-4, 16-8. Rosenbaum and Tudor, LSN defeated Kaye and Joe Harris, FSU, 6-3, 6-2.

Stetson Plays FSU This Afternoon On Home Grounds

FSU and Stetson will play the final game of their two-game series this afternoon at 3 p.m. on the East Campus diamond. The Seminoles, with an 6-6 record, are in the throes of a three-game losing streak.

It will be the 12th meeting of the two nines in their heated state baseball rivalry. The Seminoles swept three or four games from the Hatters last spring to take a 6-6 edge in the series.

TEACHER DRAWS AN 'F'

(ACP)—A Yale University economics instructor who tried to teach investment procedures by example has flunked his own experiment, it was learned.

It began when instructor Robert H. Will decided to give his freshman class a practical demonstration on the workings of stock. Will passed on a tip that New Brazil Oils, Ltd., was on the way up and "a good investment."

Within no time the freshmen had given Will money to invest in Canadian Oil, and Paul Lloyd Reynolds, head of the economics department, was censured for action as "rather imprudent."

The Yale Daily News, student paper, reported the size of the transaction to be 16,000 shares but Prof. Reynolds said only 1,000 shares were bought.

Reynolds said Will has been ordered to reimburse his students for the venture. Since the stock has fallen slightly instead of rising Will stands to lose five cents a share—plus brokerage fees—if he sells it immediately.

THEN THERE WAS THE PROF WHO . . .

(ACP)—How absent-minded can a professor be?

A class at Oregon State College organized one day to find out. By prearrangement, they protested in a manner that he had failed to announce a test he was scheduled to give them.

Startled—and clearly confused—by the mass argument, the professor postponed his test.

More Contests Start on Campus Two For Girls Only This Time

Two nation-wide contests offer campus co-eds the chance to be a modern-day cinderella.

The Palmolive Soap Co. is sponsoring a nation-wide "School-girl Beauty Queen" contest, and Mutual Broadcasting System's Queen For a Day," program will choose the "College Queen of America."

Six pretty schoolgirls will be chosen in the Palmolive Beauty Contest and taken to New York each with a member of her family, where she will receive a $1,000 wardrobe, selected for her by a leading fashion designer. The queen will be awarded an additional $1,000 in cash.

Any high school or college girl between the ages of 15 and 23 may enter the contest, or relatives or friends may submit her photograph for her. Each photograph must be accompanied by two wrappers from Palmolive Soap. Entries will be accepted until June 15.

The "College Queen of America" will receive a new car, a wardrobe, jewelry, luggage, and many other prizes, plus a tour of Hollywood.

The only requirements for this contest are that the co-ed be at least 18 and chosen by fellow students at her school. The contest will run from April 19 until midnight May 7.

Tryouts Slated For Intramural Dinner Talks

Preliminaries for the 1954 intramural After Dinner Speaking contest will be held in 222 History Building today. Undergraduate students regardless of previous speaking experience or training are invited to compete.

Those who have won intramurals or intercollegiate competition are ineligible for the preliminaries. Finals for After Dinner Speaking contests are before the Junior Chamber of Commerce on May 3.

For the Original Oration contest preliminaries are scheduled for Tuesday, May 4 at 7 p.m. in 222 History Building. The speeches may be on any topic, but must not exceed ten minutes in length. The finals will be before the Optimist Club on May 11.

The Public Speaking contest speech may be no longer than five to seven minutes on a specific subject within the general area, "Problems of Higher Education." The preliminaries will be held in the History Building at 7 p.m. on May 11. The finals will be before the Toastmasters Club, Tuesday May 18.

Students may call 2061 to register or to set information or advice. Dr. Pfeifer, Dr. Minnick or Miss Hollingsworth will be available for this aid. There are no entry fees for the contests. Suitably inscribed certificates will be awarded to the finalists in all three events. Those interested should register at least two days before the preliminary round of their division.

Bradley Odham

Odham Will Speak At FSU April 22

Bradley Odham, candidate for the democratic nomination for Florida's governor in the forthcoming primaries, will talk at Florida State University April 22, Odham Club officials said yesterday.

Odham will address a meeting of the Florida Federation of Women's Club here on campus, along with candidates Charlie Johns and LeRoy Collins.

Odham will then fly to Miami, where he and Collins are scheduled for a joint television appearance.

The Sanford candidate had originally planned a tour of the campus to meet FSU Odham Club members and other interested students. He was to have been entertained at a coke party in the Longmire Lounge. He then was planning to visit the Student Center and West Hall, rounding out the day with a talk at the Leon County Bandshell.

The Leon County headquarters revealed yesterday that the Miami engagement will force a curtailment of the previously planned FSU and Tallahassee activities.

Greenlee Publishes Illustrated Work On Elementary Science

Mr. Julian Greenlee, of the Florida State University School of Education, is the author of a book, "Better Teaching Through Elementary Science" soon to be published by a national firm.

Representatives of the publishing company state that Greenlee's book "Represents some fine, down-to-earth philosophy and thinking."

The book is illustrated by Robert Henning of the FSU Demonstration School faculty.

"Teaching Science to Children," Greenlee's previous book is used by teachers in all states, including many schools where he has taught before joining the FSU faculty. These schools include Columbia, New Hampshire Teachers College University of Florida, University of Maine and Michigan Teachers College where he was professor of physics.

During the interlude between summer school and the beginning of the fall semester, Greenlee has accepted an invitation from the Cincinnati Public Schools to conduct two four-day sessions on "Science in the Elementary School."

IGNORANCE IS BLISS

From the Proctor, Greenville College, Ill.

Did you ever realize that whenever you confess your ignorance you are giving yourself a concealed compliment — a compliment that is the same being complained slap on the back?

And when you hear someone confess his ignorance in public you should inwardly congratulate his maturity rather than his humility. He's probably happier in his honesty than you in your education—though of course honesty and education are not necessarily opposite in meaning.

Ignorance - the admitted limitation in knowledge - is a great thing and we should have more of it. Admitted ignorance is vital to happiness and success. Hoorah for the Ignorance Quotient!

AF Selection Team To Visit Campus April 21, 22, 23

An aviation cadet selection team under the direction of Lt. Robert H. Anderson will visit the FSU campus April 21, 22 and 23, it was announced recently.

The team, which is recruiting candidates for pilot or aircraft observer training, will be located at the Student Center parlor.

To qualify for the aviation cadet program, Lt. Anderson said, an applicant must be single, between the ages of 19-26½, a high school graduate, in good physical and mental health, and of high moral caliber. Vision requirements, he added, are 20/20, uncorrectable to 20/20, for observer applicants.

In the event an applicant is found qualified, he added, class assignment should come within one month. The program, Lt. Anderson noted, lasts 14 months. Upon graduation the cadet receives his wings and a commission in the Air Force.

Lt. Anderson added that the training given the cadet is considered worth college credits from most schools."

Further information may be obtained from the team when it visits the campus, Lt. Anderson concluded.

Council Awards Aid to Haer To Study Semi-Transients Here

The Social Science Research Council recently awarded a grant-in-aid to Dr. John L. Haer, Assistant Professor of Sociology for a study of Community Satisfaction in a Semi-Transient Residential Area in Tallahassee Florida." The contribution is a continuation of a large-scale study of community satisfaction inaugurated by the Department of Sociology last fall, using Tallahassee as the locale for the study.

Florida's climate, the recreational and economic opportunities and many other features have caused an influx of population which is of value to the state in many ways, but problems also arise as a result of these migrations. The purpose of these sociological studies is to answer such questions as: How do people come to develop attitudes of satisfaction or dissatisfaction with the new community. How do these attitudes change over time for better or worse? and what kinds of organizations or activities help speed up the growth of community satisfaction?

Another purpose of the study is to obtain findings which may later be of use to citizen's groups who may be interested in these problems and their solutions.

The study will be carried on by means of a public opinion survey in which a carefully selected sample of people will be personally interviewed. The findings will be reported in both scientific journals and newspapers.

The Social Science Research Council is an organization representing sociology, psychology, history, anthropology, economics and statistics. It maintains offices in New York and Washington and is supported by funds from various foundations.

Dr. Hardee Urges Freshmen To Visit Counsellors by May

Freshmen should see their educational counsellors before May 1, Dr. Melvene Hardee, Coordinator of Counselling and Guidance, announced recently. She said that evaluation of the year's progress, discussion of unsolved problems and plans for next year are of importance.

Dr. Hardee stressed that the students must cooperate with the counselling service if it is to be of any value. She noted that many parents "are already becoming well aware of this service and have voluntarily expressed great satisfaction and gratitude for the counseling their sons and daughters have had."

Dr. Hardee added that freshmen who do not know the name of their educational counsellor may secure that information from her office. 301 Westcott.

This is the last of the series before the Spring Vacation and the series will close on the Wednesday night after Easter when the Rev. Vernon Quigley, former assistant at St. John's Episcopal Church visits the Campus from Cuba. Florida where he is Rector of Grace Church.

All students, faculty and the public are invited to hear Dr. Neel this Wednesday night at 7:45 in the Rue Hall Lounge.

MALES HAVE IT

(ACP)—At the University of Colorado, the traditional spring variety show has been replaced by an All-Men's revue—not entirely to everybody's liking.

Comments the Colorado Daily: "Can you imagine anything more dull, colorless and dismal than a spring-time stage show WITHOUT GIRLS? . . . Will a hairy, hearty all-male show draw the crowd and make the same amount of money as an all-star cast including talented and gorgeous lovelies?

"The male attitude toward a male show was long ago reflected in an old English poem that started out, "Wot, no women? Wot kind of a pawty is this?"

Husband Explains His Future Articles In Longmire Lecture

Dr. Richard W. Husband, of the Florida State University faculty, delivered a lecture on methods of teaching general psychology yesterday in Longmire, explaining portions of an article by him soon to be published.

In his lecure, Dr. Husband compared educational television methods with established classroom methods in teaching psychology. The article his lecture was based on will be published in "The American Psychologist," official monthly journal of a national scientific association.

A comparatively new member of the FSU faculty, Dr. Husband previously taught psychology at Iowa State College, University of Wisconsin and in Pennsylvania State College extension work. He spent three years in industrial relations with the United States Steel Corporation in Pittsburgh.

Dr. Husband has written several books on general psychology, and has had about 45 other research articles published in professional journals, he revealed.

Cobb Succeeds Houser As State Party Chairman

47 Positions Filled Out of 63; Some Seek Re-election

Warren Cobb was elected to succeed Jack Houser as chairman of the State Party at the recent nominating convention in which delegates nominated all but 16 of the offices to be filled in next Tuesday's elections.

Leading the State Party roster for the office of Senior Class president is Harry Massey.

Other party officials elected at the two-night convention were Jim Halford, recording secretary; Patricia Conner, corresponding secretary; and Fred Hanna, treasurer.

Billy Graham received the party nomination for vice-president of the student body. Bert Miller and Marilyn Inman opposed him. Other party choices for class officers nominated were Marry Ann Council, secretary; Jimmy E. Ramsey, treasurer; and Dodie Platt, social chairman.

Bobby Crenshaw beat out John Brown to receive the party's nomination for president of the Junior Class. The delegates also elected Jim Broderick over Ray Johnson for vice-president of the class. Libby Perryman retired a unanimous choice to officiate Lavetta Armstrong to receive the nomination for secretary of the Juniors. Other Junior class officers selected were Bud Shirah, who beat Wally Jones, and Virginia Bolcher for social chairman, unopposed.

Senate, judiciary and honor code traffic courts were the first order of business the first day of convention. (Picture of women

STATERS MEET

Warren Cobb has called a meeting of all students running in the State Party ticket in the Tuesday elections for 4:30 this afternoon at 5 in 409 Gamboge.

Cobb stressed that it is important that all candidates be present at this meeting.

were nominated for senate posts. There are sophomores Barbara Bridges and Lavaun Hall; junior Joan Halford; and senior, Jo Rooms.

Men nominated to senate posts were sophomores, Jimmy Sykes and John Allen; juniors Fred Mansfield, Dirk Bittner and Tom Ehrhardt; and seniors Bob Bertie and Jack Houser.

Four of the senate nominees are seeking re-election to senate. They are Joan Halford, Bob Dirk Bittner, and Jim Sykes.

Mary Kate Griffin, Irene Rodriguez and Beechie Bunting were nominated as sophomore representatives to Judiciary representing State Party.

Representative to Judiciary for juniors is Hortie, Ramsey, while Jo Carol Lee is the only candidate for senior representative.

Junior representatives to Judiciary on the party ticket are Jim Lucas, Jim Moore, and Al Vickers; sophomore; Harold Stewart Junior; and George Carr, Jr. George Carnes, senior.

Barbara Graham and Margaret Ann Young are the nominees for Honor Junior Honor Court.

Warren Cobb and Coot Jackson received the nomination for Junior Honor Court. While Art Allwood and Bert Miller are the nominees for senior Honor Court.

Jimmy Bramlett is the State Party's only choice for representative to Traffic Court. Bill Bell is their nomination for the junior women's traffic position.

POLITICAL RALLY STAGED

Gold Key, men's service honorary, will sponsor a political rally Monday night at 7 in the Music amphitheater, as proposed by representatives and unchilast processions issued by the two political parties.

Fraternities and sororities are asked by Gold Key officials to plan their chapter meetings around the rally. Candidates, whether independent or affiliated with a party, are to be present at the rally, and the speaking procedure may be arranged.

Class presidential candidates and senatorial candidates will be allowed three minute speeches, according to Alan Sundberg, Gold Key official. Others will be merely introduced, he added.

Additional information can be secured from Sundberg by phoning him at outside number 3-1077.

TOMORROW'S AUTHOR INTERVIEWED—Mr. Philip Wylie, noted author, is shown here chatting with Constance Coleman (left) who interviewed him on his trip to Pensacola to attend a literature conference there. Also shown is Mrs. Wylie. Wylie's newest book, TOMORROW, a psychological novel on the effects of an atomic war on two large cities, was the object of man y questions from Miss Coleman.

Lab Band Featured Wednesday At 'Serenade' in Amphitheater

Florida State University's Laboratory Band will be featured next Wednesday in the first of a series of band concerts, called "Starlight Serenade", arranged by Manley Whitcomb, director of the university band.

> Al Harkness, Lab Band drummer, urged students to attend the concert, slated for 8:15 in the Music Amphitheater. He said that the band hopes to provide entertainment equal to the jam concert held earlier this month, which many students praised.

The first part of the Wednesday night program will be devoted to a performance of the 45 man Concert symphonic band. Thomas Wright, of the School of Music faculty, will play "Rhapsody in Blue" as guest soloist.

Robert Brannagel, also of the School of Music, will direct the Laboratory Band during the second half of the program. Brannagel, well-liked by students and members of the band, took over the job of directing the band last year when it was being formed.

The Laboratory Band has since been devoted to composing, arranging and playing popular American jazz. Made up of 19 members, practice is held twice a week, the students gain experience but no university credit for their lab work.

BULLETIN:

Seven candidates for class offices have been termed disqualified by Jim Halford, FSFC Senate, on the basis of grades. The Florida Flambeau was told yesterday afternoon.

Officially unqualified, according to Mr. Fred Vogel, counselor for student organizations, are Jean Carr, George Carter, Wayne Estes, Jimmy "Coot" Jackson, Mary Ann MacFarland and Ann "Rocky" Stone.

Jean Carr is candidate for junior women's judiciary. George Carter is non on the Flambeau's list of candidates. Estes is a candidate for Senior treasurer. Jackson is a candidate for junior Honor Court, Mary Ann MacFarland does not appear on the Flambeau's list and "Rocky" Stone is seeking election to senior Women's Judiciary.

The individual cases are open for appeal to the Elections Committee.

Lang Requests Clubs Comply With Rulings

David Lang, Secretary of Organizations, today told The Florida Flambeau that many organizations on campus have not complied with regulations concerning their files.

> "Each organization," he explained, are required to submit yearly American Society forms, membership, and constitutions. Failure to do this," he explained, "results in loss of privileges such as positions in the FLAMBEAU, having space in the TALLY-HO, meeting on campus and other such privileges."

This is because organizations not submitting such materials are placed on the inactive list and are disbanded, Lang explained.

Officers are urged to check the files in the student organizations room in the basement of Westcott.

According to Lang, the following organizations are in good standing. All other organizations should comply with this request immediately.

Alpha Epsilon Delta, Alpha Kappa Psi, Alpha Lambda Delta, Alpha Delta Sigma, Alpha Phi Omega, Alpha Kappa Delta American Association of Health and Physical Education and Recreation, American Society for Public Administration.

Association for Childhood Education, Arnold Air Fraternity, Baptist Student Union, Bit and Spur Club, Canterbury Club Cavalier Club, Choral Union, Circle K Club, Coalition, Delta Omicron, Delta Sigma Pi and Four-H Club.

Wylie Recalls Experiences In Visit Here

By CONNIE COLEMAN

"I wonder why so few men seem to catch the excitement of the world," stated Wylie in a prodigious chapter in the human mind as we are like to participate."

These lines from one of Philip Wylie's well known books on marine the attitude that has caused this asinist and critic of the American civilization to write so many of his controversial novels.

Mr. Wylie has seen and participated in the contemporary scene enough to be one of its most authoritative critics. His writing style which is interspersed with an air of wit and cynicism, have been called unique criticisms of modern civilization.

Members of Florida State University Laboratory School heard Mr. Wylie recount some of his experiences in Pensacola on Tuesday.

Philip Wylie is, in person, as compelling as his books. Although there is nothing unusual about his appearance, he is distinguished by his tall slender build and his slightly long features. His brown eyes are as direct as his writings. He tells of one adventure that was disappointed to find that he didn't resemble Orson Wells.

When asked to address the Rotary Club, Wylie was modest and concise in his humor. But later, when speaking to only a few people, he spoke at length of the ideas behind his new book, TOMORROW! which is currently number two on the Saturday Review's Best Seller List.

TOMORROW! a novel of the psychological impact on two Pensacolians if an atom bomb were to be dropped, was first written as a scenario for the movies. But Wylie considered the subject too touchy for that field and set it down three years later that he finally presented the novel.

It was while Mr. Wylie was

Governor Candidates Speak On Same Platform Before Women's Club Meet

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Florida's three candidates for governor spoke on the same platform for the first time since the start of their campaign before a meeting of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs at Florida State University yesterday afternoon.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the four-day women's convention, the trio spoke in behalf of their candidacy for governor of the state. The approach of each followed much of his campaign procedure to date. LeRoy Collins pointed to his record of accomplishment in the Florida legislature. Acting governor Charley Johns spoke of his actual experience as a man of action. Brailey Odham pleaded for honesty and citizen participation in governme...

Collins Notes Post Record In Senate

Candidate LeRoy Collins noted that he was speaking this day in alphabetical order. This order was all right with him, he said. He would be glad if people continued it that right through election day.

Collins referred to the problems of the great future of Florida. He said he could come through that the state as he had in his campaign, he asserted, without being a candidate for the office of Governor of the State of Florida.

People want the best for their state, Collins noted. They want the best in health conditions. They want the best in schools in most other things. But they often forget to seek the best in government. It is government, he said Collins, that can provide these other "needs" for the state.

Collins said his support of state improvements was not just a last minute affair. As a member of the legislature for the last 18 years, he is

Johns Comments FFWC Resolution

Acting Governor Charley Johns commented yesterday on the FFWC in their resolution condemning indecent comic books and for the legislature they showed in the problem of juvenile delinquency in the state and in the nation.

Johns said he himself as acting governor had been considering the problem some time himself. He said he is going to appoint a citizens' committee to study juvenile delinquency in the state. This group would recommend legislation to improve the situation and also aid in setting up county communities.

The governor said women have more time to spend in such work and that it was the intention to appoint some outstanding women of the state to the committee.

Also on the subject of women's rights Johns asserted his belief that women in jobs comparable to those held by men should re...

Odhom Says Citizen Key To Government

Brailey Odham said he would rather be governor of Florida if he have the FFWC members ask the candidates questions. Acting Governor Johns would not answer to this, though, said Odham.

He said he liked courtesy but thought the truth was more important. He said he wanted to tell the ladies present what he considered their role in government and the people in it.

Odham said some people had the misconception that some of Florida's woes elected, they "pointed to Tallahassee." He said people should keep a close watch on government and participate in it. His first campaign plank, he noted, was open and honest dealings of all tax-supported state boards.

Odham further pointed out that the legislature he had voted to allow the legislature to call itself back into session if

Senate Readies Clause For Vote By Student Body

Last-minute obstructions to presenting the proposed Student Body Constitution for approval by the voters in Tuesday's elections were cleared by the Student Senate late Tuesday afternoon.

The Senate considered items which the Rules Committee on Student Affairs refused to accept for the April 27 election. The committee had mediated and compromised on major issues among the 79 changes made in the original document by the Faculty Committee.

Among important issues raised were those of faculty review of student courts, a freedom of the press clause, presidential veto of w'k's and women's Senates, and presidential r mediation with the vice-presidents before impeachment can be considered.

The faculty did not accept a recommendation that students on that faculty review be allowed to be excused in all penal cases only, and that provision was specifically provided. The Student Senate was charged with the duty of investigate in view of the imminence of the referendum. Therefore, amendment Lynn Goodwin Faculty Senator, the present constitutional phrase, calling merely for review by committee should be retained. President of the University, will prevail.

The faculty also refused to accept a clause providing that student body officers and senators would not be interfered with except by impeachment proceedings in the case of obscenity and allowing the removal of a staff member by the Student Senate with approval of the Board of Control.

The Student Senate decided to stand firm behind the clause, failed 9-3, in view of the impending referendum.

The Senate agreed to the idea of a faculty advisor for Student Publications, provided he acts "in an advisory capacity only."

The Senate also stand behind a clause to permit the President of the Student Body to veto actions of Men's and Women's Senates. After heated discussion the Senate decided that this clause be referred back to the Faculty Committee. If the Committee is still adamant, the Senate decided each committee will revert to the present constitutional provision which gives veto of the entire Senate action only.

A compromise was reached on the question of having the Student Body Constitution state which presidents before making appointments, so that his most constantly with the Senate Committees and cabinet officers.

The discussion on the matter was quelled after presiding officer Lawler noted that the clause was merely a matter of form and would not enjoy it here," he added.

Joe Bentley Wins Short Story Contest For Smoke Signals

Joseph Bentley has been declared winner of the third annual Smoke Signals contest, according to editor-in-chief John Howard.

Bentley's manuscript was one of three submitted after the contest was reopened, Howard noted.

Judges for the contest were Dr. Dan Rabuzzi, Dr. Lucy Pierce Campbell, and Dr. Claude Flory.

Howard said that last week the contest was reopened when only three stories were in the local economy in the Smoke Signals office. The deadline was noon at which time he will receive the trophy awarded each year.

The prize winning story, whose title was not announced, concerns science fiction.

Said Howard, "I believe this contest provides ample opportunity for the literary on campus. Also this is the only outlet for such activities."

Howard also revealed that a fifty-page Smoke Signals will be out on May 20. The magazine will feature a description of Florida riding club, "Bit and Spur."

Party Officials Give Statements On Upcoming Student Election

Chairmen of Campus Parties Reiterate Their Positions; Carothers Comments on Rumors

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

As political posters, placards, Gamble banners, and cards inundated the campus Tuesday afternoon and evening, officials of both competing political parties were quick to forecast the margin of victories they respective factions.

Chairman Jimmy Joanes of the Student Party and State Party Chairman Warren Cobb predicted success for their parties Outcoming Student Body elections. Joanes promised that the State Party will be "at least 400 more votes" than the Student Party in the future.

Said Joanes, "For the Student Party I am very optimistic. I feel that a few positions will be lost to the opposing party and to independents, but by and large I feel that the Student Party as a whole will emerge victorious."

Continued Joanes, "The reason I feel this way is that our platform is superior to that of the opposition, in that the qualifications of qualified candidates are ours."

Commented Houser, "I think it (the election) will shape up great. I think we'll make a much much better showing than we did on this last. We'll give the Student Party a close race. The State Party will be as strong or stronger in the future as the Student Party.

"This is good," he continued, because it will insure that the two party system will remain on campus."

Endorsing on his optimism regarding the State Party, Cobb said, "We of the State Party feel that we are now firmly established and that the people on campus have accepted the idea of a two-party campus and have responded to the ideas. This time we feel that many of the elections will be very close as State members, they will be held a week after the primaries, according to Elections Secretary Betty Jo Grubbs.

In addition to choosing their officers, the returning students will be asked to ratify or disapprove the proposed constitutions of the Student Body, which has been under consideration and review by the Student Senate and Faculty Committee on Student Affairs since classes convened in September.

A questionnaire, prepared and handed out by the Key Key project by Bill Staack, former Secretary of the Student Body, will attempt to determine the degree of voting participation on the part of women's dorms, fraternities, independents, day and dormitory students, and the members of the several classes.

Election booths will be located at the Union, the Administration, the Student Center and lower Westcott, Miss Grubbs revealed. The polls will be open from the Women's Sophomore Council Representative to 5 p.m. and 6 a.m. to 5 p.m. with the exception of West Hall, which poll will be open for 24 hours.

Deadline for qualifying has been set for noon today, and noon at 5 said elections committee officials.

That ballots will be used, she announced. "If any priority is given in the balloting," she said, "seniors will get it first."

Miss Grubbs expressed appreciation to Drs. DeGraff and McCrimmon and to Mrs. Eleanor Bureau for the "great assistance they have been to us in preparing the ballots and the election."

Hall balloting, initiated by former Election chief Bill Staack, shaved hours off the time required to tabulate the results of the election last fall and this spring.

Miss Grubbs added that the referendum on the constitution will be included with the regular slate but that elements of Traffic Court, Judiciary and University Court will be voted on by all those who are participating.

Miss Grubbs called attention to statutes forbidding campaign literature within the area surrounding the polls. She also reminded women counselors have been empowered to enforce and penalize the regulations prohibiting campaigning, oral or written, within 50 feet of the polls.

"We feel confident," she added, "that we have dealt with cases out and support them candidates. We're expecting a larger turnout for the elections than in the last."

The first time in the history of Florida State University, two well-organized political parties have entered candidates in the class elections.

The candidates running for office in the various parties whose slates they are running on are listed below. Polls will be open Tuesday only to Wednesday afternoon.

Running for Senior Class president are Bob Canada, Sonny Ford, and Bill Ramsey, State Party. Mike Kish is the Student Party candidate for the presidential post. Opposing Betty Graham, running on the State ticket.

Candidates for secretary of the Senior Class are Mary Ann Council, State Party, and Nancy Bergfern, Student Party. Wayne Estes is the Student Party candidate for senior treasurer, while Harriet K. Ramsey is opposing him as the State Party choice.

Senior social chairman candidates are Ann Stephens, Student Party, and Dodie Platt, State Party.

Jim Halford and Jack Houser are the State Party nominees for senior representatives opposed by Bill Staack, Vera Williams and Max Harden, all Student Party candidates.

The only candidates for senior women's judiciary are Jo Carol and Dot Wells, both Student Party candidates.

Jim Lucas and Jim Padgham will seek Senior Men's Judiciary seats on the State Party ticket. Opposing them is Carroll Lee, Student Party.

Candidates for senior men's Honor Court are Bert Miller, State Party, and Art Miller, Student Party.

Elections Slated To Start Tuesday In First Primary

114 Candidates Run For 54-55 Offices; IBM Ballot Used

In primary class elections Tuesday, next year's sophomores, juniors and seniors will begin and perhaps end the task of selecting their officers for next years.

In the event that run-offs are necessary in multiple offices such as Senior members, they will be held a week after the primaries, according to Elections Secretary Betty Jo Grubbs.

'The Insect Comedy' Is Work Done in Surrealistic Method

By DAVID DEEIS

"The Insect Comedy," one of the most celebrated plays to be done in the medium of surrealism will be enacted on the Augusta Conradi Theater stage April 30, May 1, 3, 4. Directed by Dr. Donald Hall of the faculty in the area of the Department of Speech, the play will climax the season at Florida State.

> "The play is in general, a satire on present-day thinking," Dr. Hall said. "The brothers of two anti kingdom clothing for the possession of the two blades of grass. While the audience feels that the blades of grass are important, to the ant kingdom it is of utmost importance to their heritage.

The cast is impressive with experienced Conradi performers, Jimmy Sykes, Jeanne Pollard, Jeanne Bowden, Jimmy Bramlett, honorary, and newcomers. Dr. Hall directed "Insect Comedy" at Wayne University shortly before the second World War and it was a success then, and I see no reason why anyone would not enjoy it here," he added.

Halford's Bill Extends Time; Wins Approval

A proposal by senator Joan Halford extending the time limit for "open" student approval or chaperonage to 9 p.m. instead of 7:30 p.m. was passed unanimously by women's senate Wednesday.

The change will go into effect until further notice.

A second proposal by Halford asked that second semester freshmen women be placed under the same rules as other women students. The lack of a semester

The proposal would have stated that second semester freshmen women would be required to sign out for all trips, but would not have to sign in when they returned. Lack of time prevented the proposal from being voted on at this meeting.

Halford pointed out that the approval hours were established for the convenience of the students decided to leave in between the evening meal and 7:30 p.m. deadline.

Halford also stated that because of the many restrictions students might forget them and "inadvertently" break rules or unknowingly be penalized.

Close finished the arguments stating that having curfew approved "would be a big help."

Former Student Tells of Easter Time as Celebrated in Mexico

By JACK D. HOLMES

Since Easter vacation lasts ten days in Mexico, I went to University in Mexico City, it is an opportunity to take trips into the environs which make a university education so worthwhile. With this thought in mind, John Barron and I, in 1950's Ford Model A Chiefs - American from California, and some friends of John's, some 56 kilometers from the City of Palaces.

Taxco is a small town built on the side of a mountain at a special economy in the Sierra Madre Mountains, some 6,000 feet above sea level. Upon arrival at this town we still knew we had arrived at the height of the Mexican Easter festivities called the Matachinas, a tribe related to the Aztecs, which has come down out the Tolsen valley and vast mountains and barbaric stone-covered jaguar, and eagles run beneath the protecting gaze of the snow-covered Nevada de Toluca.

In addition to its orchestral attractions, Matinzin is famous for its Holy Week celebrations. Starting on Palm Sunday and ending with Sunday of Easter week. People from all over Mexico travel the beautiful, but rough road to witness the ancient Passion of Christ.

The town was no room in the town by the time we arrived there late Thursday afternoon. Everyone was sleeping in the streets, cooking bill and sleep in the Zacatlantzas temple. Looking down on the town from the tower was a repast of tortillas and Vienna sausage, we could see the lights of a procession winding its way down the mountain through the cobble-stoned streets of the town. With the full moon, the scene was picturesque and very sporadic, and we regretfully left the town to see the ruins of the ancient Aztec capital of Tenochtitlan.

Good Friday broke over the valley like a thunderbolt, and with only an occasional bird to disturb the quiet spot. At approximately 11:00 the beginning of the Passion Play took place with a procession of horsemen and foot-soldiers, dressed in gaudy suits and accompanied by dancers, the Matachinas, and a band of musicians. The procession was accompanied by dancers, the Matachinas, and a band of musicians.

Student Senate Should Consider Compulsory Attendance Carefully

The Student Senate should take a deep breath, go out for a cigarette, slug down a short drink (of water) and do some deep considering before they pass the bill requiring freshmen to attend all home football games.

The Senate runs the danger of passing with the best motives a bill which would actually be a bad step.

The objections to compulsory attendance are many and can be classified into three general categories: individual, political and purposive.

It seems an unwarranted move to make such a restriction of freshmen's lives. Many, perhaps most, will attend football games anyway. There are some who are frankly not interested in the game, however. We cannot see that it would be fair to force these people to go.

Even more important is the possibility that a freshman might attend most games but have special plans for some Friday or Saturday evenings. The freshman might need to go home for a family celebration or because of illness. He might want to attend a music concert here or in some nearby city. It would be up to the individual to decide whether the football game or some other function is more important.

Checking the roll of the entire class would be difficult enough in itself, but if there were anything like a just system of excuses, keeping the roll would be wellnigh impossible.

Second are the political considerations. Student government is striving, or should be striving, for more control over student affairs. To do so it must not only show the college administration that it is capable of handling those affairs, but it must also gain the confidence of the student body. We see no clear distinction between compulsion by the administration on such matters as ROTC or on-campus housing and compulsion by the Student Senate on football attendance.

If what we are fighting for is a gradual relaxation of controls, then this would be progress in reverse gear. Students are not too pleased at the idea. Even football enthusiasts have said they would boycott games out of spite if they were told they had to go.

Finally, there is the question of where we are going. The bill was introduced in the name of "school spirit." This term is a rather misty one, with as many interpretations as there are listeners. To some it means merely a rah-rah attitude. To others it has a more serious meaning.

We assume that what proponents of the bill meant by school spirit was a feeling of unity and pride in the school. If this was their intent, then we must object that they have chosen a rather shallow means of accomplishing their goals. Attending football games is such a minor part of university life that giving it the importance of compulsion is distorting its value. Football is at best an enjoyable form of entertainment and at worst a big-time financial enterprise. But it is certainly not the essence of college life.

We are guilty perhaps of criticizing without offering a better suggestion for increasing pride in the university. We feel, though, that the immediate problem is whether football attendance should be compulsory for freshmen. Because of the many reasons stated, we feel it should not.

We urge students to talk to their Senators and the Senators themselves to think about other aspects of the problem.

Dear Mama Seminole

Dear Mama Seminole,

Braves and Maidens here in big village not have strong body like braves and maidens have on reservation. Thing called sidewalk, be replaced by automobile. Even when brave have no place to go he now take ride instead of walk. Soon evolution make legs shrink up into heap big seat. Campus become one big intersection. Maybe take lesson from other campuses, close main campus to all cars, leave room for brave to walk.

Many square in auto on campus make heap confusion. One squaw in auto on monroe, cross college ave., look down, see FSU, stop back up turn left, pass through three red lights, put fear of Great Spirit in students at Westcott gate, park in Pres. space, and was last heard at Sweet Shop say, "Now where did I leave my car?"

Even those sports which build health on campus, must be required before student takum. Braves seem to think body which houses mind they so diligently strive to educate, needs no attention. Georgie come to these thoughts when he go home to reservation and play one game, then unable to stand for next moon.

Georgie very disappointed. Would like to make friends with mouse below but mouse stop talk. Georgie long time friend of Archie and would likum meet young relative Simon.

Brave politicians on campus follow in steps of great leader of last war. All think successful politician need first be paper-hanger. Others prefer, take paper down. Georgie think he unto others has been done, all's fair, etc. Think and appreciate fact that chiefs are longsuffering quietly through whole thing.

Love All,
Georgie Seminole

Goon Tactics the Work of---Guess Who

The goons are at work. They're really clever. They're strong, too: tore down all those signs put up by chemists.

Every election there are complaints of torn or removed signs. That is natural. It is to be expected. But never has there been such whole-hog, complete and deliberate destruction before.

It's stupid. It's unfair. It's dishonest.

We are sure of one thing. Neither the Student Party nor the State Party is at the blame, because candidates of each group have been hit heavily. But we are just as sure that an organized group of baboons is hard at work for purposes not too hard to guess.

The university administration has kept a strictly hands-off attitude in this matter. We are grateful to them for this, because we feel it is a student problem. Signs have been placed illegally, such as on plaster walls and on trees, but according to Business Manager Shaw the administration has not ordered the removal of any signs. They are waiting for the candidates and the elections committee to take the proper action.

For the information of candidates, we are reprinting the sections of the elections laws concerning campaign literature on page one today.

But the real problem remains the torndown posters. As we have pointed out, it is the duty of the two parties nor the administration. It is the work of a group of smart-alecks. And let's face it, boys, we may have been slow on the uptake about catching you, but we aren't dumb. Goon tactics are the work of goons. It's not hard to add two and two. That should be fair warning.

Meanwhile we make the following suggestions for concrete action. First, candidates should read the elections laws and remove illegally placed posters. Then there is the new question of justifying the marauders' actions.

Second, we feel the elections committee or the court should clearly proclaim that tearing down posters is a vile infringement of the honor code. This is not an unreasonable step. Many candidates cannot afford to replace their lost posters because they are nearing their expense limits. Destroying their signs is in effect stealing from them.

Third, students should feel no qualms in turning in the culprits. We would never suggest such tactics, of course, but It might stop the foolishness if some one would pound the h--l out of the guilty parties.

Do Drinking Restrictions Lead to Immaturity?

It is no secret that a great number of students indulge in intoxicating beverages here at FSU. The problem of drinking is an acute one and should be deemed as such. Under the prescribed set up now in existance on the campus, the student can all done under cover either behind a locked door in a resident house, in a car parked in a parking lot, or somewhere out in the woods.

There is not a decent college "hangout" for those that want to drink some beer, sit and talk, and do some dancing with their Saturday nite date. Others prefer their drinking in a Drive-in or at the coast where they have to drive forty or fifty miles back to the campus. The whole system is extremely unhealthy for the students.

Quite a few of the students have reached the legal drinking age. Shouldn't they be allowed to drink when they wish? The usual reply is that this is a state institution and the parents wouldn't like it. Total absence of drinking at this age presents the problem of the immature adult in society when it comes to drinking. It would be embarrassing to be unable to conduct oneself in a proper fashion after few drinks.

There is also a question of morals. Far worse things can happen under the present setup than if the drinking was done in a public restaurant place under the proper supervision.

There are many colleges and universities throughout the country that are considered "wet" institutions. The majority of these students conduct themselves as adults and the few who have not grown up and who do drink immaturely are soon disciplined and taught the more mature conduct around them. In these schools, there are no seemingly ill effects on the colleges' reputations, the faculty, or the student body.

If drinking was out in the open, the problem would not be half as bad as it is now. Many of the problems would be eliminated. Certain restrictions could be set up. The proper supervision would be afforded the students.

Only time will tell what the overall results are in future years, everyone can be sure of one thing. Drinking, whether prohibited or not, is here to stay on the FSU campus.

Hey, You Can't Do That, I Screamed

By BRUCE GALPHIN

It was rather warm in the Student Senate room just before Easter, and I was getting drowsy. I had almost dropped off to sleep when the President of the Student Body walked in. I stirred for a moment but soon went back to semi-sleep.

Then suddenly I awoke with a start. "Freshmen required to attend football games next year," I heard. "Increase school spirit."

I was riled now, but I watched helplessly while only Senator Barbman opposed the plan. If I were only a Senator! If I could only speak!

The proposal was approved and would have become law if it had been written up then.

Of course I went to the football games as a freshman, I thought. Movies, ball-seasoning, drinking . . . I would have objected bitterly if I had been told I had to go.

Yes, that seemed to be the whole trouble. Students are forcing students into a corner. And in the face of those ground-floody words "school spirit" used to be a joke around my high school. Used to be one of those grandiose things talked about but never defined.

Anyway, I was still sleepy and I dozed off again. In my dazed state I began getting an idea. The idea. It would solve all problems. We would hire a dream.

Fabulous! It would solve all problems. Freshmen wouldn't ever have to worry about reading lines, registering, studying or anything. We would all be free.

I was beginning to feel great much as satisfied with myself when suddenly I realized such power would really be people. I hurried to my feet. "Hey, you Senators! do this. You'll produce a bunch of robots," I screamed.

I looked around. Everyone had gone home.

I wonder how much of that was a dream.

ON A PEDESTAL

On College, And Other War Stories

By NICK REEVES

It's becoming rather difficult to discuss anything with some of the people I am told. Especially when it comes to the subject of war. They seem to be afraid to vouch for this, to be sure.

There are many stories in the cinema which try to point out that it is a 'sore' subject to talk about to veterans of men who have fought. However, at least I have never entered never seem to have too difficult a time discussing war experiences with the brash youth enrolled in ROTC who "knows all the answers."

There are a lot of things about the war you never realize until you've been through them and lived it. You begin to realize that after the bombs and death and destruction is shin are, that the interesting learn chemists and physics. It's conversationa.st in one fox-hole may well be the dead story in the next. You find it hard to believe that you could be killed too. It always seems to happen to the other soldier and not to you. Most of the time during you feel as if you're watching the scene on film and are seeing know it. You read about 'light' everything in a sense of detachment. You know that on every one of these 'light' glass. War is strange and certainly not sane under unless attacks, a time comes when you the listener feels he can gain killed. Then she fellow Americ- something by hearing what the cans say, "Well, the war's al-veteran has to say. Then she as-soldier doesn't mind talking. In fact, he's a little proud he's got all the fighting in him. He feels patriotic, but still wants to see that there is someone else in the future. There are many people evading the draft in one manner or another to have the 'old-timers' return to what it remembers as friendships, you make friends just as in college, but under five to ten times as close because of the crew whether he has the dirtiest job on the line or figure he's made it before so hang onto his body like tape.

Maybe these are some of the things you never appreciate until you're in the service that aren't using blanks. You learn the principles of war as easily as you extremely hard, but you don't fall asleep in class once you've take life at a minimum.

After you return, your biggest complaint is the American people. Yes, you've risked your life defending them, but they don't seem to appreciate it or even to want to. You read about 'light' attacks, a time comes when you the listener feels he can gain killed. Then she fellow Americans, a time comes when you most over—only light—."

The above are comments made to me by the soldiers who have finished and are finishing their courses of study at Florida State University. They are willing to discuss war with you, if you want to listen, but too often the people who looks at you with a blank expression, waves his hand and says, "No, War stories."

War is a strange subject. It has been described by some of the world's leading authors: Hemingway, Anderson, Faulkner and Norman who seemed to describe it rather well for a general. And yet through it all, it remains a subject of tendisliens on stage and screen to put anything to compare with the 'real' thing. It is hoped that this sensation will never be reached by many of you. Forget the rest "It makes a man out of you." Find another way. Maybe love.

And when you look over your copy of Mad Comics remember that colleeg should be appreciated while you have it for the worst is yet to come.

Question of the week: Is the ROTC served its purpose now that it must comprise two-thirds of the lee tea and other beverages served in the cafeterias?

VISIONS OF VICTORY

Football: Compulsive Or Compulsory

By DICK VICTORY

We are being trifled with.

By whom? you ask. Ah yes, there is the rub. We think it is a noble bunch the prestige would like to see us take it easier to swallow, but lo, it is not so.

The Student Senate has caused this.

The Senate recently heard a resolution introduced by Flora them that (in essence) would call for mandatory freshman attendance at football games. (See staff editorial).

Now, it would be hard for ma to accept the fact that they would just listen to such a proposal. But, alas, they did. And they approved the idea. In fact, only one person opposed it. That one person was Senator Curtis."

How do they justify this? That's easy. They hide behind the myths of "school spirit" and the "love of the game."

In the first place, anybody that still believes that the football rabbish had best get in line with the rest of the East-or lunacy fringe. It's dead. It's no purpose here. Pride is one thing; mesmerizing a football games another.

Now about "sport."

Sport (and it is necessary, I believe it is the only way we can capture the imagination of our youth. But, however unpopular, there are more important things. If not, then we pass that temporary stage.

The point I'm trying to make in all this is not the irrituals of the proposal in the first place. That's obvious. The really alarming thing is that the senate is even concerned with these matters. Hopefully at the expense of many more vital issues.

I had myself believing for a while that the Senate had some purpose, but now, this is a lee matter.

It's not surprising to find them wasting our time, but they also have no regard for their own.

This kind of petty tyranny's rearing it's ugly head all over the place lately. First the compulsory ROTC program. And now this latest nonsense.

A word to the wise: (Certainly, it doesn't apply to the senate) ELECTIONS.

ETCETERA ETCHINGS

Bourke Discusses Review Methods

By DAVID DREIS

Georgia Bourke is Amusement Editor of the Miami Herald. If that statement means little or nothing ment to you let me make clear that she is the national amusement center and the Miami Herald that city's leading paper. She is one of the persons more than just reviewing movies. She is the one person in that town is a full-time job.

His opinion on many things differ with mine and so in an interview with him last week, I couldn't help but feel that some of his ideas were a bit more justifiable than mine.

His criticism of MARLON BRANDO in JULIUS CAESAR was one of our points of disagreement. Bourke remarked, "You could tell that Brando was an actor and not the stars with virtually no Shakespearean background. In his long speeches, the camera had to show glimpses of the crowds and expressions of the listeners. This was used so the audience would not be bored. With JAMES MASON, for instance, you followed him throughout the entire speech and the variety in tone and gestures kept your interest throughout."

Bourke raised the flag for Universal-International ("in comparison to give the young actor a break. Maybe these newcomers are poor, but they're learning in the guidance of big name performers who are usually in the film."

The talk got around to Stanley Kramer. "When he and his wife were in Miami last week, we were discussing the newcomers. Kramer's wife, who has plenty of pride in her husband's achievements, asked him in his belief that in about five years the biggest box-office star who will turn into another Curtis." After recovering from that one, we asked Bourke about the PRO releases we spoke about in our previous columns. "Sometimes it's hard to distinguish between real news and publicity. In the case of the coffee-baths of Adele Lane that was the most ridiculous I've run it. Her agents called and we told them exactly that. We believe in informing and publicizing."

Does a reviewer get preity 'hard' on films after a few years? "I try not to," replied Bourke, "but sometimes it's difficult—especially when you have to watch a comedy so early in the morning. (Bourke sometimes has to review at the first show in the day to make deadline). Whenever I get in difficulty I watch audience reaction."

About would-be actors. "Sure they should go into the profession if they really want to, but before they do they should be well acquainted with the employment statistics. If that doesn't scare them, go to it. There are many theatrical schools which are good, but in the majority of cases they're a fine, but should only be sanctioned for professional training. If the student is certain he is as polished as possible and is emotionally stable, a high school or college instructor should steer a talented student wrong."

There's no doubt that Bourke enjoys his work. But she is never misses a current metion—unless he wants to, see all the big talent at a reopen and the rest of the things that go with the job. But Miss Bourke it's no picnic and the chiefs of publicity, press releases and appointment, could do fair evidence of his daily desires.

Next issue: The First Annual 'Ollie' Awards.

"... Then on the other hand, I never was very sensitive about mid-term grades."

INSURANCE STUDENTS

Insurance and real estate students of Florida State Universities were entertained by E. Bowin Larson, Insurance Commissioner of Florida, and members of his staff in the Senate Chamber of the Capitol.

The students, from the University of Miami, University of Florida, and FSU, heard a welcoming address by Mr. Larson, and later attended a cabinet meeting in the governor's office.

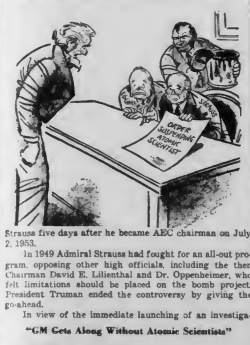
Throughout the day the students heard talks given by members of the Insurance Commission, Dr. A. B. Martin, vice-president of FSU, and Dean Charles A. Boretta, of the school of business, at FSU.

Acting Governor Charley E. Johns surprised the group by unexpectedly attending and giving a short talk on the insurance business. Gov. Johns is an insurance man in private life.

OFFICER TRAINING

College seniors and graduates still have an opportunity in 1954 to become Marine Corps officers under the Officer Candidate Course program, according to General Lemuel C. Shepherd Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps.

Plans have been completed for Marine Officer Representatives officers and Marine Instructors at NROTC units to accept applications from May 1 to July 1, 1954 for the 11th Officer Candidate Course to be held in November.



An applicant must be 20 years old and not over 27 on July 1, 1954. A senior or graduate of an accredited college who holds degrees in fields other than medicine, dentistry, veterinary medicine, theology, pharmacy, music or art may apply.

Barring Oppenheimer Demonstrates Extent 'Subversion' Fear Has Reached

The case of Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer demonstrates how far governmental paranoia has reached in tracking down so-called subversives in government. Along with the charge that Oppenheimer was associated with Communist causes is the "blacker" accusation that he opposed an all-out program for building the hydrogen bomb.

These allegations stem from documents released by the Atomic Energy Commission last week, after the story broke in The New York Times. The charges, originally made last December 21, but hushed up, arose out of an investigation personally initiated by Admiral Lewis

"You Thinking About My Security Or Yours?"

Strauss five days after he became AEC chairman on July 2, 1953.

In 1949 Admiral Strauss had fought for an all-out program, opposing other high officials, including the then Chairman David E. Lilienthal and Dr. Oppenheimer, who felt limitations should be placed on the bomb project. President Truman ended the controversy by giving the go-ahead.

In view of the immediate launching of an investigation, and in view of the controversy previously existing between Admiral Strauss and Dr. Oppenheimer, the tenor of the former's actions should be considered fully. His reason for the investigation may well have been only one of total allegiance to the cause; that no doubtful figure should be in so commanding a position. This would be a just and sound cause for removal. Yet, it has been reported that Admiral Strauss, because of certain past clashes with Dr. Oppenheimer, was prejudiced towards the scientist. In view of the present dire circumstances, every facet of the case should be born out and tested soberly.

"GM Gets Along Without Atomic Scientists"

In the same light, the background of Dr. Oppenheimer has been investigated with an exacting thoroughness. That is the method of security regualtions governing AEC personnel. A continuous check is made of all AEC personnel by the FBI and by security pocedures within the AEC itself.

Dr. Oppenheimer was the leading scientist in the fission bomb project, and perhaps more than any other individual brought into being. Inevitably, such an individual in so high a position would have had his background checked thoroughly, exactingly and repeatedly, in accordance with these security regulations. In the twelve years Dr. Oppenheimer served his capacities, it is unthinkable that Communist affiliations, which now seemingly weigh so heavily, lay dormant until brought forth with such vehemence by Admiral Strauss.

As far as can be determined the facts are these: Oppenheimer had connections with certain Communist causes during the 1930's. His wife was at one time a Communist herself. Both have since renounced any connection with the party. Oppenheimer served the nation loyally during the war, having been cleared by the government. He was one of the top men in the development of the atomic, fission, bomb.

It is no secret that a multitude of scientists condemn the atomic and hydrogen bombs, and today, refrain from having anything to do with them. Though many have helped on the project in the past, they have come to realize the fearful and moral consequences they helped to bring about, and now are racked with self-guilt. As much or more than any scientist living, Dr. Oppenheimer holds this same belief, and if he opposed the making of a hydrogen bomb, it was purely and basically a moral issue. We believe it is inconceivable that he did it for subversive reasons.

Our society does not benefit from such episodes. The feeling expressed by Dr. Harold C. Urey seems representative of the widespread feeling among scientists. He called the suspension of Dr. Oppenheimer "one of the most unjust things I ever heard of. Such actions discourage people from becoming scienists, encourage people not to give their service to the Government and will lead to a weakening of our scientific and engineering position."

A panel of the AEC's personnel security board headed by Gordon Gray, president of the University of North Carolina and former Secretary of the Army; Thomas Morgan, former chairman and president of the Sperry Gyroscope Corporation; and Ward V. Evans, Professor of Chemistry at Loyola University of Chicago, are now determining the case of Dr. Oppenheimer. We are hopeful of their objectivity and fairness in arriving at the just decision.

But the injustice has already been done. Called upon by his country to render assistance to a project that could easily one day destroy man, Dr. Oppenheimer did so—all the while realizing fully the grave consequences that could arise in an atomic world. Out of this now, is his reward, and his end. Even though we are convinced he will be cleared, a great American's reputation has been irreparable dmaged. We hope the responsible individuals realize the all-encompassing deeds they have written into history.

Powerful Film, 'Julius Caesar,' To Show At State For Week

One of the most talked about movies of the year came to the State Theater this week with the showing of Julius Caesar," M-G-M's filmization of William Shakespeare's famous play.

To bring this powerful drama of the struggle against tyranny and the downfall of a dictator to the Rome of B. C. to the screen, M-G-M brought together a cast of 30 speaking roles and hundreds of supporting roles.

Dr. Marlan Brando as Mark Antony offers one of the year's outstanding screen performances. The dynamic young actor who vaulted to stardom with his portrayal of Stanley Kowalski in A Streetcar Named Desire, now plays his first Shakespearean role as the ruthless avenger of Caesar's assassination.

James Mason is seen as Brutus, "noblest Roman of them all." John Gielgud one of the stage's outstanding Shakespearean actors plays Cassius, leader of the conspirators. Louis Calhern is Julius Caesar, while Edmond O'Brien enacts Casca another of the plotters against Caesar.

The picture's two feminine starring roles are played by Greer Garson, as Caesar's wife, Calpurnia, and Deborah Kerr, as Portia, the wife of Brutus.

The story tells of Cassius and Casca, plotting to assassinate Julius Caesar, who has established himself as virtual dictator of Rome. They win the honorable Brutus to their side and Caesar is slain.

Caesar's devoted friend, Mark Antony, rouses the populace of Rome with a impassioned funeral oration and the conspirators are forced to flee. A battle between the armies takes place at Philippi, one headed by Brutus and Cassius: the other headed by Mark Antony and Octavius.

When the tide turns against them Cassius orders his slave to kill him and Brutus throws himself upon his sword.

James Caesar was directed by Joseph L. Manhiewicz, winner of four Academy Awards. It was produced by John Houseman, producer of Broadway's modern-dress "Julius Caesar" in 1937, and of the recent M-G-M picture The Bad and the Beautiful.

A special matinee performance will be given at the State Theater at 11 a.m. today and tomorrow. There is no increase in admission cost.

Today Is 390th Anniversary Of Shakespeare; Appeal Holds

By JOYCE POTTER

"How many ages hence
Shall this our lofty scene be enacted o'er
In states unborn and accents
yet unknown"

These prophetic lines were written by William Shakespeare nearly 400 years ago in his "Julius Caesar" as he told of the fall of the Roman Dictator and the conflict of man's thirst for power.

Although Shakespeare has been dead for 390 years, we still remember him and quote many of the famous lines he wrote long ago.

Thousands of students are attending performances of the new movie version of "Julius Caesar" as a part of the birthday observance. The film is being greeted with making millions of new fans for Shakespeare.

The blood-and-thunder nature of this ever-modern Shakespearian story, plus a cast of popular movie stars, is making "Julius Caesar" a mass-appeal movie instead of just an intellectual exercise. The public may go to admire Mr. Brando, but they remain to embrace Mr. Shakespeare.

Some of the immortal plays written by Shakespeare are "Romeo and Juliet," "As You Like It," "The Taming of the Shrew," "King Lear," "The Merchant of Venice" and many others.

The first that is known about Shakespeare was that when he was a country boy, he apparently left home under a cloud, went up to London, was soon successful enough to rouse the jealousy of playwrights who thought themselves better educated; but that those who actually knew him found him lovable.

There were two true years for him when his wife had to borrow money, and he himself was slow in paying taxes. However, he became prosperous, and bought a handsome house in Stratford and raised a mulberry tree in the yard.

Even in the 16th Century there was already so much curiosity about him that the person who then occupied that house was pestered by visitors. The story is that he bore it down to end the nuisance.

Long ago people were attending Shakespeare's play, laughing at his comedies and sitting entranced with his tragedies. Now 390 years later they still hold the same appeal!

FSU Coed Named Miss Sorority USA; Gets Bahamas Trip

Nancy Graham, Florida State University co-ed, was crowned Miss Sorority U.S.A. in Fort Lauderdale Sunday. Miss Graham was selected from 14 finalists from over the nation.

Sponsored by the Fort Lauderdale Swimming Association, Nancy will receive a two weeks vacation for two in Nassau, Bahamas.

The contest was the first of its kind, said according to Nancy, it will be featured every year.

There were over 2,000 contestants from over the nation entered. The Pan-Hel association on campus handled the arrangements.

POSTER PROCEDURE

Students running in the spring elections are reminded that there are certain rules and regulations concerning posting of campaign literature.

All candidates are responsible for removing their own literature within 48 hours after elections, including all tape and tacks.

Other regulations that students are asked to observe and that may result in disqualification if not observed are that posters are not to be tacked or nailed to trees or walls, no placards are to be placed on stained walls and placards in buildings are allowed only on the outside, and other than the plastered walls.

In women's residence halls, posters must not exceed 12x18 and are allowed only on bulletin boards other than the official bulletin boards and are allowed only on any other screens, etc., as the residence director sees fit.

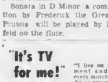
Seminar Ends With Programs By Musicians

The curtain will rise down on the Stverin Annual Art Seminar with programs featuring music from the Renaissance and Baroque periods April 25-26 at Sarasota. The Seminar is co-sponsored by the Ringling Museum of Art and Florida State University.

Concerts will be held in the John Ringling residence with Lee Bishop of the Florida State University music faculty presiding at the three musical organ. furnished by Ringling.



Admission to all the seminar events, including the concerts, is free and tickets are being reserved for students and people who register the first day, Sunday, April 25.

Rosby has conducted extensive research on music of the 16th century for several years and is now concluding a musical manuscript of the period.

J. Davton Smith, FSU faculty tenor, and Lewis Dunfield, FSU graduate student oboeist and flutist, will assist with the program. Smith, a soloist of wide experience in both contemporary and historical musics' forms, will sing selections by Monteverdi and Franz Tunder.

Sonata in D Minor a composition by Frederick the Great of Prussia will be played by Dunfield on the flute.

Wylie Recalls Experiences

in Hollywood as a movie writer is that he became acquainted with the atomic physicists who were working in California. He considers himself one of the few non-scientists at that time who saw the crest drama of the atom and the profound effect that the developments were to have on the lives of all.

His interest impelled him to try to further understand the brain-child of the Twentieth Century; the A-Bomb. And he studied and observed, using his science background in college as the basis of his knowledge.

He dramatically recalled the tests that he had seen at Frenchman's Flats. He has seen a town almost destroyed save for a shift in the wind. He has seen hundreds of observers and generals alike frightened at their creation and weapon.

If the men who masterminded the A-Bomb are fearful of it, what type of psychological effect will it have upon ordinary citizens? Mr. Wylie attempted to portray this effect in "Tomorrow!" Asked if he was planning to write more on this topic, Mr. Wylie said that the book had accomplished his aims and that he would deal with the subject no further.

Mr. Wylie's next book will deal with psychology and beliefs. His main interest has been psychology. As early as 1947 he wrote "An Essay on Morals" on which he presented his philosophy. That he has been deeply influenced by the newest discoveries and theories of the psychologists in relation to human behavior is evident in this work.

Mr. Wylie feels that man's beliefs, or his intellectual and moral powers, have not been as objective as his scientific advancement. This fact holds man back, and he becomes the victim of his outdated beliefs. Humans will not recognize themselves as they really are but cling to distorted images which keep them in a "cannibalistic" state of ignorance.

Some of Mr. Wylie's psychological studies are found in his "Generation of Vipers" "Opus 21" "The Disappearance." and "Nuthe Unio Night." Critics have used the words "Explosive, entertaining enlightenment, weird, thought-provoking, daring, and intellectual dynamite" to describe these books.

Mr. Wylie joins the small ranks of Russian observers when he relates his travels in that country, and he sketches a rather pessimistic picture. In Russia Mr. Wylie has seen people who live and think quite differently than we do. He describes people who are often under conditions which would be unbearable to the average American.

He relates seeing hundreds of diseased Russians living on the open decks of a ship for five days. He has observed Red Armies brutally beating citizens, and he tells of leaders living in the restaurants of Southern Russian cities.

Philip Wylie believes that the Russians are sinners in control of America, and would go to any ends to get that power. He was amazed at the lack of knowledge of the outside world that the typical Russian college graduate had.

The blood author also feels that war with Russia is inevitable. The basis for this, says Mr. Wylie, is the Russian determination and the fact that little value is placed on the individual in the Russian civilization. No expense of life or property would be too great for the Soviets if they could achieve their goal, is Mr. Wylie's conclusion.

Mr. Wylie foresees failure in our attempts to reach [illegible] and peaceful atomic agreement with the men of the Kremlin. This, along with the mass lack of comprehension of the atomic bomb and its effects, has driven Mr. Wylie to his assertion that a new philosophy is needed if we are to survive in the age of peril in which we live.

Philip Wylie stands as a symbol of an age of fear. His writings show no attempt to scourge the reader and at the same time evolve a new philosophy. He is a hard listener to do, and it has made this man one of our most controversial literary figures. Mr. Wylie is trying to advance a scientific philosophy in an era when science has proven to us that we are animals at the same time that it has given us the most frighteningly powerful weapon in the history of mankind.

Mr. Wylie has written over twenty novels and entertaining short stories. He is a regular contributor to many of our leading magazines. He is a native Floridian, and many of his short stories are set in Florida.

On Tuesday evening about thirty members of the Rollins School entertained Mr and Mrs. Wylie at an informal dinner held in the patio of the Student Center.

Mr. and Mrs. Wylie were the guests of Dr. Shores and were visiting the campus en route to the Florida Library Association Convention in Pensacola where Mr. Wylie is scheduled to speak this evening.

alty should not transcend personal ambition.

Carried in the procession were the material artifacts of the Cross (a large 8x3 feet wooden one), the nails, the scourges, the crown of thorns, the linen cloth, and the sponge with the death sentence of Christ written on it. In the order of the church the procession stopped and a statue of Christ was brought forth from the sacred alcove. A pin on the body of Christ nestled neatly into the fold of the robe, and the procession started anew with a series of three pauses. In the first was the statue of Christ carrying His cross. On the second were "Angels"—small Indian girls dressed in silk with head scarfs and silver "wings".

The third "float" was the two Marys and Salome who were supposed to attend at the tomb of Christ on Easter. These "floats" were carried by the non-regular themselves, and slowly circled the inside courtyard of the church.

There were three pauses during these processions around the yard, each of which represented one of the falls of Christ on His road to Calvary. At each spot the local padre would recite a ritual portion and present to the people of the significance of the cross in their lives today, in the life and death of Christ.

One of the most moving pictures I have of the celebration was of the huge crowd on their knees before the procession passing, while in the distance the mountains beckoned to the sun finally being seen in the east.

Although this was the end of Medinaceli Week and Holy Celebration, the other cities in Mexico have another custom which is the burning of Judas made of paper-mache and painted with devil's horns. He is tried with firecrackers and hoisted over the waiting crowd. A special firework display by local stores' merchandise tied to Judas. At a signal the firecrackers go off and Judas is blown to shreds with the merry-making in the madly fighting crowd.

The magnificent Cathedral of Mexico City holds Easter services and we returned late Saturday night to attend the Sunday morning. There are no "Pitch Avenue Parades," but everyone is dressed in their best outfits, hoping to match their souls resolve to realize the significance of another Easter.

a burden on the freshmen."

Another proposal by senator Holford dealt with day students. She proposed that Tallahassee students living in dormitories be allowed to spend weekends at home without having these count as weekends. The proposal was amended so that local students be allowed to go home in Tallahassee three weekends without counting as a weekend. The proposal was referred to a committee for rewording.

Halford pointed out that local students being so close to home it was unfair to have their long home count toward their allotted weekends when regular students who visited with visiting parents during weekends or other times were not so allotted.

The women senators stressed that failure to turn out for day trips would result in judiciary action.

"Many women didn't sign out for a unchaperoned day trip because of fear of not being back by 7:30. Now the time is 9 p.m., so they have no excuse," commented Halford.

rothers commented, "I think it's good that we'll have two parties working in this election. I think it's a healthy sign."

When asked for comment on hard feelings resulting from students denied party nominations running as another party or running independently Carothers declared that on campus party loyalty increased because of loyalty of the crowd.

"I don't think the purpose of a campus political party is to keep students from running," he said. "I think that as many qualified students who want to run should do so, regardless of whether they get a nomination or not."

Voting student turnout at the polls Tuesday, Carothers said, "It's very important for the classes to have good officers for next year. I want to urge all the students to exercise their privilege of voting."

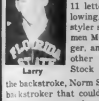
Letters Awarded To...

Three FSU winter sports have announced their letter-men for the 1953-54 season.

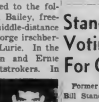
Coach Bud Kennedy announced eight FSU basketball players have been awarded gold letters. Seniors Duane Gordon and Jerry Westhafer will be the only men who will not return to Seminole uniform for the 1954-55 season.



Defending the un-official State Championship for the Seminoles next year will be: All-Staters Jimmy Oler and "Flim" Wemke. Rebounding Rick Benson will be at the centerslot with plenty of competition. With the stars of the Baby Seminoles coming up to the first string, not only will Rick find it hard, but so will the rest of the returning lettermen.

The other three lettermen are Dick Artmeier, Tom Burst and Tommy Delihan, will find the going tought with such freshmen as: Don Alford, Bob Williams, A. J. Jarvis, Bobby Ward, Fred Towmey and Bob Watts. All these boys lettermen with numerals this season.

With 20 candidates trying out for the 1954-55 season, the Florida State Hoosiers should come up with a better team than last season.



Swimmers Elect Co-Captains

The undefeated Tankmen of Florida State elected Ace Diver Larry Beaty, and breaststroker Steve Bailey as their captains for the 1953-54 season.

Larry

Coach Bim Stults has announced that 11 letters have been awarded to the following, captains Beaty and Bailey, freestyler sprinter, Jim Julian middle-distance men Mike Tschrirret and George irschberger, and distance star Joel Lurie. In the other events, Dick Rhoton and Ernie Stock were the only breaststrokers. In the backstroke, Norm Shipley was the only backstroker that could letter. The fancy divers were, up-and-coming Bob Spaulding and Bob Stuke. Manager Don Cooper, taking the load off the coach in many respects, followed through the season and earned his letter. Freshman standout Ron Twitty, numeraled along with Managers "Punky" DeRosa, and Bob Granger.

Steve

Highnetters Letter Ten

Finishing among the top five college volleyball teams in the nation, in Intercollegiate competition, the Florida State Seminole Highnetters, coached by Bill Odeneal, lettered ten men for the very successful 1953-54 season.

Among many other honors, the Seminole squad won the Florida AAU Championship, plus the Southern Intercollegiate and the Smokey Mountain Tournaments.

Leading the pack of lettermen is Howie Gould, two-time all-American, who stands a good chance to be selected for the third time.

The other lettermen are: Ray Johnson, Jack Lewis, Bernard McCann, John Morgens, Phil Slaton, and Howard Stone.

A PRETTY WINNER . . . Nancy Graham, a sophomore here, was chosen Miss Sorority, U.S.A., at the first annual contest held recently in Fort Lauderdale. As winner, she will receive a two week's trip to Nassau, Bahamas for two.

Netters, Golfers and Frosh Nine Vie in Weekend Tilts

Florida State University's spring sports teams get back to a more normal routine this week after completing a six-day rush of 12 contests today.

A hall-dozen events—five set for Friday and Saturday—are scheduled for Seminole baseball, golf, tennis and track squads next week.

Florida State University's fine tennis team, back from a successful four-meet road trip in Georgia, face the tough Rollins Tars in a return match here Saturday afternoon.

Rollins defeated the Seminoles 5-4 in a match earlier this season at winter Park.

Coach Ralph Matherly's unpredictable baseballers travel to DeLand to return a two-game series with Stetson's Hatters. The teams, who divided their Tallahassee series last Monday and Tuesday, will play single games Friday and Saturday.

FSU's freshman baseball team, tutored by Ken Smith, hosts the Centre College Colonels, defending Kentucky Intercollegiate Conference champs, Friday afternoon.

On Saturday, Coach Ken Miller's Seminole thinclads open a string of four straight home track meets in a triangular affair with Georgia and Georgia Tech. That one is carded for the West Campus track.

Coach Don Veller's FSU golfers seek a measure of revenge in a dual match with Rollins Saturday at the Tallahassee Country Club. Rollins handed the Seminoles their only links loss in seven starts earlier this spring.

TODAY

FSU varsity baseballers vs. Stetson at Deland. FSU freshman baseballers vs. Centre (Ky.) College, East Campus diamond, 3 p. m.

TOMORROW

FSU track team vs. Georgia-Georgia Tech, West Campus track, 2 p. m.; FSU golfers vs. Rollins, Tallahassee Country Club; FSU baseballers vs. Stetson at DeLand.

Seminoles And Hatters Clash In Two Game Series In Deland

Florida State University's baseball Seminoles, victims in four of their last six games, will attempt to find their winning formula again tomorrow when they open a two-game stand against the Stetson Hatters in DeLand.

FSU and Stetson will play single games Friday and Saturday afternoons.

Coach Ralph Motherrly's club is well rested since splitting a pair with the Hatters and trimming Georgia Teachers in Tallahassee last week. The Indians have a 10-7 overall record this spring.

J. M. Atwood

Friday's game will be the 20th in the FSU-Stetson diamond series, with the Seminoles now holding a 10-9 edge in the rivalry.

State's five front-line pitchers —Max Long, Jim Atwood, Ham Wernke, Forrest Brown and George Hehemann—all are set for a turn against Stetson. Long, owner of a 5-2 record, and Atwood are expected to be Mathertly's choices to open against the Hatters.

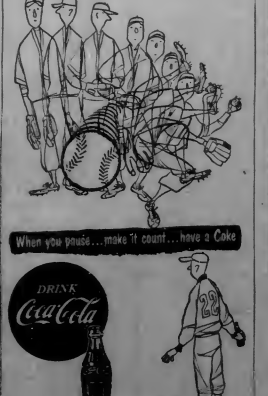
Shortstop Cooter Mills (.385), centerfielder Bob Hudson, and first baseman Fred Twomey are the leading hitters among the regulars. Hudson is batting .317 and Twomey .305.

Coach Ken Smith's FSU freshman nine will host the Centre College (Ky.) Colonels in a single game on the varsity deminole diamond Friday afternoon, starting at 3.

Stancik Plans Voting Survey For Gold Key

Former Secretary of Elections Bill Stancik has announced his plans to conduct a survey of voting participation in the class elections this Tuesday.

"To be carried out as a Gold Key top project, his questionnaire, which will be given to all voters, will ask for class standing, sex, fraternity or sorority or independent status, dormitory or day student residence and political party preference to be indicated, he revealed.



At Tuesday afternoon's Student Body Senate meeting the legislators adopted a resolution in favor of Stancik's plan. The resolution, introduced by Sen. Jimmy Joanos, was amended to ask that the results be made public.

"Gold Key is undertaking this project," Stancik said, "primarily to see how the students here at FSU vote and what their preferences are, in order to give student body leaders factual information."

The participation of certain groups in campus politics was an issue in political party caucuses and conventions and was indirectly referred to by Senator Joanos when he introduced his resolution. He suggested such a survey when campaigning as a dark horse candidate for the Student Party chairmanship.

The Senate, prior to passing the resolution, confirmed Betty Jo Grubbs as Secretary of Elections. She was appointed last Monday by Student Body President Milton Carothers to succeed Stancik, who resigned in order to seek the nomination for Senator.

Praising his successor, Stancik said, "Betty Jo Grubbs is very excellently qualified.

TWENTY FROM FSU IN MEET

Twenty faculty members from Florida State University are attending the seventh annual meeting of the Florida Psychological Association being held April 29 through May 1 at St. Petersburg.

Those from FSU attending are Dr. Richard Husband, Dr. Paul Fuller, Bora Gertz, Eugene Byrd, Dr. Ralph Wilkerspoon, Frederick Schlamp, Maye White, Irvine Walter Smith and William Corsan.

Also Lydia Paule James Smith, Arthur Orgel, Dr. Winthrop Kellogg, Dell Lebo, Dr. Hugh Wasson, J. David O'Shea, Dr. Theron Alexander, G. H. Frank, C. C. Corrie, and Dr. Ralph Dreger.

SIGMA CHI LEADERSHIP

Sigma Chi is sending five men this weekend to Atlanta for a Sigma Chi Leadership Training Workshop sponsored by the Emory chapter.

The five from FSU are Jimmy Joanos, Pete Nimkoff, Lynn Wilder, Raymond Williams and Chris Johnson.

The workshop, a phase of the complete Sigma Chi workshop program, supplements the National meeting held each summer.

Attending the workshop will be Assistant Attorney General Stanley N. Barnes, president of the general fraternity and a number of other national officers.

FSU Gymnasts Off To Ga. AAU Meet Saturday

Dr. Hartley Price will be after his 21st team championship this weekend when his Seminole gym team competes in the Georgia AAU at Atlanta.

Competing against five other teams, the Seminoles are heavily favored to retain the title they have held the past four years.

Among other titles Dr. Price has accumulated while at Florida State are two NCAA and two NAAU championships, also a feat that places Dr. Price and the Price men high in the gymnastics circle of the United States.

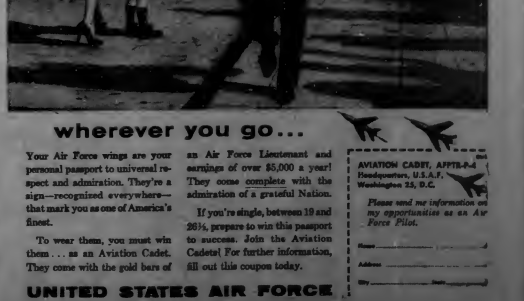
Defending titles won last year will be Don Holder, last year's side horse champ, Joe Taylor, who took the flying rings championship last year, and Carmine Regna, winner of last year's parallel bar championship.

Three of Florida State's champs who will not be on hand to defend titles won last year are Bill Goeldhem, Benny Wallace, and Alan Marcus. At last year's meet Bill took first in high bar and all-around, Wallace placed first in tumbling, and Marcus took the rope climbing crown.

Also on hand for this meet will be Dick Ireland, second place winner in last year's trampoline competition. Dick will again meet his rival, Kosher of Gadsden, who beat him by a slight margin in several meets, including last year's Georgia AAU. To add to this competition will be Pete and Jim Fadigan, a major threat on the trampoline anytime. With these three boys competing on trampoline the outcome is unpredictable, but one thing is sure: The trampoline event will be the most thrilling of them all.

The entire Seminole line-up includes co-captain Dan Holder and Pat Signorelli, National champ Jack Miles, Fader, Lorenz, captain of the 1952 Cuban Olympic team, the Reans twins, Joe and Carmine, Jim Tsanis, Jim Fadigan and Dick Ireland. These same men will compete at the National AAU meet to be held at Los Angeles April 30 to May 2.

Objective Tests Are Best To Evaluate Pupils Says Shanks



BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (IP)—Objective tests are better than essay type examinations, a conference of Southern educators decided recently at Florida State Teachers. Dean Henry T. Shanks of Birmingham-Southern College, who attended the conference at the Talahassee school, reported the group a conclusion on his return here

"They decided the best test is the one that evaluates the student's factual information rather than his attitudes and beliefs," Dean Shanks reported. He personally did not agree in full with the edict of the 14-state conference, which was co-sponsored by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N. J.

The best method, he said, is to get good teachers and give them a free rein.

Girls Campused for Attending Over One Movie Each Month

BY MARY ELIZABETH KING

Case Sixteen (April 29, 1915) - Connie Boudilino reported to have taken her beau out on the campus to entertain him. GIN - Connie assured the court that she saw other girls sitting out there, and thought it was all right. "Excuses haven't changed much" "I did not realize that I had no rules to go by on this."

Connie was restricted for two weeks for entertaining her beau.

Case Seventeen (May 25, 1915) - Ruby Reiser was reported for hiding to town with a young man without permission. She explained that she had to get the paper to the printing office before 12 noon and didn't have time to get permission. It was moved and carried that she have all her privileges taken away.

Many girls were campused for going to more than one movie a month. Cpts. Pennington, of the class, were allowed to attend only one movie per month. Wouldn't this save money for girls and their boyfriends if such a rule was passed now?

Everybody had to eat breakfast in the morning. A girl couldn't even eat when she wanted to. A bell would summon the girls and if it happened to be early the dining room doors would be closed and they missed breakfast and were restricted for a period of time. Special tables for late comers were provided. Why take away money for girls and their boyfriends if such a rule was passed now?

A bell would summon the girls and if it happened to be early the dining room doors would be closed and they missed breakfast and were restricted for a period of time. Special tables for late comers were provided. Why take away money for girls and their boyfriends if such a rule was passed now?

Case Eighteen (Feb. 2, 1916) - Mary Hall meeting was called to find out about the smoking party held in 206 Reynolds Hall.

Four girls were connected with this. It seems they had gone to the girls' room to sew when one girl went to her trunk to get something and found a bunch of pleasure cigarettes. In a spirit of fun they decided to smoke them. Realizing what they were doing they put them out immediately. The girls were asked to say nothing at all about the matter. This would be the only way to keep it from being exaggerated beyond measure. "The NO hags with fags rule was violated by only a few of the most daring, women of the world, type of girl. Guess they had all heard about George Sanders and her cigets.)

Case Nineteen (Dec. 19, 1918) - There were always a few of the more serious types of offenses. One girl was caught stealing from downtown stores. She confessed and was dismissed from school.

Case Twenty (Feb. 28, 1919) - This could be considered the grand "coupe de grace" or "coup de main" of all cases ever brought from the coop.

A called meeting was held for a very important announcement. Miss Cavaliero told us that Mattie Tramony went to town as nine o'clock Tuesday night and got married. She said that Tuesday night Mr. Bliss came to call on her and had the marriage license with him and they came to get Mattie. She also said that it had been a bit of trouble in getting the license as she was out of sex but she later tried and again and that she was 21 and he was 22 years of age, giving reason as Maiden Aunt. He could be married. She said that she emphatically refused but as I kept insisting she thought they could get married and not let anyone know about and finally consented to go with him in the impulse of the moment. Why, a sentence.

He had a car waiting for her at the front gate and they went.

She told the house president that she was going over to the library, but went on downtown and got married but came back within a half an hour and he went back to Tampa, leaving her here. After the most careful considerations with the advisory council it was decided that Mattie Tramony be dismissed from school.

Adjournment.

Summary Outlines Points Helpful To Student, State Or University

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (I.P.)— Present admissions practice at the Consolidated University of North Carolina is not "adequately selective for the best interests of students, state, or University," declares, in part, a 20-page summary of the recent Sunday State University meeting held on this campus. The entire report on the Quality of Students follows:

Case for selective admissions practice, based on sounder criteria and a broader philosophy of service, is feasible and necessary. Admissions policy should be based upon a college aptitude counselling rather than merely a screening philosophy of University responsibility. Such a policy can be put into successful practice only on the basis of an adequate pre-college testing program indicating both scholastic aptitude and level of prospective students. This information should be made available to high schools as objective basis for recommending students for admission. By counselling with students concerning their prospects for success in college and for appraising the adequacy of preparatory work in the schools, the University can help high schools raise their standards, regardless of whether those who now attend college. Responsibility for selection, review, and revision of ad-

Ezekel spoke at 4:45 p.m. in 124 Science to members of the physics seminar.

Vitamins May Cure Alcoholism Says Williams in Speech Here

Dr. Roger J. Williams of the University of Texas voiced the opinion that "Vitamins may cure alcoholism" in a speech at Florida State University last week sponsored by Sigma Chi and the American Chemical Society.

Perry man, woman and child has a distinctive chemistry of his own, and some physical maladies are more sensitive to some than others." Dr. Williams said.

He explained that an alcoholic craving can be attributed to the sugar craving of a diabetic. After years of research he believes that a nutritional supplement is the best answer to the thirst for alcohol.

In Dr. Williams' own laboratory on the campus at Austin he has worked out a nutrition formula which as a food supplement has proved successful in treating a number of alcoholic cases. He calls the mixture of vitamins "Tryopan."

"Tryopan is cheaper than liquor. It will not hurt anyone and it has been known to help people with high blood pressure and others who suffer from insomnia," the Texas chemist said.

He believes that the psychoanalyst in general has been a failure in treating alcoholism. He also thinks that the Alcahalic Anonymous approach, mainly religious, is fine for as it goes. But he concludes that the problem is basically physical and is best treated by doctors who are keeping abreast of chemical research.

As director of the Biochemical Institute at the University of Texas since 1941, Dr. Williams has been impressed with the number of important new vitamins discovered in recent years. One of his co-workers, Dr. Lester Reed, recently discovered lipoic acid which in proving valuable in working out sound diets.

Dr. Williams became interested in alcoholic research about five years ago when he was writing a book, "The Human Frontier," a plea for the understanding of individuals. He uncovered more on the alcoholic problem in a later book, "Nutrition and Alcoholism" and more still in his book, "Free and Unequal."

"Many alcoholics are wise old willed individuals, and they deserve all the help we chemists can give them," Dr. Williams said.

Knox College Seminar Studies 'Values In Higher Education'

GALESBURG, Ill. —(I.P.)— Knox College's faculty has established a "Seminar on the Communication of Religious and Democratic Values in Higher Education" which is making a comprehensive study of what each department can do to widen the college's influence in producing students "who not only understand the issues of the day but also be courageous convictions about them."

The Seminar's 20 members have begun a series of bi-weekly meetings which are expected to continue over a four-year period "In establishing this seminar, the Knox faculty declares itself unilaterally opposed to taking a neutral stand on controversial issues," according to Dean Charles H Peake. The paper is called simu, as outlined by chairman John Stipp, department of religious history, are:

1. to define the fundamental religious and democratic values of our civilization, 2. to discover how these values can be most effectively taught in each department as well as through non-academic activities, 3. to learn the current beliefs and attitudes of Knox students and develop means of measuring the effect of the Knox program on students' moral values, 4. to construct an overall program for achieving the objectives of the college.

The seminar deals specifically with course content, reading materials, and teaching methods. Other aspects of the program include interviews, tests, and questionnaires designed to determine the attitudes and understandings of incoming freshmen as well as graduating seniors. Changes found will be explored to learn their causes and causes.

Sessions of the seminar are devoted to reports by members who have been assigned diffuse projects and to round-table discussions by the entire group. Among the guest speakers was Dr. William T. Gallard, executive director of the Institute of Nuclear Research at Oak Ridge, Tenn. The noted scientist, who is also an Episcopal deacon, emphasized that worthwhile attitudes can be taught only by teachers who themselves have a strong belief in God.

The basic philosophy of Knox's attitude toward the teaching of religious and democratic values is expressed in a recent statement by President Sharry G. Umbeck: "It is not enough to say: 'Knox is teaching nothing contrary to the Christian doctrines' or 'Knox is not teaching Communism.' It is imperative that the College make certain that positive and effective steps are taken to assure the development in its students of fundamental values and attitudes reflecting both an understanding of and an appreciation for the democratic way of life and of the moral and religious ideals embodied in the Judeo-Christian tradition," Dr. Umbeck says.

Art Exhibit Shown For Visiting Ladies

A "Special" art exhibit, featuring high school art talent of Florida, was shown at the University Art Gallery for members of the visiting Florida Federation of Women's Clubs according to exhibit officials.

The Florida State University exhibit is the result of a contest sponsored state-wide by the FFWC and winners of the contest received scholarship awards prior to the opening. Only winning pictures and runners-up were displayed.

Contest Chairman Mrs. William Burrill, of FFWC, said that many of the paintings achieved a high degree of artistic perfection. "High school solutions to artistic and symbolic problems involved in the theme "The Preservation of Our American Heritage" were often ingenious and remarkably effective," she declared.

Oil, water-color, pastel and casein were used in the paintings.

Coffee Hour Honors Shakespeares Work

The English Department of Florida State University will commemorate at its coffee hour today, the 390th anniversary of William Shakespeare's birth with a talk by Dr. Carmen Rogers.

Rogers has received studies at Cornell University. Dr. Rogers has spent more than a year at the Folger Library, which houses the world's finest collection of Shakespearean materials.

Dr. Rogers has worked in the British museum and attended the Shakespeare Festivals in Stratford-on-Avon. In 1952, she was among the speakers for the Shakespeare Festival in Miami and in 1953 her paper on Shakespeare's concept of Justice was published in a "Studies of Shakespeare."

The weekly coffee hour will be held in the Presbyterian Westminister House at 4 p. m.

Sophomores Tested With Area Quizzes Slated Wednesday

All FSU sophomores will be given Area Tests in General Education next Wednesday, according to representatives of the Test Service Bureau. The tests will begin at 1 p.m. and require about four hours of testing time, they said.

An IBM appointment card is being sent to each second semester sophomore indicating the room assignment for the test.

Students taking the Area Tests are to bring the IBM card with them in order to gain admission to the assigned room. Those taking the tests will be excused from all classes meeting at the time.

"The three tests cover the areas of Social Science, Humanities and Natural Science. Each test has been designed to discover whether or not the student has acquired certain basic concepts and can apply them to practical situation," stated the officials.

"No special preparation can be made for these tests. The student who is now a sophomore has been preparing for these tests during his past two years of college work. The results of these tests will explain the student and his counselor to gain a comprehensive view of the student's orientation in the three principal areas of human culture."

Here Is Constitution Up For Ratification Tuesday

The new Student Body Constitution to be voted on next Tuesday is the result of over a year and a half of effort on the part of the University Senate. The new document, especially in the first few articles, bears a great deal of resemblance to the present Constitution as printed in the Pow-Wow.

There are a host of minor and technical changes, a good deal of rewriting to make certain provisions clearer, and a few really important changes, such as the new articles on Finance and Summer Government.

A summary of the important changes is as follows:

ARTICLE I THE STUDENT BODY

No change, except that the right of graduate students to vote has been stated explicitly.

ARTICLE II THE LEGISLATIVE

University Senate is to be known as Student Senate.

Faculty advisers are dispensed with.

Review powers remain the same as in the Pow-Wow.

ARTICLE III THE EXECUTIVE

Cabinet members are not specified and are to be designated by statute.

Executive policies subject to review in the same manner as legislation.

ARTICLE IV THE JUDICIARY

A completely re-written article, the first thing noted in studying it is that the names of all the courts have been changed:

University Court is to be Honor Court.

Judicial Court is to be University Court.

Women's Judiciary Court is to be simply Women's Court.

Traffic Safety Court is to be simply Traffic Court.

A Clerk has been added to Honor Court. He is to succeed the Chief Justice and may convene the Court in his absence.

The concurrance of a majority of Honor Court is required to make any decree effective.

Review powers and provision for appeal remain the same as in the Pow-Wow.

ARTICLE V SUMMER GOVERNMENT

A completely new article. It provides that a "Summer Senate" is to be set up. It is to be composed of a Chairman, a Secretary, and eight members, all elected on the second Tuesday of the Summer Session. The Summer Council is to assume the executive, legislative and judicial powers vested in the Student, Senate and Honor Court during the regular Session.

ARTICLE VI CLASS ORGANIZATIONS

An abbreviated version of the present article. It eliminates sections 2 and 4 in the Pow-Wow Constitution.

ARTICLE VII STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

Stipulates the duties of the Editor-in-Chief of a publication.

Does away with staff nomination for Flambeau, but provides that the Senate Staff can waive qualifications.

ARTICLE VIII FINANCE

A completely new article. It provides for a Student-Faculty Budget committee, composed of five students, five faculty members, and a faculty chairman approved by the Student Body President. This committee recommends the budgeting of the Student Activity Fee (about $12 a year per student) and the University Activity Fee (about $70 a year) to the President of the University.

ARTICLE IX ELECTIONS AND QUALIFICATIONS FOR OFFICE

The dates for elections are now stipulated.

Scholastic average for major office now listed as 1.300, minor office as 1.000.

Terms of Office for elective offices is specified.

Editor-in-Chief of a student publication is now to be succeeded by the Managing Editor.

ARTICLE X REFERENDUM ELECTION

No change.

ARTICLE XI AMENDING PROCESS

Twenty-five percent of Student Body must vote in order to amend the Constitution.

ARTICLE I

THE STUDENT BODY

Fashion Parade Presented In Gilchrist; Coeds Show Off Their Latest Finery

By JOYCE POTTER

A parade of fashions including practically all types of wearing apparel continued for over an hour Wednesday and all in the parlor of Gilchrist as the girls presented their annual fashion show.

The purpose of the show, according to Betty Ann Nasrallah who acted as narrator, describing all the fashions, was for the girls to show off their Easter finery. A large Easter Bunny, perked in the center of the room surrounded by flowers carried out the Easter theme.

Probably the most important problem of college co-eds is their school clothes. Those braided the parade. Modeling a cotton school dress with a black background of pink, brown and green flowers was Eleanor Kirby. Accenting the dress was a wide white sash and a pink undershirt that peeked out in the opening in the front of the dress and formed a border around the bottom.

Molly Carr's aqua cotton with a small Peter Pan collar with aqua dots, and covered buttons down the front demanded attention from all sides.

A very full skirt accented by two tiers of shirring was the highlight of Dawn Bishop's pique cotton dress with the cool sleeveless effect.

Keren Kent's cotton print with rolls of alternating small navy and white hearts and tiny flowers trimmed with red buttons and ric rac down the front was given the hand-me effect with bows that adorned the shoulders.

The pride and joy of the evening were the Easter outfits modeled by the girls. Showing the latest linen was Betty Johnson. Betty's accessories were matching lace gloves, darker beige hat, and black patent leather heels and bag.

In the suit division was Jane Davis in a three-piece beige linen suit trimmed with white ribbing and Loboy Fable modeling a teal and white print suit with jacket, skirt and shortie jacket.

Cynthia Haskin's white imported cotton dress with aqua stripes and small puffed sleeves was made complete with a straw hat with veil, suede sandal heels, purse and nylon gloves.

Pink Handkerchief linen was the material that formed Norma Lea Miles' outfit. A red taffeta petticoat gave it that buffoont look that is the rage now. Her accessories were all white.

The popular color for hat weather are sports clothes. Displaying a sport dress in washable white sail cloth accented with brown yarn was Nancy Twig. This practical dress can be worn as a tailored sport dress or dressed up with the right accessories.

In the bathing suit parade was Dinah Murphy in a white skirt-ten with black and blue lines forming checks and a scalloped top bound in black, and Connie Coleman in a two-piece coral bathing suit with white accessories.

Bringing the past in view was Jeane Steward in a 1922 model bathing suit of a brilliant aqua and beige, featuring embroidered inserts in the fashional shorter length skirt of that day. As an added effect black bone were added.

A. J. and Connie Bassett sported short and shirt outfits perfect for tennis or just loafing. Je Ann Howard's pedal pushers with pink shirt sleeves and black jacket were the coast special.

The popular toreador style pedal pushers were modeled by Jean Lipscomb in a black cotton with red and white lacing.

For the final touch she added a white sleeveless jacket with same lacing and a white bag also laced and red shoes.

Under the theme "Clothes From Here and There" Pat Rouen displayed a Hawaiian (Waikiki Beach) Wear, while Asuela Bursa, the Pakistan evening wear.

Joan Cook's black rayon shantung dress with a boat neckline, trimmed in white with two black buttons and rhinestone bikes and white bands on sleeves was noted as a popular date dress.

Nili Organza with pink rose print and wide waist band was Wylene Mayfield's idea of a date dress. A strapless dress of imported embroidered organdy in power blue perfect for a short dance dress. was modeled by June Sisson who made it.

There was a special homemade division for the smart girls who made their own dresses. In this group was Shirley Traxler in a skirt, blouse and stole outfit, Ann Grant modeling a yellow taffeta Princess style, and Margaret Lipscomb in a Vogue creation in a spring print.

Swirls of red net ruffles surrounded LaVetra Armstrong as she modeled her red nylon net formal. Lu Brown wore a floor length formal with rainbow colors of pink, blue and yellow reflected in her bouffant skirt.

Carol Lawley stepped right out of the bandbox with her ballerina-length formal of pale green taffeta, formed a floor length gown modeled by Coeds Turknett.

Many other girls participated in the show displaying their favorite fashions. Entertainment was furnished by the Harmonettes, Sandra Darling and Ken Wilson, accompanied by Kathy Battle.

The winners of the door prizes were Jim Julian, Mrs. Barksdale, social director of Landis, and Carolyn Williams.

Those responsible for the aala fashion parade were Marcea Napier Carol Dean Turknett, Arlene Shurleff, Maxine Fletcher, Mrs. Angeline Ashbrooke, house manager of Gilchrist, Miss Martha Cobb, residence counselor, and Mrs. Christine Wilson, social director.

'Flying High' Is Set To Perform Final Extravaganza Of The Year May 6th

By ESTHER RANCIER

There's a smell of sawdust in the air. It keeps getting stronger every day.

There is anticipation a-growin' by the minute "Mighty peculiar," some folks think, but not really!

Its circus time, that's all. "Flying High," Florida State University's circus troupe, is readying itself for a final extravaganza of the year, the home show to be held May 6-8 in Campbell Stadium.

Opening night, May 6, will be Tallahassee night, when all the local troupers will be featured in the big acts.

Betty Ann Munroe, Shirley Kellogg, Marties Gerdner, Josh Taylor, Ann Callahan, John Barbee, Sandy Sanderson, Shirley Boulware, Jo Ann Hudio, Sue Pain, Mary Eb Williamson, Sara Atkinson and Bobby Temple will be among the Tallahasee amateur artists cutting capers in the air and on the mobile ground units.

Coach Jack Haskins, known among the circus troupers as "coach," said that he had the best material in the show in his year, one of the top troupes of all times. "There will be more thrills, new costumes, and new performers . . . The youngsters are all good, and the best men's match for professionals," "Coach" added.

Yet these performers are amateurs, having the expert skill of professionals. Their majors vary from home economics, science, business administration and political science, to journalism and education.

"Flying High" has been acclaimed the world over as the best in collegiate circuses. A very rare thing indeed. It has been filmed by Paramount's Grantland Rice Sportlights, Fox's Movietone, RKO and NBC Television.

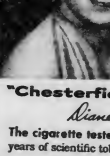
Although the circus roster is officially limited to 60 students who can enroll once in their college careers for hour marimums credit in P E 116, another 150 students train regularly on their own time two or three days a week.

Yearly, the troupe puts on its big acts, lasting almost two hours. Although there are no beautiful elephant girls nor glamorous trick horses there is beauty and the best men, that is, performing feats of daring on the high wire and trapeze.

New specialty acts have been added to the list of circus routines, that is the new revolving trampoline, a combination of trampoline and trapeze artistry, worked by a quartet and two clowns.

The costuming will present a technicolor delight to the eye, according to good reliable sources. Phantasmic materials are used to produce special effects.

The costumes, lighting dazes ruthless and makeup are designed entirely by the students themselves. They also set up and tear down the rigging for the acts.



After the home show, "Flying High" will be in summer quarters at Tallahassee where regular practices are continued throughout the hot weather months. Circus is show business at Florida State, and the show must go on.

"Flying High" is proof of the adage that "circus stars are made, not born," when year after year, "Coach" produces circus stars . . . This troupe is just a group of boys and girls, turning into slow worms when they smell the sawdust.

ALL OVER FLORIDA
The People Want COLLINS

In Chipley:

LEROY COLLINS ONE OF FEW CANDIDATES EVER TO RECEIVE NEWS ENDORSEMENT

"Seldom has the Washington County News endorsed a candidate for public office. It is not often that we shove all the cards in the outstretched hand with such endorsement. We believe Sen. LeRoy Collins, candidate for Governor, to be such a man.

"The (endorsement) action was taken after careful study and comparison of the three candidates and their qualifications.

"Sen. Collins is recognized throughout the state for his integrity, ability, leadership and experience.

"Sen. Collins is not making a lot of wild promises, but is seeking election on a sound, constructive platform. His record and tactics indicate to us are those of a man who can be trusted. We believe he would make Florida a good Governor."

—Washington County News, April 9, 1954

In Titusville:

COLLINS OUR CHOICE FOR GOVERNOR

"Up to this time the Star-Advocate has refrained from announcing its preference, because we prefer not to be hasty in a choice of this importance.

"We believe that LeRoy Collins of Tallahassee would make Florida a very capable Governor, and he is our choice.

"Sen. Collins has either sponsored or supported all of the Northwhite legislation that has come before the Legislature during his service there. He is a man who can be trusted. He refrains from demagoguery, from deceit and from trickery.

"The decision to support Sen. Collins is not based on personalities. It is a decision reached by careful comparisons of the three candidates and their qualifications. Sen. Collins seems to measure up more nearly to our ideal of a Chief Executive, and we commend him to our readers.

—Titusville Star-Advocate, March 26, 1954

In Miami:

WE RECOMMEND LEROY COLLINS FOR GOVERNOR

"We recommend the selection of Sen. LeRoy Collins to be Governor of Florida. Our choice is based on the record . . . Collins, a man of humble beginnings and largely self-educated, is a successful lawyer with business training. His public life, embracing nearly 20 years in the Legislature the mulsed one session as Speaker, was on the whole an honorable and progressive one, free of political humbug.

"We believe him to be eminently qualified to administer the affairs and guide the destinies of Florida."

—Miami Herald, March 18, 1954

In St. Petersburg:

ONLY SEN. COLLINS MEASURES UP

As Governor, LeRoy Collins would give Florida both the stability and vision it needs at this time. He could pick up the loose ends left by Gov. McCarty's death and restore a sense of confidence in the government. He could provide thoughtful and co-operative guidance for the 1955 Legislature, and administer the Executive Branch with smoothness.

"At the stage in its economic life, Florida cannot indulge in the luxury of either a hack politician or an unproven amateur in the governorship. Sound government means dollars in the pockets of every Florida citizen. The way is through that kind of administration is to elect LeRoy Collins as Governor."

—St. Petersburg Times, March 28, 1954

In Palatka:

COLLINS THE LOGICAL CHOICE

"We base our decision on the cold and sombre facts of the record. Collins' long experience is the most impressive of the three (candidates).

"Confident, serious, sincere, able and dignified, stands out head and shoulders above his opponents. The state will do well to elect Collins."

—Palatka Daily News, March 17, 1954

In Bartow:

PICKING A CANDIDATE

"Who's a sur going to vote for? Maybe it's not smart to be pushing and pushing publicity this soon, but I've picked mine—and I'm happy to commend him to you.

"I've read about all three men for several years. I've met them all, heard them speak, watched their public actions.

"On the grounds of experience, personality, character and proven ability, my pick of the three is LeRoy Collins.

"I am confident he can and will give . . . Florida . . . strong sound leadership . . . In this voter's opinion, Collins is the man Florida needs in the governorship."

Bands To Play In Amphitheater Tomorrow Night

Whitcomb Directing First Annual Show; Braunagel Conducts

The first of a series of outdoor band concerts to be presented by the Florida State University Symphonic Band and Laboratory band is set for tomorrow night at 8:15 in the Music Amphitheater.

Called "Starlight Serenade" selections have been arranged by the director of Bands Manley Whitcomb. Others in the series are scheduled for May 12 and 19.

At the concert tomorrow night the FSU Symphonic Band will play during the first part of the program. It is made up of a wind and percussion ensemble of 70 pieces, made up of 60 students selected through auditions.

Robert Braunagel, assistant director of Music, will be guest conductor during the remainder of the program, during which the FSU Laboratory Band will be featured. This band is made of approximately 30 musicians who specialize in experimental and contemporary jazz. All of the numbers to be played at the concert are compositions or arrangements by members of the band.

Numbers to be performed by the Lab Band include "Moonlight Serenade," "Intermission Riff," "The Man I Love," "Stompin' at the Savoy" and "I Love You."

Scheduled by the Symphonic Band are examples of 19th century music, including the opening number, "Sunset Prairie" by Russell S. Howland, followed by George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" with Thomas Wright, Atlanta graduate student, as guest soloist.

Wright is recognized as an authority on Gershwin, holding a record of a program devoted to Gershwin in Blunt Hall during which he played on a concert tour with Tommy Dorsey orchestra in 1946.

Speaking of the Wednesday Symphonic Band, director Whitcomb declared that "Members have confidence in the FSU School of Music and it is due to the talent and hearty ideals in wind performance."

The final selections offered by the Symphonic Band will be "Overture for Winds" by Hindemith, "Second Suite in F" by Holst and a march, "Song of the Vagabonds" and "Fantasia." Also, "Cowboy Rhapsody," by Morton Gould, will be performed.

Whitcomb announced that all of the concerts of the Symphonic Laboratory series will be free and open to the public. He declared he hopes to make this a community concerts as an annual event.

DIG THE CRAZY BOPSTERS . . . L. to R. are Vic Mickonas, Calvin Hasbrouck, Ell Mahnken, Harold Alexander, and Bob McMillian. They are the trumpet players in FSU's Laboratory Band which will be featured at the opening of a new Starlight Serenade band series at 8:15 p.m. tomorrow in music amphitheater. The program is free and open to the public.

Transportation for members to be furnished if requested, the club concluded.

The event is open to graduate and mature students and their friends and faculty.

AdvertisingHonoraryDedicates Local Chapter In Ceremonies

The Elon Borton Chapter of Alpha Delta Sigma, national professional advertising fraternity for men, was dedicated in ceremonies here last Thursday night, according to ADS spokesmen.

On hand for the dedication as guest of honor and principal speaker was Elon Borton, president and general manager, Advertising Federation of America for whom the chapter was named.

At the dedication in the Student Center Borton discussed the role of advertising in the American economy. He said advertising was not destructive of economy. He said it grew as a necessary part of our economy.

"The consumer needs advertising to have information about available goods," Borton said. "Men are given jobs, production is taken care of and our economy prospers as a result of widespread American advertising.

"The cost of virtually all items to the consumer today is less because of advertising. This is because increased demand for a product means reduced producing costs and increased selling costs per item. Mass production means lower costs."

Switching his remarks to communications and the press Borton declared that "advertising has 85 per cent of the total cost of publishing American magazines, 65 per cent of the total cost of publishing American newspapers and 100 per cent of the cost of American radio and television programs."

After the dedication ceremonies Richard Joel, professor of the department of journalism, presented the Alpha Delta Sigma Outstanding Service Key to Borton for his work in helping to affiliate ADS with the American Federation of Advertising and for his contributions to advertising at large.

Members of the Advertising Club of Tallahassee, Rotarians and Gamma Alpha Chi, national professional advertising fraternity for women, joined with ADS in honoring Borton.

Mrs. Alfred Mirsky of Killearn Gardens entertained in honor of Borton with a garden party at her home earlier in the afternoon.

Students Win Contest, Name Athletic Field

Tommy Sands and Jimmy Joanos were declared winners in the recent student government contest for the naming of the new athletic field opposite Campbell Stadium, according to contest spokesmen.

Both students submitted the name of "Williamson Field", giving as their reasons that Ed Williamson was the first football coach at Florida State University after FSU became co-ed.

Sands wrote: "Williamson, our present capable intramurals director was, as few people realize, FSU's first modern day football coach.

In addition, he started the first intramural sports program on which has grown from the intramural sports to nine. I think it would be fitting tribute to a man who has done directly contributed so much to FSU athletics."

Student Body president Milton Carothers, originator of the contest, will have commendations sent to both contestants.

"Williamson Field will now be the official name for the athletic field which serves football practice, intramurals, and varsity baseball.

SCIENTISTS HONORED

Two distinguished scientists at Florida State University were recently elected as Fellow at a meeting of the Association of Southeastern Biologists held at Florida State University at Tallahassee.

Members of the Advertising Club of Tallahassee, Rotarians and Gamma Alpha Chi, national professional advertising fraternity for women, joined with ADS in honoring Borton.

Friendliness Is Large Influence In Helping Student Pick School

SPRINGFIELD, O. (CP)—The saved in their hometowns. Only 11 per cent of the 324 students said they play in attracting new students had chosen Wittenberg entirely by Wittenberg College is emphasizing friendliness as the result of a survey made here last fall. Results were announced by Prof. Samuel L. Mercer, Emerson Reck.

Sixty per cent of the freshmen who participated in the survey—193 of 324—said they had chosen Wittenberg in part because of the influence of older students. Eighty-one of them said they were influenced "greatly" by these students, 112 others had been influenced "some."

The reputation which Wittenberg students have for being friendly also played a big part in bringing the present freshman class to this campus. Eighty-five per cent were influenced by this friendliness, 147 of the 324 being very influenced "greatly" and 120 of exerted greatest influence on the them "some."

Eleven per cent of the freshmen were also drawn to Wittenberg in part by the get-togethers It which Wittenberg students assist.

Mothers influenced more decisions than any other person. Fathers, however, exerted "great influence" on a few more students and mothers did. Of the 324 students, 88 said mother had had "great influence" and 121 said she had had "some influence." And 100 said their pastors had had "great influence," and 87 indicated that the pastor had "some influence." Fathers had a "great influence" on 81 students, "some influence" on 84.

Special factors which influenced students to choose Wittenberg were also emphasized by the survey. The 74 factors which had new students' choice were, in the order of decreasing importance: Wittenberg is a Christian college in a small college. The students were asked to rank 74 factors arranged as that students were

The Florida State University Choral Union will present Il Trovatore, its second full-length opera, at 8:15 p.m. Friday, and at 2:30 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. Saturday, May 1, in Opperman Music Hall.

Production of Verdi's four-act opera is under the direction of Herman Zipper, FSU assistant professor of music.

Claude Rhea, graduate student in the School of Music will sing the tenor lead in the role of Manrico. Betty Jane Grimm, assistant professor of music, will sing the contralto lead, cast as Azucena. A large and reputed mother of Manrico.

Other principals include Edith Campbell as Leonora, a noble lady of Aragon; Jane Parham as Ines, attendant of Leonora; Edgar Evans as Count Di Luna, a noble of Arason; Jack Jarrett, Captain of the Guard, and Wendell Barnhart, a soldier.

Miss Parkman and Barthelf will also serve as understudies. Other understudies will be Martha Kay Wills, Joyce Revels, Jack Barnhart, Ed Mahnken, Peck, and William Peppler, students of the School of Music.

The production staff includes Hermann Zipper, director; Dr. Lorenz Mohr, president of the Florida State Opera Guild, manager of the Choral Union, will be in charge of costumes and properties.

The setting of the opera is in the fifteenth century Spain, and the invited plot is largely a matter of duels, political idealisms and relationships with love, injustice and revenge all flavoring the novelty.

Last spring, the FSU Choral Union presented its first and only previous full-length opera, Mascagni's Cavalleria Rusticana.

Kuersteiner Leads Final Performance Of State Symphony

The State Symphony of Florida concluded its 1953-54 concerts yesterday, with Florida State University's Dr. K. O. Kuersteiner conducting the baton program for school children at the Leon High School auditorium in the evening at Opperman Music Hall.

The second part of both programs was "Peter and the Wolf" by Prokofieff, FSU trampolite expert, as "guest conductor" of the "Wolf" in the "Overture."

The children's concert was on the whole an introduction to advertising at FSU, presented the six classical numbers being played.

J. Dayton Smith, of the School of Music appeared as soloist in the afternoon concert, playing a popular version of a classic melody from the Peloitian Dances of Borodin, followed by the performance of the original score for symphony.

Study Shows How Liberal Arts Prepares Careers For Students

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y.—(I.P.)—Liberal arts graduates of Vassar College alumnae recently returned to the campus in which student-graduates had a chance to hear authoritative answers to the questions they have had studies pre prepare undergraduates for the careers from people in the thick of it.

The new experiment in education, called the Vocational Institute Conference—was designed not as a substitute for graduate study, nor as an opportunity for students to hear first-hand from people in the world of work the general arts education can offer a liberal arts graduate, according to later careers. At the two-day meeting the alumnae experienced the whole soundness of the old-fashioned but also the technique of winning and holding specific jobs. Formal speeches were dispensed with. All sessions were of the no-holds-barred, question-and-answer discussion type, with students asking any questions they wanted.

The 1,000 alumnae broke into seven panels, each representing a broad field, and each panel was arranged so that students were able to attend several panels as they chose. Each panel was composed of a moderator, a group of alumnae who are prominent in the field, and a student's forming a plan of reference which will develop

'The Insect Comedy' Curtain Goes Up Friday

"The Insect Comedy," variously named "The World We Live In," "The Bug Show" and other descriptive adjectives, will be presented for four days, starting Friday, at Florida State University, it was noted today.

Director Lynn Orr, of the FSU Speech Department, producers of the comedy, a symbolic account of life in a modern world, said today tickets would go on sale at the Conradi Theater box office tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Reservations, he noted, can be made by phoning extension 2051.

Slated for 8:15 curtain time Friday, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, the play will be staged in Conrad Theater on the FSU campus. "Insect Comedy" is the fourth of a series of Speech Department productions, appearing annually here under Speech Department auspices. Other productions this year have included Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," Clarence Day's "Life With Father" and "The Heiress."

Staged in a surrealistic medium, "Insect Comedy" was said recently to be, in general, a satire on present-day thinking. The plot involves the depiction of the thoughts of two unknown bugs, of two blades of grass. The message, it was noted, comes to light in the development of both audience and ant-kingdom thinking as to the importance of the grass.

Cast members include Tom Lewis, Jr., John Davis, Nancy Dick Vinson, David Wade, Margaret Muller, Geraldine Frank, Lloyd Kay, Mickie Dobbins and Jeanne Hastad.

Also, Franklin Adams, Robert Straze, Byron McKissack, and Ann Grayson.

Assisting Dr. Orr are Speech Department faculty members including Douglas Russell and Charles Reimer. Also, Edna Hollinsworth is assistant director and Andree Julien assisted with staging.

Admission for the four-night performances is 40 cents for students and 75 cents for general admission.

Students Hold Two-Day Meet For Journalism

More than 200 high school students from all over Florida would up a two-day annual convention of the Florida Scholastic Press Association here Saturday.

The activities were marked by discussions in six sessions on significant careers in mass communications. Specialist in all areas of communications gave discussions or appeared in panel discussions on a variety of topics from "Do You Belong in Journalism?" to "How to Make a Cartoon."

During both day's sessions the program also included the news writing, feature writing, spelling and current affairs program, sponsored by the FSU School of Journalism, featured guest lecturer Roland E. Wolseley, Fulbright lecturer to India, 1952-53 of Syracuse University. Wolseley got the top score address and was speaker at a luncheon meeting in which he discussed Journalism in Modern India.

Wolseley pointed out that India newspapers are scattered widely throughout the country and have small circulation. He added, however, that the Indian newspapers were far superior to the United States newspapers in editorials. He said this flowed from the Indian wish not to offend by strong quality editorials in the Indian newspapers.

"What the Indian journalists admire most about American journalism," Wolseley said, "is our technical efficiency. They wish very much they could approach it, he added.

Feature contests were conducted on yearbook themes, sports, news writing and editorial writing during the convention.

The delegates toured the Tallahassee Democrat printing plant, the FSU campus and the state buildings. Friday the annual banquet was held at the Suwannee Room at FSU followed by the annual Headline Ball.

SOPHOMORE TESTS

All second-semester sophomores are to take the Area Tests in General Education at 1 p.m. tomorrow. Each student will be notified of the time allotted on his IBM card. The IBM cards are color coded as follows: Seniors, Yellow; Junior, Manor Hall; Salmon — Suwannee Room; Rose—124 Science.

Cavaliers Will Hold Tryouts In Student Center Tonite, 7:30

Cavaliers, honorary dance fraternity, will hold tryouts in the Student Center tonight and tomorrow from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Any male student is eligible to try for membership, announced Norma Kennedy, president.

The will be judged for membership on their dancing ability, appearance, personality, dancing on the dance floor, and good appearance, Miss Kennedy said.

The tryouts will consist of one slow and one fast dance. Regna Rogers, vice-president of the Cavillion, female counterpart of Cavaliers, will assist in the tryouts.

The Cavaliers' purpose is to foster a better social life and dancer by sponsoring dances, helping in entertainment, providing dance lessons, and improving social activities and privileges for members.

Meetings are held once a week. In the event of scheduled dances, however, no regular meetings are held twice a week on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

FRESHMAN BONGART

Women of Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman honorary for women here will hold initiation for new members at 7:30 p.m. in Longmire Building. Small banquet for the new initiates and members will follow in Suwannee Dining Hall.

Officers Will Be Installed May 6th; Carothers, Nimkoff Speak

Installation for the recently-elected Student Body officers will be held a week from this Thursday, May 6, it was learned today. Originally slated for this Thursday, the date marking the change in the student government offices was showed ahead because of changes in Class Elections.

Scheduled for Longmire Auditorium for May 6 at 7 p.m., the ceremonies will be conducted by Honor Court Chief Justice Jerry Meyer, Program Chairman Jimmy Joanos, Milton Carothers, president of the Florida State University, President Body, and president-elect Pete Nimkoff.

Newly-elected Delta Kapps, and Mortarboard men's and women's honorary, Blue Blanket and Torch, organizations respectively, who jointly sponsor the installation, will hold their Blanket and Torch Thursday ceremonies. This meeting will take the place of the annual Leadership Training Conference usually attended by the new group.

Refreshments will be served following the installation, committee members told the Florida Flambeau yesterday.

Jimmy Rhodes is in charge of the program, and Judy Simkins, publicity.

Finals Reveal Tom Morgan Is 'Mr. Formal'

Tom Morgan, sponsored by Sigma Chi fraternity was chosen "Mr. Formal" of Florida State University last night among five entries in a judging held at Longmire Auditorium Saturday.

Steve Zaykio, Delta Tau Delta, was Art Moore, Delta Sigma Pi; Orson Combsar and Bill Walker, Delta Tau Delta, and Jack Campbell, Pi Kappa Phi.

Director Meyers proposed his appreciation of the honor, saying that he was very proud to be chosen and that he had hoped to do well in the finals.

The finals will be held in Philadelphia to chose Mr. Formal. U.S.A. Zaykio said that approximately 30 individual entries from colleges all over the country will participate in the semi-finals. Pictures of each candidate will be judged there and the winners of the semi-finals will travel to New York for the final judging, Zaykio noted.

Judges for the contest at FSU were Eddie Cobbin of the Athletic Department; James Poole of the Political Science Department; and Nancy Hooper of the Arts Education Department. Also judged on poise personality, evening wear, and well-fitted and tailored clothes fitted the contestants.

Prizes won by winner Morgan include an After Six Dinner Jacket, Middell Tuxedo, formal shirt and cummerbund set, cigarette lighter, a formal accessory set and a formal pajamas.

Jim Powell Speaks In Longmire, 7:30; To Answer Queries

Sigma Theta, newly-formed Journalism club on campus, will meet tonight at 7:30 in Longmire Building, president Warren Cobb announced today.

Cobb revealed that Jim Powell, political writer for the Tampa Tribune, will speak to the group. "After presenting his first-hand talk on political campaigning he will answer questions propressed by the audience. The public is welcome to attend," he said.

Also to be considered at the meeting will be a weenie roast, a function and other items, after the speech by Powell.

Cobb said that Powell is one of the most widely read political writers in the state, and his column has been used by two of the three candidates."

None Ruled Out In Class Voting Avers Secretary

Six Eligible Today; Campaign Marred With Poster Ruin

Although many issues have arisen in the class offices and five races which come to a climax today in primary elections, no candidates have been disqualified, according to Betty Jo Grubbs, Secretary of Elections.

Six candidates listed in Friday's Florida Flambeau as ineligible because of grades are, in fact, eligible she commented. The six, Jean Carr, George Cutler, Wayne Edris, Curtis "Coot" Jackson, Mary Ann MacFarland and Ann "Rocky" Stone were termed ineligible through error on the part of the Registrar's office, she said.

No candidates have been disqualified for placing posters on plastered surfaces or on trees, she noted, but warned that student court action will be taken from now on. Those are asked to remove their posters from illegal places and failed to do so.

The campaign has been otherwise "fairly clean," Grubbs explained said yesterday, only by the destruction of printed material and posters by unidentified parties. Hardest hit area in the week's campaign wave of destruction were lower Westcott and the Student Center, where they said volumes of paper were being distributed littering the floors each morning.

"Nobody has been caught," commented Miss Grubbs. "If anybody having any information or knowledge of this matter would submit the information to the Election Committee, suitable action will be taken."

She added that it would "more than likely be a case for the courts."

Reported on the administration's policy of cut removing signs from illegal places but added a warning it up in the students in strip material from fences and plastered surfaces, she pointed to the court action to deal with offending candidates.

She mentioned that such action has been used in fines, "as it is too late to disqualify anyone.

Miss Grubbs added that similar action has been taken against candidates who violate the student body constitution, particularly in literature or active soliciting of votes within 50 feet of the polls, including the Student Center Club, Student Center and West Hall.

She noted that the committee counselors staffing the ballot boxes are authorized to enforce these rules if and to take the names of offenders.

Polls will be open until five, except at West Hall, where they will close at four. Ballots will be brought to students in the infirmary, Miss Grubbs announced.

Students will be checked against the IBM list of the Freshman Orientation roll of the classes and given the appropriate ballots, she said, including the court posse, on which all classes will be listed on a separate ballot.

Tallying of votes, according to Dr. Robert Cleveland, head of Census Bureau, at which the IBM ballots are interpreted, is expected to take about 30 hours, as in the Student Body elections, due to the large number of offices.

The vote was announced by cards run in those elections, in which the votes are tallied, separated by hand-counting ex-elections officials, Dr. Cleveland said.

A majority vote will be required in each office, in multiple office races, such as Senate, run-offs will be held in the by-candidates in five each offer not resolved in the primaries tomorrow.

Run-offs will be held next Tuesday.

The public referendum will be the proposed Constitution of the Students Body.

Also in the event of tomorrow's balloting will be a survey conducted as a class project by Bill Stanch, former secretary of elections. The survey will be concerned with student opinion in campus politics by finding out how students, men and women voting members from each class, numbers of fraternity men, university students and organizations voting, and the possible correlation between the division; or neither. This will be separate and apart from the poll to be carried out one along with ballots.

ALL VOTE ON COURTS

The election committee notified The Florida Flambeau yesterday that in today's elections, the entire student body will vote on the various court committees.

Bonnie Cluett, Judiciary, and Traffic court candidates will be elected by a vote of all the students and not just of their respective classes.

E. L. Bond Determines Success Of Salesmen In Graduate Work

A door-to-door salesman is not "doing well at all" unless he is making at least $100 per week, according to Eldridge L. Bond, graduate student in Business Administration at Florida State University.

Bond, a graduate student in Business Administration at Florida State University, has been employed by the department of Marketing.

In his thesis Bond states that this is the minimum amount for a moderately successful salesperson using the individual sales approach method, according to companies employing this method.

It is commonplace, according to Bond's research, for a door-to-door salesman to earn a minimum of $5,200 per year, with many earning considerably more. The earning several times that amount. The men or women who come to your door, he says, is usually an average citizen like yourself. He is usually 45 years old, married, owner of one or more cars, has a bank account, is a U.S. citizen and in some cases may belong to a lodge or other fraternal organization.

Direct selling, he continues, is today not only includes house-to-house canvassing but all the way from selling insurance to selling to various retail outlets. The less expensive selling products and services to color TV sets and large-quantity users of paper such as newsprint, Bond.

He noted that eighty percent of direct sales—persons in the stories are married and women handle many lines but usually specialize. People entering such work usually find that they are not paid salary but commissions because of "money income and independence."

"The job has little else to offer in the way of compensating factors such as security, opportunity for advancement, company loyalty or group benefits. The latter is the most important reason why sales-persons quit direct selling firms."

Three-Ring Circus Continues With Tight-Wire-Tapping Act

Monitored telephone conversations, angry denouncements, and stormy exchanges are the latest acts in Washington's big three-ring Army-McCarthy circus, now heading into its sixth day.

The upcoming controversy on wire-tapping seems to have nothing on what has been perpetrated in recent months by members of these two factions. On Friday it was brought out that Senator McCarthy's telephone conversation on November 7 with Secretary of the Army Stevens was monitored by the latter's appointment clerk, John J. Lucas, Jr. The Senator angrily denounced this as "completely improper . . . indecent and illegal under the laws" because he had not been advised that Lucas was taking notes on the conversation. He said later, "We have a hard and fast rule in my office. We don't monitor telephone calls—unless we tell the person we are doing so."

Whether it is illegal under the law, as the Senator says, can be judged. The senator need not be so fervent about it if he has nothing to hide. He will now be on the receiving end of accusations supported by facts.

Also what the senator apparently forgot, or just doesn't want brought up is that if he had been less demanding and heady, and more gentle and judicious in his manners and actions with the Army, this affair probably would not have happened. He brought the whole controversy about, whether directly or indirectly, though he has claimed it is not a battle between he and the Army, but between Roy M. Cohn, the subcommittee's counsel, and John G. Adams, Army counsel.

He has now said "Bob Stevens (the Army Secretary) is a fine, honest American," and his dispute wasn't with the Army but with "the civilians who are running the Pentagon." It is difficult to believe the "civilians in the Pentagon" had much to do with the treatment of Pvt. G. David Schine, which is the base of the whole issue.

Because of the monitoring, Senator Mundt signed subpoenas on Saturday directing principals in the hearing to submit notes of any monitored telephone conversations relevant to the controversy. Before it is over, both sides will feel mighty warm around the collar.

Unfortunately, we here are unable to watch the televised hearings because of classroom schedules, and no sets on campus. It would be interesting to watch, and one is almost missing a self-education in not doing so. Not like radio, television shows all—capturing every gesture and reaction — nothing is hidden, and the viewer is right there to judge entirely for himself. It is a fine opportunity to see the head ringmaster, Senator McCarthy, in action.

By the hearings, not only are we able to learn what has been committed by the senator and his men, and the Army since the controversy first broke, but also to learn of the so-called underhanded methods often used in behind-the-scenes happenings in Government.

What will be next in the series of daring performances put on in the nation's capital? Who will be next to fall off the flying trapeze? Will it be Roy Cohn or John Adams, or both? Will Senator McCarthy be eaten by the lions of public opinion or will he turn the tables? Stay glued to your television sets to see what happens next in the whole ridiculous and grim mess.

Vandalism Mirrors Lack Of Responsibility

In line with the annual report by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of crimes committed in the year 1953, is the outbreak of vandalism on campus within recent weeks.

It should be noted, in the report, that nearly half of the persons arrested for burglary were under 18 and two-thirds under 16. 8.4 per cent of the total arrests were persons under 17 and 14.7 per cent under 21, while 53.6 per cent of the automobile thefts were by juveniles.

These figures almost totally comprise those who will never have the chance to attend college. Most will probably never finish high school. That is the unfortunate case for those who commit crimes. Part of it can be attributed to their poor environment: their home life, upbringing and other influences damaging or otherwise.

Not so at FSU. The students have supposedly come from good environments. They should know better. But some don't. In the last issue we suggested what attempts could be made to stop the wholesale tearing down of election posters, by goon squads.

Unfortunately these goons are still at work. Only it is vandalism now. They are now operating in West Hall, and it has gone beyond the "playful prank" stage of throwing water and what have you. They are destroying furniture.

Officials in West Hall have taken steps to prevent further destruction. When property is destroyed on a certain floor, all of the residents of that floor are assessed for the damage unless the culprit admits it. Rigid quiet hours have been installed.

This is, in effect, punishment for students who have not done any damage, and may alienate their feelings. Residents of one floor can destroy furniture on another floor and go free scot-free. But fair or not, this happens to be a last resort, and the ruling is now there.

Students in West Hall have up to now been given a pretty free rein, especially if they could conduct themselves in an orderly manner. To say any harsh action has been laid down is absurd, but harsh action has to be taken to stop this vandalism.

But West Hall residents are not the only culprits on campus. There have been scores after scores of violations involving FSU students of late.

We offer no panaceas. We will not appeal to students' "better natures"—and we urge them to be good. Anyone is interested in the long-range problem of correcting the present trouble. he must realize ours is a generation in which responsibility has not sufficiently been stressed. We have not had to do for ourselves the way other generations have. We have been spoon-fed. We are not forced to see the consequences of our actions as it is for other required courses. Students don't have proper seats—this isn't the year 1900. How can students get freedoms that are beneficial when they're own student senate and top administrators think up asinine rules?

Sincerely,
MARY ELIZABETH KING

Credit Union Improves Ideas; Record For First Month Good

Spokesmen for the month-old Florida State University Credit Union has expressed optimism for the future of the organization based on its record for the first month.

Dr. Richard Morse, professor of Family Economics and vice-chairman of the Credit Union stated that the number of loan applications received indicates that we can put money to work announced that a branch office will be opened in the Student Service Area for the convenience of university personnel.

Credit Union set the end of its first month of operations had deposits of $2,876.51, with $2,375.00 out on emergency loans to faculty and staff members. At the same time there were on hand additional loan applications totaling to $2,475. Faculty and staff member shareholders number 96.

Some Honestly Misplaced In Politics

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Of all the farces of this election, the most ridiculous has been a naive demand for honesty.

Please don't misquote me. I didn't say I was against honesty. But I believe many students have false impressions about what is and what is not honest.

This was particularly evident during the party conventions. Students appeared to be shocked at vote-switching. Some even distribute a slap as to walk out of the Democratic convention because of the "vote-sweeping." This obsession of virgin-purity is not only politically immature but would lead to utter confusion if put into practice.

There is certainly such a thing as fair competition. This would be indiscriminate vote-scratch-my-back-and-I'll - scratch-yours nonsense. Mud-slinging without considering candidates.

But without vote-switching there would not only be utter confusion in a convention, but the party would very likely end up with a weak slate of political accidents.

Suppose you are supporting a candidate. Should you sit back and hope for a miracle? Should you expect delegates to pick your candidate from out a jumble of other? Should you expect a nominating speech to be so persuasive as to win the day?

Or do you do something practical — such as visiting delegates, introducing your candidate and soliciting support? Pardon me if I don't see a nasty politician and choose the latter course.

The method of vote-soliciting and vote-trading is a time honored one. It has a realistic foundation. If it is applied to putting a poor candidate into office, then it is bad. If it is used to elect a qualified man, then it is good. The main effort is thus definitely subordinated to the end-result.

A demand for no vote-swapping is a case of misplaced honesty.

Another example of misplaced honesty is the belief that a party chairman should serve to eliminate the party and keep a clean slate for the president of the student body.

On the national level, party chairmen are chosen by the presidential nominee of the party. The chairman-to-be must work hand in hand with the president. He would be political suicide for him to erase this hand.

There is danger, of course, in trying to immature campus politics by national politics. But true nationally may or may not be true on the campus. For the life of me, though I cannot see the logic to the party-chairman's casualties the governor should be the function of the other positions to point out the mistakes of the party.

It is a pity such commendable terms as dishonesty and especially naive could not be established in their proper setting. Would that misconceived honesty be turned into a desire to ferret out vital political issues and promote student welfare.

CONVERSATIONS WITH SAMMY

Don't Forget: Senate Makes Rules

By ORCHID ALONSO

My face is very red. Sammy has been chewing my ear off. And he has a right to, I guess. It seems that in the story in the Flambeau the other day about the Senate's trip to Tallahassee, I said that the change would go into effect next semester.

Says Sammy, "Don't forget that the faculty has to pass it yet."

Oh me. The faculty.

Ben Sumner should be glad that Halford was the only one that got after him. One of the members is now pestering the second semester freshmen women under the same regulations as other women also do. Gotta grabbed me this morning.

"That was a good story, but you should have explained my opposition a bit more," Sammy continued, "Elections are coming up, you know."

Well, all I can say, is that as she explained it, she just doesn't agree that freshmen women should be under these restrictions waived, because she feels students should have the experience of those restrictions for a certain length of time.

Speaking of Senate, Sammy and I have decided that it is about time that the president of this university realize just how important the Senate race is. Not only is it a class officer, but the Senators will decide on the rules and regulations by which students will live on this campus.

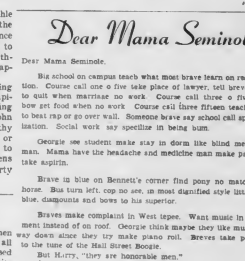
"The Senate needs experienced, liberal, open - minded people in there," commented Sammy.

I agreed with Sammy and have one thing to add, there are some students who have what it takes and should be replaced. There are some who deserve to be in. When considering those running for re-election, keep in mind what they have done in the past and what their attitude towards the interests of the students is.

"Yes, and don't forget that it takes more than just dependability, sincerity, and honesty to hold down a good senate post."

I don't want to endorse any candidates, however, but I will suggest that the voter think carefully before he casts his vote.

Sammy has been accused of being George Seminole. I don't think George would appreciate that. Sammy wants everyone to know that he isn't and wouldn't be George.



Editor Galphin bothers up the Horror before there was the mouse. Simon got mad and broke up the typewriter and refused to write anymore letters.

For awhile Sammy was aloofish, because he was afraid of being confused with a rat. The names are so similar. But after seeing Ben running around picking up his ol' torn down posters he feels sorry for him.

"I'll even help him fix up the busted typewriter and then maybe Simon will start writing again."

A closing thought from Sammy . . .

AT THE LIBRARY

Reference Librarian Helps Find 'Half Of Knowledge

By FLORENCE PAYNE

Above the entrance to the university library you will find this question: "The half of knowledge is to know where to find knowledge"

This quotation minht well be the motto of the reference librarian. For, in the words of Miss F ances Haynes, Reference Librarian, one of the main duties of her reference staff is to help the student to help himself.

It is not enough to answer the questions of the aimless and send him on his way. Only through learning how to use the library and catalog, and the various reference books the library has to offer, will the student feel he is capable of finding information for himself when the need for information arises.

How to use the card catalog was discussed in the article of March 23rd. Even those students skilled in the use of the catalog will need the help of a reference librarian from time to time in order to obtain just the right bit of information. For this reason the reference department and the catalog department must cooperate to provide a useful card catalog.

The reference room is a good place to start in search for information. As you enter the reference room you will note the books line the walls on three sides of the room. Starting on your left you will find the following classifications: the general works, including the encyclopedias (000-099); the languages (400-499); science (500-599); the useful arts such as medicine, engineering, agriculture, home economics (600-699); literature (800-899) and the aids in book selection (010). Down the center aisle you will find the history (900-999). At the back of the room on the supplementary shelves from left to right: philosophy (100-199); religion (200-299); social sciences (300-399); and the fine arts such as music and dance (700-799).

In the small foyer just outside the reference room are files of pamphlets and clippings arranged by subject. There is a good deal of information about Florida in the special files in the reference room.

The documents room, which is located just beneath the main reference room (this is a part of the reference department), has many Federal, state, municipal, United Nations and British documents.

The reference department also handles the interlibrary loan service for graduate students and faculty.

Knowing the services offered by the reference department and how to use these services and materials can save you much time in preparing assignments.

A reference librarian is always on duty to help you help yourself.

Writer Objects To Legalized Drinking

By MARY ELIZABETH KING

Attorney Note: The staff editorial about drinking in Friday's Flambeau aroused the curiosity of Marjorie Lester staff writer, who is also a student in law school. Her article is based on the editorial and is typical of the other side of the question.

I disagreed a bit with the last editorial in Friday's issue. I don't believe drinking should be legalized on FSU's campus.

Remember when smoking regulations were changed? Many female students that had previously refused to smoke started because of social pressure. Smoking is now considered the thing of female students are dropped, besides having the smell permeating throughout classes on person's breaths, people getting away from it all after exams, what a reputation FSU's Florida State University exaction drinking. Parents thinking of the welfare of immature female students would hesitate to send their daughters to FSU. College is not always an institution of learning. Pressure from the crowd is influenced by others against their own beliefs, or a place of people who can drink in moderation.

In America today we have over 4 million hopeless alcoholics. I'm not referring to those who like to have beer after retiring or a cocktail before dinner or drink at occasional parties, I'm referring to those who can't stop if they wanted to. Four million people would be legalized on FSU's campus.

Student Government Releases First Series Of News Bulletins

In the first of a series of weekly news releases, Jere Fletcher, Acting Executive Secretary of the Florida Universities Student Government Association, outlined the advantages of membership in the organization.

Florida State University is one of the originators of the program. In sending the release, Fletcher declared that his purpose was to promote student interest in the association. "I want to make it a stronger organization."

Fletcher revealed that membership of the five colleges comprising SUSGA reaches 50,000 students, and that other schools are debating whether they should join. In explaining the advantages of membership, he hopes to persuade them to join.

"In short," says Fletcher, "a school has everything to gain. Through such an organization the school can gain an insight into the problems of similar schools. In like manner other schools can gain an expert's greater insight into their problems by a shorter study period.

Campaigns And Candidates:

Senior President

Canada

Fellow classmates.

I am seeking the office of Senior Class President and am subject to your ballot today. It is important that you know exactly how I regard this office which I seek.

Next year will be an important one to us as a class but beyond this it will be a vital year in the history of FSU. We are all aware of the recent and increasing demands placed upon us as students and I know that you are as concerned about this as I. Our class president will be in a position to exert no small amount of influence in this area and it is for this reason that we must choose the most qualified and experienced man for this post.

If student government is to survive and retain its dignity, then we must have capable leaders.

Respectfully I submit to you my qualifications. As President of our class in 1955-5, twice as Chairman of Homecoming committees as an active member of Gold Key, and as a charter member of the Men's Residence Council. I feel that I have gained a degree of experience that qualifies one for an office of this importance. It is on this basis that I again seek the opportunity to serve you as our Class President for 1956.

Regardless of your choice in this election, make sure that you vote and that and only then will our class government be truly representative of all the students.

Sincerely yours,
Bob Canada
Endorsed Party Candidate for Senior President.

Massey

Dear Classmates,

I would like for you to know that I realize the importance of the office of the Senior Class President. I feel that I'm qualified and I would like to be given the opportunity to serve you. 1 President, Men's F Club.
3 Treasurer of Junior Class.
3. Decoration Committee for Junior-Senior Prom.
4 State Party Candidate
3 Grades—3 last semester.
4. Football team and football Council.
1. Past Treasurer of Student Party.
8 Presently officer, Assistant Alumni Secretary, Executive Board, and Social Committee.

Yours for a better Senior Class day). If I am a successful candidate, there are certain measures which I for one, would like to see enacted by the University Senate.

First, from my observation as an employee at this university, I take an unqualified stand in favor of better compensation for students employed by the school in various jobs.

Second, I am also firmly opposed to the present university housing and I promise the students that as their representative I would devote my efforts to their freedom of choice to their place of residence—on or off campus.

Third, I would like to see a recommendation made by our senate to secure student representation at faculty senate meetings. Not only are we denied representation, but several times students have actually been ejected from these meetings in the past. This closed-door policy should be changed, and the University Senate would do well to take the first step in opening that door.

These are the things I represent, if you feel they represents you, I shall appreciate your support today.

Sincerely,
Bill Wagoner
Candidate for Senior Senate.

Senior Women's Senate

Arnold

Dear Juniors,

I am running for Senior Senate. I realize that Senate is a very important part in the affects the entire student body, its rules and regulations. If I am elected, I shall try my best to act according to the wishes of all the students and not just my own personal ideas. I shall try to attend all Senate meetings and in every way improve our form of student government at FSU.

As past President of Sophomore Council, a Junior Councilor, a member of the Organizations Committee and a member of the Freshman Orientation Committee, I feel that I have a good background for the job as Senator. With this in mind, I hope that you will like "Trey" enough to vote for her today and elect her Senior Senator.

Sincerely yours,
"Trey" Arnold
Candidate for Sr. Senate

Senior Secretary

Bisbee

Dear Sophomores,

In the elections today you will choose your class officers. Everyone should realize the great importance of having an officer who is well interested and has the qualifications.

I sincerely hope that my strong interest and the qualifications I will have if I am enumerate will be enough to serve as you that you attend cast your vote for Bebe Bisbee for junior class secretary.

In past year I have served in the position of secretary of our sophomore class. I have worked on sophomore council and on many committees for the University. I wish to continue to serve you.

Next year will be a busy year and also a very successful one. I hope I would appreciate your trust in allowing me to continue work to serve you, the junior class.

Sincerely,
Bebe Bisbee.

Senior Treasurer

Edris

Dear Juniors,

I wish to take this opportunity to solicite my qualifications as a candidate for Senior Class Treasurer. I served last year as Secretary of Senior Hall Dormitory Government, this year as Treasurer of Senior Hall Dormitory Government, and also presently serving as treasurer of the Newman Club Society.

Though experience is essential for this office, I believe as treasurer of the Senior Class, one should have a basic knowledge of accounting principles. My time hours of accounting fulfills this requirement. On today's election I will appreciate your casting your vote for WAYNE EDRIS candidate for Senior Class Treasurer.

Sincerely,
Wayne Edris.

Senior Women's Judiciary

Stone

Dear Students.

First, let me say that contrary to the bulletin in Friday's Flambeau, I am not qualified to run for Senior Women's Judiciary. The mistake originated at the Registrar's office.

I have been interested in this office for a long time. If I am elected, I promise to work with the other members of Judiciary to see that all who appear before this committee are given a fair hearing.

Sincerely,
Anne "Rocky" Stone.

Junior President

Carothers

Dear Students,

It is my sincere desire to serve you as president of our class. I realize the responsibilities that come with this office requires. I have the time and the energy to perform the job to the best of my ability.

I have served in the University Senate and on various class committees during the last two years on campus. I feel that I have the necessary qualifications of leadership and experience which offer the demands.

We have a great opportunity and a great many capable leaders in our class. It is my hope to be able to coordinate our efforts to make next year's junior class one of the finest this campus has ever known. I solicit your support to give you the best that I have and to make an honest effort to be a credit to our class if I am elected.

Sincerely
Graham Carothers
for Junior President.

Junior Men's Senate

Gatlin

Dear Sophomores.

This is the first time I have ever run for any elected office, although I have been an active participant in campus affairs during the two years that I have been at FSU. I am entering this race because I feel our student government needs some "new faces" in a "fresh outlook" on student problems.

Although I have never held a political office before, I am not attached to any student government clique and feel that will enable me to represent you fairly in the Senate. I feel the main qualifications a candidate for this office should have are a desire to serve willingness to make an effort to find out what student problems are and exact legislation to improve them.

I can assure you I am willing to serve and, if elected, will regard this office not as an honor, but as a job to be done.

The only promise I will make to you is a promise of fair, conscientious and sincere representation. I want your vote and support only if you think my desire to serve will make me a good Senator.

Sincerely,
KEN GATLIN

Norton

Dear Friends,

Each year at this time, and only at this time, the students of FSU are put in the position of builders toward a better student senate. Obviously, from many of the reactionary attitudes taken by the present powers-that-be the word better is not an illusion. But, with your help, it can become a reality.

The student senate has to date lagged far behind in voicing the students' opinions. This can and will be corrected if you, the students, elect senators who in their representation will speak out with your interests in mind.

I, for one, am willing to fight for this greater student representation not only in senate, but also in other committees. Yet, I do not believe in complete student control, but in a keener understanding between the administration and we, the students. However, let me add again, I am for student rights in student affairs.

Student senate can become an effective mouthpiece with your support on Tuesday.

Sincerely
Wallace (Josh) Norton.

Ehrhardt

Perhaps you know that I am a candidate for this office in the Junior class. Unfortunately, it is impossible for me to be personally contact every interested student in discuss my qualifications and platform. It is my desire, however, to have the opportunity of serving you in the Senate and representing your interest fairly and justly.

I am a member of the Sophomore Men's Council and of the Alpha Chi Sigma. I am also an officer in the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity and have been active in various other student and governmental affairs during the past two years. My main qualification is my keen desire to find out student problems and have something done about them. I stand only for clean, efficient, and qualified student government, particularly in the area of academic affairs. I am not an investigation should be made of the various campus nonpartisan organizations, and I think a few changes are needed in the Women's Judiciary.

I pledge myself to the extent of my ability to give you fair and conscientious representation.

Sincerely,
TOM EHRHARDT

Mansfield

Dear Sophomores,

Because of my experience and interest in Student Government, I feel that I am qualified to serve you as YOUR representative in Senior Men's Senate.

My experience in Student Government is as follows:

1. Member of Sophomore Men's Judiciary.
2. Member of Sophomore Council.
3. Member of Sophomore Council.
4. An officer of the State Party.
5. An officer of my fraternity.

I do not feel that you should vote for a candidate on experience alone. Therefore, I will:

1. A sounding board for student opinions and problems to be taken to faculty and administration.
2. Regularly scheduled meetings sponsored by Student Senate for the purpose of gaining opinions from students on possible legislation and policies.
3. Uniform procedures for all University Courts.
4. Regular class and day student senate meetings.

5. Uniform system of cash payments for part-time employees.

This experience and platform warrant your consideration when you vote Today.

Vote for the man who always has the students' interest in mind—

Fred Mansfield.

Junior Women's Senate

Halford

Dear Sophomores.

Here is some factual information concerning next year's Senate which should concern you. There are very few, nine out of twenty-four, Senators seeking re-election. What does this mean? It means that next year's Senate will be composed of people unfamiliar with the procedures of the Senate, with no real knowledge of what is to be done or how it can be done.

From experience, I can tell you that it usually takes over a semester for a Senator to become familiar with the workings of the legislative process.

I have served two years in Senate as your representative; my actions speak louder than my words.

Here are some reasons why:

1. Made it possible for students to leave at 12:00 noon instead of 5 p.m. for vacations.
2. Introduced move to extend day trips until 8:00 p.m.
3. Author of resolution giving vote of confidence to Flambeau.
4. Mentioned by Vice-President Lawler in Flambeau column as a dependable committee chairman.
5. Chairman of a number of committees which benefited the students.

I sincerely believe that on the basis of interest, experience, and capability, it would be beneficial to the Senate and the Student Body if I am re-elected.

VOTE HALFORD, JUNIOR WOMEN'S SENATE.

Sincerely,
Joan Halford.

Dear Students,

I have not had the pleasure of meeting everyone of you, although I have tried to meet and talk to you concerning the coming election. I am running for Junior Honor Court on the Student Party ticket and would appreciate your consideration and support when voting Tuesday.

I think the honor courts are very important here on our campus, mainly because our university is run on the honor system. I feel that one should be sincere, unbiased and fair to be a member of the Honor Court and I believe that I am suited to fill this position. As you know two representatives are elected by you, the student body. I wish to place my name, Ann Futch, before you for your consideration.

Don't forget to vote. Even if it isn't for me, please take advantage of your democratic rights and go to the polls and vote. You won't be sorry.

Yours for a better Honor Court.

Graham

Dear Fellow Students,

As State Party candidate for Junior Honor Court, I am asking your support. I have various reasons for entering this campaign.

I once attended a school where there was no honor code or system and so avoid hauling down any unnecessary penalties.

I want this opportunity to serve you, and I promise to give each case my individual consideration.

I hope that you will give me your vote and support in the coming election.

Sincerely,
Carolyn Redfern.

Sophomore President

Ort

Freshman,

Perhaps you are wondering why you "ort to elect Ort" to the Sophomore Presidency.

In junior and senior high, I was active in student government. President of the band, photography editor of the school paper, and offices in several other extra-curricular activities including Debdoay, Key Club, Quill and Scroll, chorus and the yearbook staff. Before graduating, I was awarded two academic scholarships.

Here at FSU I've been goffer in the Florida Hall Board of Governors both semesters, a member of the Marching Chiefs, University Singers, Student Union Committee, and Senate. I graduated over a two-point average.

But more important are the plans I will carry out if I'm elected. Most important are my hopes for an improved and partially reorganized Class Senate, Sophomore Freshman day, and Sophomore Council. These three functions should and can be set up completely before the end of the semester, so that we will be enabled to fully inform next in which I was engaged during the past year.

I am a member of the Alpha council and the Sophomore Men's Council. I worked as coordinator of the Men's dorms for Campus Chest. I was a member of the homecoming dance committee. I worked on Fun and Functions and helped on many other dorm and campus projects. With the above experience I hope to be of great assistance to the President of our class, which you elect.

If I am elected I would like to ask one more thing of you my fellow classmates—to bring me your suggestions on how to make our Junior Class the best one this campus has ever seen. I will appreciate your SUPPORT.

Junior Traffic Court

Redfern

Dear Classmates,

I would like to discuss with you briefly the office of the Junior Traffic Court. I am running on the Student Party ticket. Up until this year I have not held an office in student government as such, but I have always been interested in serving in this capacity. I believe that my qualifications will enable me to serve you in all fairness. The traffic problem on campus is something that should be considered with an eye toward improvement. Since Traffic Court is a comparatively new organization, it needs the support of all the students if it is going to achieve success. As your junior representative I would do all in my power to make the program run smoothly and avoid hauling down any unnecessary penalties.

I want this opportunity to serve you, and I promise to give each case my individual consideration. I hope that you will give me your vote and support in the coming election.

Sincerely,
Carolyn Redfern.

Taylor

Dear Fellow Freshmen.

Because the office is so important, I hope each of you will consider the ability, and experience of Jo Ann Taylor for President of the Sophomore class.

One needs experience in an executive office, and I believe that I am well qualified. I served as chairman of my dorm and worked energetically on many projects. I was chairman for the Freshman Carnival, and I have been active and interested in politics here. In addition, I would like to list some of my high school activities. I was one of the representatives, my junior and senior years, to State Congress for the National Forensic League. I was elected Speaker Of The House (Chairman of the House of Representatives) and was voted second best speaker of all the session, using the valid experience in executive capacities and parliamentary procedure. I was treasurer of our High School music honor society, secretary of my senior class, and was on the executive board of our student council.

I will give every ounce of strength and energy I have into making our class the best sophomore class ever. I am aware of the duties that lie in this office and feel that my qualifications have prepared me for it. When you go to the polls, remember to vote for the girl with experience Taylor is "Taylor-ed for the job!"

Yours Most Sincerely,
Jo Ann Taylor.

Moore

Dear Freshmen and next Fall's Sophomores,

I am again seeking to represent our class as Senator. In the past year I've given my every goal to see that our class received the representation that it deserved. I supported only that legislation in the Senate which I thought would be to the best interest of our class and the University. I held myself open at all times for any improvements and suggestions from my fellow classmates had and I tried to see that they were carried out. That is what I did during the past year as your Senator. That is what I will do if I am re-elected.

It is with much sincerity and with a whole-hearted interest in good student government that I submit my name for Sophomore Senator.

"Score with Moore in '56."

Sincerely

Campaigns And Candidates: Letters To The Students

Sophomore Men's Senate

Merritt

Fellow Freshmen,

I want you to be proud of your student government.

Many people have little respect for student government. Others have hardly heard of it.

I think this is unfortunate, and I think something can be done about.

The main trouble with student government is that once elected, your officers usually forget they are representing you.

They forget that their purpose is to be informed of your problems and actively battle for student rights.

I am against students being compelled to do things. I think students should be consulted before such plans as compulsory football attendance and compulsory university housing are seriously considered.

Not only am I against these things, but I am in favor of revising the present system so that it will be fairer to the students. I believe student government should publish an audit of all the student activity money. I believe student's hours should be extended to one o'clock on Saturday nights.

I am running on the student party ticket, and I believe our platform, if enacted, is a good start toward improving student conditions. But I will always be on the lookout for the new and important problems we students will face throughout the year.

Sincerely,
LOU MERRITT

Chester

Dear Fellow Classmates:

I could no doubt speak of my background but that is unimportant. I will, however, give you a clear picture of what I'd like to do, and why I believe I am the one of the ones that are able to do this by being elected to senate.

My interest in politics is not personal. I am a law major. I am and have been extremely interested in politics and the workings of governments. It is my belief that in FSU, the "workings" are much less. Not because of the former officers, but because of the conservative attitude that most of these officers have contained in.

Women's hours on week-ends will never be extended until 1 p.m. be a conservative senate. The late time allowed women students will never be extended from 12 minutes per semester to an hour per semester by a conservative senate.

I am an radical, but merely one who has enough foresight to see that the young adults on this campus need to be treated as such. As a war veteran, I have had much experience in dealing with young adults and the rules which must guide them. I believe this experience is one which will allow me to serve you effectively.

I believe in free thinking American youth, not in the administrative or senate robots. I am definitely against compulsory ROTC and compulsory football attendance as well as against anything else "compulsory" that threatens the very existence the students are striving towards.

Your candidate for Sophomore Men's Senate,
CHARLES CHESTER

Temple

Dear Freshmen,

I am an Independent candidate for Sophomore Senator. As Chaplain of the University Senate this year I have seen how the Senate and Student Government offices are controlled and operated. I have built up an interest in this government and have a desire to serve in the Senate as a representative from my class. If I am elected I will first consider the desires of the people I represent. On immediate decisions I will attempt to find if the issue will benefit the majority or the minority of the people in my class. On decisions by which the Senators are given a week or so of study on the issue, I will solicit opinions of you of whom I represent, and especially those of you who are directly affected by the bill.

I will look and vote upon each issue with a Christian attitude. I will support all issues which may uplift or conserve the Christian activities and moral standards of the University and past traditions of the same.

The decision rests with you as to whether or not I am to be your Senator, your voice in the Student Senate. Please do see—I want to serve you as you should be served.

I will appreciate even the smallest bit of support and of course—your vote. Remember me on Tuesday. Thank you very much.

Sincerely,
Bobby Temple
Candidate for Sophomore Senator.

Soles

Dear Freshmen:

I am back again—once more asking you to place your faith and trust in me by re-electing me to represent you in the Senate.

I feel that having served this year in the Senate I am better than ever qualified to represent you. My desire to serve you is my SOLE purpose in asking you to vote for me. We have a great class and a great school. I want to have an active part in working to make them achieve even higher goals.

Sincerely,
Jimmy Soles.

Sophomore Women's Senate

Trippodo

Dear Freshmen,

Congratulations! You have watched this FSU through the "literature." This indicates that you are going to make an intelligent decision on issues rather than personalities. Therefore I won't burden you with generalities about myself which say nothing and mean little. I will rely on concrete proposals that I will carry out.

First, is the Student Party platform. Basically all office holders with the same convictions could accomplish more than alone "In unity there is strength."

There is another issue of great importance I refer to the proposal recently passed, that compels freshmen to attend football games. I, myself, am not football, attend games regularly, and believe students should have an interest in sports—HOWEVER I feel that the student's right to choose his entertainment is far more important than the need for attendance.

The senate attempted justification of this by saying it would increase school spirit— CAN SPIRIT BE LEGISLATED? Let us increase attendance by increasing interest, not by compelling obedience. If elected I will do everything in my power to stop such legislation from passing the senate.

Yours for a strong,
sensible student govt.
Norma Trippodo

Close

Dear Freshmen,

I am grateful to you, the Freshman Class, for giving me the opportunity to serve you this year in the Senate. I am also grateful to the Student Party for nominating me for re-election to Senate.

One of the most important qualifications for Senate is that of experience. I have served you this year to the very best of my ability, and the knowledge and experience that I have gained in Senate will enable me to do an even better job next year.

As Senior Freshman Senator this year, I have worked for your interests and the interests of the student body. I have been regular in attendance of all Senate meetings, and have served on various committees.

I also attended Freshman Class Officers meetings regularly, and worked on the Freshman Carnival. I have been active in other campus activities. Also, and I maintained a 2.1 scholastic average.

If I am re-elected to the Senate, I promise only one thing: that I shall continue to serve you to the very best of my ability. I am sincerely interested in improving the school spirit of our student body, and in making our class of '57 the best ever.

It is with a sincere and humble spirit that I ask for your support in re-electing me to represent you in the Senate.

Sincerely yours,
Carolyn Close

Jones

Dear Freshmen,

It seems such a short time ago that I was asking your support for Freshman Senate. And now again, it's election time, and again, I must seek your confidence and vote.

The year I have spent as your Freshman Senator has been a joyous and happy one for me. It has been happy because I have made many of the part of this University and a real friend to the students by serving in every way possible the student and his needs. I sincerely thank you for making this possible.

The present campaign means even more to me than did the last one. It means more because having had experience this year, I really know for what I am striving. Now I am more aware of ways by which I can help you, the students. I feel this experience is indeed a qualification that should be carefully considered.

Most of you Freshmen know me and know the goals and ideals for which I stand. If you have found me to be capable and efficient, I humbly ask your support in re-electing me to be your Senator.

Sincerely yours,
Jo Jones.

Soper

Dear Freshmen,

This past year I have had the privilege of representing our class as a Freshman Senator. At that time I am seeking re-election as your Sophomore Senator, because I feel that I am well-qualified for this office. Having served you this year as Senator for a year, I have the experience that is of great value to a person in this office.

The main purpose of the Senate is to express the desires of you, the students. Unless a Senator discusses the work of the Senate with a representative group of you, then she is not fulfilling her job. I have tried to reflect your views in my decisions. For instance, the many Freshmen girls were dissatisfied with the voting system of dormitory officers. By studying this problem, the Women's Senate passed my recommendation which will greatly improve the voting system.

A Senator should also have an interest in her class and school. I have enjoyed working in many activities such as Freshman Carnival, dormitory and church projects, and the Women's Student Government Convention.

If you give me the privilege of serving you in the Senate another year, I pledge to represent you to the best of my ability.

Very sincerely,
Jane Soper.

Sophomore Vice-President

Wagner

Freshmen,

Having declared my candidacy for the office of Sophomore vice-president, I wish to state my qualifications for the post.

At high school I was manager of student concessions under the direction of the Student Council. Work on the high school paper and membership in the Quill and Scroll, plus being school photographer, have given me a keen feeling of personal contacts by meeting and working with people. All my work was carried on through all four years of high school during the time of the close of my high school career, I was chosen to receive the Danforth Foundation Award, for outstanding leadership.

In addition to active school work I was two-term president of a local teen-age club.

Here at FSU I was president of Florida Hall last semester and was also invited into the Alpha Council (Freshman Leadership Honorary) during the first semester.

If elected, I will endeavor to fulfill all the duties of the office to the best of my ability to work in close cooperation with my fellow Sophomore class officers I will do my best to help establish a good Freshman Rat Court, and to help promote a more successful Freshman-Sophomore Day.

All matters introduced to me concerning anything anything about the Sophomore Class will be given full attention and will be taken only in cooperation with other class officers.

Your candidate for Sophomore Vice-President,
Ray Warner.

Sophomore Secretary

Whittle

Dear Future Sophomores.

Elections! elections! elections! Seems you're always having elections. You get tired of slurms at posters and reading campaign literature. I have too, but that's all part of this wonderful democratic government that we have. Yes, campus politics are important to the candidates, but they should be even more so to you, the student. The leaders whom you choose should be capable and efficient so that they may serve you in the best possible manner.

The fact that I have believed myself to be capable and efficient, as well as having a genuine interest in the University and each student, has been the reason for my campaign. The experience I have had in the past has prepared me for the office I now seek. Many of you are familiar with my campus activities and I'll see my interests here. If you have found me to be friendly, ambitious, and sincere and you want that sort of person for a class officer, then I solicit your support in making me your sophomore class secretary.

Sincerely,
Betty Lou Whittle

Sophomore Treasurer

Ranieri

Dear Freshmen:

Today you are voting on the students who will lead the Sophomore Class next year—the class officers.

These officials must be well-qualified because they not only represent you but they also express your ideas and wishes I feel that a class officer should use an interest in every member of her class and be willing to devote both time and effort to making every class undertaking a success.

If I have proven to you my capability and interest by the work I did as chairman of the food committee for the Freshman Carnival, as an interested active to the House Council of my dormitory, and maintaining a 2. average in my first semester class work, then I ask you to consider giving me the opportunity to serve you next year in the capacity of CLASS TREASURER.

Sincerely,
Carmine Ranieri

Anderson

Dear Classmates,

When you consider the qualifications required of a secretary you usually think of these: Ability to take notes rapidly and accurately, punctuality, dependability in attendance, knowledge of the proceedings being recorded. Yes, these are the general qualifications every secretary should have, but to me, my wish to serve you as Sophomore Class Secretary entails these: Fair Hush's Annual Staff, and my work as Reynolds' Floor Chairman has given me a keen feeling of class spirit and enthusiasm—necessary qualities for any class officer.

With my record in mind and our class future in sight, won't you please remember me when you go to the polls?

Sincerely,
Anita Andersen,
(State Party)

Sophomore Women's Judiciary

Sims

Dear Students,

As a candidate for Sophomore Women's Judiciary, I would like to take this opportunity to mention briefly a few of my views concerning this office.

I am aware of the responsibilities which a member of the judicial court assumes when she accepts the position bestowed her by the vote of confidence cast by a majority of the student body. It is my belief that she should always apply patience, sympathy, tact, and firmness—along with sincere interest to all judicial cases, and never approach a problem with harsh criticism, but with an earnest desire to help any individual from out his or her difficulties. If I were elected I assure you that I would work constantly for the best interests of the students—keeping in mind at all times the welfare and desires of that

Hughes

Dear Freshmen,

Time a-draving close on the end of our prosperous Freshman year, and we are now ready to choose our class officers for next year. I as seeking the office of treasurer of our class. Because I have worked as Prize Chairman of the Freshman Carnival and have observed our presgnt treasurer, I now realize that a treasurer's job is not just keeping all accurate account of the money being spent and received, but being a carpenter, a painter—in other words, a "jack-of-all-trades."

Next year I want to see more people in class participating and more insight of everybody on the work of the class officers. One way I intend to do this is by publication of a quarterly treasurer's report to keep your informed on that angle. I am also willing to put as much of my time and more as is needed in making our Sophomore Class the best and more uniform. our Rat-Court the roughest. our Sophomore-Freshman day the most talked about, and our Sophomore Hop the most fabulous.

I am closing this letter in hope you will CHOOSE HUGHES for a sophomore treasurer. Thanks for what you have already done to help me.

Yours for service to the class,
Barbara Hughes.

group of whom I would be a representative.

I certainly would appreciate your consideration of my name for one of the three judicial seats open to Sophomore women.

Sincerely,
Greta Sims
Student Party Candidate for Sophomore Women's Judiciary.

Runnels

Fellow Students.

Let me introduce myself: I'm Edna Runnels, an independent candidate for Sophomore Women's Judiciary. In trying for a party nomination, I came in fourth, but I don't believe the lack of party backing would prevent me from running for an office that I would like to hold.

A member of Judiciary can do a great deal to improve her university by judging such cases that come before the court with wise discrimination in hopes of reducing law violations to a minimum. It takes a person capable of making just and impartial decisions to fill such an office. As chairman of several committees in Broward Hall and a member of various committees of the Methodist Student House, I have had a chance to consider the solutions of many problems. With the experience of working with people and such difficulties, I think I am capable of serving on your Women's Judiciary.

In wanting to serve my University and you, the students, I have chosen the Judiciary as my station of service. When you vote for three Sophomore girls (and the entire student body votes for Judiciary) for that position, please consider me: I will do the best work I can if I'm elected to Women's Judiciary. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely yours,
Edna Runnels.

Sharp

Dear Fellow Students.

I am seeking the post of Sophomore Women's Representative to Women's Judiciary and hope you will allow me the opportunity to serve you in our University's court system.

As I ask you to consider my qualifications, let me augment them with my sincere promises:

If elected, I assure you that my personal feelings shall never unjustly affect any of my comments or decisions; that I shall advocate sensible and pertinent punishment for those convicted guilty and shall urge would work constantly for the best interests of the students—keeping in mind at all times the welfare and desires of that any duties in the light of basic analysis rather than dogmatic judgment.

Let's work together for consistently respected, effective, and meaningful Women's Judiciary; if this is what you want, then I earnestly request and appreciate your support.

Sincerely,
Dawn Sharp
(Student Party).

McManus

Dear Editor,

In submitting my name as a candidate for Sophomore Judiciary, I would like to tell you a few of the things I hope to accomplish if elected.

Instead of judging a case only on the infringement of the rules, I would judge it according to circumstance and attitude. By this, I mean that each case would be confronted with a fair, open mind.

As a member of Bryan Hall House Council, a position I held as a result of being Vice-President of Bryan, I have seen the need of a close study to hear the facts, see the attitude, and judge according to My interest, which is working with people, has grown from the close association with the students on House Council; is a necessary qualification for a position on Judiciary Court.

Please keep this information in mind on election day when you vote for Women's Sophomore Judiciary.

Sincerely yours,
June McManus

Moll

Hi Fellow Seminoles!

All the candidates for sophomore representative on Women's Judiciary are well qualified. It will be hard to choose the three members.

Just so that you will know about me—here I am—an independent candidate. I did not seek party nomination, but I think my intent all along to run as an individual — open minded and ready to hear both sides of the

INTRAMURALS

Phi Delts; Senior Hall Lead In Sports Race

Intramural athletics, like the school year, are moving to a new interest right now in softball.

As of yesterday, SPE, Lambda Chi and Sigma Chi were leading softball race in the fraternity league. There is no real leader for dormitory league yet, for all dormitories have not played enough games to establish a definite top team.

The softball standings among fraternities, according to the Intramural office: SPE Lambda Chi, and Sigma Chi Intramural office: SPE, won 1, lost 0; ATO and Delta Chi, won 1, lost 0; Sigma Nu and Phi Kappa Tau (was 1, lost 1) Kappa Tau won 2, lost 1); Phi Delt, SAE, and Pi Kappa Phi (was 1, lost 1); Theta Chi and Kappa Sig (was 0, lost 2); Pi Kappa Alpha not entered in the softball war.

Friday's scores Phi Kappa Sig 2, SPE 12, Chi 3; ATO 8, Phi Delt 3; Lambda Chi 6, Sigma Nu 6; Sigma Chi 8, Pi Kappa Phi 5.

Overall fraternity standings on games up to softball do not show enough change, according to intramural office

Davis Explains Part Confederate Navy Played in Civil War

Dean Charles Davis, of the College of Arts and Sciences, delivered an address Wednesday before members of the Florida Blue Key chapter of Phi Alpha Delta, national history honorary, on the part played by Confederate navy in the Civil War.

Davis explained the career of Confederate navy "The Florida," "The Alabama," and "The Shenandoah" to 150 faculty members and students present at the meeting.

He stated that the "Shenandoah" was the most "fabulous" of the raiders employed by the Confederate, taking many prizes in the Bering sea and completed 9,000 mile cruise before she received from action.

He also made reference to the Tallahassee a ship which was "the effective action" as a blockade runner. Davis added, "It is generally speaking, the Confederate cruisers took a very small toll of Federal commerce and were credited with having materially prolonged the war."

Veterans Post Board On Home Changes

Florida State University veterans are advised to keep the Veterans Administration posted of changes in address if they plan to travel this summer, state officials.

H. F. Dickenshseets, regional manager of VA said this is necessary so that they might receive benefit checks, pending claims or benefits of the GI Insurance.

"Under the law," stated Dickenshseets, "checks for benefits may not be forwarded by the Post Office. They must be delivered directly to the addressee."

For reporting change of address for insurance purpose, VA provided a form on the flap of the premium notice envelope, he noted. Any VA office can furnish a form to be filled for the ordinary notice of change of address, he added.

Classy Loyola Tracksters Play FSU Saturday At West Campus

One of the classiest track teams in the country, Loyola University of New Orleans, will strut their stuff against the Seminoles on the West Campus track on Saturday. The University of Alabama, another strong outfit in track, will also compete in the triangular meet.

According to track Coach Ken Miller, Loyola has their "greatest team in the history of the school." And the Jesuit institution from New Orleans has always been outstanding in track.

Miller also said that Alabama, a member of the Southeast Conference, "has a very strong team."

With these two powerhouses present, track fans will probably see the brightest array of track stars ever to compete in Tallahassee. They include Ray Barker of Loyola who is an All-American trackster and has thrown the javelin 235 feet. Loyola also boasts four men who have consistently run the 100 yard dash in 10 seconds flat or better.

Loyola won the Southwest Louisiana Relays and tied for first in the Southern Relays earlier this spring.

After the triangular meet Saturday, which starts at 10 p.m. the Seminoles have home meets with Miami and Mississippi Southern on successive Saturdays.

FSU BEAT ROLLINS

Despite the presence of the British and Canadian women's tiolist, the Rollins College golf team lost to Florida State 20½ to 6½ Saturday. FSU's Jack Veghte with a 72 shot the best score of the day on the Tallahassee Country Club course.

The lone female on the Rollins team, Marsden Stewart, shot a 78 playing in the number three position. But on the season Miss Stewart sank a long putt on the 18th hole which helped Rollins beat the Seminoles, 14 to 13, at Winter Park.

Professor Presents Jeffersonian Work To School Library

A rare edition of one of the most frequently reprinted southern-authored books about the south was presented this week to the Florida State University Library by Coolie Verner, associate professor of Education.

Written by Thomas Jefferson, the book is the American edition of "Notes on Virginia," published in Philadelphia in 1788. According to Coolie, the book held undisputed first place in popularity until the appearance of Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind." Coolie has a reputation of being an outstanding authority on Jefferson.

Norman L. Kilpatrick, director of FSU Libraries, describes the book as "the noble William Byrd to the libraries' material on Jefferson and the South."

Director Vernone declared that the Jefferson work is a "milestone in literature because it is the first attempt at systematic descriptive geography. It has set the pattern for subsequent development in the same field."

Kilpatrick added that the library welcomes this type of gift which will increase the value of its collection and the resources for scholarly research. "It will add to our already important collection of material on Florida and the Southeast.

Higgenbotham Has 4-Hitter in Valdosta

Wally Higginbotham, one of Florida State's top pitchers last year, hurled a four hit victory for the Valdosta Tigers of the Georgia-Florida League. Valdosta beat Brunswick 4-3 in the first home game of the season for the hitters.

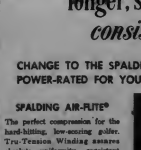
Higginbotham quit school in his freshman year to sign a pro contract with the Detroit Tigers who shipped him to the class C Valdosta club. He had a 5-4 record last year for the Seminoles.

Leisure Time Is Subject Of Gallup Poll

PRINCETON, N. J. (I.P.)—The problem of leisure is the problem of everyone a proper balance between entertainment and education, according to Dr. George Gallup of Gallup Poll fame. "To do this I believe we must revise our whole philosophy of education. We must begin to recognize the importance of the years after graduation from grade school, high school, or college as the important years to the education process," he observed.

"To do this we must begin to realize that self-education is all-important and that formal schooling is good only to the extent to which it aids and abets self-education. Too many students close the door to the belief that when they are through school that is to say, when they are graduated, they have had it. And too many of our teachers unfortunately, fail to challenge this point of view . . .

"If an intellectual renaissance is to get under way in this country, the natural place for it to be born is in our colleges and universities. But that, I am afraid will never happen until we take more grown-up point of view toward college education, and stop running our institutions of higher learning as if they were glorified prep schools."



David Speaks Here On Music Research

Dr. Hans T. David of the University of Michigan, will spend a week on the campus of FSU conferring with graduate students and faculty on problems of music research.

The distinguished musician and scholar will speak tonight at 8 p.m. tonight on "The Music of J. S. Bach" in the Lonsmire Auditorium of the Social Science-Humanities Department.

Born in 1895 in the Palatinate of Germany, Dr. David grew up in Frankfurt. He studied at various German universities, receiving his PhD from the University of Berlin in 1923.

Currently, Dr. David is director of one of the world's great research musical research, the re-editing and re-publishing of the complete works of Mozart. The project was begun by the noted musicologist, Dr. Alfred Einstein, who before his death selected Dr. David to direct completion of the work.

Golfers In Big Meet At Athens, Georgia

Florida State is one of the 28 entries already listed for the Southern Intercollegiate Golf tournament beginning Thursday on the Athens Ga. Country Club course The Seminoles, who have won seven and lost two will be paced by Buzzi Berry Jimmy James, Vernon Edge and Jack Veghte.

Pre-tournament favorites for individual honors appear to be Eddie Merrins of Louisiana State, who won the title last year, and Arnold Palmer of Wake Forest. Last year, Merrins shot a two-under par 286 for 72 holes. Palmer won the tournament in 1950 in 289 strokes. He has been in the service for the past two years, but is reported to be shooting par and sub-par.

In the competition for the team championship, North Texas State is rated as the favorite, mostly on the strength of its past performances. They have won the championship for the past three years.

Individual and team championships of the Southeastern Conference are also decided by the tournament. LSU leads the team title while Merrins of LSU is defending individual championship.

The Athens course is 6,500 yards and par is 36-36—72.

Ballet Theater Will Open '54 Artist Series

The Ballet Theater will open next fall's Florida State University Artist series program with two performances in December, according to Owen Sellers, chairman of the selection committee.

Following the Ballet, the Series will bring the Columbus Boychoir in January and the Dublin Players in February. Yma Sumac and her Peruvian musicians and dancers will close the season.

Sellers stated that committee members were "delighted at the prospects of next year's program. They feel that it'll evenly will be enthusiastically received by members of the student body."

According to Sellers, "the friendly competition of the Athletes at Leon High the last three years have made it possible for us to establish a series on a modest scale. "It is going to be a pleasure to be out in our own auditorium again."

In addition to Sellers, the committee is composed of Drs. Sarah Herndon, Janet Smith, Clarence Edney, Joseph Dorgan, A. B. Martin, Means R. R. Shaw, Roy Flynn, Ivan Johnson and Edmund Lowe.

Two students are also represented on the selection committee. They are the vice-presidents of men's and women's senates respectively, Gordon Gaster and Joan Tavel.

FSU FINISHES 3RD

The Florida State track squad took third and last in a triangular meet won by the University of Georgia, Saturday on the West Campus track. Georgia Tech finished second.

FSU's Freshman speedster, Jimmy Casteel, of Avondale, Ga. was high point man of the meet with 16½ points. He won the 220 and 440 yard dashes and the broad jump.

Georgia finished with 60½ points, Georgia Tech had 58 and the Seminoles with 53½ points. The defeat was the first for the Seminoles in three annual meets with the Georgia schools.

Georgia won out in the last minutes through the power of its Javelin throwers, who took the first three places in that event. Before this almost complete sweep in the javelin, the winners were a close second behind Tech Kermit Perry of Cedartown, Ga., was highest point man for the Georgia Bulldogs with 11. He won the 120 yard high hurdles and the 220 yard low hurdles For Tech, Carl Vereen of Miami won the discus and shot put and took top honors with 19 points His distances were 50 feet 1 inch in the discus and 15 feet 1½ in discus, both of which set new track and meet records.

IT'S ALL A MATTER OF TASTE

When you come right down to it, you smoke for one simple reason . . . enjoyment. And smoking enjoyment is all a matter of taste. Yes, taste is what counts in Lucky Strike. Luckies taste better.

Two facts explain why Luckies taste better. First, L.S./M.F.T.—Lucky Strike means fine tobacco . . . light, mild, good-tasting tobacco. Second, Luckies are actually made better to taste better . . . always round, firm, fully packed to draw freely and smoke evenly.

So, for the enjoyment you get from better taste, and only from better taste, be Happy—Go Lucky. Get a pack or a carton of better-tasting Luckies today.

When buddies ask me for a smoke,
What do they get from me?
Here's finer smoking, pal, I say,

India Policy Seen As Key To World Peace As Debators Beat Starters

By OSCAR JOHNSON

The first Indian college debating team to tour the United States scored a close victory over a two-man Florida State University team as they debated the "Resolved: That Indian foreign policy offers the only hope for the establishment of world peace." Tuesday night on campus.

Mr. Surendra Chaturvedi declared, I really feel that your debators are among the best we have met so far on our tour." The other member of the Indian team was Ramchandra Bikaji of Elphinstone College Bombay.

The Indian team took the affirmative stand that "India's foreign policy offers the only hope for the establishment of world peace." The Florida team argued that Uhatverdi who outlined the "Basic premises" of Indian foreign policy, declaring that India's government believed that war should be completely ruled out as a basis of solving international disputes because the threat of today's weapons is so terrible as to rule out total victory. The Third World War wouldn't be won by anyone — it would be voluntary cooperation in mutual destruction."

He continued that, basically since a power of today cannot remove another by force, the only alternative is to reconcile the to others' existence, since many causes, defeat may be. We must strengthen the United Nations therefore as a measure of reconciliation, so that both sides can come together."

India Is in favor of having Red China admitted into the United Nations because it would help strengthen the U.N. "Its effectiveness is due to its being universal. Since it is universal, all countries should be admitted. This includes Red China. We know that the United Nations was not formed to be the tool of one side, because Russia was admitted. This proves that it was intended to be international."

He disagreed with the policy of forming individual alliances such as the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, and others. Aside from the U. N. on the grounds that this tended to have another country ally itself with one or the other of the two main powers and could only eventually lead to open hostility.

Bert Bradley, FSU graduate assistant, then took up the negative stand, saying that America is working against war also, while the only difference being in the methods used. He asked that the United States policy be explained in more detail.

Bradley argued that "India is not practicing what she preaches." Listing Indian interventions in Kashmir and Goa, side-blocking in Kashmere as examples of the use of force.

Mr. Sirkar, the next debator rose and again defended the affirmative stand that no other nation can find an authoritative alternative to India's foreign policy that says she is opposed to peace. India has copied to the Charter of the United Nations constitution those of the United States and Great Britain in order to assure peace. Our countries are not divided on ends but on methods.

He reiterated India's stand opposing a troop alliance. "In a military move it is a dangerous thing to do." He explained that India is not on the side of the "Commoeists." He agreed that the Soviet has used "Taylistic Tactics" many to achieve its ends, but we must realize that military opposition to it would mean akind war.

"All the actions of the free world are based on the expectation that Communist aggression will eventually come and so they have to prepare to meet it."

He declared that the smaller countries, looking on the history of both sides, had "Little choice."

Course Achieves Greater Unity Through Larger Literary Work

FREDERICK, Md.—(I.P.)—Revisions in the English department's curriculum have been announced here by Dr. Alphonse Buccini, head of the department at Hood College. The changes occur primarily in the freshman English course.

Basically, the course will achieve greater unity through the study of larger literary works picked for a few authors rather than scattered, short readings. Henry David Thoreau's "Walden" is an example of a larger literary piece to be studied.

The greatest change occurs in the second semester when students will study works of American authors such as Ralph Waldo Emerson and Benjamin Franklin. The text for this study of American literature will be Major American Writers, edited by Jones, Leisy, and Ludwig. Up until now semester work was a continuation of various short readings and essays on English literature.

These changes, creating a broader, unified field of study, will provide a better background for freshman term papers. However the freshman English will still place emphasis on composition and critical analysis. It is the material to be studied that will be changed. Sonnets, short stories and poetry will also still be studied to some degree.

Sophomores will be required in take English Literature 319-20 instead of having a choice between this course and English American Literature 141-42. The department has stated that the American literature given in freshman English will be sufficient for an introduction.

Changes in the freshman course have been put into effect this year, but the requirement change for sophomore English will not be effective until the schedules for next year are completed.

enres with those of other schools so that a reciprocating system is set up."

In order to achieve such a goal SUSGA has set up three committees each composed of representatives from each of the member schools in that particular field. The commissions are the Student Government Commission, the Publications Commission and the Commission on Activities of the Student Government. Through these commissions the participating schools would work together on a One for all for one" basis.

"SUSGA offers more than just any such organization for it is unique in that it is not so large that its members interests are so unlike that they do each other no good, yet large enough that several different views of the common problems can be shared. This is the main advantage but there are also several others such as economy (SUSGA dues are only $50.00 per year at the maximum) and the Inter-Campus Service which shall arrange bookings, tours and also, services the member schools may desire."

"Through these various deices SUSGA can brine to you—the individual — many advantages a better quality campus newspaper, a more efficient and effective student government, the services of the Inter-Campus Service and many more," he concluded.

Members of the Student Body:

I feel that the members of our Judiciary should be concerned, sincere, honest people. I also feel that Judiciary is just as important as any other part of our student government.

I will appreciate your support in electing me to represent the Sophomore Class on Judiciary, and, if elected, I will serve you to the best of my ability for the betterment of our school and student government.

Sincerely,
Kate Griffin.

Sophomore Social Chairman

Bevis

Fellow Freshmen,

I am seeking the office of Sophomore Social Chairman because I want to serve you—the class of 57. I feel that I am qualified to hold this office.

During high school I held various offices where I gained quite a bit of experience as a leader. I was president of our own Pan American League and at this position I was general chairman of the "Pan-Am" Coronation and Ball, the largest social event of the year at our school. I am now chairman of a social committee in my dorm and have taken an active part in dormitory activities.

I sincerely appreciate your consideration. Remember "The Best One For Pub——"

Pupils Participate In Projects; Help Recreation Method

Florida State University students who have majored or minored in the study of recreation have received valuable help in their projects whereby they help communities at the same time they are getting their education, it was learned.

Last week the students traveled to Quincy to study recreation problems that commonly exist and to advise community leaders concerning needs and projects. The projects was intended to help appraise and develop the recreational resources, and was headed by Dr. William Talt, associate professor of physical education for men.

Previously the Florida Staters had studied recreational activities in Chattahoochee on a similar project, also under the direction of Talt.

Officials stated that they believed that the projects were of great value both to the students studying recreation and the communities which stood to benefit from the study.

Dr. Talt was recently elected vice-president of the Florida Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation. His position calls for assisting and organizing the school recreational programs throughout Florida.

Senate Kills Bill Requiring Frosh To View Games

Carothers Speaks For Compromise; Loss Margin Large

After almost an hour of debate Tuesday afternoon the Student Senate killed, 17 to 9, a bill to require freshmen to attend three out of five home football games next year.

The bill was an attempted compromise on President Milton Carothers' proposal to require the freshmen to attend all home football games and pep rallies, subject to disciplinary action by the Rat Court should they fail the requirements.

Carothers himself appeared before the Senate to introduce the successful compromise, blaming the lack of "long-standing traditions" for a lack of school spirit.

Carothers stated that he had received "some" student support as his proposal and argued that "the requiring freshmen to start early in college getting in the habit of attending school events." Interest in other activities besides football would be stimulated as well.

Carothers also thanked the Senate for its work this year, adding "I am a little timid asking advice as you for concerning yourself with school spirit."

Senator Carle Moore then made the first of two attempts to table the measure which came up as a committee report under old business. He said that a lack of senators up for the re-election this week "would be put on the spot."

Senator Joe Sasser, for waiving formalities to consider the first reading of the bill in second order, called he termed "cramming bills through the Senate" a "bad precedent."

He also declared:

Senator Dave Bachman and Jimmy Cannon both commended their senate student had expressed to them sentiments of Carothers' proposal. Other Senators supported views with similar statements.

Bachman termed the bill "very divisive" and claimed its object "school spirit—would not be achieved. "What about students who want to go home on week-ends?" he asked.

Senator Frank Shaw then amended the bill to provide for a 60% compromise—three home games. He requested the Senate for not supporting the bill, saying that by doing up a bill that would build up school spirit and yet some of you are against it."

Senator James Moore pointed out that the jurisdiction of the Rat Court may end after Sophomore-Freshman day of registration. He moved that the bill be provided for the next school season, but the proposal was never put in the form of a motion.

Senator Rexie Hall, who although a frosh for the bill had addressed the freshmen have the best attendance at football games, created a stir in Senate by claiming that the freshmen "shouldn't be allowed to vote on the sophomore-frosh bill."

Christ Young suggested extending married students' privileges to veterans, as well as mature students over 21. His measure was later passed.

Senator Sasser agreed with Hall, saying "the students don't be heard the issues. We're here to represent them . . . I haven't seen one thing said for it."

Senator Jane Soper agreed with Hall, adding that "forty people on the rolls is the most I have seen doing they have ever heard of."

Senator Carolyn Close, intimating that football spirit was not school spirit, declared that Florida State, for example, said she was "tired of having a freshman section without forcing them to go."

Senator Jimmy Jeanes eliminated a compromise, which would have allowed the freshmen to discard their red caps upon the award for attending the three games. His idea failed.

Senator Gordon Gaster then before the second attempt to kill the bill by tabling it. "Compromise has a tremendous idea," he said. "Attempting to school spirit, but I don't see the way to go about it."

How much more compulsion are we going to put on the freshmen?" he asked, mentioning compulsory co-operation housing and compulsory ROTC.

His motion to table the bill immediately failed, inability becoming Senator Jeanes' and Young's amendments had not yet been moved.

Shortly afterward, the bill came to the decisive vote. It failed, 17 to 9. Voting for the bill were Shaw and Charlie Coulter. Voting against it were Lillian Avin, Ray Bradham and Carole Bell.

Butterflies, Crickets, Moths Animate Comedy

By JOYCE POTTER

A Lepidopterist, Tom Lewis, Jr., will peer through his binoculars at the insect world in the "Insect Comedy" tonight. On the surface all is as it should be in a typical insect kingdom of butterflies, beetles, crickets, moths and ants.

However, beneath this camouflage lies a deeper meaning. Although the insects go about their daily life in a seemingly innocent manner, the underlying thought pertains to some phase of life. The whole play is actually a satire on life.

Franklin Adams plays the part of the Vagrant, a drunkard who feels that life is not worth living anyway. He is one of the leaders and sees everything.

The butterflies occupy an important place in their world as they go about their life of pleasure and love. They are poets by nature and seemingly have no troubles.

Robert Straue, the first male butterfly, Felix, wears a typical poet costume of light purple smock and slacks with a large bow and mask. All of the insects wear masks. Betty Ann Roe, Mrs. and Dixie Smith, Clythia, play the part of two flighty butterflies who skip from one lover to another. The victims of these heartless females are Ira Thomas as Victor and David Wade as Otis, male butterflies.

Three small butterflies who wear long flowing off shoulder sleeves with butterfly sleeves are Kitty Culpepper, Rosemary Holstead and Dorothy Womble.

Playing an elderly miserly couple who have only one coal in life—go away more and more money — are Eb Thomas and Mickey Doobins as Mr. and Mrs. Beetle. They are seen pushing their treasure in large manure pile around the stage. Their immediate problem is where to hide it while they look for more. They are never quite successful and their treasure is constantly stolen by other beetles.

Mrs. Beetle is the typical nagging wife while Mr. Beetle is the henpecked husband.

The Jehneumon Fly, Byron McKissack, is the proud father who works constantly to amplify the needs of his darling little stepdaughter, Lady Katherine Culpepper. His philosophy is that he must kill to live. He kills all the crickets to feed to the larva.

The Parasites, Lloyd Kay, always waits for every one else to do the work. He will change his opinion anytime if he can gain something by it. At first he steals from Leo Lavre and finally he eats her.

Mr. and Mrs. Cricket, Tom Lewis, Jr. and Susan Strickberger, are the newly wedded couple. They are the typical little wife and adoring husband whose main worry is about the curtains and their home.

Offering hope to the insects and their troubled world is Cupid, June Hazel, a moth, who is waiting to be reborn. She finally born in the third act but lives only a few minutes since moths only have a short life.

A war between ants occurs over some land between the home of a few ants. Some ants are communists who be-

'Insect Comedy' Begins Tonight; Year's Last Play

By OSCAR JOHNSON

The Insect Comedy, last major Speech Department production of the year, will begin a four - performance run tonight at 8:15 on the stage of the Augusta Conradi Theater.

Shows will be given also tomorrow evening, Monday and Tuesday nights, with student tickets set at 40 cents and activity coupon admission.

Dr. Lyra Orr, associate professor of speech and director of "The Insect Comedy," noted that the players had gained experience in performing the play at a premiere Sunday at the Ringing Institute of Art Seminar in Sarasota.

Speculation on the nature of "The Insect Comedy" was cleared up at a dress rehearsal which The Florida Flambeau attended last week. While it has no definite plot, and is done in a surrealistic manner, it still does not deserve such nicknames as "The World We Live In" and "The Fess Circus."

As Dr. Orr says, "Some students of Dr. Karel Capek's 'The Insect Comedy' a heavy, depressing play which Florida State is being presented on the FSU campus. It is interpreted as a satire, and there is much humor in the piece.

"Its subtle element comes, as it must in a comedy of manners, through the laughter of the audience. The point is the laughter the audience suddenly realizes that it could be laughing at itself. It may be enjoyed just for its spectacle."

The play is divided into four acts, a prologue and and epilogue with a short intermission between Acts II and III. In the prologue, Tom Lewis, playing a butterfly collector, comes upon a vagrant asleep in a woods, played by Franklin Adams. The latter is startled by the butterfly collector and the action is started.

Other characters whose antics and proposals to question him as to why he is satisfied with life are Ira Thomas, Adams answers to these questions are mostly philosophical. Dixie Smith, a moth, is the entertaining way to the foibles of human nature, while Lawrence Leonard, a beetle, is the practical one.

Campus Sing Growing Nearer As Organizations Start Practice

The Annual Campus Sing sponsored by Sigma Alpha Iota and Phi Mu Alpha, women's and men's music honorary respectively, has been set for May 15-16, it was learned here yesterday.

Organizations wishing to compete in the event may enter by signing the blank appearing in today's Florida Flambeau and sending it to Delano Driver at Box 278.

Each song, featuring a cup to be awarded to the women's division winner by Sigma Alpha Iota and a cup to the men's division winner by Phi Mu Alpha, is slated for Opperman Music Hall, they said.

Spokesmen for the group explained that an entering group would have to consist of at least 10 members, and that there was no limit to the number of those same may be musical organization. It was stressed. Dynatitrian, fraternities, sororities and campus clubs may compete for the awards.

It was also noted that the order of appearance at the sing would be established by alphabetical order and that the director would have to be a student, although "outside help may be used at the group's discretion."

Spokesmen for the group contended that no one organization would be allowed two consecutive selections. "Of the two selections allowed, one may either be a special group' song or original composition," it was noted.

Judging, according to the sponsoring group, will be based on originality and imagination as to interpretation and selection of numbers; rhythm; intonation; tone color, freedom of nasalness, breathiness, blend; diction; appearance; and over-all effect; general reaction of the audience.

The entire blank is due no later than May 7, it was announced, and rehearsals should be directed to Delano Driver at Box 278. It was noted.

Judges for the event will be announced later.

Pollster Sheds New Light On Voting Bodies

Fraternities and sororities appear to be the most active elements in campus politics, according to Bill Stanzik, who reported Wednesday on his Gold Key election survey.

Stanzik announced that of 1,319 questionnaires filled in, 455 were submitted by men and 741 by women. He stated that of the women 391 claimed membership in sororities and that of the men 356 claimed fraternity membership.

The difference, he pointed out, results in 331 of the polled being independents.

Further breakdown, added Stanzik, showed that 778 live in dormitories, 304 in fraternity or sorority houses, and that 129 are day students.

The party preferences, he said, were 434 favoring the Student Party, 238 favoring the State Party, and 460 claiming no preference.

The class breakdown he listed as 521 freshmen, 356 sophomores, 264 juniors, 200 seniors and two graduate students.

Stanzik's poll was made concurrently with the balloting Tuesday and was tallied at 9:00 o'clock. He has announced that an official report, containing his analysis as well as the percentage quoted figures, will be mimeographed by Gold Key and made available to interested parties.

Commenting on the percentages, Stanzik noted that the slightly over eight per cent of the day students voted.

Stanzik further announced

Applause Proves Band Is Hit; Next Concert Slated May 12th

By MARY LEE KING

Applause proved the success of the first of a series of outdoor band concerts entitled "Starlight Serenade." The music emphasized was enjoyed by both students, faculty, and townspeople who were out Wednesday night. Not only were the seats and walks teeming but people were standing around during the performance.

The members of the bands, Manley Whitcomb and Robert Braunwell are commended for their fine concert.

The few stray mosquitoes and lamp lights which glared into the spotlight's path during the first portion of the program were a discomfort but it was soon remedied by some kind soul with a Pitt gun.

A stirring march started the program, The Symphonic Band then played "Sussex Mummers' Christmas Night" and "Rhapsody in Blue" by George Gershwin. Thomas Wright, member of the piano faculty of Florida State University, was solo pianist for "Rhapsody in Blue." Mr. Wright holds a record for performance of the number having played it more than ninety times. Applause indicated that it was the most popular.

The 20 piece Lab Band, which specializes in experimental and modern jazz, played "Stompology," "Thropus," "Frankie Speaking," "The Man I Love," "Sandman," and "Love Letters in the Sand."

Audience reaction to "I Love You" placed it as the tune at the top of the Lab Band repertoire as the best of the evening's renditions.

"Confusion," on the other hand, definitely left spectators confused as did the groups' "Thropus." Reactors rising to a rousing point, kept time with musical squeals and grunts from the trombones on the stage produced an unbearable picture of hilarity. Needless to say, the students "were amused."

The wind and percussion ensemble of 76 pieces returned to Tallahassee's concert fold "Second Suite in F" "Song of the Blacksmith," "Fantasia" and closed the program with "Cowboy Rhapsody" by Morton Gould.

All the music was either arranged or composed by members of the band. The group's aim is to develop taste and discrimination in contemporary jazz.

The concerts are free and open to the public. Other concerts have been scheduled for May 12 and 23.

Campus Parties Gets Most Seats; Eight Reelected

Runoff Necessary For Senate, Class Judiciary Positions

All but ten offices were settled in the class primaries Tuesday, with 34 won by the Student Party, 16 by the State Party, and 3 by independents. Close races characterized many offices.

Among the closest was that for presidency of the Junior Class, in which Bob Crenshaw, State Party, edged out Grayham Gilbert, Student Party, by 235 to 228.

Carolyn Close was edged out as next to Sophomore Women's Senate by five votes.

Harry Massey, State Party, captured the Senior Class presidency, Mike Kish, Student, took the vice-presidency, and Kitty Johnson, Student, the secretariat and Harold Ramsey, State, the treasurer's post.

Senior Class social chairman will be Ann Pratt, State, Bob Bertz, State, won a seat in Senior Men's Senate, letting Mac Hatch, Student, Jack Houser, State; Bill Stanzik, Student, and Bill Wagner, State, in the run-offs for the remaining two positions.

Jane Soper, Student, and Dot Wells, Student nominee, were elected unopposed to Senior Women's Senate.

Jim Bishop and Jim Fadman, Student, and George Jones, State Party candidates, were elected to Senior Men's Judiciary.

Nancy Pagan, Anne "Rocky" Stone, and Sissy Smith, Student, will be in Women's Judiciary. They were opposed by only one.

Dave Kreiner, Student, secured one seat in Senior Men's Honor Court, with Art Allwood, write-in candidate, Student, elected, left for the run-offs.

Mary Ann Barnard and Sara Whitehead, both Student Party, were elected unopposed to Senior Women's Honor Court.

Hans Tews, Student, won the vice-presidency of the Junior Class; Bebe Bisbee, Student, the secretariat; Tina Stahl, State, the treasury, and Shirley Dalton, Student, the social chairmanship.

Jimmy Joanes, Student, rode the crest of victory in the Men's Senate to capture the Juniors, but Ken Gatlin, Student Party, 238 votes, Independent; Fred Mansfield, State, and Dick Bittner, State, must contest the remaining seat in the Tuesday's run-offs.

Mary Ann Pardue, Student, Jane Holford, State, and Nancy Vaughn, Student, secured the Sophomore Senate seats in Women's Senate.

Susan Phelps, Student; Nita Jane Lee, Student, and Harriet Ramsey, State, won the three Junior Women's Judiciary positions.

Betty Gray and Tom Lewis, Student, and Harold Beever, State, were elected to Junior Men's Honor Court.

"Cost" Jackson, State, and Jane Sims, State, won the two Junior Seats on the Co-ed Honor Court. Corresponding Sophomore seats went to Betty Sinclair, and Barbara Graham, State.

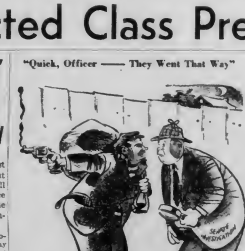
Carolyn Redfern, Student, captured the Junior Class seat on the Co-ed Court.

Paul Ort, State, was elected president of the Sophomore Class. Shirley Morton, Student, and Ray Wagner, independent, will take the office of vice-president in the run-offs. Betty Lou Wilkinson, Student, was elected secretary. Barbara Blather, independent, and Carmine Raineri, Student, will battle for the office of treasurer in the run-offs.

Social chairman is Ruth Williams, Student.

Jim Moore, Jimmy Rodes and Bobby Thomas were elected to Sophomore Men's Senate in a decision which candidates Charles Chester received Wednesday night before the Student Party caucus. They were not obtainable at this writing.

Margaret Ann Ballinger, Student, Jo Jones, independent, and Jane Soper, independent, were elected to Sophomore Women's Senate.



All three Women's Judiciary offices will be taken to the run-offs, Aenona Green Betts Student; Penelope Bunting Waid, Jane McKinnon, Independent; Dawn Sharp, Independent; Ruth Smith, State, and Irene Rodriguez, State.

Dan Alford, Student, Jim Bishop, and Harvey Duff, Student, were elected to Men's Judiciary.

Senators Adopt Positive Action On Attendance, Vandals, Seating

After we have criticized the Student Senate upon several occasions, it is only right that we should praise them when the Senators take fruitful and positive action.

Tuesday's session was a particularly productive one. The Senators voted, 17 to 5, against compulsory football attendance by freshmen. There were a few attempts to amend the bill so as to take the teeth out of the compulsion, but most of these failed. Senator Gordon Gaster urged fellow Senators to vote on the issue involved, so that the students would know where their representatives stood. Several other Senators mentioned that many students had expressed opinions on compulsory attendance, and none seemed to be in favor.

The bill was killed.

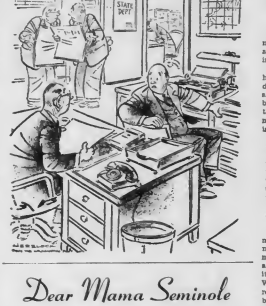
We do not believe, as one Senator said, that this was a vote "against a bill that would build school spirit." Rather, we would agree with the sentiment expressed by Senator Gaster when he asked, "How much more compulsion are we going to put on the freshmen?" Then add Senator Bachman's argument that this particular action would not do much for school spirit, and you have the Flambeau's position rather well summed up.

Without becoming involved in an almost metaphysical argument, we want to emphasize that pride in school is a better term than school spirit. We should encourage pride in traditions by establishing traditions that are meaningful. It would be excellent if we had a long and respectable academic tradition. It would be good if we could boast of a mature student body and a mature student government. It would be notable if we had a long-established and smooth-functioning honor system.

We would not rule out such traditions as athletic activities, but we believe requiring them gives them undue emphasis. If student government wants to increase attendance by freshmen at football games, we suggest taey offer incentives rather than restrictions. They could give special rat-cap privileges for men and women or hours privileges for women attending the games. They can provide a special section where freshmen would sit.

The contest fear about the proposed attendance plan was that if passed it would result in a loss of prestige for student government. We have heard the comments of any number of students and faculty members that this was an absurd idea. "How can student government expect to gain more control over student affairs when they do a thing like this?" they asked.

The Senate's considered action in defeating the proposal did much to strengthen its own position.



At the same meeting the Senate passed a bill authored by Coyle Moore which makes "malicious destruction" of campaign literature an Honor Court offense.

It is unfortunate, of course, that we have not been able to do more about the mass destruction of election material. But before we can do anything specific we must catch the culprits. In the meantime this bill sets up the specific machinery for dealing with the offenders. It clears up the ambiguity about whether destruction could be called stealing and thus be an Honor Court case.

Finally, and dear to our hearts, the Student Senate backed the newspaper in its request for reporters at Faculty Senate meetings. Senator Frank Shaw moved to register the Faculty Senate that official representatives of the Flambeau be allowed to attend meetings of the Senate. "It's time we took a definite stand," said Shaw.

We deeply appreciate this support from the Senate. It is of the utmost importance to have cooperation between the student press and student government in working for students' rights.

Compulsory Housing Works Hardships

An increasingly large number of students have asked us to comment on the compulsory housing rule laid down by the university.

We were surprised to learn how few people knew of the ruling until this week. It was printed in the new university catalogue and we have known about it for over a month.

Perhaps we have been lax in not mentioning it before. Frankly, we felt we had our irons in enough fires at the time we first learned of the ruling. We did not want to attack too many rules at once. It seems now we have done an injustice to the student body by not commenting sooner.

The rule is this: all undergraduates except those who live with their families in the Tallahassee area must live in university housing next year.

The reason is this: the university is losing money on housing facilities. The last 10 dormitories built on the campus, as well as the student service center, were financed not by state appropriations but by bond issues. These must be paid off by rentals. Rents have been increased twice in the last three years, and the administration probably thought it wiser to fill the dormitories than to raise rents again.

Our first impression was that the rule while unfortunate was necessary and thus justifiable. Upon more reflection, we see there are many objections.

Perhaps the most basic problems are the same ones which underlay the compulsory ROTC problem. That is, whence came the authority, and why were not students consulted in advance? We have expounded these points at length, however, and we will concern ourselves here with more pressing issues.

The two most prominent problems as well exposed in letters to the editor today, are that of freedom of choice and financial necessity.

It is hut another encroachment upon the rights of students to force them to live in university housing. Students have many reasons for wanting to live off campus, and we should respect these reasons.

It is possible, of course, to argue that a university has the right to abrogate this freedom of choice, even though we dislike the right. But the most valid objection we have heard is that many students will not now be able to afford college, even a state-supported institution. We urge the students to read a letter to the editor which gives a concrete example of how one student will no longer be able to afford college because of the new rule. He frankly states his income, his rent and his food hills. He explains how increased rent and food costs will eat up his income.

We sympathize with the fact that the university has overspent and must pay off a debt, but we feel some sort of provision must be made for special cases.

University Thanks Students For Cooperation

The Florida Flambeau has received thanks from President Doak S. Campbell and Business Manager Rod K. Shaw for the cooperation Florida State University students showed during the recent convention of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs.

President Campbell said, in part, "We had wonderful cooperation from the students in every way."

Mr. Shaw remarked, "I have heard no criticism whatever of anything that happened on the campus while the visitors were with us, but on the contrary I have heard many complimentary remarks about the courtesy showed them by students and others on the campus. I know the manner in which they were welcomed by everyone was very valuable to the future welfare of the university.

We are happy to pass these thanks on to the student body.

VISIONS OF VICTORY

1957--Hup, Twop, Tree..

By DICK VICTORY

"Hup twop tree four, hup twop tree four . . ."
The cadence floated through the window and shattered the silence of the room. The young man awoke with a start and looked out.

Two stories below in the early morning sunlight, men were marching. They were about the young man's age and their ranks stretched brown and endless.

Again the call went up.

"Hup twop tree four, hup twop tree four . . ."

The young man watched the scene for a moment, then shuddered. He rolled down the window. Still the mighty voice filled the room.

He sat up in bed, wondering what to do. He pondered, then turned on the radio. Soon it warmed up and began playing.

He went back to bed. As he lay there on his pillow with his hands clasped behind his head he began to whistle. Yet over his whistle he still heard the cadence: loud and clear.

He flipped the radio back on and turned the volume to its maximum. This time he had the right station.

THE POINT IS

Best Candidate Doesn't Always Win

By BOB FOLSOM

The two-party system has now arrived on campus. In some some ways it is best. But only in some ways.

The newly-formed party is happy it placed so many candidates into office, and the opposition is slightly perturbed and bewildered they got shot out of the saddle so quickly. Nothing, more people should remember, is invincible.

Elections, except for a scattered run-off, are over, and the defeated can go home and take their posters with them. It's the cliche goes the phrase, "The best man won." But in the elections last Tuesday, it was not, in many cases, the best man who won. The person who did, and there are some poor ones, too.

Unfortunately, it seems the majority of the student body is not aware of it. Let's face it—most didn't get their heads out, and now are going to suffer for it. And it is the students fault. What caused it? A variety of reasons, but each could have been eliminated by the well-informed student. Better yet, let's say, the student who knew just a smattering of campus government and the figures in it. The cause, now.

There were students who decided one party had too much power, besides practicing the so-called dishonest custom of vote-swapping, and gave the opposition the vote. There were students who sopped up the thorough campaigning on parts of some candidates. There were students who happened to remember a name that had been in the spotlight before, and though the spotlighted name may have not accomplished a thing, here it is, and why not vote for it. There were students who voted for the fixture already in because the senator kept a clean nose, and went to the bathroom twice a day. There were students who just thought two parties should exist, and all in all, it is their privilege.

The student would say it is his privilege to cut his throat, if he wished. But he wouldn't. So why do it literally? We did not think many students were fully cognizant of the abilities of their senators and senate candidates, and now we know. Partly it is a case of not caring, and therefore almost useless to offer a remedy. Many students do care, though, and we offer the suggestion they familiarize themselves more thoroughly with student government, and also be more liberal in thought.

Another element that showed they don't know the whole scene is the party system. Party officials don't recognize incompetency when they see it. In some cases, it is a matter of expediency for them to nominate candidates. Just got to have a filling for that position, so pick him or her in. Go right ahead and nominate the do-nothing. We realize candidates don't have to be outstanding, but they also don't have to be so sorry it shows like a sore on the front tooth.

Regardless of each party's platform, planks and candidates, the only person that should get in is the most capable and qualified. That was not totally the case in Tuesday's elections, and it is the party's and student body's fault. No, the senate or Big Mouth is now little help in the face of mounting phone calls, snooped-up pictures and smart lawyers . . . is thinking by the Florida Alligator staff chief? . . . of chain soon . . . Trend To 'Be Oneself' May Backfire

By DAVID DREIS
MADCAP MUSINGS

The trend of the performer to be himself when on the air is certainly the big thing these days with four or five programs being based on exactly that principal.

Godfrey probably deserves the most credit for inventing that style, but it's backfiring on him and he doesn't seem to like it. For instance, CBS is giving a big-play to a former Godfrey staff member, Robert G. Lewis by giving him plenty of air time and building up his performing cast which is snaring plenty of space in the papers. He's been signed to exclusive contract which means that his succeedon around Godfrey gets is about finished. Note that Godfrey didn't want Lewis to fill in for him in his last hiatus. Chances are, the price was too high, but imagine what that 'differences' between stars period.

Caught the Julius LaRosa show last week (15 min. CBS) and Julie, besides singing and selling his product in pretty much the same way as he sold himself to Godfrey listeners before the pink slip. He's plenty good on his own stand. His program reminds us of Perry Como and Eddie Fisher airing, only in Julie's case, his personality projection. My favorite informal music show is that of Curt Massey-Martha Tilton team now found all over the dial, but if you've ever done any traveling their program is a must for you. And all

Party System Needs Issues To Work

By NICK REEVES

There is absolutely no doubt in my mind as to whether the majority of columns will contain some sort of explanation about this State party sweep in the class elections. This statement comes before I have accumbed my viewing power to today's Flambeau page.

The point, is it the trend of Student Party supremacy while, to an equal number, it means the end of the complete party system, for it is to be noted that independent candidates became known as an equal power.

Frankly, I am against the idea of a party system if it has no bearing on student-policies. At many institutions, the election of a party means a way of government. In the case of the state party and the Student party have had no controversial issues to battle. Rather, they shared each other's burden and here in the party system has failed.

We know, when we elect a national officer—or even a state official—there is a different theory supporting each candidate. Governor Johns opposes Collins, Mr. Collins opposes Johns, and Mr. Odham has his fulfillment of material with criticism of all. We think we must-sinning, but it is a way of life with successful political races.

If student government had any governing power—not governing power—but in what policies this college would have concerning its students. Then there would be no doubt as to the quality of political parties or of political offices. At present, we are electing the individual person on popularity—poor material—and not necessarily on principals or background.

One university in this state has a powerful party system which can lengthen lasting legislative memos and carry out theories. Could the candidates if there be desire, lasting effect

Candidates' Letters Of Thanks

Gotlin

Fellow Sophomores.

I deeply appreciate the confidence you expressed in my program with your vote last Thursday.

As you know, my race is not over. I am in a four-way runoff in the second primary next Tuesday. I humbly request you to support me again this time.

I would like to remind you of my promise: that if elected, I will not think the election is over. Rather I will always remember that I am representing you. On important issues I will consult with you, my classmates. At all times I will remember that I represent no minority but the welfare of my school and my class.

Again my thanks and my hope that you will vote for Ken Gatlin for Junior Senate.

Sincerely,
Ken Gatlin.

Moore

Future Sophomores:

Thank you very much for the vote of confidence which you gave me last Tuesday when you reelected me to again to represent our class.

Although I will cherish this office highly, I will not regard it as an honor, but rather as a job to be done. I will try to see that you receive fair, conscientious, and sincere representation.

I will not treat this opportunity lightly. During the next year I shall be glad to talk over with you any issue that comes up.

There are many things that could be done to improve our university, and I would appreciate it if you would talk to me about any ideas that you have.

Sincerely,
Jim Moore,
Sophomore Senator-elect.

Halford

Dear Sophomores:

Again I have been given the privilege of serving you as your class senator.

I will continue my tireless efforts to diligently serve the students' interests always.

I think each and every one of you for your confidence in my past record and faith in my future work as reflected in your support.

As in the past, please feel free to discuss with me at anytime any problems that may come up.

Sincerely yours,
Joan Halford,
Junior Senator-elect.

Sharp

Dear Fellow Students.

If only it were possible for me to thank each of you personally who voted your terrific support Tuesday! Your confidence in me is certainly gratifying and I am thrilled to be among the top run-off candidates in the Sophomore Women's Judiciary race.

My deepest desire is for our Judiciary to pull away from all resemblance to a modern Inquisition and become

(1) HUMANE enough to consider the circumstances that surround each violation;

(2) TOLERANT enough to understand that many mistakes are pure trivia and deserve dismissal; and,

(3) SENSIBLE enough to levy intelligent, impartial decisions on every issue placed before it.

This change depends entirely on the caliber of Judiciary members you elect. I believe my qualifications speak for themselves. The fact that 250 Sarasota High graduates elected me BEST ALL-AROUND girl shows that others respect my opinions as a sincere friend. . . My four years of Student Council and Honor Society work shows that I have been well-versed in student government and values of honor. . . My editorship of an ALL-STATE school paper shows that I DO accomplish what is to be a goal. . . And my PEP activities in my dorm, Tally-Ho, and student house show that EXPERIENCE TO YOU is foremost in my mind.

Only by teamwork can we secure a consistently respected, effective, and meaningful Women's Judiciary; if you want this change, then I ask you to CAST A SHARP JUDICIARY VOTE.

Sincerely,
DAWN SHARP
(Student Party Candidate for Sophomore Women's Judiciary).

Merritt

Dear Freshmen,

It pleases me to know that about two-thirds of the freshman class voted in Tuesday's election. That is a good sign of your active, and increasing, interest in student government.

Your choice of next decisions me to who you want representing you in Senate next year. I hope you will join me in giving them full cooperation and trust next year, as they strive to represent us on the Senate floor.

I have never held a public office on campus, and it is a job I wanted very much. However, I feel that, even though I didn't win, I gained a wealth of experience in and knowledge of student government.

My heart-felt thanks are extended to those of you who voted for me, and especially to you who worked so hard in my behalf.

I am happy to have been a candidate, and feel that I lost to capable opponents.

Sincerely,
Lou Merritt

Hughes

Dear Freshmen:

I want to take this opportunity to let you know that I really appreciate the support you gave me last week and especially in Tuesday's election. No words can express my feeling of thanks.

As you probably already know, however, my campaign is still not over. Remember I continue to stand for more unity in our class, quarterly treasurer's reports, a bigger Sophomore-Freshman day and still a better Sophomore Hop.

In your choice for Sophomore Treasurer next Tuesday I hope you will bear in mind to CHOOSE HUGHES.

Yours for service to the class,
Barbara Hughes.

Finalists Talk Monday May 3 Before Judges

Beverly Jupperonnet, Cary Fitzgerald, and Frank Shaw, finalists in the after speaking division of Florida State University's Fifth Annual Intramural Speech contest, will speak Monday May 3 before the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce.

The release from the FSU department of speech also revealed that the preliminaries were held April 12.

Other participants in the event were Gordon Gaster, Neal Bryan, Mike Sheridan, and J. P. Griffin. Judges were Miss Edna Hollimon, graduate assistant in the speech department; and Dr. Wayne C. Minnick and Dr. Gregg Phifer, both of the speech department.

Subjects for the preliminary oratorical oratory are slated for May 4. Participants in this particular event are they noted Gordon Gaster, Jimmy Joanos, J. P. Griffin, Duncan Grey Jack Hopkins, Warren Cobb, Bruce Fletcher and Paul Wragg.

Spokesman announced that participants in extemporaneous speaking may come in the James House any time Tuesday or after to choose a topic. Choice will be at a "first come first serve" basis. It was noted that the general field is "Problems in Higher Education" with special reference to FSU.

According to the department of speech, students now registering for speaking include Jim Joanos, Cary Fitzgerald, Paul Wragg, Peter Nimkoff, Norma Trippodo, Bill Pyfrom, Sam Hawkins, Adell Kennedy, Bruce Fletcher, Bennie M. Hawkins, Jerry Jones, and Tom Woods.

Others may sign up with Dr. Phifer or Dr. Minnick until Tuesday night. Preliminary speaking will begin May 11.

Honor Court Stays Elections Committee In Chester Ruling

In a unanimous decision Wednesday night, the University Honor Court upheld a ruling of the Elections Committee denying Charles Chester's request for a run-off for one Sophomore Men's senatorial seat.

Chester, who had a majority but was fourth behind Jim Moore, Bobby Temple and Jimmy Solee, asked to have the third seat put to a run-off between he and Solee.

Counsel for the plaintiff, Phil Sprinzer, argued that the present constitution requires a majority for election but only provides for three Senate seats.

Stating his agreement with the Election Committee's definition of a majority, Sprinzer questioned its application and maintained that one of the candidates fulfilling the requirement for election would have to be eliminated in a run-off.

Attorney General Pete Nimkoff defending the Election Committee, said that in making the decision the committee consisting of appointed and confirmed officers, is "morally responsible to the students boly." He said the Committee's actions had not been hasty before the court retired, Chief Justice Jerry Meyer pointed out that the constitution says a majority is needed for election but is not necessarily sufficient.

After announcing the unanimous decision of the court, Meyer criticized those in the court for unnecessary noise. Meyer said they should have more respect for the court.

Vets Make Plans For Summer Term

Spokesmen for Veterans Administration activities at FSU urge veterans to begin making plans now if they intend to enroll in Korea or OI Bill training.

Under the law, they said, these veterans actually must begin training before August 20 in order to continue afterwards. "For many of the vets, the summer terms in school will be their last chance to start under the veterans assistance program. Next fall's school term begins too late. Those who are taking training under the OI bill listed by officials is first to select the school and course, make sure that it is OI-approved and then find if the school will accept him for training.

The next step in the application for Korea OI Bill training with VA, or with the approved school in which he wishes to enroll.

Further information is available at the Veterans Administration, Pan-A-Grille Regional Office, P. O. Box 1427, St. Petersburg, Florida."

Defends Legalizing

To The Editor:

After reading Miss Mary Elizabeth King's sensible, well-reasoned letter referring to compulsory football attendance. I was the more shocked to confront her illogical attack upon legalized drinking.

While I cannot, in good conscience, condemn Miss King's conscience concerning "drinking," (evidently this word is practically synonymous with alcoholism) I most emphatically do not agree with her conclusions as to what would occur on campus if drinking were to be legalized.

Legalization of drinking would not, I feel surf inevitably result in a course to make Hollins here at FSU. At the present time any student of any age group can, with little trouble, procure a drink here in Tallahassee. I should like to point out that this includes FSU's under-age co-eds. The result of legalized drinking would be that students, who have not attained the legal age to drink openly would not be able to buy a drink.

I shall refrain from comment upon the H-bomb, beer in Weston's fountain and statesmen who "imbibe". (dare I mention Roosevelt, Stalin, Churchill, Eisenhower . . .) to remark upon the most important facet of the entire controversy. A fact which today seems to be somewhat submerged due to our country's present emination of demagoguery. I refer to the rights as "free" citizens. I maintain that the right to drink is just that. A Right! Drinking is not a privilege to be restricted by an active, vociferous few, however well-meaning those individuals may be.

Sincerely
DAVID H. CHAFFEE.

Party System

ing, extend dormitory hours for women, fight against a raise in fees if they believed it justified? I as their positions would be worthy of lengthy campaigning and party affiliation. If one party set up a principal to carry through legislated drinking and another opposed it, the party supporting would mean more than a label. There are many denials and accusations floating around on campus as to why certain individuals were elected over others. Let us cease blindfolding ourselves to the truth which eventually will be brought to our attention if it hasn't shown its face already. The idea of a party system with no political issues to debate is a failure and the system of no legislation over political issues, makes student government a farce.

Question of the week: Is it safely for any precaution that many of the campus' darkest spots are lighted with new lamp-posts thus making the section as bright as daylight?

Students Resent Compulsory Housing Rule

Financial Burden

To The Editor:

On Monday I received a notice from the Dean of Men stating that all male unmarried undergraduate students will be required to live in University housing next year.

At present I am living in an apartment off campus with three other men My share of rent is $35 per semester. By doing my own cooking, I spend only $6.00 per week or $150.00 per semester for groceries. Thus, my living expense amounts to only $185 per semester.

If I lived on campus, I would have to pay $90 per semester for a dormitory bed, and $18.00 per week or $270.00 per semester for prepared food since I would not have the facilities to do my own cooking. My living expenses would then amount to $360 per semester.

My income is $160 per month. Out of this I have to pay $45 per month for car payments. From the remaining $115 per month, or $460 per semester, I have to pay a $78.00 registration fee, plus at least $25.00 for books, paper, etc. If I lived on campus this would leave me exactly nothing for clothes, entertainment, transportation, letter articles, etc.

But this is not the worst. An average single Korean veteran, after giving years of his life to defend his country receives only $110.00 per month. The college officials whose freedom he has defended are now making it impossible for him to go to college! And even he has it easy compared with the fellow who is desperately trying to work his way through college!

If this rule is enforced next year, several hundred students, including myself, will be denied an education. It is a pity that none of us who are affected will be wealthy enough to bring legal action against the University. What is most frightening about the whole mess is the fact that the cherished, traditional rights of free American citizens can so easily be violated.

Yours truly,
John G. Marson.

Violates Freedom

To The Editor:

Recently, by mail, I was informed that next year all men students would be required to live in University housing until such vacancies have been filled.

This, to me, is an out-and-out violation of the freedom of decision which college students deserve. When a student is no longer given the right to select his own living conditions when he becomes a sophomore, then he has truly lost an inherent freedom provided by democracy.

You say that we must require the students to live in the dorms because they aren't being filled now. Wasn't the reason they were built in the first place because there was a definite need?

When there is a need, there need be no requirement.

I say that if this requirement is levied upon the male students at FSU, it will drive away more prospective students than the compulsory ROTC has already done. Do you also wish to tuck us into bed?

Sincerely,
John W. Howard

Choice Denied

To The Editor:

I have recently received a letter from the Dean of Men informing me that all single undergraduate men, with the exception of those living with their parents or guardian, will be required to live in university housing next year, so long as space is available.

As a day student at FSU, an institution supported by the taxes of the residents of this state, I resent this arbitrary policy of compulsion as to where I must live. Many of us who live off campus find it more economical and decidedly more comfortable having lived in a dorm (on the sixth floor with infrequent elevator service. I feel qualified to make this comparison.

Many of us are over 21 and have no sympathy for this dictatorial paternalism of the seven members of the Board of Control. They will say it was necessary to guarantee full occupancy of the dorms in order to secure the loan from the New York insurance company which bonded the new buildings. Our answer is that they could have used some collateral other than the sacrifice of the students financial well-being and freedom of residence. These are poor elements with which to bargain.

I urge all day students—indeed, all students interested in minority rights—to voice their opposition to this encroachment of a fundamental right.

Sincerely,
Warren Cobb.

Tallahassee Dress Not Too Cool

By WILLIE SMITH

Before invading the hospitable and beautiful South and giving up the pleasant atmosphere of a northern college, my colleagues and yours truly were under the impression that everyone in the South would have at least a half-dozen Bermuda shorts of various colors and texture included in their wardrobe. Wasn't everyone in school wearing them? Even as far north as Dartmouth College you could see the boys on the "campi" sporting their new "Bermudies". Wasn't I going into the semi-tropics?

Man! was I ever disillusioned. It seems the further south I went, the more clothes they were until I finally hit the FSU campus, where I found girls had to wear rain coats over mob things as pedal pushers and slacks. Then I found the further south you go away from here, the less the amount of clothes worn until I hit Miami. . . .

Getting back to Tallahassee, I am sure that the Chamber of Commerce where the progressive college dress went on this campus. We have such beautiful women, and the guys I'm told compare to the Monkeys and Gone Fishy Hollywood fame. Then how come everyone is hiding behind so many clothes? I personally can't immodest to wear a pair of pedal pushers or Bermuda shorts to keep cool in these last few weeks of school.

Could you enlighten me on the policy of men wearing Bermuda shorts or would we be compelled to wear rain coats also? Perhaps you could even proclaim a Bermuda Short Day. . . .

FSU Gymkana California Bound!

Defending Champs Expect Last Year's Victor Jack Miles, To Cop Main Event

By BOB GUTTING

Florida State Gymkana will attemp t to capture their 22nd team title this weekend when they go to Los Angeles to defent the NAAU crown they won last year.

Raleel Lecuona

Last week the Seminoles successfully defended the Georgia AAU title they have held for four years by sweeping the field and taking first, second and third in all but two events. Top man on the team was National champ Jack Miles, who took five first and two second place wins. This was the 21st team victory won by the Pricemen at FSU.

Since 1950 the Seminole gymnasts under Dr. Price have captured four National—two NCAA and two NAAU, and have turned out many National AAU champs, including Bill Roetcher, all-around champ 1949, '48, and '51, and high bar champ '50 and '51. Bill was also side horse champ '51 and '53. Gene Rainbolt of FSU took the side horse title in 1952. Jack Miles the flying rings title in 1951. Dick Gatling the trampoline title in 1953, and Don Holder the Indian clubs title in 1953. Don will be unable to defend his Indian club title this year as that event has been discontinued.

The all-around event will mean quite a bit to the Florida team. The winner of this event will be chosen to represent the United States at the World Championships this summer at Rome Italy.

The competition has been narrowed down to a small group. The number one man in the country, Ed Scrobe is out with injuries. Jack Miles, Bill Roetcher, formerly of FSU and Beckner will represent the U S Army this summer. This leaves Dick Gatling, Simms and Florida Stater Don Holder as the only two Olympic men left in the competition. Other great gymnasts who will be in line for this honor include Carl Rintz of Michigan State, Carl Swentzner from Penn State, and Jack Mile of FSU. Bill Stout of the Philly Turners would be a tough man to beat, but is doubtful if he will show up for this year's competition.

The winner on Simms could win first in the NAAU but the man to watch will be Jack Miles who has really been hitting lately, and if he does anywhere near as good at Los Angeles as he did at Atlanta last week we will have the meet sewed up and possibly be seeing Jack go to Rome this summer.

The favorite team so far, appears to be the Los Angeles Turners, who will be performing on their home ground as Other teams competing include UCLA, Penn State NCAA champs, Illinois, Michigan State, Los Angeles Athletic Club, and Los Angeles City College.

Last year's results were:

1. FLORIDA STATE GYMKANA.
2. Los Angeles Turners.
3. Philadelphia Turners.
4. Cleveland Swiss Turners
5. Jersey City Dept. of Recreation.
6. Los Angeles City College.

Entering his first major competition for FSU will be Rafael Lecuona. Due to a new NAA ruling, the Cuban champ has been unable to compete in the majority of college events. At the NAAU meets, anyone is allowed to enter. Rafael, who took first place on side horse against the Swedish gymnasts and in the Georgia AAU last week, is expected to offer tough competition in this event at Los Angeles.

Other members of the team ung a twin bill to Stetson in their some to California include Pat last outing. At one point in the Sinborell. Joe and Carmine season, the Indians were coasting Recna. Jim Tanaka, Jim Fadi- along with an impressive 8-3 rec- gan, Dick Ireland, and Joe Tay- ord. Now, with four games left, lor. they are 10-8 on the season.

Those Things Do Happen!

It's always easy to call the plays after the game is over, but some simple calculating shows the interesting fact that—on paper, at least—the Seminole thinclads should have won their triangular meet with Georgia and Georgia Tech last Saturday morning on the sun baked West Campus oval, instead of ending up in the above slot. Here's how it figured. Larry Hountha's 1:58.0 halfmile victory a week ago in the Florida AAU championships stamped him as the best 880 man in the southeast, and of a tallyall for some fame to figure the section's topband going unplaced in a 2:01.8 race.

Yeah, we know such things happen, but if he had won his specialty (as every coach, athlete, and spectator on the field expected him to), Georgia would have picked up three less points in the event for a total of 57½. Tech would have made two less for a total of 56½, and FSU would have picked up five very significant markers for a 58½ point total and meet victory!

An Orchid To Casteel

Who's the star of the star-studded group of frosh trackmen? Well, according to no less an authority than Coach Ken Miller, quarter-miler Jimmy Casteel. Georgia boy from Avondale Estates, not only rates such local raves, but is one of the outstanding college freshmen runners in the country!

Coach Miller said, in a recent interview "He has a high degree of motor ability, and, of more importance, he's emotionally ideally suited for a man-against-man sport such as track—he's a great competitor. Like all champions, he never believes he's licked!"

Anyone who ran the 220 race in last Saturday's transputer affair, in which Casteel came from sixth place at the hundred yard mark to win in a classy :23.5, knows he's a fighter, and that he has the speed necessary to be a top-flight quarter-miler. Coach Miller says he has all the qualifications to be a national champion. Olympic material? Could be!

"FSU Needs A Boxing Team"

Jack Hamrick, FSU Student, To Fight Brion In Mexico

By DAVID DREIS

Freshman Jack Hamrick is sporting a bright smile these days as a result of signing a contract to meet former Heavyweight contender Cesar Brion in an exhibition match this summer in Mexico.

Hamrick, a former footballer from Miami Edison, boxed for two years in the army winning seventeen matches and losing but two. "I only wish that Florida State had a boxing squad. For a comparatively small expense, this sport could be one of the most popular on campus."

Managed by Junior Bid Silver, Hamrick believes that "our schedule could be quite prominent with Army, Yale and other leading colleges sending teams down here. The University of Miami has had a boxing squad for years and is one of the most financially successful sports at the university."

Silver, who claims to have seen the best and talked with the best boxers in and out of the service, exclaimed great pride in his prospect. "I think Hamrick might well go to the top with the talent he has. Bruno' goome to be tough, but this summer 'my boy' will be right in there "

"During the service," Hamrick explained, "I was sort of lau:ht the boxing skill by a former leading middleweight. He thought I had some talent in the ring and called me 'one of the leading fight prospects' he had seen."

As far as support goes at FSU, Silver and Hamrick both agree, "Start a squad next year and you'll find enthusiastic support.

SIGMA NU

Recently elected to new posts in the Sigma Nu Fraternity were Jule Hurst, Commander, Jack Koonce, Lt. Commander, Mike Grant, Recorder and Randy Church, Treasurer.

Other officers were Ruth Chairman, Jay Perkins, Pledge Trainer, Bob Andrews, House Manager, Howard Louise, Chaplain, Curtis Jackson, Intramural Manager, Bill Wagoner, and Social Chairman, Russ Martin.

Chairmen Give Post-Election Views, Outlook

The chairmen of both political parties were in complete accord the day following elections in stating that "There is definitely a two-party system."

However, Student Body vice-president Gene Lawler denounced the opinion stating, "There is no two-party system, just a two-convention system." He was referring to the apparent split in the balloting in which the Student Party elected 34, the State Party 17, and independents 3.

Jimmy Joanos, chairman of the Student Party, stated, "There is definitely a two-party system. I said that even before the convention."

Asked who had the balance of power, Joanos stated that "as far as who I feel is in power at the present time, the Student Party is."

Expressing satisfaction with the results, he said "We've definitely in, in numbers."

Warren Cobb, chairman of the State Party, expressed his approval of the trend of voting saying, "I think that the students have expressed their approval of our party and the two-party system."

Asked if many candidates were elected on the strength of their parties, he commented "I hope the elections were decided mainly on individual qualifications.

"However, I hope that next year the party platforms will represent controversial issues for the students so that these issues may be brought more sharply into focus for them for them."

Cobb ended saying "I think we will have a workmg two-party system, and I think that Jimmy Joanos agrees with me."

Commenting on the party platform, Joanos expressed confidence that having won eight seats in the Senate plus the vice - presidency and women's vice-presidency would "aid in the work in advancing our 22 plank platform."

"I'm well pleased that our (Student) party outnumbered the other," said Joanos, "especially in Senate, which is the main battleground for student policy."

Last Quizzes Given Campus May 20, Says Test Center

The last College Qualification tests for the academic year will be given at Florida State University May 20, it was revealed yesterday by the Selective Service Exam Center in Princeton.

The memorandum stated that the tests will be available to all students prevented by illness or other emergencies from attending one of the regular administrations on either November 19 or April 22.

Although applications positioned May 10 or earlier will be accepted, the report added students wishing to apply are urged to send completed, mail their applications at once.

"Early filling will insure a test and other necessary materials for the student at the center he selects or at a nearby center," according to Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the College Qualification Test.

The memorandum also urged that applicants, when filling the applications, cross out "April 22" and write in "May 20."

Creel, Graham Tops At Cawthon Dance

Barbara Graham and Johnny Creel were selected to reign over the Cawthon Dormitories during a Mardi Gras dance last Saturday.

The dance was the climax of the Cawthon weekend, which started off on Friday with an informal supper in the patio.

A reported 100 couples danced to the music of The Ravens, with the crowning a highlight of the evening. The Royalty was selected through drawing of numbers coincidental to the tunes worn by all the couples, carrying out the Mardi Gras theme.

Marilyn Beveridge and Kathy Sappola were dance chairmen, representing North and South Cawthon respectively.

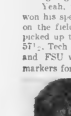
FSU Baseballers Face Tampa Nine Today And Saturday



Florida State University's Seminoles try to get back on the winning side of their baseball schedule here tomorrow afternoon, facing Tampa in the first of a two-game series.

Both games are set for FSU's East Campus diamond, Friday's contest starting at 3 p m. and Saturday's game getting underway at 2.

The Seminoles, after a roaring early-season start, have found the going rugged of late, dropping six of their last eight starts and losing Saturday. The batsmen of the Indian staff, Atwood has won only once in six tries, but he has the best earned-run average on the squad. He also tops in strikeouts.

In a ten-game series dating back to 1940, FSU has topped Tampa seven times while losing only twice. One game ended in a 5-5 tie at Tampa last year.

Coach Ralph Matherly has nominated big right-hander Jim Atwood for mound duties tomorrow with ace Mac Long coming on Saturday. The batsmen of the Indian staff, Atwood has won only once in six tries, but he has the best earned-run average on the squad. He also tops in strikeouts.

FSU Thinclads Face Toughest Test Against Loyola And Alabama Teams

Coach Miller's Boys In Biggest Meet Yet; Relays Top Events Tomorrow

By KEN KINGERY
Flambeau Sports Editor

Considered the best team in the South, the classy Loyola thinclads will invade the FSU Campus along with powerful Alabama to give the Florida State Track Team a run for their money, at the West Campus Oval Tomorrow at 10 A. M.

Meanwhile the Wolves of New Orleans are represented by All-American Javelin toserts, Ray Rockett, and topnotch high jumper Sam Ascani at the Penn State Relays.

So far the Loyolans have tied the League's Cornell University for a first place at the Southern Relays at Birmingham, Alabama, and followed up with an easy win at the Southwestern Relays in Lafayette. This was the same meet in which FSU's freshmen mile relay team was beat out of a much earned first by a few inches. In this meet there were such powers as the University of Houston and LSU.

Just last weekend Loyola easily won a quadrangular meet from the Universities of Georgia, Miami and Georgia Tech at Coral Gables. Two of these same teams also recently beat FSU in a poor showing of the school thinclads for the Georgia Tech's 58. Florida State followed with 53½, in the Seminoles first home appearance.

Florida State will be depending on Jimmy Casteel, Larry Hamilton, Charlie Watson, Jimmy Davis, in fact the whole bunch to give these two win-crazy squads something to worry about.

Loyola has no winning time in the 44-yard dash, which should be Casteel's race for the day. Hounsha will be back to form, at least every FSU fan is hoping so and should win the 880-yard run

Watson on the other hand could win two events, IF he hits his well-known stride. Davis, Casteel, Hounsha and Watson will be trying to beat Loyola's crack Mile Relay Team, by bettering the visitors time of 3:22.4.

Miami will be the next meet on the Oval at Florida State. This too, will be a promising chance for the Seminole Thinclads to Georgia show their wares.

Betsys Ann Ray, Dorothy Womble, and Katherine Culpepper as moths, do a modern dance routine in long grey costumes with the shine of the butterflies.

In the end when the Varnat is dying he realizes that life is good and wants to live. However, it is too late and he dies. His body is discovered by a woodcutter and an old woman with a child. The woodcutter's child symbolizes the continuity of life.

All of the insects wear masks made in Charles Reimer's class. Some of the masks have long "snouts" which, they say, make the love scenes very difficult.

Staging for the play was done by Lynn E. Orr, costume supervision by Douglas Russell and scenery and lighting by Charles Reimer.

The staff includes Edna Hollingsworth, assistant director; costumes designed by Nancy Dickinson; lighting by Margaret Malley; properties, Geraldine Frank; sound, Lloyd Kay; and masks designed by Andrew Julien.

The lighting, almost entirely directional, translates the mood of the production by means of man and color. Soft pastels interpret the butterfly creepers and crawlers; deep purples and ambers give significance to the episode while strong, sharp, contrasting colors and lines are used to indicate the strong war-like nature of the ants.

In the moth scene primary colors, together producing white light, cast triple shadows in three colors as the cyclorama. The patterns projected in the background in each scene are abstract compositions of line and color rendered to further heighten the mood.

806 VOTES PASS CONSTITUTION

Election officials notified The Florida Flambeau yesterday that the newly written constitution exhibited in Tuesday's election had been ratified, despite the fact that 130 ballots were cast against it.

Eight hundred and eight votes were cast for the document, numbering the required two-thirds vote.

Ga. Tech Win Over FSU Golfers 17-10

On the eve of the Southern Interconlegiate Tourna m e n t, the Engineers of Georgia Tech defeated the Florida State Seminole Golfers by the score of 17-10.

Bunk Berry, outstanding and respected golfer from FSU shot a one over par 73, to be low scorer for the Florida State Team.

The low medal honors went to Tech's John Maddox, who had a two under par 70. Following close behind was another Engineer, Gabe Hill who scored a one under par 71.

The Seminoles took the first foursome 3-0, as Berry defeated Arthur Edge, Tech standout 3-0; Jimmy James (FSU) suffered a loss in the hands of Ned Edge 3-0.

The second foursome was won by Tech 3-0, Dick Edwards won over FSU's Vernon Ritar 3-0; Hill beat Mac Fleischer (FSU).

In the final foursome, FSU and Georgia Tech tied 1½ to 1½; John Maddox, Star Tech golfer defeated FSU's Bob Shuman, 3-0.

Graduates Announc Final Picnic Plans

The Florida State University Graduate Class announced plans for a picnic next Thursday at The Pines Recreation. All graduate students, adult students and faculty members have been extended an invitation to attend the fried chicken outing, it was noted.

Today is the last day to make arrangements for attending the outing. Tickets may be secured at a nominal cost from Neil Gerry of business education at the university dining hall. Transportation will be provided, spokesmen revealed.

New graduate class officers are to be elected at a short business meeting the evening of the outing.

Summing up, Carol and Joseph Caputo's "The Insect Comedy" is intended as a bitter satire on society. Based on the dress rehearsal, there is probably more emphasis on humor in the version to be used at FSU.

Surrealism is used extensively, but not exclusively. It is a colorful play and worth seeing from the point of view of the modernist. Audience interest is high, but without ascertining quality

Jack Egan, FSU Net Star, Ends College Tennis Career Here Saturday

By BOB GUTTING

The only Senior on the present FSU V arsity Tennis Team, Jack Egan, will play his last game in a Seminole uniform here S aturday, when the netters will meet the Florida Southern combine on the Varsity Courts at 2 P. M.

Jack was the Captain of the Dixie Conference Champs last year when he compiled a record of 12 wins and only three losses. He said "This is the best team I have ever played as," in reference to the present Seminole squad.

The brownhaired star, has about 30 points for the season now, and hopes to get a few more before the last Match.

Egan, considered the hottest thing since Admiral Crachers when in High School, has improved a surprising amount, especially playing under three different coaches.

Expecting to dwell in the fair city of Atlanta Ga., he will consider Pro Tennis with an eye in the future.

Another record is almost sure to be broken at least by the end of the next season. Dave Kennedy is now tied with Don Soda's all-time school record of 23 wins in four seasons. Dave has already 38 wins with his junior year yet incomplete. Perhaps this record will fall in the Southern Match tomorrow, it looks like it will so far.

Chapman, Duane Gordon, Ardis Smirland, Patsy Martin, Phoebe Jackson, Gordon Gaster, Jimmy Jeans, Cayle Moore, Jean Halford, Jean Tavel, Barbara Buchman, James Moore, Jimmy Seiler, Jo Jones, Jane Soper, and Carolyn Cline.

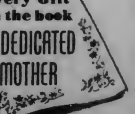
Senator Frank Shaw moved to request the Faculty Senate that official representatives of the Florida Flambeau be allowed to attend meetings of the faculty group. "It's time we took a definite stand," he said.

It passed.

The Senate passed a bill authored by Cayle Moore, which, as a statute makes the "malicious destruction" of campaign posters and election material an Honor Court offense.

Gaster and Moore introduced a resolution, which passed, requesting President Campbell to ask the Board of Control to allot as much rare bank athletic scholarship money to FSU as is given the University of Florida.

The text of the resolution commented that "at present the Florida State University is engaging in athletic competition with institutions of equal athletic status as those competing with the University of Florida."



Referred to the automobile parking committee headed by Chris Gordon Gaster that a new parking The Senate voted down Gaster's proposal to stop traffic by the Hickory Building during the intervalsnce be made of the re- intervals between classes.

'Flying High' Adds New Faces To Chalk-Faces In Clown Alley

By JAYLEEN ROBERTSON

Flying High's clown alley have added new faces and antics and pranks for the 1954 home show in Campbell Stadium May 6, 7, and 8

The chalk-faced funsters now numbering 17, have renovated their ever-popular T-Model Comedy Ford for the home show.

Coach Haskin has announced that the clowns, not wanting to be outdone by the "Flying Zacchinis," have mounted a cannon on the Ford (As such new tricks are tested with expendable Freshmen, the troupe is hoping one will be left to be shot out of the cannon in performances)

The clowns of the squirrel cage, Verner Nelson, Dick Slade, and Jockie Fortune, will cavort on the double high bar, one of the audiences' favorite clown acts.

Jim Byrd, Carl Gay, George Cornelius, and Floyd Gangloff make up one of the new clown acts, to provide many laughs on wheels. Byrd and Gay are also artists of the tight wire, and will attempt a bunny hop on the wire this year

Old and new faces that will be "Clowning around" in new acts and antics include Bill Stephens, Billy Joe Narris, Jimmy Hanks, Larry Hill, Scootsie Crowther, Bobby Temple, Charlie Mathews, Betty Ann Munroe, Jayleen Robertson, and Sally Russell.

The clowns are only one of the outstanding features of FSU's big three-ring extravaganza. Many other new feats have been added to the show

Larry Hill and LaVetra Armstrong will perform in a high wire bicycle act, to be initiated in the home show.

The casting trampoline is another innovation, introducing a combination trampoline—break-away quartette composed of George Bowers, Duke Woodhull, Gail Henshaw, and Frankie Harrison.

New precision dance routines, acrobatic surprises, flying acts, trapeze acts, and aerial ballets are sparked with brand new costumes and special effects.

The 24-act home performances feature all 224 members of the troupe, each a star. Tickets may be purchased at the FSU athletic business office on West Campus.

ADMISSION TO CIRCUS

Students of Florida State University will be admitted free of charge to the Circus on any night on presentation of their ID Card and the Student Activities booklet. Number 10 ticket will be torn out of the book on presentation at the gate. This announcement came from the office of Fred Vogel Counselor to Student Activities.

Joan Curtis Joins Experiment Group In International Living For Summer

Joan Curtis, Florida State University student, has recently been accepted to join an Experiment group to England for the summer.

Miss Curtis will be one of many American co-eds and college students to participate in the Experiment in International Living, which takes young people abroad each year to better international relations.

Under The Experiment plan, carefully selected young people between 16 and 30 go abroad to make friends and to come to know one country well, rather than to tour in several countries.

In the past 22 years this plan has provided some 7,500 students with a way to make enduring friendships in twenty-five countries of Europe, Asia and the three Americas.

Experimenters travel in groups of ten under the guidance of a qualified leader, selected for his experience in living in the country visited. This year, of the 50 leaders already chosen, 31 have previously led Experiment groups.

Members of Experiment groups spend one month living with individual families within a single community. Sharing in everyday life and visiting nearby points of interest, they come to understand what makes the nation "tick" from the inside

To round out their experience within the country, they spend the second month exploring its various regions—by bicycle, bus or train—in the company of their U. S. group members and young hosts from their adopted families.

Average costs for the European experiment plans run from $695 to $775 and $390 for Mexico, with $1245 for the group leaving for India in October. This year The Experiment awarded several $100 scholarships toward these fees

Founded in 1932 by Donald B. Watt, The Experiment's aim is to form groups of people all over the world, who are eager to develop mutual respect and understanding between their own and other countries.

Since 1950, Gordon Boyce, former Assistant to the President of Colgate University, has directed The Experiment from its international headquarters in Putney, Vermont.

There are still openings for college men and women to join Experimental groups for many overseas countries.

Although applications can be accepted through June 1, students should apply as soon as possible because the groups are being filled rapidly. Those interested should write to Chairman, Admissions Committee The Experiment in International Living, Putney, Vermont.

Prom Runoffs Slate For May 6th; Date Is Moved Forward

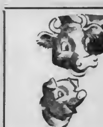
Six senior girls and four senior men are in the royalty run-offs for the Junior-Senior prom slated for May 15, Liz Vang junior class vice-president told The Florida Flambeau yesterday.

Miss Vang also noted there are six junior girls and six junior men running off for the court positions. Balloting will take place Thursday, May 6, at Westcott, Seminole Room and Student Center.

Miss Vang explained that of the following six senior girls, a queen and three members of the court will be chosen. Ardis Bouriand, Janet Burroughs, Carolyn Calhoun, June Conyers, Polly Lassiter and Gail Tomlinson.

A king and three senior members of the court will be selected from among senior men, Milton Carothers, Ken Chadwick, Colin English and Pinky Nowlin.

Three women and three men from the juniors will also be on the court, it was noted. Juniors include Dot Cooke, Charis Coulter, Jo Anne Hutto, Dot Johnson and Ann Yates. Also men, Bob Berto, Bob Canada, Donnie Hollis, Harry Massey, Charles Miner and Peter Nimkoff.



Miss Lang explained that the date for the dance had been moved up to the 15th instead of the first so that the internes could attend the affair.

Opera Promises Colorful Finale To University Musical Season

By GEORGE GOLDSTEIN

Northern Spain will be the center of attraction when a border war, disputed identities, and relationships in love during the 15th century in the provinces of Aragon and Biscay hits Opperman Music Hall tonight and tomorrow

Verdi's twelfth opera "Il Trovatore" will be presented by the Choral Union of FSU under the direction of Herman Gunter, associate professor of music here. Tonight, tomorrow afternoon and evening students will see the famous classical opera in English

"Unusual feature of this production will be the stylized set that will be split up into three portions on the stage," commented Miss Betty Jane Grimm stage director.

Director of the four act opera is Herman Gunter Jr associate professor of music.

Lighting supervision which plays an important part in this particular production will be handled by Coyle Moore while Miss Lucene Williams is in charge of the costumes and properties.

Miss Grimm has done "Il Trovatore many times and has done some parts for T. V. films. Edith Kaup who plays Leonora is a professional singer who was noted for her work in the "Messiah" which was presented recently. Noted for his light opera work and Wagner opera is Edgar Evans who plays Count Diluna.

Claude Rhea, a graduate student in the school of Music will sing the male lead in the role of Manrico and Miss Betty Jane Grimm will sing the contralto lead cast as Azuncena, a gypsy and mother of Manrico

Jane Parkman and Wendell Bartholf will play the Soprano and tenor roles as Leonora and Manrico in the Saturday afternoon performance with other musical students

"Saturday's matinee performance will highlight many of the students who have understudy roles and have gotten experience working with professionals," commented Miss Grimm.

"Playing the orchestra accompaniment is part of the Smyphonic orchestra which has given a lot of time and has done a wonderful job" she added.

It has been nearly a half century since Verdi's opera was first sung in Rome The text and story were arranged by Salvatore Cammarano from "El Torvador" a Spanish drama by Antonio Gracia Gutierrez de la Vega.

Show Features FSU Tarpons

Florida State Universitys' Tarpon Club co-ed swimming attraction, will be featured today at the Thomasville Rose Show, spokesmen for the event announced.

Composed of women specializing in synchronized swimming, the club will have more than 30 members doing a seven act show, they added

All swimming will be done with music, including a "Drill Number," a take-off on the army in which the girls go through such G I antics as saluting and marching

Also to be presented is "Dancing in the Dark" a duet backed by a chorus In "Blues in the Night March", it is reported, the girls will use batons and twirl in the water.

It was also noted that the team will do "Sunlight Serenade" as a tribute to the late Glenn Miller.

Economics Heads Combine Talent In Authoring Book

Three faculty members from the economics department have combined to write a book, "Prices, Income, and Public Policy," published this month by The McGraw-Hill Book Company.

The writing team is comprised of Dr Clark L Allen, Dr James M Buchanan and Dr Marshall R Colberg, all professors of economics Dr Allen is head of the department of economics

Prime purpose of the book is to provide the student with a kit of tools to help him thing clearly about the wide variety of economic issues which will confront him as a voter, employee or businessman, reports reveal.

The authors agreed "that a basic understanding by many Americans of the operation of a private enterprise system and the relation of this economic system to political democracy will do much to insure the perpetuation of our free institutions." They have attempted in this book to provide the materials for such a basic understanding

'Flying High' Features Many New Acts

VOL. XL, No. 50 PUBLISHED BY STUDENTS OF FLORIDA STATE UNIVERSITY, TALLAHASSEE, FLORIDA Tuesday, May 4, 1954

'Big Top' Opens 7th Home Stand Tomorrow, 8 pm

Boasts Many New Feats, Including Human Cannonball

"Flying High," Florida State University circus, will hold a premiere to its seventh annual home show in Doak Campbell Stadium tomorrow at 8 p.m.

Tomorrow night's show is a special performance. Invitations have been extended and the first performance will not be open to the public. The shows at 8 p.m. on May 6, 7, and 8 will be open to the public.

The home show will feature 24 students in the spectacular 26-act extravaganza.

The big top will feature aerial ballet on the swinging trapeze, the aerial anchor and the Spanish web, an act seen in the Ringling circus as well as "Flying High."

ANCHORS AWAY . . . Ann Yates and Joanne Martin are two of the circus lovelies who are performing in the "Flying High" circus which opens its 1954 Home Show begins tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in a premier performance open only by invitation and runs nightly through Saturday, May 8, in Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

Many new feats have been added to FSU's circus this year, including a high wire bicycle act, a human cannon ball, and the casting trampoline, a combination trampoline and diving routine performed by one of the outstanding chorus gamboleties.

The famed "Flying DeComos" will be on hand with their comedy flying somersaults and spectacular feats on the flying trapeze. Another innovation in the flying act will be the position of the trapeze flights during the seating of the audience to provide better viewing.

The Circusettes, in precision chorus numbers, will be dancing new routines to new arranged and plumed costumes. Costuming and lighting effects change the show the appearance of a Technicolor screen production.

Clown alley promises many more stripes and laughs in the home show and the performing clowns Pord has been remodeled and given with a new gait.

Main pairs and quartettes, rain rain teams breakaway and perch pole acrobats, Somersault princesses on the cloud swings, and back revolvers, and horse bareback acts only a few of the all-star acts in this year's giant production.

Last year, FSU's "Flying High," played to more than 20,000 people and Gerosta. The show becomes marks the end of the 1953-54 season, although the troupe will make a trip to Columbus, Ga., May 14 to do a show which was previously rained out.

The circus dates back to 1937, when the physical ed. class voted to broaden the scope of WAW by starting a recreational and expanding into a university.

That same year the circus was born at FSU. Backbone and originator of the circus is Coach Orron "Jack" Maskin, associate professor of the FSU physical education department, then a freshman arrival from the faculty at Lake University.

Drawing on previous experience in circus activity, Coach Maskin worked out the circus as an activity designed to bring the more or less amateur circus together as students and friends.

Since 1947, more than 600 students have participated in the tensive activity which can only be taken once for credit. Some 224 students are currently active members of the circus.

Tickets for the performances may be obtained from the athletics business office on West Campus. Students will be admitted with their I. D. cards and student activity ticket No. 18.

Vogel To Keynote Installation Slated Thursday In Longmire

Fred J. Vogel, director of Florida State University will be keynote speaker for the installation ceremonies of newly elected student body officers next Thursday night at 7 in Longmire Auditorium, according to Judy Simkins, co-chairman.

Officiating at the installation ceremonies, to be followed by a series of conferences sponsored by Omicron Delta Kappa and Mortar Board, will be Chief University Court Justice Jerry Mercy.

Terry Nimkoff, president-elect, will be the only individual installed alone, it was noted. All other elected officers will be installed in a body.

Outgoing and outgoing officers of the student body Milton Carothere will also address the meet.

At 7:45, following the installation, the new student officers, the old officers, as well as elected including sorority, fraternity and social organization officers will attend the various meets scheduled. Simpkins urged that all student officers be present and extended a special invitation to officers of the various parties, The Student and State Party.

The groups, it was revealed, will consist of an executive, judicial, legislative, organizations, and publications. Each of these groups, Miss Simkins said, will be conducted by a student and faculty member and will serve to orient new student leaders with the problems of their respective offices.

At Flambeau press time all details of the conference were not completed. The co-chairman said she expected Gene Lawler and Mary Dailey Parker to be in charge of legislation, with possibly Mel Vogel for organization.

Also at the annual leadership training was not being held at the Reservation as in past years, Miss Simkins explained that there had been a change in scheduling when the Junior-Senior Prom was scheduled. The conference following the installation will substitute for the usual one held next September," added Simkins.

Count Reveals Close Winner Of Third Seat

A hand recount of the ballots cast for Sophomore Women's Senate has displaced Jane Spoto from the third seat and given it to Carolyn Close.

The change, election committee officials reported, resulted from voters overmarking their ballots for the multiple office. Approximately four per cent of the IBM pencils. The overmarked ballots were not caught by the IBM machine operators, the officials added.

In hand counting the ballots, the officials said, the improperly marked ones were discarded. The recount showed 276 votes for Close and 265 for Soper, ironically the same difference by which the campus thought Soper had defeated Close.

Election officials added that the hand recount was checked again on the IBM machines, and that both recount tallies were the same.

A hand recount of the Junior Class presidency race pace, the officials noted, disclosed no mechanical error or improperly marked ballots and the results are the same.

Last Tests Slated Today, Tomorrow

Required examinations for Florida State University students will be given the last time this semester this week according to notification from the Test Service Bureau.

Slated for tomorrow is the General Culture Exam, at 7 p.m. in 124 Science. Wednesday will mark the ACE Psychological Exam, at 7 p.m. in 222 Music Building and the Speech Proficiency Test, at 6:15 p.m. in 222 Music Building.

The Test Service Bureau stressed that this will be the last opportunity this semester to take the examinations.

Freshman or Senior, Hard Work Spells 'Fun' In Circus Lingo

By JAYLEEN ROBERTSON

Behind the colored lights, the costumes, and the apparent grace and skill of the performers in the Florida State University circus are warm personalities and hard work.

Troupe members will aver that although a star, is also assigned to various tasks behind the scenes.

Whether a freshman or a second senior performer, each member of the troupe must have a hute about costuming, dance routines, make-up, and how to hold a smile after the pain.

Senior members who are well-versed in every phase of the circus production, as well as the newest frosh, claims that circus itself is an education in every phase of showbusiness.

Speaking of seniors, four members of the troupe will be performing for FSU audiences for the last time in the 1954 home show.

George Reeves, graduate assistant in art of the breakaway, adagio, and clown acts, will graduate in June, as will Jean "Ja-binkie" Northrop and Carolyn Calhoun, stars of the aerial trapeze, Spanish web, and Giant Swing.

Patricia "Pat" Payne, will also be a home performance.

As her last Pat is well-known for her skill in adagio and breakaway routines.

Aside from the myriad of artistic details on human and apparatus, there is always a choice for the clowns antics and a desire for the performer who does by a difficult feat well.

Personalities and character are developed with as much importance as the skill and knack needed for the acts.

Frosh, troupe members and are usually the brunt of all pranks and a constant round of teasing from the upperclass performers. Each member soon learns, without being told, that the precision timing of unpacking and packing costumes is just as important as timing and coordination on the flying trapeze.

FSU Is Host To Upcoming Band Festival

For the first time in the history of the school, Florida State University is serving as host to the State Band Festival May 13 14 and 15.

The local Chamber of Commerce, sponsoring festival expects about 1,000 high school band students from a total of 38 schools.

The festival will include competition in baton twirling, solos and ensembles, concerts, band sight-reading and marching. The two highlights of the event will be two marching contests on the 13th and 14th, when each band will be permitted to march once to last it turn at doing certain prescribed movements on the field. Each will also present a show similar to a football game halftime show.

The marching shows will begin at 8 p.m. in Campbell Stadium, both nights. May 13 at 2:30.

Elaborate programs will be prepared by the Chamber of Commerce with a page devoted to each band for presentation of all of the band members.

Admission charges are $1 for adults and 50 cents for FSU students with ID cards. Children under school age will be admitted free of charge.

Final Figures Given In Recent Campus Chest Solicitations

Final figures for the campus Chest Fund collected in the annual drive early last semester have been released recently by Fred J. Vogel, director of student activities.

The campus Chest, headed by Shirley Traxler, collected in all $2,630.52, he revealed. A total of from the past year increased the total to $2,763.43.

"Alter expenditures for the campaign. The organization finally came out with $2,778.43," said Vogel. Of this, the greatest amount went to the World Service Fund, while the Heart Fund received $1,177.83, or 50 percent of the collections.

The next highest amount went to the National Tuberculosis Association, which received $350. The American Cancer Society received $141, while the National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis, United Negro College Fund, Florida Heart Association, and American International Christian University Foundation all received $294.40.

These last figures represent 10 percent of the total collected.

An Editorial

By BRUCE GALPHIN, editor-in-chief

It's a sad thing to admit that after four years of college, I am really poorly educated. But I confess what education I have received has been by an almost accidental choice of professors.

We do not usually see our shortcomings until we can compare our achievements with others'. Last Thursday and Friday my eyes were opened to me, and I was embarrassed by what I saw.

On the days mentioned, I was privileged to talk with Dr. Joseph W. Cohen, head of the Honors Program at the University of Colorado. Dr. Cohen was here to explain Colorado's program, in the hopes that a similar plan may be adopted at Florida State University . . . a consummation devoutly to be wished.

I was called in as a student of (one-time) high academic standing to answer questions and give opinions about the academic program here. In the course of the discussion I had to admit I had never read many of the world's outstanding works in the fields of literature, political science, natural science, mathematics.

The unfortunate truth is that course work usually interferes with education. This is the conclusion arrived at by all the students questioned. Too much time is spent doing assignments and memorizing facts for the next examination to allow reading the world's most intellectually stimulating books.

We also agreed that the counseling system and major requirements, perhaps unintentionally, retard the student's education. Counselors and even members of major professors alike have definite prejudices in counseling the student in his work. They actually force him to concentrate too heavily in one field for his intellectual welfare.

There are many advantages I have had at FSU which I cannot regret: I have made many friends and learned how to get along with others. I have enjoyed every moment of my work on The Florida Flambeau and feel that it is an immensely practical training-ground for my life's work.

But intellectually I feel stunted. I would be afraid to do graduate work at some great university, where I would be expected to discuss intelligently the world's great ideas with widely read students. Rather, I would feel I should become a hermit in a library and read some hundred-odd books before showing myself in the company of educated people.

The picture for FSU is not all black. The fact that Dean Allen and assistant Dean Reynolds have brought Dr. Cohen here and are starting an Honors Program for the College of Arts and Sciences is extremely hopeful.

Certainly we have the potential at FSU, both in outstanding professors and intelligent students. What we lack is a deliberate, well planned system of integrating formal courses and student abilities to provide that great spark of civilization called education.

An Honors Program could provide such a system. It would not be a major program in itself but would merely provide outstanding students an opportunity to enroll in two or three of four courses per semester in broad, stimulating courses in the social sciences, the humanities and the natural sciences. These courses would take the form of weekly seminars (so far attempted only in the American Studies area) directed by the most outstanding men on our faculty.

Such a program would thus supplement and round out the student's education, no matter what his major. There is not room here to describe the entire program, but I am sure the Flambeau will do all it can to outline and support the plan in the future.

Run-Off Election Slated Today; 10 Offices Are Open

Grubbs Warns All Candidates 'Posters Must Be Down'

Run-off elections will be held today to determine the remaining ten offices to be filled for next year's class and court positions.

Elections officials today emphasized they would discard any improperly marked ballots, calling attention to the many errors found in last week's primary elections stating that several districts resulted, they added, from improperly marked tickets making necessary recounts by hand of the machine-tallied ballots.

Polling places will be located at Lower Westcott, Seminole Club, Student Center, and West Hall. All are open till five except West Hall, which closes at one. Members of Sophomore Council are staffing the ballot boxes.

Only one ballot will be used for the three classes and the court system, officials have announced. The poll workers will stamp the section of the ballot on which the student is registered, and mark and raise cast for the wrong class races will be disqualified.

Betty Jo Grubbs, Secretary of Elections, issued a warning to candidates to remove their posters within 48 hours after the election. She said that approximately fifty candidates in the primary have been fined one dollar each by the Student Court for illegally placing posters on campus property and surfaces.

Seeking election today are Shirley Morgan, Student Party, for the Mary Wagner independent, for the vice-presidency of the sophomore class.

Vying for the three seats on Sophomore Women's Judiciary are Greta Sims, Student; Sandra Bunting, State; June McManis, Independent; Dawn Sharp, Student, and Jo Griffin and Irene Rodrigues.

Nancy Maxwell, Student, and Barbara Hughes, independent, are running for treasurer of the sophomore class.

Seeking two seats on Senior Men's Senate are Jack Bowen, Student; Jack Houser, State; Bill Smith, Student, and Bob Berlo, State.

Running for one unresolved seat in Senior Women's Senate Council are Ari Allwood, State, and George Martin, Student.

Two seats are up for seats in Junior Men's Senate, and seeking them are Bill Smith, student, Kemp Haskins, independent; Fred Mansfield, State, and Jack Bulmer, State.

Whitcomb Reveals Majorette Tryouts Set For May 15, 16

Florida State University schools will have a chance to go through their paces for majorettes basons May 15-16, Director Manley Whitcomb of University Marching Band announced today.

Tryouts for majorettes would take place on those days.

According to Whitcomb, all girls who will be students for the fall term are invited to the tryouts at 4-6 p.m. on May 15 and 9 a.m. on May 16.

Girls with a year or more of majorette experience as FSU majorettes are urged to prepare for head majorette to be held from 4 p.m. on May 15 Whitcomb added.

Candidates, it was noted, will be asked to demonstrate wrist twirl, figure eight, four finger twirl, two hand twirl, right and left and body passes, series reverse figure eight, and catch-twirl.

In addition they will be expected to march to band music, display an individual routine and participate in a new ensemble routine.

Judges announced include Whitcomb, Mrs. Robert Broussard, and Harry Schmidt of the FSU music faculty; Nadine Bond Bichimog of the women's physical education, and Jerry Carter, graduate assistant in the school of music.

Gold Key Prepares To Improve Service

All parties with suggestions for new telephone service, locations for telephone booths, and information on the communications system here are urged to contact Al Sinner. Theta Chi house.

Sinner said yesterday this will be a part of a survey preparatory to installing needed phone service as a Gold Key project. He said plans include coin boxes as well as additional telephone booths to have service placed in classroom and office areas.

Frantic Fifties Bare Gams In Bermudas; Quo Vadis?

By AL PIERCE

Comeback coats, candy-stripe jeans of coat, free walking facility and knickerbockers are yellow alike—pink shades of Bermudians are raged through the Roaring come in some 40 different fabrics Twenties' college scene. Bookers and colors, weights and styles of higher education, the Florida of Men's Fashion Board of the thirties with cloche hats, skirts traditional shades of flannel to hats barely covered the female the tropical waves and long gar- tweed, and Gay Nineties' flair for mentor, and, God forbid, muscular- color in the sunny Southern ity.

The fabric-choked forties are now in North American youth promenading in North Bermuda shorts, Bermudians, with knee-length socks, new lines approaching neckline heights, and shoulders running a close second to the rear of a Mexican fiesta.

After a few years of dis-trust, the average American boy that Bermuda shorts are worn with knee-length socks and a sport shirt or dacron open shirt with long sleeves, sleeves, and tails of the shirt flying free.

The English tennis walking plus leafers. The writer's mind short, having charmed tourists ace a white or colored dress shirt, from Chalk's to the famous shores of Hamilton Harbor and the sun-kissed beaches of Bermuda, and the Bermudian is now one of the most popular symbolic wears, darkly, the refined version of the knee-length socks, rolled at the black or brown tassel loafers and the Bermuda shorts. Not necessarily Bermudian, but essentially American, it's the natural thing for a Southern campus.

Encouraging news comes from the University of Miami, where Bermudas for both men and women have swung up in popularity. Appearing at Coral Gables in one big group in the past dime-novel, but reports say that Bermudas are now a clothes-horse appearing at class and shopping appearing at class

Flambeau Reprints Endorsements Of 3 Gubernatorial Candidates

Today Democrats throughout the state will go to the polls to select their candidate for the next governor of Florida. The Florida Flambeau is not going to endorse any candidate, but it does urge all registered voters to vote. We reprint below parts of endorsements of the three candidates by three state newspapers:

The Orlando Sentinel Star For Charley Johns

A nice lady of the Silk Stocking Set wanted to talk politics the other day.

"Why do you favor Johns?" she asked.

"Haven't you been reading the papers?"

"Well, I don't know what you mean."

"We mean that Johns, as acting governor, is actually building more roads in and around Orlando than any governor has built in many a year. In a few short months he has done more than any one governor has ever done for us."

We told the nice lady of the Silk Stockings Set that we admired Gov. Johns constructive administration and we thought we owed him some thanks and gratitude for coming to the rescue of Orange and Brevard counties.

We would like for the people of Orange County and Central Florida—the little people, not necessarily the Silk Stocking Set—to ponder this question:

If Gov. Johns is a crook, why would former Congr. Hardin Peterson, than whom there is no Floridian with a higher rating of integrity, represent him as Washington liaison?

Hardin Peterson was elected time and time again to Congress by the people of Florida and never has a breath of scandal besmirched his character.

Why would he spend any time with Gov. Johns, if, as THEY say, he is so crooked?

Why would Francis Whitehair, former undersecretary of the U. S. Navy, endorse and support Gov. Johns' candidacy, if he is a crook?

Why would Miami's Joe Adams accept appointment as Gov. Johns' hotel commissioner, if Johns is such a bad actor? Mr. Adams, a man of integrity and reputation in his own right and in his own town of Miami, doesn't need political patronage any more than does Hardin Peterson, Frances Whitehair or Cecil Webb. Mr. Webb, of Tampa, is a flour manufacturer and is chairman of Gov. Johns' highway commission.

Our good friend, the Lady of the Silk Stocking Set, would not be downed.

"Don't you think that Florida's governor should be educated?"

In other words, Johns, just because he didn't go to college, is a moron.

What would you call Abe Lincoln? He never went to college either.

Neither did Justice Rivers Buford and the late Justices William H. Ellis and Fred Davis, all of the Florida Supreme Court. All were elected attorney generals of Florida by the people and later to the Supreme Court. All were regarded as the outstanding attorney generals and the outstanding chief justices of the Supreme Court of Florida.

They call Johns an accident? Well, wasn't Lincoln a political accident?

There are other forms of acquiring an education than by going to college. Who would say that Gov. Johns is not an educated man after having served in the Florida senate for 16 years and who by his own ability, rose to the presidency of the senate? Walter Rose, our own citizen, who served with Johns in the senate for many years, says he is one of the most able men over to sit in Florida's legislative halls.

The St. Petersburg Independent For Brailey

We cannot, as several Florida newspapers have done glibly discount the candidacy of Brailey Odham.

Odham is not a man who can be brushed off lightly, for, like a nagging conscience, you cannot help but believe that on the great majority of issues he is right—whether you like it or not.

This is Odham's second try for the governorship. And if there are any defects in his personal character, his public record, or his current stand on public issues, his opponents would have made sure that they were laid bare for all to see before this.

Odham served two sessions in the Legislature.

At both sessions he was recognized by Florida newspapers as one of the outstanding members of the House.

Both in the last campaign and in the current one, Brailey Odham has demonstrated that he has a thorough knowledge of State government. His successful business career attests to his administrative ability. And the many civic honors that have come to him demonstrate his genuine interest in the betterment of the State.

The charge that Odham "talks too much" is a dishonest charge.

What his critics actually mean is that he speaks too honestly and bluntly for comfort. Indeed, he is so painfully honest and forthright on every issue and so determined to keep himself free from obligations to special interests, the illegal gambling crowd and the fast-buck boys, that for practical purposes he has hurt himself.

This obvious fact has been well illustrated in the history of the current campaign.

But seek as you wish, you'll find none of the professional political cult in Brailey Odham's corner today.

The great majority of them are in there spending their money and influence in behalf of Charley Johns . . and LeRoy Collins.

Why?

The only answer is that they have found out early that they can't do business with Brailey.

The great majority of Americans like to feel that the man they elect to high office will enter that office unencumbered. They want a man who has not previously committed himself to special favors for special groups. They want a man who is infinitely concerned with the problems of all the people and who is not so obligated that he cannot work for the welfare of all.

The opportunity to elect such a man, however, is so rare that it may not be recognized when it comes.

The honest and forthrightness of Brailey Odham, for instance, is so unusual and such a departure from what we generally expect in a political figure that many find difficulty in convincing themselves that he is genuine and sincere.

Jim Powell, Tallahassee correspondent for the Tampa Tribune, summed up the Odham situation very well back in 1951. Noting that as a member of the Legislature, Odham was loathed by old-line politicians, Powell wrote:

"The main question in Odham's candidacy would be whether he is too honest to hold the high public office . . ."

The question still holds true today.

"Can a man be 'too honest' to win the governorship?"

If he can, then we as a people have reached a new high in political cynicism.

The Tampa Tribune For LeRoy Collins

LeRoy Collins, in a speech in Jacksonville, re-asserted his gubernatorial platform declaration against the local bill evil for a "Sound system of home rule."

The local bill situation has long been a bad feature of Florida legislation. As now operated, this system permits the delegation from a county to exercise dictatorial power in enacting measures affecting the people or the government of the county and cities. In fact, when it comes to a showdown, one man, the state senator from the county or district has the sole authority to pass or defeat such laws.

Senator Collins said that while most legislators have not abused the power, "The danger is there and it consumes valuable time unnecessarily." He added: "In dealing with such local problems, legislators must spend much needed time"—time that could be better devoted to statewide questions. The system also permits the exercise of political pressure from persons who have selfish ends to serve, which in many cases proves embarrassing to the legislators and distracts their attention from more important matters.

Senator Collins points out "There is a way to take these local problems out of the legislature and permit you to solve them right at home." That opportunity is afforded in constitutional revision, which should provide for home rule on home questions. This may be accomplished by placing the authority for local legislation in the hands of local official bodies, as is now the law in several states. Through that method local legislation would be enacted at home, without the necessity of legislative action. Proposed revision of the Constitution surely should include a practical plan to accomplish that desirable reform.

As on his other major platform declarations, Senator Collins is sound on this one, and his position should receive the endorsement and support of voters in the May 4 primary.

Alligator Scores 'Regionalism' In Selection

Though it is less directly our business, we must applaud The Florida Alligator's stand that regionalism should not interfere with the selection of a new president at the University of Florida.

Tampa Tribuneaman Jim Powell reported that Dr. John D. Williams, chancellor of the University of Mississippi, had the "inside track" with the state board of education.

Outgoing editor George D. Bayless wrote, in a front-page editorial, ". . . The University of Florida is slowly but surely reaching its zenith of becoming one of the better known national educational institutions . . .

"However, if the state's officials decide to pick a regional educator . . . who perhaps has not the experience nor the perspective to see beyond the limited goals, then the university . . . can easily slip and fall and become another school, with its degree and football ticket stubs about the only result of progress.

"The state must look beyond the Mason-Dixoo line, if necessary . . . Admittedly, it's nice to have a regional official to satisfy the flag wavers and politicians, but if the state is going to truly progress through its university . . . then all of us must look for the man that will do the university the most good, no matter what area he resides in currently . . ."

"Just In Case Of Fire, Where's The Nearest Exit?"

Dear Mama Seminole

Dear Mama Seminole,

Georgie write Mama many bad things that go on here on campus and show all letter in hopes that bad things end. Georgie wonder if any brave or maiden benefit by constructive criticism. From what Georgie observe, talk do little good, only example make change.

Big chiefs have same results. Talk and make rules plenty but is only example that make student think.

Chief come to campus, have pow-wows over honors program. Georgie observe honors already at work with individual students and think good thing if program bring student and professor together.

Braves and maidens on campus go out this week and twist and paint and play fool like all Indian like to do. Sad thing that many too lazy and just pay to see other people have fun.

Little boy ask Susie why half people in show all red and black and half people clean and active. Susie explain that when clean active brave miss bar and fall on head then he just smear blood and dirt and stagger around watching for more to join him.

Georgie call for less use of auto on main campus streets. Not safe to walk on campus. State spend much money, build streets where braves can ride in auto to door of class then spend much more money and build stadium and gym so braves can walk and run for exercise.

Love all,
Georgie Seminole.

AT THE LIBRARY

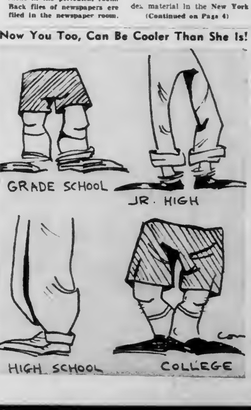
Periodical Room Provides Entertainment, Research

By FLORENCE PAYNE

Periodicals can be used both for research and entertainment. Over seventeen hundred current magazines are received by the library covering such subject fields as art, chemistry, history music, political science, physics, etc.

The most recent issues of these periodicals are displayed alphabetically, by title, in the periodicals room. Back issues, as yet unbound, may be had by asking at the periodicals desk. Bound volumes of periodicals are shelved alphabetically around the walls, in the back of the periodicals room, and on the small balcony.

The periodicals are indexed in the main catalog. In addition, there are available in the periodical room a Classified List, a List of Bound Periodicals, and a List of Periodicals Currently Received. The small card file indicating the location of the periodicals may be found on the counter running lengthwise of the room.



The library receives over 100 newspapers. Current newspapers are displayed on racks in the periodical room. Back files of newspapers are filed in the newspaper room. Microfilm copies of certain papers are filed in the microfilm room.

The various periodical and newspaper indexes will help you locate magazines and issues containing articles on the subject in which you are interested. These indexes, listed below, are arranged by author, subject and title.

The Reader's Guide is an index to material in such periodicals as Harper's Magazine, National Geographic, and Nation. The International Index is an index to American Anthropology, American Sociological Review, and Illustrated London News, among others. The Education Index is an index to material dealing with all matters pertaining to education: primary, secondary and university. One also finds a great deal of material on sports in this index. The Public Affairs Information Service indexes not only periodicals but also books and pamphlets dealing with current events, political science, economics, and similar subjects. The one great newspaper index is the New York Times Index. This index was designed to index material in the New York

Now You Too, Can Be Cooler Than She Is!

THE FREE LANCE

'La Boheme', A Take Of Cool Cats

By BRUCE GALPHIN

This is quite an occasion for me . . . the first Flambeau deadline day I have missed. But the lure of the Metropolitan Opera performances in Atlanta calls . . . an engagement I have had for a year.

This season in Atlanta includes four outstanding productions, but they're not presenting my favorite, Puccini's La Boheme.

In honor of the occasion, though, I'll relate a verbal review of Boheme as given to me by Brooklyn's one and only Joe Macaratz. It was his first opera.

Dere was dese guys sittin' around in a little flat, cussin' like mad 'cause dey didn't have no beer. Dey was so mad dey was rippin' up a Sears-Roebuck catalog an' t'rowin' da pieces in da stove. Den along comes dis guy named Benoit, remindin' da cats dat da rent was due some days past. But da cats conned al' boy Benoit out of da levy an' dey felt so good about it, dey went off fac a celebration at the local beer-garden.

But dere was dis one square Rudolph, a poetical type guy who took himself serious, that stayed behind to put some finishin' touches on one of his poems. Now a fine chick lived upstairs named Mimi. As soon as da other guy left Mimi saw her chance and played dis real innocent routine. Gets on the stairway an' knocks . . . says her candle's gone out. Hah! Da wick wasn't even warm, I bet.

Anyway Rudolph falls for it, hook, line an' sinker. She goes into a coughin' fit an' he asks her in for a little drink. He takes her hand to help her, and dat does it. He's really hot after dat. Dey sing a little, but she's smart an' says, "let's go to da party, honey."

Da whole secon' act is a big drinkin' orgy, where a cool kitten named Musetta flirts wid her boyfriend Marcello an' at da same time cons her square date out of the bill. Everybody clapped like crazy after dis scene, an' I admit it was pretty good da way dey swizzled dat booze. It was a pretty good trick, considerin' how much time dey wasted singin.'

Now in de nex' act Musetta and Marcello, dey're shacked up at some wine-an'-whiskey establishment, but t'ings ain't goin' so well. Must be everybody's switchin' to Blatz dat year. Anyway who should fall by the joint but friend Mimi. "Marcello," she says, "dis lover Rudolph is gettin' to be a real beast. Seems to be sick in da head. Oedipus complex or somethin'. In short, we ain' hittin' it off so well."

Well, she no sooner gets out her tale when along comes da hero. She hides an' bears him spill da beans. She's dying of TB but didn't know it till now. Mimi decided she's goin' to leave him, but when da two of 'em hear Marcello and Musetta havin' one of deir knock-down-drag-outs, dey figure dey can stand each other a little while longer.

Da last act is supposed te be real tragic, but I donno.' Da Paris cats are sittin' aroun mopin' about deir dames when in blaws Musetta to tell 'em Mimi's on her last legs. Da poor kid comes in herself before long, dyin' of consumption. Everyone cried but me. Chee'! I near laughed out loud. Dat ol' girl was a good 250 pounds, an' when she coughed, it was more like calisthenics than death rattles. Anyway, she kicks off, an' everyone stands around weepy, includin' da audience.

It musta been real good, 'cause everybody says it was, but you know what? I didn't think it was so great. Seen better at da Saturday night flicks an' can understand da words, too.

THE BOOKLIST

'Executive Suite' Is Big Business

By BOB FOLSOM

Tomorrow local moviegoers will get to see once more what Hollywood has done with a fine novel. And the people who have read it will probably be curious to see how many, if any, changes Hollywood has made in Executive Suite, the best seller by Cameron Hawley that came out in late 1952.

An intense and finely technical novel depicting the behind the scenes maneuverings of big business, Executive Suite is unique in that it is sans romanticism and the satirist's pen.

Cameron Hawley is a successful corporation executive, and the picture he presents of big industry in his first novel is authoritative.

"A minute or two before or after two-thirty on the afternoon of the twenty-second of June," Avery Bullard, president of the Tredway Corporation, dropped dead on a New York sidewalk. Supposedly he was in perfect health, and while fate caught up with him, it was now to touch the lives of five others: the vice-presidents of the Tredway Corporation, a large furniture manufacturing concern.

Bullard was ready to name one of the five to fill the vacancy of executive vice-president. Now, it was never to be known, and in the ensuing 28 hours following Bullard's death, Executive Suite takes the reader on a swift journey to see who will reign as president in Tredway Towers, home of the corporation.

They are: Dudley of Sales, an impressive man, broad-shouldered, and a practiced master of the art of winning quick friendships. Alderson the Treasurer, the oldest who gave Bullard the break that led him to the top. Grim of Manufacturing—Bullard held special affection for him; Shaw the Controller, a precisionist who foresaw every detail, and Walling, the young designer Bullard groomed for the top.

The principals learn of Bullard's death and a meeting is scheduled the next day to elect a new president. Thus a chain reaction is set in motion. Who will it be?

There are seven votes to decide a successor. The other two are Caswell, a director, who holds hopes of being heir, though it is doubtful to the reader, and Julia Tredway Prince, whose father, Orrin Tredway, started the company.

Rivalry and jealousy break the seven into two groups, though one or two remain neutral and doubtful until the successor can prove himself. Compromises must be made, and the would-be successors maneuver to sway at least four, and majority, votes to their side. Mr. Hawley's narrative pace is tight and highly effective, as event after event builds up until climaxed with the unanimous selection of the successor.

Executive Suite is not only the question which vice-president will succeed Bullard, but which qualities a president must possess to be in such a high position. These two factors remain dominant and lasting with the reader throughout the book.

The successor, in order to have a functioning organization, free of rivalry and jealousy from his associates, must not only justify his own ability but win over their confidence completely. He does this beyond a shadow of a doubt.

We note William Holden plays in the movie version. He probably portrays Walling, tradition-minded Hollywood would never let Holden lose.

CONVERSATIONS WITH SAMMY

Hard To Judge, But Good Men Lost

By ORCHID ALONSO

Elections, illactions, ill-elections. No one, no one, can be so naive as to say all the best candidates were elected last Tuesday. Since Sammy is on neither party (just a staunch believer in a working two-party system) he is safe in saying that some outstanding candidates from both parties were defeated. Why say more? That indicates that some not quite outstanding candidates from both parties got elected.

"And", reminds Sammy, "it wasn't all pink and glory with the independent runners."

However, I pointed out to Sammy that no one could set himself up as a judge to determine that the winners will not make good officers.

By this time, Sammy was hep on the subject and practically spouting at the mouth.

"Bob Folsom pointed out the discrepancies of the voters in his last column."

Yes, Sammy, he did. And Folsom having such great faith in people, intimated that the undeserving will do such a lousy job, that it will show up all over the place.

"I won't disagree with him entirely," harped Sammy, "but since in the past students have been elected on the same basis, who or what is going to determine the yardstick to measure the achievements of these no-goodinks?"

Folsom was highly critical of the fact that apparently, some underserving students were re-elected to office. On the basis of observations made by Sammy last week, the students should have carefully examined the record and attitude of those seeking re-election. This was a pointed warning that not all the officers in power are the best, nor that "experience, honesty, and sincerity" made the best senators.

There were some new faces in the election, who, purely on the basis of sheer mentality and maturity of ideas could have, if elected, achieved far more for the students.

Sammy pointed out that Folsom was harsh in his criticism but that he couldn't quite disagree with the principle of his arguments. With the set up this campus has of student government, which is a farce, and the resulting student affairs, some good alert senators might have meant the beginning of a sound trend to mature student responsibilities.

There were at least four newcomers who appealed to the intelligence of the voters. Three were defeated, one is in the run-offs.

"What is a body to do?" queries Sammy wearily.

ETCETERA ETCHINGS

Fan Club, Theatre Will Miss Strane

By DAVID DREIS

The women clawed their way through the line when Valentino died years ago. Their sobs were echoed by crowds for blocks long and now it looks as if the same display of emotion will utter over our campus. Robert Strane is graduating.

To few on campus the name of Strane means nothing for no time in the history of FSU theater has a personality glowed with such radiance as when Strane was before the footlights. I know . . . I saw the faces of charming women, young and old, looking up to him. I was in two plays with him. That was 'enough' to convince me.

The female population young and old must continue as their foremothers before them. They must try to dismiss any affection from their minds. The opera lovers must seek another 'authority,' Robert Strane will be with us no more.

Oh, I've seen fan clubs spring up throughout the nation for the great lover of the screen and the singer of the day, but not with such storm as the Robert Strane fan club. Nothing could come lose to the growing membership of that club. I know for I am a card carrying member.

Ever since Strane fascinated stage stress Doris Dalton in "Biography" two years ago, the following has been increasing by leaps and bounds. Girls fluttered over his curly blonde hair, usually bobbing around his ears. Men copied his hair style and danced the 'Strane Waltz.' It was an era to be remembered.

He followed with the role of Petrucio in "The Taming of the Shrew." I portrayed his sidekick Grumio. I was honored when he upstaged me, walked in front of me and cut off my long speeches. It was a privilege that few realize. It was futile being costumed for a role opposite Strane. None looked at me when he was on. Jane Gardner as the Shrew was envied by the multitude who could see no forte in being hard-to-get to their hero.

When Romeo and Juliet was produced, his female supporters almost boycotted the Conradi theatre for two reasons. (1) Strane was not playing Romeo. (Most had bought their tickets for that purpose) and (2) Strane as Mercutio, was killed before the play was over. However, his gentleness won them over for never could they turn their back on him.

'Miscasting' they called it when our hero played the hard-hearted father in The Heiress. They comforted themselves in the fact that Strane could never be conniving as the gold-digging lover. Strane stands for the principles of aesthetic values in theater . . . not common-ugh-money.

And so, when the curtain comes down for the last time tonight in Robert Strane's last Speech Department role, remember to 'buck-up' for somehow, I don't think it's the last we've seen of him.

Gymkana Is Third In AAU

Los Angeles Turners Trimph Miles And Holder Spark FSU

The Los Angeles Turners, pre tourney favorites, replaced the Florida State Gymkana as National AAU gym champions in Los Angeles over the weekend. The champion Turners, who were runner-ups last year, scored 37 1/2 points.

The Seminoles finished third with 27½, losing the title they won last year at Philadelphia. UCLA was a close second with 34½ points.

The California performers dominated the big gym tourney with the Los Angeles City College fourth and Southern California finished fifth.

FSU's Jack Miles turned in the best performance for the Gymkana team as he scored up 11½ points, thus making his high point man for FSU. Miles finished third in the horse, fifth in the high horse, fifth in the still rings and fourth in the All-around.

Bill Holder grabbed third in the all-around competition which was won by Charlie Simms of the Los Angeles Turners. Simms the Holder was a member of the 1952 U.S. Olympic squad. Holder picked up points in the parrelel bars by finishing fifth and in twice.

The high bar with a fourth place by Angelos at this point in the race. The ATO's filled to overflowing with athletes of all descriptions and with a good weekend under their belts, will probably maintain their top-notch place. The Sigs, less blessed with athletes, will keep their high spot as long as their pitching staff is in good health.

Almost a half-dozen fraternities are barking at the heels of the two leaders. Sigma Phi Epsilon, Sigma Nu and Lambda Chi Alpha could help their sides in the overall standings by cashing up in the softball race. Pi Kappa Phi is at the bottom of the ladder in the overall standings and any progress they make will not help too much. Phi Delta Theta, safe and sound at the top of the overall ratings, can be satisfied with coming out as the also-ran in the softball contents and still be sure they will have the "king-of-the-campus" trophy at the end of school.

The only group that stands to really lose a lot by flubbing up in softball are the gentlemanly Kappa Sigs. The KA's are barely holding on to their third-place slot in the overall standings and are not doing too well so far in softball. If the KA's lose out in softball, then there will probably be a reshuffling in the standings among the Sigma Nu, SPE's and Lambda Chis.

According to the intramural office at West campus, these are the softball ratings as of last Thursday:

Team	W	L
ATO	3	0
Sigma Chi	2	0
SPE	2	1
Sigma Nu	2	1
Lambda Chi	2	1
Phi Delt	2	1
Pi Kappa Phi	2	1
Phi K Tau	2	1
Phi Delta Theta	1	2
KA	1	2
SAE	0	2
Theta Chi	0	3
Kappa Sig	0	4
Phi	not entered

Besides softball, the fraternities are worrying with volleyball, a sport which nobody seems to take too seriously or seems to really want to win.

Overall standings for fraternities, according to the intramural office:

Phi Delt	635 pts
ATO	530
KA	423
Sigma Nu	422
SPE	406
Lambda Chi	406
Phi K Tau	379
Delta T Delta	367
SAE	352
Kappa Sig	324
Sigma Chi	312
Theta Chi	311
Pike	268
Pi K Phi	235

By Art Kennerly

Softball standings in the fraternity portion of intramural athletics hange with about the same regularity as the positions of cards each time the deck is shuffled.

Alpha Tau Omega and Sigma Chi lead the pack in the softball race.

Robbers Strike

Disaster mixed with triumph, Saturday for three FSU baseball players. While they were busy beating Tampa on the East Campus diamond, a thief or thieves, entered the FSU dressing room, broke open five lockers and made away with a total of $63 from the players' wallets.

Loyola Wins Meet, As FSU Finishes Third

The track power of the University of Loyola and Alabama proved too much for the Florida State track squad, Saturday in a triangular meet won by Loyola. Alabama took second with 81 points and the Seminoles wound up third and last with 28½ points. The non-studied Loyola team amassed 71 points.

But despite the over-all superiority of the Loyola and Alabama, it was two FSU performers who finished one and two in individual events. Carlos Fraendorfer captured top honors with 11 points. He set a new school record to win the shot-put event with a toss of 45 feet, 2 inches. Right behind him with 10¾ points was freshman speedster, Jim Casteel. He was the 440 yard dash in 49.4 to establish a new school record and took second in the broad jump.

Wayne Goodson of Alabama, the only double winner of the meet, set a new FSU track record of 15.9 in the high hurdles. He also won the low hurdles and was third in individual totals with 10 points.

But probably the best performance of the day was the 1:56.9 posted by L. Reeves of Alabama in the half mile. In winning, he beat out FSU's flashy half miler, freshman Larry Hounthal.

Several track records and meet records fell during the day.

100-yard dash—1. Newsome (L), 2. Casteel (L), 3. Richards (A), 4. Davis (A). Time, :10.1. (Tie for second).

220-yard dash—1. Caraveo (L), 2. Newsome (L), 3. Casteel (FSU), 4. Dich.

FSU Netters Blow Through FSC 7-1, Home Court

The Florida State tennis team completed the season Saturday, by sweeping through Florida Southern, 7-1, on the home courts. It was the second win of the season over Florida Southern and gave the Seminoles a 13-5 record.

Only one of yesterday's seven matches went more than two sets. FSU copping five of six singles, and one double match before a sudden shower washed out the last two scheduled doubles duels.

FSU suffered their only loss when Dick Gardner defeated Jim Crowther, 6-3, 6-1, in the number 5 singles.

Jack Egan of Bradenton, the only senior on Kevin Pitchford's squad, closed his college career by white-washing Cooper Kirk, 6-0 6-0.

The summary:

Singles—Hal Schaus, FSU, df. Shire Yamasaki, FSC, 6-4, 7-5; Don Cundy, FSU, df. Gordon Hirschberger, FSC, 6-1, 8-6; Jack Ryan, FSU, df. Cooper Kind, FSC, 6-0, 6-0; Don Wyly, FSU, df. Dava Crum, FSC, 0-6 6-3, 6-1; Dave Kennedy, FSU, df. Charlie Boles, FSC, 6-0, 6-3; Dick Gardner, FSU, df. Jim Crowther, FSU, 6-3, 6-1. Doubles —Cundy and Kennedy, FSU, df. Friday, behind the smooth pitching of Jim Atwood the Seminoles exploded to beat Tampa, 13-1, Saturday, with the help of Fred Twomey's 350-foot home run. FSU won 7-2. Twomey, a freshman from Gloucester, Mass., also contributed a single.

In the Saturday contest, The Seminoles held a slim one run lead until the bottom of the seventh, when they erupted with a run to put the game on ice. Both team collected eight hits but Tampa committed five errors while FSU had two errors.

Twomey's homer was hit in the fifth inning with the bases empty.

The best hitting effort for the Coach Ralph Matherly, in a pre - game moment, decided to use three pitchers and the choice proved a wise one. George Hehemann, Bobby Walls and Max Long teamed to check the Spartans on eight hits. The losers bunched four of them for and final tournament of the season. Participating for the first time in the Crescent City Invitational held in New Orleans, the highsetters completed their big five years.

After winning four previous tournaments, Florida State had to take a second place behind the strong team from Houston, Texas. Houston, who ranks fifth in the National A.A.U. swept the matches without the loss of a single game.

The Seminoles, who played its more games than the Texans, almost scored the upset of the day when they forced Houston into a hard-fought, overtime battle during the final match. However, the well-rested Houston spikers outscored the Indians, and secured a slim two point difference to win the tournament.

In capturing second place, FSU defeated the New Orleans A and B teams; Mobile, Ala., Pensacola Navy, Memphis Tenn. and Louisiana State University.

Florida State, Mobile, and New Orleans 'A' team ended in a three-way tie for second place. In the double, semi-final playoff games, the highsetters beat both teams to take second place.

FSU was weakened by the loss of spiker Len Kaczmarek, who returned home after the State A.A.U. However, his place was capably filled by Harold Stone.

Coach Bill Odenest was quite impressed with the performances of Stone and Mergens. These boys have improved greatly during this season. They will see plenty of action next year, he said.

All-American spiker, Howard Gould returned to the line-up for the first time in two months. Gould has mastered his ankle injury in the State A.A.U., had been inactive because of complications from the injury. Pi Kappa Phi quickly regained his mid-season form, and speed-headed the Semiole attack with 111 kills for the weekend.

Gould also led the team in total points scored with 47. Spikers Phil Slaton and Bernie McCann followed Gould in total kills and points.

The highsetters have won 56 games while losing only 24 during this season for a .702 pct. Competing in five tournaments, the volleyballers have won four first places and one second place.

Twenty - one new records have also been established this season. The squad has set 11 new team records, while spiker Howie Gould has set 11 new, individual scoring records.

With the close of the volleyball season, several players will be leaving the Seminole line-up. Senior Stan Humphries and Wally Cox, co-captains for the last tournament, will graduate this May. Humphries and Cox ended their volleyball career by being voted the most outstanding set-up men of the tournament. This award placed them on the All-Star Tournament team.

Bermudo Shorts

To the Editor:

A controversial item of men's apparel has come on the scene in the form of Bermuda shorts.

To say that of limiting there is nothing wrong with these shorts, but you should try to confine people around here sometime maybe.

Bermuda shorts have long been acceptable in Europe. The British army in Africa and India wouldn't walking shorts into existence because of the hot climate in those regions. You would think that Americans would take the hint and be cool and comfortable in the summer instead of clinging to outmoded fashions in the heat of summer.

Last summer the fad not undriven on New York City and vacationers brought the fad down south. But about the only place that you will see shorts are on a few mob-collegiate who are personal conclusion about ancient fashions.

According to a student from the University of Miami, the reason Bermuda shorts haven't caught on before is because "Southern diehards aren't willing to part with conforming dress." This brings a question to my mind. Just what is conforming dress? It seems to me that the master would be whatever clothing keeps you the coolest. Within limits, of course. So when the mercury begins to soar, the suckers can shelve the last pair of shorts.

Sincerely,
Bob Gutting

Ort Pledges

Freshmen.

I am President of our class for next year; I want to take myself to carry out the duties of the office to the best of my ability. A higher office could not be given to any college student and I shall try to show my appreciation for the support and confidence you gave me by working through the term of my office, to make sure the best Sophomore class yet, and through the different functions and interest make FSU a greater school.

Our class showed its fine spirit and interest at the polls last Tuesday, where a very fine number voted. If this enthusiasm continues we'll see a much better example for next year's Freshmen than although together too many of the upperclassmen were let us this year.

Congratulations to all of the other officers, and the girls of Sophomore Council. I sincerely believe that by working together and representing all of the members of our class, we can show this school, and certainly Flambeau writers, that we are not planning to be figureheads, as the last week's editorial was aimed as us or not.

Paul Ort.

Club Thanks

Dear Sir,

The members of the Tallahassee Woman's Club would like to express their appreciation to the students, members of the faculty and staff of Florida State University for the beautiful spirit of cooperation during the convention of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs held on your campus last week.

Your thoughtfulness in leaving parking spaces for our visitors and the friendliness and kindness expressed by all of you on every occasion will long be remembered by those who attended the convention.

Sincerely,
Mrs. H. Busbee,
President.
Beth Moor,
Chairman Convention.

Crenshaw Pledges

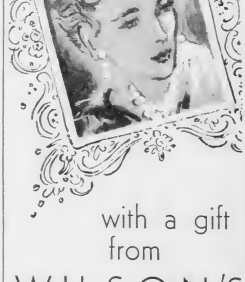
To the members of the Junior Class:

In the recent election you have shown your confidence in me by electing me president of your class. I would like to thank you for your support, and reassure you that I will endeavor to fulfill your wishes.

I realize that we have the potentialities of being a very successful class, but it will take lots of hard work and cooperation from the officers and each class member. To really be a success we must realize the necessity of participation in campus activities.

You have also elected capable people to fill the other class offices. I am sure it is their desire, as well as mine to strive for the best interests of our class and for the betterment of our school.

Thank you again for your loyal support.



Sincerely,
Bob Crenshaw

The co-ed goes on to state that the only reason Bermuda Short wearers are in the minority in America's colleges and universities is because there aren't enough rugged individualists on campus.

Students Polled See Collins Ahead And In Run-Off Lead With Johns

Charley Johns

Bailey Odham

LeRay Collins

By OSCAR JOHNSON

After much discussion of qualifications, platforms and past actions, Florida State University asked BMOC, LMOC and middle-sized men on campus yesterday in an unofficial poll declared that LeRoy Collins should be the next Governor of Florida.

In a small public opinion poll, the students had Collins and Acting Governor Charlie Johns leading in the first primary (to be held today), with Collins winning in the second.

Many who said that they preferred Collins thought that Johns would be a close second preferential winner. Others were equally insistant that Johns' reputed power was in reality found mostly in newspaper editorials which were "climbing on the bandwagon."

Actually, Johns followers were among the most enthusiastic supporters of their cause. Roy Chapman, president of the FSU Johns for Governor Club, gave his reasons for supporting Johns saying, "Johns has supported all appropriations for Florida State University." Chapman added that it was likely that Johns was in favor of granting a charter to FSU.

Graham Owen, president of the FSU Odham for Governor Club was equally sincere in stating the qualifications of Odham. Asked what Odham had in mind for FSU Owen replied, "In talking to him about the problems of Florida State University, he seemed genuinely interested. I am sure he will do all in his power to aid in it's development." He added that Orham was floor leader for the appropriations bill for the funds to build Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

As for the first primary, Owen had Johns and Odham, with Odham winning in the second, Chapman, of the Johns Club, said that Collins would share the runoff with Johns, but that Johns would win in the second.

Loglerly interested in state torial race seems to be based on politics should be the campus platforms more than qualifiparty chairmen, so the Flambeau tions. As for party differences, asked their opinion of the race. the choice is between Democrat, Warren Cobb, recently elected Democrat, or Democrat Grover State Party Chairman, said that Collins is the only qualified of candidate, but that Johns would probably beat him in the runoff.

The candidate with the firmest platform should be the one who proves or disproves the fulfillment of the Florida Staters who were asked their opinio: Collins should win.

10 Seats Filled; Recount Occurs In Gatlin Case

Student Party Takes Majority; State Gets 3, Independents, 2

Ten class offices remaining from the primary were run-off Tuesday with three going to State Party, five to Student Party, and two to independents. Elections officials announced that 1,111 ballots were cast.

Ray Wagner, State Party, defeated Shirley Morgan, Student, by nine votes, 231 to 222, to win vice-presidency of the Sophomore Class.

Caroline Ranieri, Student Party-garnered 245 votes to defeat Barbara Hughes, independent, 218 for the treasury of the Sophomores.

Gloria Sims, Student, 488, June McManus, independent, 442 and Bertie Bunting, State, 430, won the three seats in Sophomore Women's Judiciary. They edged out Katie Griffin, State, 393, Irene Rodriguez, State 326, and Dawn Soup, Student, 421.

Fred Mansfield, State, collected 176 votes to win a seat in Junior Men's Senate. The other contested seat was taken by Ken Gatlin, Student, who topped Rex Hankins by three votes, 121 to 118. Improperly marked ballots were the deciding factor in that race. Elections committee workers sifted through the 1,111 ballots four times to eliminate improper and over-marked illegal ballots.

Jo Bitner, State Party, was low man in the Junior Senate race with 104 ballots.

George Martin, Student, defeated Art Allwood, State, 396 to 284 to win a seat in Senior Men's House of Senate.

Bill Stancil, Student, 62, and Ralf Wagner, State, 53, won the two open seats in Senior Men's Senate, defeating Mac Barnes, Student, 51, and Jack Bowers, State 49.

Elections committee was almost ready to post the official results late before 7 in the evening, when the number count on the Gatlin-Hankins race disclosed a one-vote difference between Gatlin and Hankins. As a matter of course, the committee hand-counted the race and found a number of improperly marked ballots which were discarded.

Dr. Martin Addresses Retailers At Fourth Annual Clinic Here

Dr. A. B. Martin, Florida State University vice-president told an audience at FSU's Fourth Annual Retail Clinic Wednesday the whole economy of the country is keyed to the production and distribution of goods, pointing out that the future of the country is bound up in these problems.

Welcoming speakers from retail and advertising and selling organizations from the South-east here for the annual affair, Dr. Martin turned the program over to professors of the Business departments.

Sponsored by the department of marketing in the school of business, the annual clinic on "Selling More in '54" attracted, according to reports, a flexible but continued audience throughout the day at several hundred students interested in various phases of business.

Speakers on the hourly panels and discussions were W. B. Shearer of Tampa, Lewis P. Gordon, Jr. of Atlanta; Milton R. Self of Montgomery; Charles F. Peterson of Jacksonville; Robert E. Schaefer of Atlanta and Edwin Scully of St. Petersburg. All are prominent in the merchandising or retail field.

According to the opening speaker, Mr. Shearer, "America has a dynamic economy. Business was never better." Mr. Shearer went on to say "The country is full of opportunities for enthusiastic young men and women with the will to succeed." The speaker said he doesn't underestimate the buying power of women. He noted they spend 85 percent of the money in the retail buying field, and many of them are part-time shoppers, their demands serving as a sounding board for the store's buying.

Following each of the six addresses by the businessmen at FSU panel discussions on some field related to the theme was leader for a student. Ten students are the guests signified, during their question and answer periods, that they are interested in various forms of engineering, salary and advancement opportunities.

Mr. Gordon, partner in an Atlanta advertising agency, emphasized the importance of retaining good accounts with his talk winding up the clinic at 4:30 p.m.

Eight Conclude Annual Forum Of Conference

Eight faculty members from the Florida State University School of Social Welfare will wind up a four-day conference tomorrow at the 37th annual forum of the Florida Conference of Social Welfare, held this week in St. Petersburg.

Representing FSU have been Dr. Coyle Moore, Mrs. Margaret Britnell, Miss Dorothy B. Hazer, Dr. Ira Holland and Dr. Earl Koos. Also, Dr. David Levine, Dr. Edwin Harris and Dr. Richard A. Conover.

At the conference Dr. Moore discussed the creation and function of the council on social education while Miss Hazer told of advantages in social work curriculum changes recently. Mrs. Britnell treated developments in the FSU School of Social Welfare.

Dr. Koos led a discussion on the sick and disabled and Dr. Levine spoke on needy people who seek help.

Presenting clinical pictures, Dr. Harris initialed results obtained from marriage and family counseling, while Dr. Conover read an address on "Child-Parent Relationships" giving emphasis to pre-school children.

As president of the Florida Chapter of the American Association of Group Workers, Dr. Holland presided at a meeting held in conjunction with the conference.

ENGLISH EXAMS

The Junior English Examinations will be given May 19, at 9 a.m. in Opperman Music Hall from 2 to 5 p.m. instead of the time originally stated erroneously in Tuesday's Florida Flambeau.

The Flambeau regrets this mistake and hopes to clarify the confusion and inconvenience resulting from the error.

Band Festival Set For FSU May 13 to 15

The State Band Festival, sponsored by the local Chamber of Commerce, will be held for the first time at Florida State University, May 13, 14 and 15.

Thirty - nine high schools throughout the state will be represented, and about 3,000 band students are expected. The Chamber of Commerce will make arrangements for the bands that will not be able to commute to stay in local hotels rather than in private homes as has sometimes been the custom in the past.

The two main features on the program are the marching shows to be held in Campbell Stadium at 8 p.m. May 13 and 14. Each band will be allowed eight minutes on the field in which to perform certain marching routines.

Admission charges for the marching events will be $1 for adults, 50 cents for students and pre-school age children free from all charges. Million it Self of Montgomery; Charles F. Peterson of Jacksonville; Robert E. Schaefer of Atlanta and Edwin Scully of St. Petersburg. All are prominent in the merchandising or retail field.

Insurers Report Toll Of Auto Accidents Highest In History

The worst automobile accident toll in the nation's history, with more than three million fatalities, has been reported by a national insurance company.

The report indicated that excessive speed was the major cause of casualties in 1953 resulting in 13,870 deaths and injuring more than 800,000.

The report also revealed an increase of traffic deaths of 800 over 1952, giving last year a total of 34,500. Injuries, they noted, reached an "all time high" of 2,140,000.

An analytic survey of the recently disclosed 114 Tuesday-to-Monday weekend crashes had resulted in 118 deaths and 4,500 injuries, while an even further breakdown showed 41 per cent of the traffic deaths occurring on Saturdays and Sundays.

Senate Winds-up Year With Note Of Disfavorment

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Credited with such legislation as co-ed visiting hours in the infirmary and paving affiliation with SUSGA, members of the 1953-54 Student Senate filed into their Longmire chambers for the last time as a legislative body Tuesday afternoon.

The group of solons, who have striven to make serious changes in the Florida State University Student Body Constitution this past year, were confronted with President pro-tem Chris Young, presiding over the business of the day wearing a pair of Bermuda Shorts. Young's senior seersucker took the gavel in the absence of Student Body Vice-President Gene Lawler. The recorded speech was heard later in the session.

The meeting, adjourned early, ran alternately serious and light, and left a resolution by James Moore expressing disfavor of the recent university policy requiring 911 married male undergraduates to live on campus for the fall quarter. The 54-man Senate holds its first meeting next Tuesday.

Senate presiding officer Gene Lawler tape recorded his farewell address to the Senate. The introduction, by Chris Young, noted that Lawler was at the moment in Washington in Atlanta.

After several introductory remarks, Lawler complimented the Senate by saying that "the Senate can think of nothing a good job this year." He added, however, that a number of things "have been left" for next year's Senate, among them a survey of the judicial system and a definition of the powers of the organization Committee.

"This will probably be the last Senate," Lawler continued, "that can outspend state party lines."

He cautioned the Senate that parties are "a means to an end not ends in themselves," stressing other values in committee and carrying through ideas.

"Student Senate and the student newspaper should be united," he urged, and added that "unnecessary bickering is waking up to a true reputation for the campus."

At Lawler's request, the Senate repealed the existing funds of the Student Center Committee Chairman Don Teal to the insurance new set.

The Senate passed a bill compiled by Secretary of Finance Bill Stancil, creating an all-time committee, whose job it is to keep the records and audit the financial records of organizations receiving money from the Student Body.

Reports of the committee's findings checks are to be submitted to the Secretary of Finance and the Funds Committee.

Senator Don Teal introduced a resolution read a letter from Dr. Doak S. Campbell, FSU president, acknowledging receipt of resolutions asking for student observers in Board of Control and

Who Will Get Odham's Votes Is Surveyed In Election Chart

By OSCAR JOHNSON

As Charley Johns and LeRoy Collins square off in the final lap of the governorship race, the main question of the election week is: Who will get Realey Odham's 179-odd thousand votes?

Right now, there is any indication. LeRoy Collins will get most of them.

The 179,000 both candidates are worried about now is setting the voters to the polls on the question of the runoff as far as the first primary is not expected, it should be at least large enough to keep the cobwebs off the voting machines. A large vote would help Charley Johns. Collins more than Johns.

Bradley Odham has thrown his active support to Charley Johns, but that doesn't keep Uncle Louis from voting for Charley Johns. What will is shown in the charts accompanying this story.

The acting governor, ("Let's keep Charlie our Governor.") stated after the first primary that Collins couldn't "deliver the vote," because "the people who voted for Odham are the same kind of little people who voted for me."

Who voted for Odham? To answer this question a chart was prepared to show the voting strength of all three candidates:

Sources of votes for each candidate
Collins	Johns	Odham
33.1%	46.3%	22.2%	rural
66.9%	53.7%	67.8%	urban

These percentages were obtained by using the ten counties that had largest vote turnout in the election (Dade, Hillsborough etc.) as representative of the state as a whole. Each of the counties were used as the rural or urban sample. It is considered fairly accurate since all counties with large city population were used.

The chart shows that Collins' support is more similar to Odham's than Johns'.

Another chart shows how the votes were probably counted on the urban and rural votes: (Totals were not complete at this writing.)

Percentage of vote from urban and rural areas
Collins	Johns	Odham
39.1%	66.4%	74.3% rural
60.9%	33.7%	75.7% urban

It can be seen that Collins and Odham counted most heavily on

A REAL LIVE CLOWN! GEE — All thoughts of the big acts going on before them left these youngsters as they crowded wide-eyed and curious around the "Flying High" clown. Scenes such as this dominated the Wednesday night premiere of the student circus as they began their fournight home stand in Dunn S. Campbell Stadium.

Seventh Season Ends Tomorrow Night At Stadium

Troupe Will Travel To Columbus, Ga., For Make-up Show

"Flying High" Florida State University circus, held its formal opening last night at 8 p.m. playing to a capacity crowd of thousands in Campbell stadium.

Tonight and tomorrow night's performances will wind up the seventh annual home show of FSU's famed "big-top." Both shows are set for 8 p.m.

Last night's show was designated "Tallahassee Night" by Circus Coach Jack Hanks, and Tallahassee students were featured in the specialty acts.

Tonight's show will feature West Florida student troupers, and tomorrow's show will spotlight students from South Florida and the East Coast.

Music for the "big-top" is provided by the newly-formed circus band under the direction of Manley Whitcomb.

"The new circus band is made up of 15 student-musician volunteers selected for their dependability and sight-reading ability," Whitcomb said. The band is geared to the show and musicians find their job nerve-racking because it can never be rehearsed as written."

The two-hundred twenty-four stunts are featured in the gigantic 35-act extravaganza.

The big top opened its home show last night with "Red Sails in the Sunset" featuring an aerial anchor and trapping ladders, decked with pretty chrysanthes. It also featured a "ribbon" performance by "The Flying Deacons," the famed aerial trapeze team.

The trapeze rigging was placed parallel to the seating of the auditorium in a departure from tradition.

New feats added this year include a high wire bicycle act, a human cannon ball, and the casting trampoline, a combination trampoline and flying trapeze performed by one of the outstanding circus artists.

The much-photographed Circuettes in precision chorus numbers, dancers a number of routines, in their new red spangled costumes with yellow plumes.

A sky ballet, Ho-Hold leans, pia-wheel teams, a hippodrome specialty featuring breakaway and disappearing chairs, and with their slapstick comedy, moved the show through a series of wonderment to genuine laughter.

The home show marks the end of the circus season, although the troupe will make a trip to Columbus, Ga., May 15 to show that was previously rained out.

Tickets for the performances may be obtained from the athletic business office on West Campus, and the circus will be open with their ID cards and student activity ticket No 30.

Florida State Receives Grant For Pharmacy Research Work

Florida State University is one of 13 educational institutions which recently received grants for research purposes from Dr. Eli Lilly and Company, national pharmaceutical manufacturer.

The grant will be Dr. H. M. Walborsky, assistant professor of chemistry, who has been chairman of the department for 18 months under the sponsorship of the Chemistry Research Fund.

Commenting on the grant, Dr. Walborsky stated that the money has been used in working on here in the Chemistry Department and, after evaluating the results, had decided to keep the grant. "They are very much interested in the work that has been going on here," he added, "and want to help us obtain a rapid solution."

The project has to do with research on the total synthesis of carbohydrates, which is building up carbohydrates from the simplest elements into a product identical to that of the plant.

Assisting Dr. Walborsky on the project will be Bernard Meissner, at present a teaching assistant in the Chemistry Department, but who will become a full-time research assistant thanks to the new funds.

Dr. Walborsky revealed that the purpose of the total synthesis of carbohydrates is to make it possible to produce synthetic sugars "if and when the natural supply is not sufficient for our needs.

Another important thing is to find how sugars are stored, tabelined in the body, and what happens as they are broken down" he concluded.

"One of our tools for studying the metabolism of carbohydrates is radio-active tracers. This means the tracers must be incorporated into the sugar molecules, in order to do this it is necessary to have a good synthetic method in found.

Total synthesis would provide this method, then allow us to obtain a great deal of information concerning the metabolism of sugar in the body."

Dr. Walborsky declared that the funds for the one-year grant would be spent on research assistants and chemicals for the

Meigs To Discuss Advantages Of Joining Alumni Association

The advantages and values of joining an Alumni Association will be discussed by William Meigs, president of the Florida State University Alumni Association. Meigs will make his address to members of the senior class at its supper meeting next Wednesday, May 12, at 5:45 in the South Seminole Dining Room.

Charles McDaniel, vice-president of the senior class, termed the meeting "very important" and also announced that all returning interns are urged to be present at the meeting, which will include discussion of senior class plans for graduation and class projects.

The senior class will also, according to McDaniels, seek to elect permanent officers for the class of 1954. This is important, he explained, because plans have to be made for the class reunion next year for Homecoming.

"The Rebirth of Tony" is the title of a speech by Paul Wyas. Subject of the contest will be Dr. Gregg Phifer of the speech department here.

Preliminaries for the contest were held last Tuesday, May 4. Those finalists are Frank Shaw and Jimmy Joanes. Judges for the preliminaries were Dr. Phifer, Dr. Minnick and Dr Ruber Ellingworth from the speech department of Florida State.

Chairmen Sure 'Party' System Here; Student Controls Senate

By ORCHID ALONSO

With the ballots from the run-off elections still hanging silently over the remains of several tallies, party chairmen of the two campus were quick to predict a successful year of student government with the party system in effect. Votes were here to stay.

Commenting on the outcome of the elections, Jimmy Joanes, chairman of the victorious Student Party, expressed his pleasure at the offices, including 11 seats in Senate, said that he was very well satisfied with the results as a whole.

"I am especially pleased," continued Joanes, "that so many of our senate candidates were elected. This gives us strength for working towards carrying out the Student Party's 22 plank platform, which the students have already voiced their approval of."

Warren Cobb, chairman of the State Party, expressed his opinion saying "I think the students have expressed their approval of our party and the two party system is here to stay."

The State Party, while coupling the three class presidencies, had 5 of their senators elected. Independent candidates claimed the remaining two seats in senate.

Practically refuting a statement of a student government official who stated that "we do not have a two party system; only a two person system," Student chairmen were in agreement that "there is definitely a two party system. I said that even before the convention."

Asked if he thought many candidates were elected merely on the strength of their parties, Cobb, State chairman, commented, "I hope the elections were decided on individual qualifications."

"And," added Cobb, "I hope that next year the party platforms will present controversial issues for the students so that these issues may be brought more sharply into focus for them."

"I think we have a working two party system, and I think Johnny Joanes agrees with me," he concluded.

The Florida Flambeau then asked Joanes whether he believed par-

Sundberg and Sacco will be delegates to the national convention of Pi Kappa Phi this summer at Charleston, S. C.

Issues Getting Lost In Sawdust At Main Ring, McCarthy Circus

As the McCarthy - Pentagon circus roars into its 12th performance we would like to stop for a moment and ponder the question: who and what is being investigated? Somehow the answer got lost in the sawdust.

On Tuesday Senator McCarthy produced a letter from J. Edgar Hoover, warning of a highly dangerous security situation at Fort Monmouth. This touched off an uproar in which Army Counsel Joseph Welch protested, saying it was improper for McCarthy to have such a letter — labeled "secret and confidential" — in his possession, and it looked to him as if the senator was breaking the law.

On Wednesday Counsel Welch derided the letter as "a perfect phony" and "a carbon copy of exactly nothing." The letter was a spy warning the FBI sent to Army intelligence January 26, 1951.

What relevancy this evidence has to do with the original intentions of the investigating committee remains completely hidden to us. It is not an offshoot of the original charges — the claim of Secretary of the Army Stevens that McCarthy and some of his aides sought favored Army treatment for Pvt. Schine, and McCarthy's counterclaim that the Army tried to use Schine as a "hostage" to divert the senator from an investigation of alleged Communists in uniform.

Senator McCarthy was holding inquiries into the Fort Monmouth situation up to the time he was scored by the Army on favoritism charges, and they were put aside until the latter was cleared up. Apparently now, through the scenario can't wait to start the investigation again, and has brought forth the charges into what is an entirely different inquiry. The favoritism afforded Pvt. Schine has no direct or indirect bearing on subversive elements at Fort Monmouth.

Senator McCarthy has not offered any clear-cut reason for producing the FBI letter. It does not answer the favoritism charges, but only diverts the inquiry off on another tangent. His motives in doing this demand wide interpretations, if he offers no concrete cause that it has bearings on the original charge.

We note that President Eisenhower has said the row has lost international prestige for the United States.

However, Senator McCarthy hasn't let this bother him. He said he is going to keep Secretary of the Army Stevens on the stand for many, many more days. If the introduction of an entirely irrelevant letter and the subsequent loss of three days of hearings because of wranglings over this, is any indication of McCarthy's tactics to come, the American people better set their TV sets on the sun north —it looks like a long summer ahead.

Dear Mama Seminole

Dear Mama Seminole:

Braves here have short circuit, cut off pants, have bare wives exposed. Back to good old days like on reservation. Georgie like all Indian think clothes for comfort and like cool, cut, capers.

In vote for big State Chief, Georgie find as usual, the "News"papers of the state gave only newspaper sentiment in prediction instead of real prediction on facts.

Susie and hrave in much trouble again. Susie and hrave caught during wee hours in certain lounge down town with name of tree. As gates clang shut and the warden puts Susie under the bright lights, the whole story comes out.

"Didn't you know that University regulations state plainly that no couple shall wander off from the crowd on beach party?" says warden. "Sure me know," say Susie, "but rule no say can't change crowd at beach. Most crowds do look alike. How did I know where the crowd would go?" Maybe should make rule to stay with crowd while shopping at 10c store. Do you mean that Chief really let maiden stand alone in Wecotti hall after nine? She might stand in dark corner and put on lip paint. Ug!

Love all,
Georgie Seminole.

VISIONS OF VICTORY

Real Conformity: Fadism

By DICK VICTORY

It seems to me that someone on this newspaper should take another approach to this Bermuda short business. Thus I step into the role of Arch-reactionary.

One thing puzzles me about the whole affair. It would be understandable if it were short sleeved shirts they were advocating, but pants, ye gods no! How many people's legs sweat? Look around. How many people do you see with saturated slacks? Not many I suspect, and if you do, it's not sweat, but probably the product of last night's beer.

This should be enough. But since I am a "diehard" I will have to state my case further.

This question does have its seriousness, as I will now disclose. It is this matter of name calling. Who's calling who what and why? Personally, I think the wrong people are calling the names.

Let us examine this from the standpoint of conformity. The people who want these shorts say that it is a group (like myself) of hard-headed conformists that are retarding progress by not succumbing to this new "fad" or whatever they call it. They submit that we "aren't willing to part with conforming dress" and that "there aren't enough rugged individuals on campus".

Actually, THEY are part of a much bigger group of conformists, or followers of the leader, and I add with misgivings, they are better known as Americans.

These are the "fad" followers. It doesn't matter what kind of fad, if presented, they'll follow it. Anything for a change. No matter good or bad. It seems to be the fad these days just to have a fad.

So in reality, it is the heartiest supporters of these Bermudas who are the conformists, and we, the opposition, the rugged individuals who must stand united to face a much greater danger than that of shortwearing, one called "fadism."

For if this be progress, then toss me a toga.

McCarthy Hearing Sign Of Weakness

By BRUCE GALPHIN

The handling of the McCarthy-Army hearing is more than a television spectacle or a one-ring circus. It is another symptom of a weak administration. The weakness has already cost us much prestige abroad and the loss of morale among government workers at home. If continued, it will result in a dangerous lack of confidence on the part of the American public.

Other evidences of a weak executive abound. Lack of action on such domestic issues as conservation of natural resources, preparation against recession, public housing and farm price supports.

Even more dramatic examples of crossed top-level wires have been the conflicting "firm" policies on Indo-China. Vice-president Nixon evidently was exploring public opinion when he said U. S. troops might be used if the French backed out of Indo-China. The reaction has been so adverse that Secretary Dulles has now announced it is unlikely we would intervene.

The point under discussion here is not the wisdom of any one IndoChina policy but rather the confusion the administration has created with the public and the world. A government trend not be indefinite, but presumably it should have a definite point of view on an important problem. Certainly it should not allow its decisions to be swayed day by day by the loudest screamine.

This is not to say the government should ignore the will of the people, but much of the time the government itself molds that will. It must plan for certain problems before most of the public is aware of them. Otherwise it is felling its duty.

The public must look to the government for leadership in matters which are beyond the ken of its needs to have pride and confidence in its representatives.

The McCarthy hearing is perhaps the most unfortunately handled of all current problems because there has never been a more clearcut opportunity for the administration to assert itself.

The Hearst and Scripps-Howard newspapers have turned on their former fair-haired child. He has become too obvious in his tactics, even among those who believe his "ends" are good. The opportunity existed to crush McCarthy.

Morale among government employees was and is at an all-time low due. The need existed to crush McCarthy.

The Army more or less had the goods on the man. The material existed to crush McCarthy.

But what has happened? The Army has been caught unprepared to answer questions that obviously were coming to arise. Its witnesses have presented confused testimony. It has allowed irrelevant but sensational testimony to be introduced into the hearings.

Reporter from Washington say that the Pentagon staff is highly demoralized.

What does all this mean? The harm has been done, and much of it cannot be undone. The only thing left to do is that which has no confidence in its administration is going to change that administration at its first opportunity.

THE BOOKLIST

Marlowe, The Toughest Of Them All

By BOB FOLSOM

In the field of mystery fiction with its hard-boiled, wise-cracking private detective, there are only a few recognized masters. Dashiell Hammett started the trend back in the late 20's with the Continental Op, climaxing in 1930 with the private eye Sam Spade and The Maltese Falcon, a classic for every-body-be hard-boiled mystery writers.

Raymond Chandler came on the scene in the late 30's and early 40's, with Philip Marlowe, a tough-talking, Lee Marvin P. I. who has in the past dozen years appeared in eight novels and numerous short stories. The latest, THE LONG GOODBYE (Houghton-Mifflin Co.) is his best, and Marlowe, now 42 years old, is still battling evil aides, still wisecracking at the barrel of a gun pointed at him, and still turning blonde heads when he walks by.

Here is a sample of dialogue after Marlowe gets one of the "big men" in The Long Goodbye:

"Well?" She asked me quietly. "How did you get on with Paul?"

"Fine. He explained civilization to me. I mean how it looks to him. He's going to let it go on for a little while longer. But it better be careful and not interfere with his private life. If it does, he'll just pick up the phone call to God and cancel the order."

In his present caper, Marlowe befriends Terry Lennox, a polite drunk with white hair and a weak face. Terry is the ex-wife-beating alcoholic newspaperman's favorite hard-boiled mystery writers.

Marlowe gets up in Mexico one place, and believing Lennox is innocent, Marlowe helps him skip off to Mexico in their plane. Marlowe is grilled by the police, and learns Lennox has committed suicide. He receives a $5,000 bill from Lennox supposedly mailed just before his suicide. This should have closed the case, but a lot of people keep their fingers in the caper, and Marlowe pursues the story to its surprise ending, a punch characterized in all of Chandler's past works.

It is understandable that many shy away from mysteries because of the run of the mill jobs leading the newsstalls today. However, the reader who picks up Chandler for the first time, will find him different, and certainly explosive.

As one writer said, the world of the private eye created by Hammett and Chandler is closed, controlled and static with the detective the center in mystery writing in which people could say "A mathematical scarred face, they can never be false." The people in their world would be more likely to say, "I'll be seeing you," but never want to turn the lights off at night.

Chandler has grown older, and in the process, Marlowe, too. The latter has grown mellow, and prone to take more hardfire from the hard guys, although in the end he never gets any more than he gives. The plot in THE LONG GOODBYE seems to flow at a more gentle pace, and some of the characters and scenes isn't quite the same. Nevertheless where can you find better than Chandler today? Until someone does, Long Live Marlowe!

Hit Parade Polls Aren't Always Right

By DAVID DREIS

The ad has finally blown off in the music industry.

For quite a number of years every disc jockey in the nation was playing a 'hit parade' of records based on the 'Hit Reports.' Now, the reports are being checked for accuracy.

Disc - jockeys weren't and aren't the principal cause of inaccuracy in the 'hit' lists, the numerous surveys which many times came up with different answers were the songs. One survey is the Lady Esther survey for the Hit Parade radio and television programs. They seem to be the most accurate and, in general, incompetent.

Of course, the Hit Parade has to have enough time to prepare a skit to dramatize the 'hit' of the week. Even if a newcomer topples an oldtimer, then there's more work to be done. It would seem that this program waits a week or two before it finally puts out a 'hit' tune. This is wrong and gives a false impression to followers of the weekly simit.

Three surveys are followed religiously by those interested in getting fairly accurate reports. These three are in the trade magazines, Billboard, Downbeat and CashBox. Whenever you hear these references named, it's pretty safe to assume it's accurate. Variety Magazine also has a listing in Florida.

Billboard's great following comes from the people who spin the top ten. To answer the question "Who Makes Hits" as it is called, you must register your station with the magazine. Because of any mistake is made, you can be arrested by the police.

Downbeat's following consists of those directly associated with the music world, disc jocks follow it to some degree, but not the main. It is the musicians who read it most.

Cashbox has been paying off in the last few months for a long time. They follow it week by week and usually abide by their rulings. Because of all three, the ratings are compiled from the weekly reports of sales, juke box plays, deejay spins and radio and television use. In Variety, sectional hits compile the ratings.

As for 'down-the-line' records that singers seem to sell rarely in the history of music has a smart shot to top with a million sales. Certainly "White Christmas" is the best-seller but over a period of months and years. The 'gold record' given the disc jockey of the top sons is usually a gimmick.

So — remember — when you hear 'The Hit Parade' programs floating all over your dial listen for the source. It means quality and accuracy.

EXTRA NOTES

Benny Goodman who refused to have his name associated with any film biography, changed his mind after hearing the Benny Miller Story and has agreed to the filming of his life. For those who saw the Glenn Miller epic, a sharp clarinetist with the Miller band was seen auditioning for Ben Pollack's band. Pollack's real name was Benny Goodman, but Benny asked for the name change in favor of Benny's being talked about to de Goodman.

Tex Beneke, long associated with the Miller band, refused to have his name linked with his former boss in the biog. He claims he wants to live in the shadow of Glenn Miller and has recently abandoned his old leanings in favor of a new style. This new type must be really something . . . he was rumored from the RCA-Victor roster. Coral now claims him.

Christmas Day Andrews's Jerry Gray and Ralph Flanagan (also Dauter-Finnegan) are pretty proud to be associated with the pope master, but it is doubtful any of people to make the music.

Letters to the Editor

Gatlin Thanks

Dear Sophomores:

I want to take this chance to express my sincere appreciation to the Sophomore class for the confidence you placed in me. It is my pledge to represent you, the students in the Senate.

Once again, thanks

Sincerely,
KEN GATLIN.

Massey Thanks

Dear Junior classmates.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for the honor you bestowed upon me in the past election. This is the highest honor that I have ever had, and I want each of you to know that I sincerely appreciate it. Although it is impossible for me to thank all of you who supported me individually, I would like for you to accept this as a personal note of thanks.

I will try to uphold the dignity and accept the responsibility of this office. With your cooperation, we can make our class the class of '55. one of the best ever to graduate from Florida State University.

As you know our campus is growing very rapidly. To keep up with this growth and to keep our school "the best in the South", we, as Seniors, must take the leading role in all of the campus activities. It is my desire and hope also, I know, that the lower classmen, especially the freshmen, will look upon our class as a model for the FSU student. With your full support we can take this step to make our campus one of the most desirable in the nation and then and only then can we say that the class of '55 is the best ever to graduate from FSU.

For my opponent, Bob Canada, I would like to say that he fought a good, hard, and clean campaign.

Again I want to say "thanks" to all my many friends and classmates who made this honor possible for me.

Sincerely,
Harry Massey.

Rugged Individual

To the Editor:

Many thanks to the Plainbelt Air and Flare for the article about Bermudas' in Tuesday's paper. I am one of the few "nonconformists" who has the dare to put personal comfort before ridicule and censure. Recently I went into town, and almost disrupted traffic when I appeared on campus I hear remarks to the effect of "where's your raincoat?" etc. This goes to prove that on this campus there are very few rugged individualists, and that we have a number of die-hard Southerners who would rather broil in trousers than tolerate any radical change in clothing style. As far as I'm concerned,

IS HERE ALABASTER

Is Screaming Illactions Almost Over

By AL PIERCE

Mmmm . . . so! Is all over mid-shirting, nose-hitting and vote-swapping for another year. Is creep mixed-up slime meter finally sent into orbit under cloud of campaign dust to consider more serious business of most parties: track meets and circuses. Is ending up, as prefered, of plans changed-to-yeartables, some in little, some in big pieces. Campus shouldn't forget little pieces of details planned in good ground this year minus grow up next year into big new plants. Anyway, is now big hand-shaking all around and everybody gonna kiss and make up, huh? . . . is something to be thankful for we can still elect each other without something now running up and clapping up in clink for opening mouth . . .

Look wot's going on all over place . . .

Is big noses all over place screaming "Watch out! Is H-bomb gonna splatter humanity all over jolat . . ."

Also Washington A-bomb screaming we should help Frenchmen scrapping about two lousy feet of scrub-jungle in Indochina . . . "Give It Back to the Mau-Mau!" . . . 'fa good slogan, huh? . . . Is composing new song . . . "Is a Long Way to Indochina" . . . Is new theater of war gonna call it UNCLE SAM'S CHINESE THEATER . . . only trouble is, ain't gonna be no Shanley Tremplin sticking fingers in front door cement out there . . .

Is also screaming big nose bunch politicians in Florida about illactions . . . is always screaming Collins "Illact me and your kids gonna get square deal (or meal) in school" . . . is screaming Odham "Illact me and I'll gonna give you super highway and Two-Egg, non-stop" . . . is screaming Johns "Illact me and I'll gonna shut up big noses like Odham and Collins" . . . Hmmm . . . is thinking they illact all right, and then turn around and look, who's tapping them on shoulder . . . Is thinking Miami Beach-class man dressed in middle-class clothes asking Vicky gonna quit taking the food he eats, the shoes he wears and the movies he goes to . . . and the wife his kids drink . . .

Is beating Dean of Women considers sin committing social suicide who wear Bermuda Short shorts . . . Hmmm . . . is thinking sissy kids should give o look in SEVENTEEN, MADEMOISELLE or maybe CHARM soon . . . shell see bankers' daughters, doctors' kids and politicians' offsprings sporting through pages of these reputable magazines in everything from Bikini bathing suits to pink bestards . . . All the kids here want, nice Lady, is to meet Northern gals hellwry in Bermuda . . . is it indecent to wanna be comfortable in 90 degree heat?

Yankees, BSU Tied For First

The Sweet Shop Kids, better known as the Yankees, ended the always powerful Baptist Student House have tied for the leading team in the Intramural Dorm Softball League.

In the final games, the broad-shouldered Yankees found their wits late in the game, to overcome the underdog Florida Hall Gators, 17-5. Pitching for the Gators was T. J. Jarvis "boy nothing", and opposing Jarvis for the Yankees was "Glass Arm" Jimmy Oler, of Basketball fame.

Oler pitched a three hit ball game, Jarvis hit two clean hit singles, and Kingery connected for a Texas Leaguer. Besides pitching a great game, Jim smacked a two run homerun in the top of the 4th inning to score the 13th and 14th runs of the game. Poor fielding helped the victory, as only five of the Yankees runs were earned ones.

Yanks vs. Sr. Hall, BSUVs, TEP, Monday

The BSU finished off the Rebels in the last night game of the 1954 softball season Wednesday.

Here is the final standings:

TEAM	W	L	Pct.
YANKEES	4	0	1.000
BSU	4	0	1.000
TEP	3	1	.750
SR. HALL	3	1	.750

Classy Miami Hurricanes And Seminole Thinclads Face Sat.

Hurdles And 440 Top Events

By KEN KINGERY
Flambeau Sports Editor

The Florida State Seminole Thinclads will be host to the classy Miami Hurricanes this Saturday at 10 a.m. at the West Campus oval.

On paper the Hurricanes look a shade better than the Seminoles but since the times are so close, Coach Miller Watson could pull the most closely run meet out of the hands of the favorites.

Every FSU fan should be at hand to watch what will be the closest hurdle event of the season. Miamian Bill Bennett, freshman standout and earnest winner for the Miami combine, will be on hand to compete. Another sideline an these certain match, FSU's Joe Davis, and Charlie Watson, placed in one two order behind State High School champion Bennett. Both Davis and Watson will be pushing Bennett all the way to the finish. Bennett, who has been inconsistent in the 120 yard course, may find two Seminole assiforms ahead of him if he doesn't watch his step.

In the lows and highs, FSU will enter Watson and Highdell Veazey Brown will chart the highs with them and Davis will be raring to go in the lows. Bennett and Clarke will be the Hurricanes' entrys.

FSU star "everything," Jimmy Castell, will either be breaking his 49.4 record in the 440, or will come mighty close to it, as Miami's famed Wahoos, and Brown will be jumping the bar in the high jump event.

Castell and Carlos will be favorites in the broad jump. Seemer, transfer student will run tomorrow if the Dade County coach will give the okay. Seemer, freshman distance man, has run very little this season, but will be ready for the 1855 slate next year, for FSU.

The 880 yard run, plus a new event for Larry, the two mile run. Jarrett will also run the two-mile with Hounslea plus the one mile contest.

In the weights, FSU Captain Carlos Fraundorfer will be teamed with Mike Smith and Jerry Jones in an attempt to cop the shot-putt. Carlos, Sonny Titus, and Bob Orenn will be slinging the discus, while Miami's Crossman will be the strongest competer for the Florida State Boys.

Back to the Seminole squad, Jalevin thrower Ron Weaver, will boost the chances in this event plenty. Other throwers will be Dary Robbins, and Mike Smith. Carl Orenn and Strickland will be in the pole valut event and Strickland and Brown will be jumping the bar in the high jump event.

FSU Netters Finish Season With 13-5 Record; Kennedy Sets New School Record

The Florida State Crack Tennis Team has finished their regular season with a very fine and respectable 13-5 record.

Dave

Lettermen Announced

Starring for the Seminole Netters was dependable Dave Kennedy, who has set a new school four-year record in his three years on the FSU Varsity Team.

Dave, a sandy, haired Junior, will be hard to top a record that will be hard to top next year. Dan Soda, holder of the former school record of 38 wins in four seasons of play, gived way to another name on the University's record books, as Dave has accounted for 39 wins already.

In the four year at FSU he was the only Florida State Tennis player to win a single game from the once then National Champions, the Rollins Tars. Winning 13, and losing three for the season "That season was my best. I seer, to get worse every season," this was the only comment Dave had on his new record. The next season, Dave came through with 15 wins, and only two lone defeats. This season he whipped 13 opposing netters while failing to five.

The Tennis Team has announced their lettermen for the 1853-54 season, they are as follows: Captain Hal Strauss, Tom Cundy, Dave Kennedy, Jack Egan, Shelby Creagh, Tom Morgan, Don Wyly, Joe Harris and James Crowther.

WRITERS SOUGHT

All students interested in working on Tulli-Ho, Florida State University yearbook next year are asked to attend a staff meeting next Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Tulli-Ho office, 6th Floor Longmire Building.

Those not able to attend should call Tom Woods, Ext. 4841 between 2 and 5 p.m. weekdays.

School Holds Lab To Improve Reading

A Summer Reading Laboratory for colleges students who want to read better and faster will be conducted by Western Reserve University's Reading Improvement Service on the Cleveland school's campus from June 21 through July 31.

Sharpening reading skills and improving study methods is the purpose of the Laboratory. Students in similar programs have frequently doubled reading speed while maintaining or improving comprehension.

The Laboratory method will permit each student to work on his individual reading problems as well as participate in group work. Tuition for the six week program will be $70 per student.

Seekers may apply for registration forms by writing to Adult Reading Center, Western Reserve University, 2029 Adelbert Road, Cleveland 8, Ohio.

EXPENSE STATEMENTS

All candidates elected in the first primaries for run-off elections are requested to submit expense statements by Tuesday at noon p.m. in the Student Body Government offices second floor Longmire, announced Betty Jo Grubbs, secretary of elections.

The expense estimates are in addition to the estimates that were filed preceding the elections. According to Grubbs, no one has filed yet.

No elected official, it was noted, will receive a certificate of election unless this request is complied with.

FSU Nine Face Fla. Southern, Today

Back on the winning path after a mid-season slump, Florida State's baseball Seminoles wrap up a 23-game schedule today and tomorrow against the Moccasins of Florida Southern.

Single games are set for 2 p.m. Friday and 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Coach Ralph Matherly's Seminoles will try to improve on their 3-3 record against Florida opponents and 12-5 overall reading. State swept two games from Tampa last week after dropping the first four to Steisen.

Today's clash will be the 15th in the FSU-Florida Southern diamond series. The Seminoles own an 8-6 edge in the rivalry.

Matherly plans to work four of five pitchers—Max Long Jim Atwood, Hans Wenzke, Forrest Brown and Bobby Waits—in the two-game series.

Four Seminole regulars are now hitting above the .300 mark. They are shortstop Custer Mills, first baseman Fred Twomey, centerfielder Bob Higdon and second baseman Billy Campbell.

Interviewers Seek Eligible Personnel

Interviewers next week at Florida State University will seek graduating seniors for positions next year. American Red Cross representatives, YMCA and U. S. Navy Mine-Counter Station personnel will be on hand, said the Placement Office yesterday.

Men and women from all schools of the University will be interviewed May 10, by a representative of the Young Men's Christian Association. Also on May 10, a representative from the U. S. Navy Mine-Counter Measures Field Station of Panama City will see all engineers, physicists and electronics majors.

Mr. George Handfrom will be here May 13, according to the Placement Office, to see students interested in Red Cross work.

All students interested in Job Interviews should call the Placement Office, 5281, or go to Westcott 303 for an appointment.

Johns Asks State To Observe Hospital Week May 9 to 15

Acting Governor Charley Johns issued a proclamation recently, naming May 9 to 15 as "Florida Hospital Week."

In the proclamation, Johns stated "I urge that the citizens of Florida join with me and people throughout the world in observing Hospital Week and show their appreciation to hospitals whose dedicated services are necessary and important to all of us."

Special events in Florida Hospitals will mark the week, according to Jack Monahan, executive secretary of the Florida Hospital Association. Open houses and a program of acquainting people with the workings of the hospitals will be featured in all institutions throughout the week, he said.

SCIENCE LECTURE

Recent Developments in Mass Spectrometry were discussed last night by Dr. Russell Baldock of the Oak Ridge National Observatory. Dr. Baldock spoke at the weekly physics seminar sponsored here by the department.

The lecture was held in 124 Science at 4:45 p.m. and refreshments were served at 4:30 preceding the talk.

Meigs To Discuss

To be discussed, averred McDaniel is the Buffet Supper-Class Day, Baccalaureate, Graduation, the graduation dance, and any other problem that might come up concerning graduation.

Meigs, a graduate of the class of '48, it was stressed, was a member of Gold Key, and was mentioned in Who's Who in America-in Colleges and Universities. During his undergraduate years, Meigs served as Chief Justice of the University Court and also to News Editor for The Florida Flambeau.

After graduation, Meigs served as assistant manager of the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce.

Who Will Get

the urban or city vote, while Odham was very strong in the rural areas.

Based on the incomplete total of 64,969 votes cast at the writing, the urban counties counted 62% of the total. For this reason it appears that Collins will get a large majority of the votes previously cast for Odham.

It seems that the voters who liked Odham "Does a man have to sell his soul to be governor?" also liked Collins' "Let's carry Florida Forward together." while Johns "The man of action" stood by himself, though he got the majority.

The reason for this is about as obvious as History Building Lecture Series at 8 p.m. Unless it could be the similarity of the platforms. Collins and Odham had many of the same planks in their platforms.

Predicting the winner of this race is like playing Russian Roulette—you're liable to lose. However, the statistics show that Collins is more likely to get Odham's votes than Johns.

This writer apologizes to Warren Cook for misquoting him in a story in the Flambeau last issue as saying that he expected Johns to win in the second primary. Warren stated that he thought Collins would win.

Dear Students,

On behalf of the Student Party I would like to express appreciation to you for your support and votes in the recent university elections. The election of so many of our candidates will give us strength to further our platform—20 planks for which you, the students, have voiced approval. The realization of these 20 planks is a group goal of the elected Student Party candidates. Our success in furthering this goal and in providing you with a sound, representative student government will be our "thanks" for your confidence in us. Looking forward to a year of progress, I remain

Sincerely,
Jim Joanos
Student Party chairman.

qual distribution of race track scholarship money to both the "white" state universities.

The standing committee investigating Universities-sponsored insurance for students was extended to permit it to file a report with the next Senate.

After the Senate dissolved in disagreement over Chairman Carey's refusal to identify anonymous The Florida Flambeau columnist in executive session, the meeting was adjourned.

Voting was given the identity of "Georgie Peanuts" by FLAMBEAU editor Bruce Galphin at an earlier meeting, and who subsequently withdrew his resolution demanding the columnist's identity, announced that he had sworn affidavits to verify the report of the name of the correspondent who is known to but a few.

The Senate also unanimously requested the Senate be called back into session to hear a resolution asking that on-campus housing be compulsory for freshmen. Action for the resolution when he only "requested" to live in university housing.

The Senate however refused to consider it, "since it takes a 24 hour notice for special sessions."

Conference Gives Outstanding Award

Dr. Earl L. Koos, professor of Social Welfare here, is a winner of the first Lowell A. Ames Award at the Eastern States Health Education Conference in New York City.

The award, presented by a mayor Douglas Ensminger, is for participation of social scientists in health research and public health and welfare in behalf of a Negro section bookseller who helped initiate such concern for the voluntary aspects of health in the nation.

The citation given with the award commended Dr. Koos "for his outstanding work in promoting the cause of public health through research, writing and consultation with health workers."

The award is also presented biennially in the social scientist considered to have made the most significant contribution in the field of public health.

Dr. Koos joined the FSU faculty in August, 1953 after 16 years of public health work in New York. He has worked with nurses, health educators and other public health groups in that area and has taken part in the last four meetings of the American Health Association.

tisan conflicts would arise in Senate.

"The parties will definitely organize in Senate to get their platforms across, but due to the fact that the two platforms are so similar, conflicts may not arise. Time can only tell."

Joanos revealed that he had contacted many of the Student Party's elected officials, stating, "I already see good indications that we have a strongly representative government. They seem to have that interest and initiative so necessary for serving the student well."

Joanos added his congratulations to the non-student Party candidates and winners, stating "I would like to congratulate the opposing party's candidates and the independent candidates for their high-spirited and well-contested campaign."

A survey prepared by a Flambeau staff member revealed some interesting facts about the past class elections. The State Party scored 71 per cent of the offices filled, electing 43 per cent of their candidates. The State Party ran 4 candidates.

The Student Party, with 55 candidates, filled 42 per cent of the seats, and sported a 48 per cent winners margin.

Surprisingly enough, the independents, although they only ran 9 candidates elected 40 per cent of their candidates. There were ten independents in the elections

A complete breakdown in the various offices shows the State Party with five senators, seven class offices, including the state presidents, five seats in judiciary three in Black Court and none in the Traffic courts.

The Student Party fared equally as well offices with seven winners, but took an overwhelming majority of the other offices, including 11 senators, five in House Court; the two Traffic court seats; and 12 seats in Judiciary.

A comparison with this year's election and last year's, shows a nearly 100 per cent increase in candidates. Last year, in the class elections. The Student Party's full slate of 6) was opposed by only 7 independents, for a total of 65. This year's elections saw 114 students seeking election.

In the Student Body election, the increase was not as great. Last year saw The Student Party and three independents for a total of 18 offices. This year, the State Party's 10 candidates swelled the fiscures in the first election to 25. There were no independents in that election.

The award was based on the selection of a suitable interior decoration of the LAvant cottage on Magnolia Point. The students of Home and Family Life did the cottage and submitted plans for redecorations as a class project this year.

'Executive Suite' Finishes Run At Florida Today and Tomorrow

Executive Suite, with one of the greatest all-star casts ever assembled for a single motion picture will finish its run at the Florida Theater today and tomorrow.

Based on Cameron Hawley's best seller novel about the skyscraper jungles of American 'Big Business," it unfolds a dramatic story of a business dynasty and the men and women who become entangled in a web of intrigue rivalry and conflict when the head of a giant corporation dies.

Heading the list of well-known stars is William Holden, June Allyson, Barbara Stanwyck, Fredric March, Walter Pidgeon, Shelley Winters, Paul Douglas and Louis Calhern. Supporting players are Dean Jagger, Nina Foch and Tim Considine.

Starting sundays at the Florida Ride Clear of Diablo starring Audie Murphy, Dan Duryea, Susan Cabot and Abbe Lane. Although this picture is dominated by a relentless gun-blazing manhunt, it is the explosive play-off between the personalities of Audie Murphy and Dan Duryea that provides this ever popular type of entertainment with a great change of pace.

The town of Diablo is the real villain of this picture. When the newly deputized Murphy comes to Diablo in search of the man who murdered his father and brother he has a head-on collision with Duryea, a gun-fighter whose trademark is a sardonic laugh.

The two feminine members of the starring quartet, Susan Cabot, who injects considerable allure into the part of a woman torn between loyalties to a scheming uncle and to the man he had victimized, and Abbe Lane, a glamorous saloon girl, add the final touch to this technicolor saga of the west.

Avid western film fans can appreciate the added values that distinguished a real ass of the range from the ordinary "oater" or "horse opera" will enjoy RIDE CLEAR OF DIABLO at the Florida and GUN BELT, which is playing at the State today and tomorrow.

Gun Belt tells the tale of a reformed outlaw George Montgomery, who, having placed himself on the side of the law, finds himself at grips with his former evil companions. Betrayed by his own brother and, with a nephew he has raised turning against him, he has only one source of hope and courage—the girl he loves, Helen Wescott.

This film is loaded with real he-men, all he-men and heavies in the Edward Small production in Technicolor released through United Artists are well over six feet tall.

Playing supporting roles is the fast rising young actor, Tab Hunter. John Dehner and Wilton Graff.

Jeff Chandler, who has battled almost every type of enemy in almost every corner of the globe, takes on the Morocco marauders of 1800 in the new Pasha Universal - International's Technicolor adventure which opens Sunda, and will play through Tuesday at the State co-starring Rhonda Fleming.

The theme of a desperate love affair dominates Yankee Pasha from the time fur-rich piper Chandler emerges from the wilderness to win the heart of Miss Fleming through a quirk of fate. Rhonda sets sail for Marseilles before the Yankee can declare his love. Following her he finds that she has been taken captive by Moroccan pirates. This is where the fun begins.

Usage Of Language Stressed For Freshmen At Rensselaer

TROY, N. Y. (I. P.)—An experimental shift in emphasis from the traditional method of teaching freshman English will take place at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute next fall. Historically, English has been taught in relation to the classics, with emphasis placed upon correctness in writing and in the use of words. The theory behind the new methods but only insofar as they lend themselves to an all-out emphasis on analyzing and understanding the uses of language.

Sticking to many well-known masters as models, the course breaks down the uses of language into four categories: informing (reporting, history-writing; presenting novels, poetry); persuading (advertising copy, political speeches); directing (technical writing).

Readings in the course cover a wide-thumbed range of material, including newspapers and magazines as well as literary classics. Writing assigned to this end gives them practice in its uses.

Professors Wentworth K. Brown, Douglas H. Washburn and Sterling Olmsted, department head, all of whom collaborated in designing the course, believe that writing carried on in the normal course of events in other courses can also be utilized in practice. Meanwhile based on the assumption that understanding something helps a person to master it, the course will emphasize the uses of language and aim at giving freshmen a clear understanding of each use.

A pilot course conducted last semester gave strong evidence that this procedure strengthens the ability to handle language. Since practically all of man's intellectual endeavors are carried out in language, it is also pointed out, the course should influence a student's abilities in social, business and other ways.

It is believed that understanding the theory of language will be especially helpful to students of science and engineering. The course aims to relate in the students understanding each three forms as poetry and engineering reports and provides a background for all students.

Unlike traditional courses, the course as assigned for reading are the choices only because they are significant to their times. Unlike leading writers who will provide good examples of the uses of writing are chosen.

Debaters Announce Trippo, Woods, Varsity Managers

Norma Trippodo and The Woods became junior and senior debate managers it was announced recently. Trippodo and Woods have represented Florida State at state-wide and inter-state meets this past year.

Debate managers are chosen annually by members of the varsity squad to represent them before boards, committees, forensic plannings and fiscal announcements. This is Norma Trippodo's first year as a varsity debater. It is Tom Woods's second year.

Representing FSU in Kalamazoo, Michigan at a Tau Kappa Alpha conference, Freshman Trippodo has come home with honors in such contests as the Gulf States Speech Festival and the Alabama Discussion conference. She represented FSU in the same tournament last month.

Woods attended the TKA tournament in Louisiana last year and the Southern Speech Conaress in South Carolina. He received superior ratings as a debate, oral interpretation and committee participation. This is his annual TKA attending the theory of language will be especially helpful to students of science and engineering. The course aims to relate in the students

Meyer Conducts Installation Rites For New Officers

Nimkoff, Carothers Speak To Gathering; Conferences Follow

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

The 1953-54 term of Student Government officers came to an end Monday night. In brief ceremonies held in Longmire Auditorium next year's Student Body and class officers were sworn in by University Court Chief Justice Jerry Meyer.

Speeches by outgoing president Malon Carothers, incoming chief executive Pete Nimkoff, and Mr. and Mrs. Voyd Gaither, Dean of Men, Organizations, highlighted the occasion.

Carothers, reading the qualities of leadership, expressed confidence in Nimkoff and urged continued progress in student government. Nimkoff promised opportunity for progress, telling the new officers that "faith in student government is justified."

A similar note was added by Mrs. Gaither who intimated that student government might eventually be a complete control of student business when it "is willing to accept the responsibility which goes with such requests."

Following the installation, Mortar Board and Omicron Delta Kappa co-sponsored a set of leadership conferences dealing with the executive, judicial, legislative, and organizations branches of student government. The conferences later made reports to the entire group present.

In his outgoing address, Carothers told the elected officers that "you people have still undescribable quality that we others so look to you for leadership, or you wouldn't be here tonight. You already exert an influence on the student body. As leaders you should strive to be such leaders that there will be little left for us to do later because you were here."

Too often," he said, "political expressionary and not the interests of right or wrong determines the attitude of a certain image. We need leaders who are courageous and not cowardly. Leaders who are willing to stand up and be counted for the right as they see that right."

Quoting Mark Twain, he continued "Always do right. This will please a few people and amaze the rest."

He reminded the officers that "you were elected to lead the student body as well as follow their will."

The outgoing president urged progress, but cautioned against matching "mere motion" for progress. He admonished the group that a good leader's service is "unselfish," and that "Personal satisfaction comes from the sense of a job well done, not from the amount of publicity you get."

Adding that student government has left many problems to be done, he commented, "But we realize that the job of making student government better for each one is never finished. I have no doubt of your interest in doing this job to Peter Nimkoff," he added.

I believe that he will make next year's student government the best we've ever had. But school grows in size, student government must grow in maturity and in the ideals which shape it supplies to the student body," concluded Carothers.

In opening his address, Nimkoff stated firmly that "a faith in student government is justified, and the standard body can benefit from their confidence in accomplishment."

Commending the outgoing officers, he said, "I do not hope to surpass their achievements, but if shall strive to equal them."

He commented that he would like to see student government "get the pace" for the University's progress, and added that student government "need not demand respect."

It can create its own dignity," he said, "by proving that student government is worthy."

TEP Chapter Formally Installed In Ceremonies Saturday Night

Tau Epsilon Phi, national social fraternity, formally installed their latest local chapter at special ceremonies Saturday night at Florida State University. The addition of the "TEP's" brings the total number of campus fraternities to fifteen.

Following a banquet in the Floridan Hotel celebrating the occasion, Dr. Theodore Levitas of Atlanta, grand chancellor of the national organization, formally handed the charter to Jerry Klonsky, president of the new chapter.

Cary Fitzgerald, "Should FSU Provide Technical Courses in Study?"; Virginia Parker, "Should FST Students be Allowed to Elect All That's Taught Courses"; Bill Twyford, "Should Students Be Allowed Only in Professional Training Be Exempted From General Education Requirements?"

Norma Tripodo, "Should A Course In Communism Be Taught At FSU?"; Charlie Davis, "Should Qualified Negroes Be Admitted to FSU to Take Courses Not Available at Florida A&M?"; Bruce Fletcher, "Should College and University Professors Dabble on the Curves?"

Astell Kennedy, "Should a Course In How to Study Be Provided at FSU?"; Bonnie Bratton, "Had Does Academic Freedom In Colleges and Universities Mean?" Terry Barrow, "Can a College Should Study?"

Tom Barrows, "Should a Student Be Required to Maintain a C Average for His First Year's Work in Order to Graduate?"; Carol, "What Contribution Can a Junior College Make to Higher Education in Florida?" Bert Nimkoff, "In What Fields of Service Do FSU Men Feel Commount Contribution to the State?"

Margaret Scallind, "Should FSU Provide Courses in Communist Activities?" J F. Griffin, "Should a Course in Social Relations Be Provided at FSU?"; Duncan Gray, "Should a Course in Religion Be Provided at FSU?"

Geronne Jones, in the FSU Home Code Words Whilst" and "Coster" Mills, "Should FSU Have Courses in Drinking Liquor?"

Judges for the contest will include Dr. Wayne Minnick, associate professor of Speech, Dr. Doyle Fuller, associate professor of Speech and Edna Hollingsworth, of the Speech Department.

Varied Topics Slated Tonight For Speakers

The department of Speech this week announced the names of students who will compete in the preliminaries of the annual Intramural Debate Tourney, slated for 7 p.m. tonight in 213 Hazel.

Entries include Jimmy Joanos, "Should Fraternities Be Abolished?"; Theodore Levitas of Atlanta, grand chancellor of the national organization, formally handed the charter to Jerry Klonsky, president of the new chapter.

On hand to witness the ceremonies were a large delegation of Tau Epsilon Phi from the University of Florida, Dr. Louis Carson, FSU Dean of Men and other faculty members, the presidents of each social fraternity on the "TEP" campus, instrumental in founding the chapter here.

During the presentation, Dr. Levitas thanked the Florida State University Inter-Fraternity Council and the FSU administration for their aid in establishing the fraternity.

After the presentation, Dr. Carson spoke briefly expressing his best wishes on behalf of the University.

Chapter members of the fraternity include Klonsky; Nelli Barlow, vice-chancellor; Jack Cutler, scribe; Joel Lurie, treasurer; Dava Lobling, historian; and Harry Berman, pledge master.

Also, Larry Abt, Don Trombley and Sid Silver.

DUVAL TEACHERS INTERVIEWED

The Office of Vocational Guidance and Placement has announced that a representative of the Duval County Board of Public Instruction will be on campus tomorrow to interview prospective teachers.

Students will be interviewed for both elementary and secondary education positions.

Flambeau Staff Changes Faces For 1954-55

By OSCAR JOHNSON

The 1954-55 Florida Flambeau staff this week began preparing for its work next year by taking over publication of this issue of the paper.

Under the watchful eyes of the "old" staff, the recently-promoted newspapers gathered news, assembled it into readable form, wrote headlines and editorials, checked proof, and, in general, "put out" the Flambeau.

The new captains at journalistic fame experienced for the first time the full responsibility of making the deadline, as the departing staffers reluctantly put aside their typewriters and gave up their copy pencils.

Editor-in-Chief Bruce Galphin stated "This is probably the smoothest change in staff I have seen since I began working on the Flambeau. The entire new staff has had plenty of experience, and I expect next year to be a good year for the paper."

Galphin is one of the three members of the staff who will be lost to The Flambeau because of graduation. The other two are Managing Editor, Nancy Lowe, and News Editor, Al Pierce.

Pierce, a graduate student, said of his work on the paper. "It has given me, in my three years as a staff member, a new, more mature, and understanding, view of life parrally seen through the eyes of the college press."

He continued that the co-staffers "leave The Paper" in good hands. The staff we've trained this year is capable of turning out a top-flight publication — I wish them God-speed."

The new staff will be seen on the masthead of this issue, on the bottom of page two. The Senior Editor-in-Chief is Polsom, Editor; Orchid Alonso, Managing Editor;

Interns Tell About 'Once In A Lifetime Experience'

By JOYCE POTTER

After eight weeks of tackling the job of teacher, interns began drifting back into Tallahassee, laden with tales of adventure.

Yvonne McCarthy, who interned in the second grade in Miami at Dade Demonstration School claimed all the children were "little darlings." However she added a few anecdotes to the contrary.

It seems that as an Easter present Yvonne bought her prodigies two small chickens which they named Peter and Wenny. When there are chickens they must be fed, and there was a small bag of chicken feed in the kitchen. So they decided to sample the chicken feed.

After they were stopped from enjoying a mid-day snack, they declared an all-out spitball war. Yvonne, still acting very calmly explained, "there will be no spitball throwing." To her amazement, one child asked innocently, "What is a spit ball?" Al this Yvonne decided that if they didn't know what one was, it certainly was not going to tell them and quickly dropped the subject.

Dade Demonstration School, which is a type of experimental school recently built, was quite impressive to Yvonne. She stated, "I don't there were a bathroom, sink, and water fountain in each room."

Taking on older kids was Coster Wetherall who taught fourth graders at Ormond Beach. He, too, thought the students very cooperative. He explained that he had more trouble with the girls than with the boys. The girls were at that age where their only thought was about boys," he explained. It seems that Coster received not only notes from them, but poems and pictures. One of the pictures he was especially fond of. It depicted him with horns.

Once, while deeply engrossed with teaching class, Coster happened to look out the window and saw a beautiful blond. His stared agheat while his jaw fell accidentally dropped open. His hair found out that he was married.

Juniors To Fete Outgoing Seniors At Annual Prom

Florida State University's graduating seniors will be feted Saturday night by the junior class at the traditional Junior-Senior Prom at FSU's Suwannee Room. The semi-formal affair which will feature crowning of a Senior King and Queen is slated for nine p.m. Saturday, according to publicity chairman Liz Vang.

Invitations to the affair have not been issued. Miss Vang said yesterday, adding that all juniors and seniors may invite a guest who need not be an upperclassman. The dress is also open for underclassmen.

Johnny Bee and his orchestra will play for the Saturday affair the publicity chief said.

Six junior women and four men were voted on Thursday to represent the class in the court. The reigning couple will be named Saturday from these. Also in the running for men and six women and six men from the female class vying for court positions in royalty. Three couples will be named to the court from juniors.

Senior women nominated, from whom a queen will be chosen, are three of the court have been named: lindsie Ards Bourland, Jane Cheek, Jo Anne Hutto, Dot Johnson and Ann Yates. Junior men include Bill Bryan, Bob Cassidy, Donnie Hollis, Harry Massey, Charlie Rader and Pete Nimkoff.

Decorations for the dance will follow a "Blue Room" theme, Miss Vang said, noting decorations will be kept secret until the dance.

Mary Grace Shoemaker, junior class social chairman, is in general charge of the Junior-Senior Prom. Junior Class president is Dave Collins.

McDaniel Reveals Change In Plans Of Senior Meeting

The meeting of the senior class originally scheduled as a supper meeting to be held tomorrow will instead be held Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in 305 Westcott, Vice-president Charles McDaniel announced today.

McDaniel termed the meeting very important to all and also announced that all returning items are urged to be present at the meeting when discussion and discussion of senior class plans for graduation and class projects.

The senior class will also, according to McDaniel, seek to elect permanent officers for the class of 1954. This is important, as the graduation exercises are to be made for the class reunion next year at Homecoming.

McDaniel pointed out that the class must discuss the Buffet Supper, Class Day, Baccalaureate, Graduation, the graduation dance, and any other problems that might come up concerning graduation.

McDaniel said he regretted to announce that Mr. William Mellig, president of the Florida State University Alumni Association, would be unable to attend as originally planned.

Poll Shows Students Confused On Current McCarthy Situation

Some Feel Press Is Placing Too Much Emphasis on Controversy; Others Silent

By ESTHER RANCIER

In a recent poll at Florida State University was revealed that students are confused on the issues involved in the current McCarthy controversy.

Several refused to comment, a music major, said, "He has his believing that newspapers are good and bad points. I'm just showing partiality in their reporting, thus impairing the facts." Everyone felt that the press was putting too much emphasis on the Senator.

With few exceptions the students weren't anti-McCarthy, but felt that he is working good, they liked his principles, but feared his undemocratic techniques.

"Having met Senator McCarthy and some of his senatorial colleagues personally, I am of the opinion that McCarthy is not being given a fair leadership tactics to keep his name before the public. After all, it isn't too early to start thinking about the next Republican presidential candidate. The states as FSU social welfare major.

The senior student continued, she added. "No other single man has contributed as much to the demoralization of this country."

Ed. Note: It is the policy of THE FLORIDA FLAMBEAU to have the source of statements, but in view of the student's request, the name has been withheld. The reason is not to deprive readers of this information, but to protect innocent persons.

Hawaiian born Ruth Matsuda, "Senator Taft is working good, while all he really intends to get a good position, like president . . ."

What he is accomplishing is good, weeding out communists from government offices," declared Mary Will Davis, adverstising major "McCarthy's techniques and methods are sometimes questionable. He believes he's doing right, but he doesn't use the right psychological tactics. He wants to get rid of communism from the people Every-body seems to be against him," she added.

Ted Dooley, economics major, asserted that McCarthy's technique "Aren't in accordance with the democratic process. I don't have too much faith in the sincerity of his motives—

New Senate Convenes Today; Mandatory Housing Big Issue

Consideration of cabinet appointments is expected to head the order of business of the first afternoon's Student Senate meeting. The 1954-55 Senate is meeting for the first time today.

President Pete Nimkoff yesterday declined to name his choices for cabinet and other responsible positions, stating that the names should not be released before being presented to the Senate.

The legislative chambers in Longmire Building are also slated to pass passage of a bill creating an activities committee and adoption of a resolution expressing disfavor with compulsory housing for all freshmen and non-graduate male students.

Sen. Jimmy Moore, returned to Senate in the elections, attempted to introduce the resolution at the last meeting of the 1953-54 Senate, which refused to consider it. The resolution asks that on-campus residence be compulsory only for freshmen women, and that non graduate male students.

Sen. Jimmy Moore, returned to Senate in the elections, attempted to introduce the resolution at the last meeting of the 1953-54 Senate, which refused to consider it. The resolution asks that on-campus residence be compulsory only for freshmen women, and that non graduate male students not be demanded of upperclassmen.

Rules of procedure may also contain a provision for a Student Senate. New rules of procedure must be adopted and approved by each Senate.

Returning Senators are Jimmy Joanos, Ray Bloom, Jo Jones, Carolyn Close, Jean Stafford, Jimmy Joanos, Bob Hamilton, Jack Cutler, former Senators Gordon Coster and Bee Barrow, vice-presidents in charge of Men's and Women's Affairs, respectively, Cayle Moore, former senator, will be vice-president of legislative affairs and parliamentarian of the Senate.

Other members of the Senate will be Bobby Temple, Margaret Ann Ballinger, Ken Gaslin, Fred Hall, Jimmy Moore, Jimmy Joanos, Nancy Vaughn, Bill Stancik, Bill Hammond, Doc Walls and Dave Arnold.

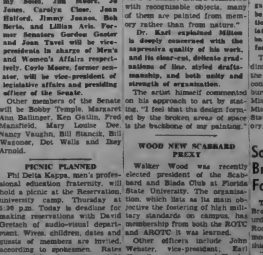
PICNIC PLANNED

Phi Delta Kappa, men's professional fraternity in education, will hold a picnic at the Reservation, university camp. Thursday at 5:30 p.m. Today is deadline for making reservations with David Gretsch of audio-visual department. Wives, children, dates and guests of members are invited, according to spokesmen.

Rates Webster, vice-president, Earl Chandler, secretary; and Charles Clark, treasurer.

Exhibit Shows Milton's Works Until May 18

Paintings by George M. Milton, Florida student in art at Florida State University, are the subject of a new exhibit at the University Art Gallery.



To be shown May 12 through 18, the display is composed of 38 oil paintings and five silk screen prints all by Milton.

The FSU Art Department will give an informal reception in honor of Milton tomorrow from 3 to 5:30 p.m. at the Art Gallery. The display is open to all interested persons, it was learned.

Adolph Karl, of the Art Department faculty, described the paintings as "realistic" and "abstrained. He deals with extremely varied possibilities, and while he is almost always connected with recognizable objects, many of them are pure fun to look over rather than from nature."

Dr. Karl explained Milton as "deeply concerned with the expressive quality of his work, and his choice of subject matter, patterns of line, styled draftsmanship, and both noisy and subtle shades of color."

The artist himself commented on his approach to painting, saying, "I feel that the design formed by the broken areas of space is the backbone of my painting."

THE TALL AND SHORT OF IT ALL . . . President pro-tem Chris Young, identified himself as one of the "rugged individualists" on campus as he presided over the last session of the 1953-54 Student Senate last week in Bernade Sheets. This is one way to beat the heat of senate sessions!

Houser Elected SUSGA Prexy At Emory Meet

Says He Expects SUSGA To Have Good Year In '54-55

Two Florida State University students were elected to major offices in the Southern Universities Student Government Association at its first conference, held at Emory University in Atlanta Friday and Saturday.

Jack Houser was elected President, and Phoebe Jackson, Secretary of SUSGA, recently joined by FSU.

Houser declined to comment on his election, but stated that he expected SUSGA to have a good year in 1954-55. "We had 13 schools represented at the conference, and it was successful, but not a record, but not as much as it will be next year.

Student Body President, Peter Nimkoff, commented on the election of the two FSU students saying, "I think this is indicative of the ability FSU is making a major contribution to SUSGA. Phoebe and Jack will both do a very competent job."

Delegates to the conference from FSU, Nimkoff, Houser, University Court Chief Justice Jerry Meyer, Phoebe Jackson, and Hoover, THE FLORIDA FLAMBEAU editor Bob Feldman also attended. All there were 36 representatives from the member colleges.

The first meeting about Friday afternoon, Gilbert E. Turner, past president of the Georgia Student Government, was elected conference chairman. Other business included the appointment of a publication committee and presentation of a bill by Emory for organized expenses.

During the conference, Bob Rosenthal of Tennessee was elected vice-president of SUSGA to round out the compliment of officers.

Late Friday afternoon, a publications commission consisting of a bill by each school met and discussed student publications problems. Brought out were the differences in publication costs, payroll positions, and salaries.

On Saturday the Student Government Communism met, with Jim Pugh in charge of discussion. It was urged that the five resolutions passed last fall be ratified the constitutio do so as soon as possible. They are: Admission of United States Delegation, Mississippi Southern and North Carolina.

Ray Pitts, Mississippi delegate, asked that Texas schools be invited to the next association. fix the general session on Saturday night. Plans of the banquet was selected as the site for the 1955 conference.

The conference ended with a dinner Saturday night. Among the schools represented at the conference were Alabama, Auburn, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Florida State University, Southern, Mississippi State, North Carolina State, Tennessee, FSU, and Emory, the host school.

Sophomore, Senior Breakfast Date Set For Saturday 9 a. m.

The annual Sophomore-Senior breakfast will be held this Saturday at 9 a m in the Suwannee Room, Mary Louise Dee, Sophomore class treasurer, announced this week.

The traditional affair is sponsored by the Sophomore Class in honor of the graduating seniors. Purpose of "It has always been the custom for the Sophomore class to invite each of a Senior to take him to the breakfast so that both members of their respective classes will enjoy this last function together."

One of the highlights of the breakfast will be a talk given by a prominent senior. Last year's Winners of the Florida State University and Order of Torch.

Other officials will also be present for the morning festivities which promise to be a most enlightening one," she added.

Newly elected members of Sophomore Council, under the leadership of Jane Soper, are in charge of the food orders for the breakfast. Tickets will be on sale today and tomorrow in Westcott, Seminole Room, and the Student Center, at 50 cents per person.

Members of sororities and fraternities will be contacted by members of the sophomore class to sure everyone to be present at the breakfast. Every fraternity or house is urged to attend as a group. Invitations to the Senior Class this will be on hand and will "insure" breakfast yet," said Miss Dee.

Indo-China About-Face A Blunder But New Policy More Realistic

Most Americans know the strategic fortress of Dien Bien Phu has fallen to the Viet Minh. The news was in all the headlines Friday afternoon and Saturday morning.

But for the most part the nation is either confused or uninformed about Indo-China and the American role there. Confusion is natural. It seems to have great popularity even at the top level in Washington. The widely reprinted Herblock cartoon showing one state department employee asking another "What's our firm, unswerving Asia policy this week?" is all too true.

We will try to trace here a quick view of a rather checkered pattern of American policy on Indo-China and add a few comments of our own on the situation.

The United States' policy as late as a few weeks ago was a bold and aggressive one. It seemed that we would be involved at any moment. Not only did we send supplies to the Viet Nam, French and foreign legion forces, but from the public statements of our leaders, it looked as if we would send troops as well. President Eisenhower called Indo-China "to cork in the bottle." That is, he meant if Indo-China fell, the whole of Southeast Asia would go Communist. Vice-President Nixon broadly hinted that the U. S. would send troops if France backed out. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles himself went so far as to refuse retaliation if China stepped up its aid to Viet Minh.

But in the last few days the statements from our leaders sounded strangely different. In a press conference last week Eisenhower said he hoped some "modus vivendi," perhaps similar to the German partition, could be worked out. Secretary Dulles in a nationwide speech Friday night had to say it was unlikely we would send troops to Indo-China. He only qualified this statement with a face-saving "at this time."

Just what lies behind this face-about? Obviously there have been blunders. Obviously the prestige of the United States at home and abroad has been lowered. But which was the blunder: the earlier or the later policy? Is the present policy a sign of an ineffective leadership or is it simply a more realistic approach to the problem?

It would seem the early policy was the more unrealistic. The U. S. made the mistake of expecting the full support of Great Britain and France in its strong stand. It did not get that support. The attempts by this country to form a united front before the Geneva conference failed miserably.

The failure can be attributed to a common American fault: an inability or unwillingness to assess our allies' situations. Britain and France have never recovered thoroughly from the economic strain of war. They cannot afford to be sending troops all over the world. Britain and France tasted the ravages of wartime invasion and bombing, unlike the U. S. They are better acquainted with the horrors of war and thus less anxious to be involved in another. Churchill evidently thought it would be political suicide for his party if he agreed to American proposals. The French government, which is never in power by more than a slim majority, could not take a strong stand.

When Dulles finally realized he could not count on our allies, he had to take stock of a hard truth: the United States, strong as it is, cannot afford to spread itself thinly all over the world alone. At home isolationists and liberals alike were speaking out against sending our forces to Indo-China. Thus the change in American attitude.

Democrats understandably enough are making a field-day out of the present predicament. Whether they will pay for it politically or soft poley they can point to the administration's inconsistency. But in all fairness a few things must be pointed out.

In such complicated relations as international politics things never work out ideally. There must always be compromise. The U. S. must consider how to keep Communism in the world. Also it would prefer not to have the nation blown to atoms in a nuclear war. Somewhere there must be give and take. The United States and the USSR are the two powers of the world today. Some say war between the two is inevitable. We do not claim to know. We only hope not, since such a war would be bloody beyond anything in our previous experience. Thus Eisenhower's hope for a "modus vivendi" does not seem so unwise. We hope it will not be used as a political football. If we can impress Southeast Asia we are friendly to their desires for home rule, then perhaps war and bitterness can be averted.

Dear Mama Seminole

Dear Mama Seminole,

All quiet on campus front after festive weekend. Braves in paint and muscle parade let hair down after one big push and prepare for other kind.

Some ehief real smart when make Student Center parking. Make exit on hig area so that student who drive to campus have to drive into main drag and then make left turn through traffie light. Why not a hy-pass ally in aside parting area from exit to campus street?

Brave from Miami U. come to campus and find things very dull. Go visit many students on campus Friday night and find F. S. U. hraves studying. Campus look more like prison than a campus. Even bars on Westcott, for effect?

Georgie learn more and more value of money. Money seem to mean big time football. Money also mean quality professors. Georgie can only hope that student and others recognize relative value of each being as each seem to be pulling for the same green-back.

Georgie note that hig ehiefs hope the Flambeau, which they have had occasion to reprimand, will only "keep their noses clean" until the end of the semester when wea'll be rid of that Galphin. Georgie wonder how chiefs expect any following Editor to keep nose clean when there is so much dirt prevalent on this real-estate.

Love all.

Kilpatrick Thanks Students For Library Cooperation

By FLORENCE PAYNE

(This is the last in a series of articles on the University Library. Today's article is a summary by Mr. Norman L. Kilpatrick, Director of Libraries, to the student body. This series of articles will be cautioned in the fall.)

I am glad to have the opportunity to thank the students for their fine cooperation they have shown in the use of library facilities during the last two semesters.

The innovation of a checking desk unquestionably seemed like another hurdle and one more bit of red tape in using library materials. However, the checking desk seems to be serving a useful purpose by reducing the number of times which the staff has to report to a student that there is no record of a book that should be in its place on the shelves. In a library whose circulation number over 400,000 pieces and permits open access to the stacks, the housekeeping job is tremendous. In many respects it is like running a super market, but whereas the super market has four gross of canned peas and 500 ten pound bags of sugar, the library has 400,000 individual items.

Because of the kind of material checked by a library, because of the quantity and urgency of use (18,000 volumes were circulated in April), it is important that the library keep records which make it possible to tell a student where a book is when it is not on the shelves. The cooperation we received from the students, particularly in stopping at the checking desk, has helped us to do this part of our job better than we could have done it otherwise.

Those who are returning to the campus next fall may expect to see work beginning on the construction of the new library building. The new library will be air conditioned, provide conference rooms, seminar rooms, typing rooms, graduate carrells The books, periodicals and other materials will be arranged so that they can be used conveniently by both students and faculty.

My staff and I with the students a pleasant vacation and will be looking forward to renewing our acquaintance in the fall.

Diverse Democrats Roundly Remit Bad Bill

A vivid demonstration of the peculiarity of American politics was made last week when Democrats united to defeat a proposed revision of the Taft-Hartley act.

Originally it was the Democrats who wanted a revision, but the measure being considered was a Republican proposal which many labor leaders felt would return labor to its poor status of the 1930's.

The Democrats were united only in their voting. Their reasons were quite diverse. The liberal element was fighting for the rights of labor. The Southern bloc felt the bill did not include enough curbs on union power. They wanted states to have more power over strikes, boycotting and picketing. Democrat-Liberal Lehman of New York would tack on an anti-discrimination amendment.

Whatever their reasons, though, the Democrats joined with three Republicans and one Wayne Morse to recommit the bill to committee. All indications are that Taft-Hartley will remain on the books until the next session of Congress at least.

THE POINT IS

SUSGA Sessions Slightly Off Key

By BOB FOLSOM

This past weekend we went find out for ourselves what the aim of a group representing FSU at the first annual meeting of SUSGA, short for Southern Universities Student Government Association.

Leaving out the glass that dotted the Alaska highway advertising "All the Catfish You Can Eat for $1.25 (with grits)" and the hamburger that, it was a benedicial conference, except for one performence slightly off key.

FSU dissatisfy were elected to the of the three SUSGA positions, and it was almost all FSU. We sat in on the nomination committee session, and two were nominated for SUSGA president: Jack Houser and an Alabama delegate. Later, we went to visit a friend at the Atlanta campus, and missed the election which Houser won. In the process, Mary Meyer was nominated in place of the Alabama student who withdrew, and he was seated. Secretary Pete Nimkoff was nominated alone with Phoebe Jackson as secretary.

Thine FSU delegates singled fancy stage. It is the South's out for honors are well qualified. No one else, however, seemed to want the positions. The complaint was that delegates did not have time to take an extra burden on their shoulders. Regardless of the extra burden or not, we thought the positions and the honor that goes with it warranted more than the shrugging off it received.

The interest shown by members' colleges so far in building SUSGA does not rule out what could definately were content to leave a pat affair. SUSGA's potential demands that proper measure and consideration be given in all matters.

In contrast, though, an able administrator was on hand. Houser is capable of building SUSGA into a worthwhile functioning and perhaps influential student organization. (It is noteworthy that Houser was capable enough to be chosen SUSGA president, but students here did not elect their own senator in the recent class elections.)

SUSGA is still in its infancy and may die in the whole South's answer for a regional organization that could meet, discuss and possibly answer problems arising with student government and the fumerous Governor Collins, SUSGA can be an influencing factor in ironing out issues arising between the administration and students functions.

There have been similar organizations in the past that functioned about the same lines. We don't know offhand, how many southern schools belonged to these organizations. NSA, National Student Association a one, but they were labbed as being liberal while nowadays is the word deeds misspelled, and many colleges dropped membership.

An organization directly concerned in improving student government and hrenph functions can accomplish many benefits, gaining support in the meantime.

SUSGA, pooling their ideas and acting on issues with a concrete and mature outlook can go a long ways in not only bettering conditions in its colleges, but in the whole South's

Revival Is Experience For Everyone

By BRUCE GALPHIN
(Author's note: I attended a revival meeting held near campus the other night. It was on experience no man should miss, although it is not a laughing matter. It was deadly serious and from all appearances completely sincere. This is what I saw.)

The tent was packed, and though there were little room, no one was turned away. The preacher, "I want you to come up here and be saved. Now there's a lot of sin in this tent tonight that will never be forgiven unless it is confessed. If they don't get close to God tonight."

"That's right", "Amen" and "Hallelujah" punctuated his sentences.

"Now I want all of you to bow your heads. All of you who aren't Christians just want to go to Heaven raise your hands . . . There's a good deal keep 'em up. Now all of you need to be Christians but aren't any more and would like to be again raise your hands . . . Now not of you who are Christians but don't think you are ready to meet Jesus hold up your hands."

These people were asked to come to the front of the tent for a special prayer. There are 49 souls in this tent that are going to meet the Holy Ghost, and the preacher, "I want you to come up here and be saved. Now there's a lot of sin in this tent tonight that will never be forgiven unless it is confessed. If they don't get close to God tonight."

He shouted vigorously and emphatically. It was not a sermon in that there was an central idea adhered to. Rather it was an exhortation against the idea they were were repeated periodically: sin, heaven, devil, Jesus, hell. "I tell you there are 49 souls in this tent tonight that will never be forgiven unless they confessed sinners rolled on the ground and screamed. Special assistants helped purge the evil from their souls. The cries of these afflicted people were heard for over half an hour.

Meanwhile in the big tent the healing service was being conducted. It was a pitiful sight. Mothers with sick babies. Old men stooped with pain and old sobbing women stood in line waiting their deliverance.

The preacher asked each one in turn his particular trouble. "You don't believe you're going to keep that pain any more, do you brother?" "Yes sir." "You believe Jesus, don't you brother?" "Yes sir." The healer put his hands on the sick head. "Pain, in the name of the Lord I command you to let go this woman's ear. There, sister, couldn't you feel God at work?"

Allergy, in the name of the God of Abraham and Isaac I command you to leave this baby." When he seemed to think that the full judgment he unknown tongue came in him. "He, heh. Alum-a-nahm-nahm-nahm."

One woman with diabetes and heart trouble began to have a spasm so he too hand was touched. "Sister, sister." cried the preacher, trying to calm her. She had to be carried away. Another woman, realizing her healing, threw her hands into the air and returned to her seat exhorting. "Glory, hallelujah, thank Yaa Jesus."

The healing over and the sinners returned from the sidelines. The service was almost over. People filed out through the aisles, some smiling and some stooped with the same tired, drawn look.

A Tribute To Two Staffers

There is a new masthead today, and in about two weeks another school year will be over, and with it the 1953-54 file of The Florida Flambeau will be placed in the morgue.

As we go to press with the last three issues, two names are missing from the masthead, and no two people will ever be more sorely missed and long remembered by the staff than Bruce Galphin and Al Pierce. Bruce who loved controversy and Al who hated politics—quite a combination—and an unbeatable one that was highly instrumental in putting out the Florida State University, a fine newspaper which we hope the students and faculty alike enjoyed and were proud of.

Their list of accomplishments for the Flambeau are long. In the end what they succeeded in accomplishing gave the Flambeau a stamp of character. A paper that would give a hot dezzert and not a true picture. A paper that wielded considerable influence but did not prostitute this power, and moreover a paper many were eager to read. Bruce and Al realized also, that people believed the paper had shortcomings. That is natural.

In his capacity, Bruce wanted all issues that concerned the students presented directly to the student body. In doing this he hoped in one way, not only to enlighten their thinking powers, but foster active participation in university and student activities they should have a definite say in.

For a newsman who produced when the chips started falling fast, and a deadline just ahead, we believe there will be few to top Al's ever match for accuracy and work. They just don't come along often enough.

This has been a few well-earned words about these two. We will make it a simple goodbye, and say that if there are any rewards ever passed out, primarily in the way of a break or a bit of luck Bruce and Al deserve them. Most likely they'll get them, too.

Conversations With Sammy

Sammy Accused As Middle - Roader

By ORCHID ALONSO

First Sammy is accused of being a middle of the roader, then The Flambeau is accused of not printing controversial editorials.

This has got to stop. First, Sammy's business if he wants to be a middle of the roader. If he wants to be he has every right, about, he'll come out for it. Second, we have that he just "can't see making irrelevant choices of sides merely to be on one side or the other."

About the printing of controversial editorials, Sammy is very strongly opposed to it. Not because he's afraid, but because Sammy really feels that nothing is gained by becoming hot headed and making noise. The Flambeau is not.

"Certainly," points out Sammy "no one can accuse The Flambeau of avoiding 'issues.' And besides, I think our editorials are more for deliberation and mature reasoning by presenting the facts reasonably and by fixing the attitude and pushing open disagreement and controversy."

I rather doubt this. they can refresh their memories by glossing back over past issues of The Flambeau and reading the few articles we have managed to scrape out. Concerned Over Paper's Tone." And this after merely a short newspaper strike and the explosion of several A & M stories from Tallahassee.

One Campus leader was heard to say. "Do you mean you really would have them in classes with you?" The tone of saw represents the idea of some and perhaps many students on campus on the particular segregation issue. The Flambeau is a community paid and community owned student newspaper must represent student views and student owned, but more important, it must stay student run.

Etcetera Etchings

Speech, Music Could Profit Jointly

I think, quite honestly, that these two areas should get together seriously on a production. Call each other in for suggestions. The Speech Department could ask for proper background music for their shows and the Music School could ask for acting in their shows.

One suggestion for Frances Stokes, producer of next year's Bandspot: Why not get all-the-way on the production by doing a name musical comedy if the two areas would collaborate. Bandspot would be filling a definite need and would attract a better audience for the shows. Sure, the original songs are "over the head" to see, but Bandspot can gain a completely new audience (and a faithful audience) by following through with this suggestion.

Meanwhile, you who have power over this matter—make the first move toward collaboration. It won't hurt by the foundations for what might be a new height in the success and student-body respect you could receive.

The Sophomore By Con Horn

By DAVID DREIS

I don't think there's much chance of doing a musical comedy on this campus with the exception of the - Bandspot which has been doing its best these many years. It seems a shame too, that measures haven't been taken to stop less by one.

With such fine areas as The Department of Speech and The School of Music they seem to shy away from the idea and yet, the campus reviewer can see that they should embrace the talents of each other.

Last week the two areas were completing for the attention of the school. There's nothing wrong with that, but if Trovatore was scheduled at the same time as the Insect Comedy, Needless to say, each was worth its price of admission.

The singing and dinner musical areas of Il Trovatore were fine, but the acting and general performance of these on stage was, to put it bluntly, bad. With any meaningful vision, I may wrist-watchers on the performers' hands and a package of cleanser sticking out from a shirt pocket, I don't think there's an excuse for this.

Why don't the directors of both areas get together? Maybe it's pride in individualism. One might want it done another way and the other another way Dissention happens often when two artists collaborate, but certainly the failings out with members of the staff. Dissatisfaction is unreasonable for the dissention to exist.

There are so many productions that could be presented to the glory of the University if brought to the fore Danny Kaye, Marshall Curry and Bert Lydell. The show proved that Victor Mature was an versatile on such a screen. When it was made into a movie, Ginger Rogers played Lawrence's role and Ray Milland, Warner Baxter, Jon Hall, Barry Sullivan, Melvyn Douglas and Darrell. Billy Daniels and Phyllis Brooks each had a share in its success. It could be the biggest event of the year if it was put on this campus.

The SPORTS Line

by Jim Eady

This is the season when football coaches and their assistants are recounting the nation's high schools for a very highly prized . . . and often, highly priced . . . commodity: football talent. It's a season that centers around the top one first day of practice in the fall, and seldom is a high-quality football player overlooked. It's a season of scramble, with the institutions making the most lucrative offers snaring the best of the crop.

The "Sunshine State" is no exception. In fact, recruiting is probably carried on with more intensity here than most states because there is just not enough talent to go around. It's a game chuck full of more interest with Florida coaches reaching for the big time and challenging for trying the mettle of the lake of one days business to the three state university: FSU, Florida and A&M. This scrap, which has been a three cornered affair with each passing year, stood an amazing chance for athletic scholarships. The size of the cut is determined, in part, by the enrollment. And say as things have turned out, the Gators received about twice as much as Florida State, while A&M gets about 10%.

It's a very considerable sum. This year, the tracks handed over so amount over $400,000 to Needless to say, both schools are eyeing this figure with covetous glares. But they will have to wait until the end of June, when the Board of Control meets, to know more work they can place in their respective coffiures.

Head coach Tom Nugent, naturally is very concerned about this meeting. For he feels it's about time an FSU received a more equitable amount . . . he'd like to see each school get the same amount. It doesn't seem right to him that the Gators offered 70 football scholarships last year while FSU gave out about 25. And it seems he has a legitimate complaint. For it's very difficult for Mr. Nugent to keep them up until they had 16 talent, when the Gators can give more than twice as many scholarships.

Meanwhile the scheduled meeting of the board of control will have a large influence on the football fortunes of FSU. Mr. Nugent is no doubt feeling that "there should be some changes made."

FSU Ends Season With 14-9 Record; Long; Atwood Win

With a sweep of the two game series with Florida Southern over the weekend, the Florida State baseball team closed the 1934 season and posted a 14-9 record. Friday the Seminoles won 11-1, and Saturday they smeared the visitors, 16-1 in only seven innings of play.

It was an impressive finale for the Seminoles, as they erupted with a tremendous display of batting power. In the two games, FSU scored 26 runs and banged out 36 hits. In fact, the Semiole's victory was so overwhelming that Florida Southern requested that the game be called at the end of the seventh inning because of FSU's towering lead.

In Saturday's contest FSU started the fireworks early and kept them up until they had 16 runs on 17 hits by the seventh. When the smoke cleared, the Seminoles had 19 hits.

Shortstop Cooter Mills, the little Tallahassee senior who was playing his final game for FSU, collected three singles in four trips to the plate to lead the Seminole record book. The trio of safeties brought his season's total up to 47, for an all time 1934 crop.

Max Long seamed Southern on three hits over the first five innings and turned the chores over to Hall Wernke, who gave up two hits and the lone FSC run in the sixth. It was Long's sixth win.

Friday's game was much the same story. The Seminoles had a 6-1 advantage after five innings and coasted in behind the three-hit pitching of Jim Atwood and Forrest Brown.

FSU came up with a rare triple play in the seventh inning of Friday's game. With runners on first and second, FSU third baseman Clarke Sandrin dug a hard grounder out of the left field corner, stepped on third, and fired to Billy Campbell at second. Campbell relayed to first for the triple killing.

Bands Perform Batons Twirl In Competition

Thursday and Friday nights will mark the marching shows to be performed in Doak S. Campbell Stadium by visiting Florida high schools at the State Band Festival to be held May 19 to 16.

These marching shows will be the highlights of the festival, according to official spokesmen. Bands from 26 schools will be there, each being permitted eight minutes to perform a show similar to a football game half-time show.

Also included in the festival will be competition among the high schools in baton twirling, solos and ensembles, concerts, and band sight-reading.

Sigma Xi Taps 5 At Student Center

Five candidates for doctoral degrees became members of Sigma Xi, national science honorary, at a dinner meeting Thursday evening in the Student Center.

The new members are James Dewey Jacob Shapiro, Raymond Shapiro, William J. Harris and Martha M. Nes.

The meeting wound up the honorary's activities for the year. Dr. Dunbar Schwarz, head of the physics department, was in charge.

Meetings will resume in the fall under the recently elected officers: Dr. F. B. Hunter, president; Dr. Harold Humm, vice-president; Dr. Jack Eichinger, treasurer and Dr. Ina Kendrick, secretary.

Nugent Hunts Grid Prospects For '54 Team

Florida State's football coach Tom Nugent and his staff continuing the search for top-flight material in high school seniors this weekend. The prospects, who are being considered for scholarships, came from a total of eight states.

However, Nugent stressed the point that he is mainly interested in Florida players for his future teams. In fact, he said, this is the first time this year he has reached out of the state for talent.

"I hope the bulk of the team will be from right down here. I don't like to go far away," he said.

In the latest group of prospects, were from North Carolina: 2 each from Florida, Alabama and Pennsylvania, and one each from South Carolina, West Virginia and Georgia. Of the two Florida persons, one is from Miami and one, who has already been given a scholarship, is from Tarpon Springs.

Nugent said he was forced to go out of the state because there aren't enough in Florida.

All the best material has been picked up already by either by FSU, Florida or the University of Miami. And of course, the Gators usually get the cream of the crop in the highly competitive business of recruiting.

According to the head coach, 21 Florida players have been lured to FSU by scholarships. so far. He stressed that "about half of the prospects he will sign will be home-grown.

SIX MEET RECORDS FALL

Seminole Thinclads Fall To Classy Hurricanes 71-60; Casteel Stars

BY KEN KINGERY
Flambeau Sports Editor

On this sun-baked oval as West Campus Saturday, the depth-minded Miami Hurricanes rallied with seconds and thirds, and occasional firsts, to defeat the faster Florida State Seminole trackaters 71-60.

Matching the Canes with first-places, the Tribe, who are roughly short of feet, could only gain one point at a time. If they had won. The "Magic City" boys on one other hand, have enough boys to enter at least two men in every event. This was the story from the start.

Before one of the largest crowds of the season, Miami's Bill Bennett, was both events, the 120 high hurdles, and the 220 lows. He tied the meet record in the hitles with a 15.5, but this wasn't the best feat of the day. In the lows, Bennett, according to last week's records, has the best time in the nation, without wind assistance. The slender former state champ took a very fast lead and held it to the finish, being clocked at 22.6. Miami's Johnny Mapp was the recent holder of the honor with a 22.6. Despite the brilliant performance of Bennett, FSU's Charlie Watson was gaining on the 'Cane thinclad at each grand pace, he could have won the race is another 2 yards.

Six meet records fell, along with three track records and one field record. FSU Captain Carlos Prandnorber, leaped 22 feet, 10½ inches, to set a new meet, and school record. Curtis also placed second in the discus throw. Weight-man Jerry Jacobs broke the school record with his third place winning throw in the shot put.

Two of the greatest 440 men in the south met face to face with the matter of settling the winning tape first. This was FSU's own Jimmy Casteel, undefeated in collese competition, and Miami's star middle distance man Wilson. On the first turn, Casteel took the inside lane and the lead. Clipping his first 220 yards at something like 23 flat, Jimmy outdistanced Welburn and the rest, a new meet record was set, and his old school record tied, with a blistering 47.4 seconds. Casteel also turned in a 21.4 for the open 220 yards and placed second behind teammate Prandnorber in the broad jump. All this plus the anchoring of the winning freshman mile relay team, gave the high scoring hon ors to him, his total 14½ points Miami's Bennett totaled 10 along with Miss.

Coach Ken Miller has discovered a new winning sprinter. Joe Perry, Jr., for the Seminole cinders, who ran the 100 yards in 10.1 seconds, and a surprising 18 second flat, 180 to beat out fleeted Jack Leach of Miami. Leach, who just last week ran a 4.4 180 at Gainesville, placed a hair behind the flashy Perry.

Larry Hounihn, Florida State star 880-yard specialist, missed Wilson Welburn his second defeat for the day with a fine 2:00 3/5 mile run. Over in the javelin area, Edmund Hatch, Carver, frosh out of his hampering illness, threw the spear 161 feet, 3 and ¾ inches to see the event. Warren Strickland, ace vaulter for the Seminole squad, tied for first in the pole vault. Carl Green of FSU finished third. The height, 11 feet.

The winning mile relay was composed of Frank Bright, Charlie Watson, Joe Davis, and Jimmy Casteel. The last event was good for five much needed points for FSU, the time 3.32.5, a slow time for the all-freshmen team, but Miami combine didn't threaten.

The next meet for the Seminoles will be the Mississippi Southern meet here at the West Campus track Saturday 10 a.m.

Alpha Tau Omega is the only team in the fraternity softball league that has gotten this far in the season without a loss. The ATO's have notehsaked four opponents so far. And they have railroaded down the victory track with the kind of scores that could be an indication they will go all the way undefeated.

Sigma Nu, Sigma Chi, and Kappa Sigma Phi are jostling along right behind the ATO's. They have all won three and lost one. The Sigma Nus have a crackerjack team, having knocked off their closest competitors with relative ease. The Sigma Chis have a crew that requires around a hard-to-hit pitcher The Sigma Chis will probably stay on top as long as their pitcher's arm holds out. The Pi Kappa Phis have been a prodigy in the time staying on the winning list. But they are still one of the winning teams and FSU's softball fans hope their outfits can boast.

Last Thursday, fraternity softball acquired a distinct Southern accent for awhile. Five hits, five runs, and hard hitting. Kappa Alpha Order of the Sigma Chis out of the unbeaten ranks. 7-5. Bill Dewey the Sig's crack baseball-ing pitcher tried to keep his team at bat. But smooth fielding and smart shooting gave the KA Southern gents a close win.

The ATO's continued to rampage like a wild bull when they crushed over Delta Tau Delta 11-7. The Delts had a hard and played it smart. The ATO's hit a bit harder and were a little faster.

Sigma Nu polished off Kappa Sigma without a sweat, 14-4. The Sigma Nus, says the grapevine, are getting up steam.

Theta Chi gave a timid scratch on the pons of Judas: that made the boys of Sigma Alpha Epsilon sick back with ferocity The SAE's killed Theta Chi, 15-8.

Pi Kappa Phi held on to its hard claims and outlasted Lambda Chi Alpha to win by one point. Nip-and-tuck and hit-for-hit all the way. The Pi Kappa Phis came out okay, 10-9.

According to the latest lists of the West Campus intramural offices here are the softball standings as of last Thursday

In the single-elimination fraternity volleyball contests the Kappa Sigs, Theta Chi of Phi Delts, and SAE's went into the semi-finals yesterday. SAE played Phi Delt, and Kappa Sig slayed Theta Chi. The two winners of yesterday's tilts will battle to determine the championship.

On Wednesday of this week the fraternities will start bowling against each other. Bowling will be based onh single-elimination decisions.

Walking Shorts

I endorse those critics suggestions that PSU male students refrain from wearing walking shorts But this isn't enough. Short trousers reveal repulsive bird-legged-ness of the men. However, the ladies have not called to the students attention SHORT SLEEVED SHIRTS as on by both sexes on campus. You conscientious devotees to conventional styles of nature must agree with me that wearing anything less than a wristlength SHIRT would constitute immindedsty and flarina uncomfortable for sensitive tas.es.

How disconcerting it is to see students baring naked arms — bony elbows, hairy forearms — mottled skin—skinny wrists—by wearing SHORT SLEEVED SHIRTS.

We who advocated the trousers styles of our grandfathers, those conservative protective fibers which conceal our ambulatory appendages, those fabrics which keep the warmth of the Florida climate between our epidermis and that of a sheep, we must be consistent of long trousers and LONG SLEEVED SHIRTS. Never let it be said that we enlightened Southerners will be caught exposing our arms or less or the scintillating glare of radicals and leftists who are concerned only with style and comfort.

Chris Young

P S It might be considered inconsistent with our policy of correctness to expose ourselves in the vulgar bathing suits now in vogue. Let us wear what is right — especially anything LONG, woolen asun suits which conceal the vulgar knee and equally vulgar elbow We can't be too cautious.

Expression Of Ideas

To the Editor:

Why is it that the University of Florida editorials are sometimes written up in state wide papers and the Florida State writers never seem to hit the headlines? Is it because we don't have 10,000 "people" on campus, because we're still young, because we don't have good press relations or is it because very little constructive information is written?

I believe it is the latter. The Florida Flambeau editorial page covers things from Marlowe to Grimm's Fairy Tales and from the Ki Parade to the Stacks in the library. In my mind editorials on restriction on the females on campus, the honor system (+) drinking regulations and, such things as the Negros at the Jazz Concert should be written These would have more information in them for the students and maybe get a little thinking started on campus.

The only trouble with that is that the administration and the Board of Control don't warn you, the writers, and we, the student, to express our ideas on the important things we think. Won't that be great when we graduate we can get jobs by telling the employers we graduated from P S U, and have learned to keep our mind shut and not express our beliefs!

For a hint it is worth,

Russell W. Johnson.

3 Science Awards Given To Students For Further Work

Three Florida State University graduate students have been chosen for fellowships by the National Science Foundation, for the year 1954-55.

Receiving the fellowships are Joe Wood Cable, chemistry; Charles Russell Crane biochemistry; and Robert Charles Ourl, general biology

Former PSU student Ralph David McWilliams, now at the University of Tennessee is also a fellowship recipient.

PSU tied with the University of Oklahoma, University of Virginia and Vanderbilt University in the number of fellowships awarded. Rice Institute, University of North Carolina and University of Texas were the only schools to win more of the competitive fellowships provided by the Federal Government through the National Science Foundation

GRANT FOR MOUNTAIN LAB

Miss Emilee Thompson, graduate assistant in the department of botany of Florida State University, has been awarded a predoctoral fellowship by the National Science Foundation.

Announcement of the award came from Dr. Sam Mercer, head of the botany department. According to Meyer, Miss Thompson, who was selected for her master's in June, will use the fellowship this summer at the Mountain Lake Biological Station maintained by the University of Virginia.

The National Foundation, it was noted is interested in encouraging a mountain laboratory in the Southeast.

31 State Workers Join FSU Class In Budget Phase

Thirty-one state employees are included in the membership of a course in governmental budgeting now being given at Florida State University according to the School of Public Administration.

A number of state officials cooperate with the faculty in conferring instruction in phases of governmental budgeting operations.

Dr. Wilson K. Doyle, dean, School of Public Administration said, "The main aim of such a course is improved budgeting suggestions for the state government with ultimate benefits for the people of Florida."

Subjects of the course, taught by Harry G. Smith, state budget director, and members of his office staff, range from formulation processes to enactment.

It's a typical assignment the student uses the regular budget form as prescribed by the state, budget commission, and follows laws and regulations set up by the budget commission.

Paul Wragon, speaking on "The Church of Tony" was the winner of the 1954 Original Oratory Contest on Thursday night, in the Union Club Tuesday night.

Warren Cobb, speaking on "The Danger of Today" won second place, while Jack Hopkins was awarded with The Language Oration.

Tuesday night, preliminaries in the Public Speaking Contest were held. Finalists and topics used were as follows: Jack Hopkins, "The Code Worth While"; Bonnie Hankins, "What Does Academic Freedom in College Mean?"; Paul Nowlin, "In What Fields Service Can FSU Make Its Maximum Contribution to the State?" Jim Woodin, "What Makes a Free Newspaper Free?"

These finalists will compete before the Toastmasters Club of Tallahassee next Tuesday.

Chairman of the speaking contest is Dr. Gregg Phifer, associate professor of Speech. Edna Holthouse, graduate assistant in the Speech department, was chairman of the Public Speaking Contest.

Summer Flambeau' Editor Lawler Calls Longmire Meeting

Gene Lawler, newly appointed Summer Flambeau editor, has called a meeting of all students interested for summer work for Monday at 4:30 p.m. in the Flambeau office, second floor Administration.

Lawler, past Student Body vice-president and Flambeau news editor, said columnists, who worked early last month by Lawler, Flambeau editor, and University Senate confirmed appointments last Tuesday.

Lawler indicated that plans are to be taken of those students who write columns for the Summer Flambeau.

All students planning on editing summer school interviewed after phase of journalism are urged to attend this very important meeting of Flambeau staff for summer," Lawler commented.

Fifteen Groups Ready For Annual Campus Sing

Fifteen campus groups, including sororities, dormitories and fraternities compete tomorrow and Sunday in the semi-annual Campus Sing preliminaries. The campus sing is also known as the Little Brown Jug Sing.

In the preliminaries tomorrow at 4 p.m. in Opperman, according to spokesmen, each group will sing two numbers and are allotted 10 minutes on the rendition. The sing features a cup to be awarded to the best women's group, presented by Sigma Alpha Iota, women's national music honorary, and a cup to the best men's group presented by Phi Mu Alpha, men's national music honorary.

Finals, it was revealed, are scheduled for 2 p.m. Sunday in Opperman Music Hall. Each group will sing two selections each, but no one group will be allowed to sing two humorous selections, it was noted.

Organizations entering the sing are expected to have a membership of twelve, although there is no limit to the membership, spokesmen said. No music organizations may enter the event.

The order of appearance in the preliminaries tomorrow has been set as alphabetical order. Spokesmen also intimated that the director would have to be a student, "although outside help may be used at the group's discretion."

Preparations for the Sing have been in progress for the last six weeks.

Judging will be on a basis of originality and imagination as to interpretation; and selection of the numbers; rhythm; intonation; tone colors, freedom of intermediate balance, blend; diction; appearance; and over all effect (general reaction of the audience).

The purpose of holding Campus Sing, according to spokesmen, is to promote a healthy spirit of competition among the residence groups of FSU; and has promoted music as a means of campus wide unity.

Spokesmen stated that from all reports the Little Brown Jug Sing is going to be outstanding."

Judges for the contest include Miss Betty Jane Grimm, assistant professor of music; Mr. John Spratt, music instructor; Mr. Walter James, associate professor of music; Mr. Eugene Crabb assistant professor of music; and Mr. Nero d'Ocampo.

Delano Driver, member of Sigma Alpha Iota, was in charge of the entries for the contest. Gamma Phi Beta social sorority is in last year's.

The contest and preliminaries are open to the public free of charge, it was noted. Spokesmen said in conclusion that the humorous selections could not be sung by any one group, but that every group was allowed one "group" song or original composition.

Moore, Halford Co-Sponsor Bill Altering Housing

Seven cabinet positions were created for the coming year by the 1954-55 Student Senate during its first meeting Tuesday.

Referred to a committee for consideration were five cabinet appointments of President Peter Nimkoff.

Cabinet positions legislated into existence are that of attorney general, secretary of education, secretary of finance, secretary of organizations, secretary of recreation, secretary of forums and secretary of honor. A secretary of labor and a secretary of state were provided for by statute last year.

Under the terms of the new Constitution, the Senate has the power to confirm all cabinet positions.

Named by Nimkoff for his cabinet were Betty Jo Grubbs, Secretary of Elections; Phoebe Jacobs, Secretary of Music; Betty Ann Munroe, Secretary of Honor; Jimmie Hunter, Secretary of Forums, and Don Teal, Secretary of Finance.

The judicial committee headed by Senator James Moore will review all appointments and make recommendations on them at the next Senate meeting, the last of the year.

Gene Lawler was confirmed as Senate Chief Clerk and Bill Hansen and Jane Soper was elected Senate Chaplain.

Two sweeping rules of procedure for next year occupied a major portion of the meeting. The Senate decided on a two thirds majority regulation requiring attendance and suspension rule. Under terms of the provision, a Senator would be counted tardy if leaving before the end of the session without duly tardies counting as one absence. Three unexcused absences constituting grounds for impeachment.

The other rules of procedure were first six standing committees: Justice and Elections; Forums and Appointments, Organizations and Finance; Labor, Business and Publications; Honor and Recreational and Social.

Senator Robert Moore and Jean Halford co-introduced a resolution asking that only unmarried students be housed under F. H. A. required to live on campus. Discussion on the effectiveness of the resolution was heard, and asking that it be sent to a special committee. Appointed to the committee were Moore as chairman, Bill Wagoner and Jimmy Hall.

A week earlier, at the last Senate meeting, Senator Moore introduced a stronger resolution alone, asking that only unmarried students men be required to do so.

SUMMER ELECTIONS

Offices so be filled include presidents and vice-presidents of the Men's and Women's Judiciary, representatives to Judiciary, and fire marshals.

Campbell Makes Post Ratification Charter Change

President Expresses Disfavor of Student Elected Paper Editor

Two clauses in the recently-ratified Student Body Constitution have been made invalid by the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs. An appeal to Dr. Doak S. Campbell, University President, failed yesterday to change the decision.

The effected clauses are those concerning review of Students Senate legislation and the selection of the chairman of the Student-Faculty Budget Committee.

As ratified by the student body, the Constitution says that only the University President the power to arbitrarily review Senate legislation, provided that his appointee to the Budget Committee be approved only by the President of the Student Body.

The changes give the president of the University the power to approve any state legislation and to appoint the chairman of the Budget Committee without the student agreement.

According to Gene Lawler, outgoing Student Body Vice-President, under whose Senate chairmanship the Constitution was written, Dr. Campbell yesterday told him that, in accepting with the Faculty Committee's decision was merely 'bringing the Constitution in line with law.'

Dean Katherine Warren, chairman of the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs, first informed Lawler of the committee's decision on April 16, in a reply May 18, Lawler strongly opposed the ruling and terming the action a change in the constitution as ratified by the student body. Lawler said he generally regrouped."

The disputed Senate clause is the review clause from the old Constitution, approved by the election boards, first vote on April 13, 1953. During deliberation of the new Constitution this Spring, the Senate decided to use the clause, but when the faculty committee were unable to reach an agreement on the clause said the Senate decided to use the one in effect at the time.

The clause providing for the chairmanship of the budget committee was accepted by Dean Warren, "as error on the part of the faculty committee."

Acting in the capacity of Senate presiding officer during the time period in which the Constitution was drawn up, Lawler conferred with Dr. Campbell yesterday morning, shortly before the latter left Tallahassee.

He was appointed to THE FLORIDA FLAMBEAU, Lawler said, "Dr. Campbell stated that he had already written an answer to Dean Warren's letter, but was concerned with her statements that the two changes must be made before the Constitution is final, that it was merely 'Bringing the Constitution in line with State law.'

"He said that the President of State's Board of Control has full responsibility for student activities and that the Governor enjoys his authority even if he might want to," continued Lawler.

"I stated I seemed to me that this provision of the Constitution was not adequately drawn up between the students and the administration and that I thought it was during the agreement without consent of the Student-Faculty Committee on Student Affairs in presenting their report on April 15, 1953. He stated that that, was an oversight, that he would have to submit it to the board reached his desk," added Lawler.

"I asked whether it could be indicated in the Pow-Wow by means of a footnote that the two changes had been made without student approval, and he didn't think so, that the document would be official as soon as it left the Tallahassee area and that any such notation would not be proper.

"He also stated that although he had approved the Constitution with the exceptions of the two changes, that he had made no official, personal or editorial weaknesses, particularly the manner of the student body in drawing up the Constitution. Dr. Campbell said that he had no official responsibility for editorial policy, that anybody publishing a paper for pressure elsewhere should have the ability to see or be seen. He said that not-any but two more inherent of the student publications there be lost, but that he would not allow any one be censored or 'coerce or intimidate' to tell more a violent end," Lawler concluded.

Court Reveals Payment Rules Of Traffic Fine

A new procedure was formulated for the payment of delinquent traffic fines this week by Judge Tom Knowles between Elyne Nowlin, Chief Justice of the Student Traffic Safety Court, Dr. A. B. Martin, Vice-President, and representatives of the Business Office.

Nowlin announced that, under the new procedure, all delinquent fines will be turned over to the Business Office, which will make in turn will notify the violator that that this fee should be paid within five days or receipt of the notice.

According to Nowlin, if the student does not pay his fine within the specified number of days, he will be barred from classes until such time as he does. When the student pays the balance at Student Accounts, he will be given a receipt which he will turn in to the Registrar's Office to authorize the registration. It will be his instructors that he may again be admitted to classes, stated the Chief Justice of the Court.

The Student Accounts section will maintain a record on each student, who does not pay his fine, Nowlin Safety Court fine. As long as his record remains unpaid, he stated, the student may not receive a transcript of his grades nor be permitted to graduate from the University, according to the new procedure.

Nowlin said the measures were taken because many of the violations were flagrant violations and were not paying their fines in the time allowed. Under the new procedure, he said, the Traffic Court will have more strength to enforce payment of delinquent fines.

Nowlin wished to express his thanks to the entire membership for their cooperation in helping to make the Traffic Court have more effective operating unit of student government."

Nowlin announced that the last meeting of Traffic Court will be held Wednesday, May 19, at 4 p.m. and requested all members of the Court to be present.

SENIOR OFFICERS TO BE ELECTED

According to Harry Massey Senior Class President, elections will be a meeting of the newly elected class officers of the Senior Class.

It will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. in room 401, Longmire Building.

Honorary Taps Junior Women Early Tuesday

Ten outstanding Junior women were tapped by Mortar, Board, national senior honorary for women, in early-morning ceremonies Tuesday, it was learned.

Chosen on the basis of scholarship, leadership, and service, the new initiates are Mary Ann Bell, Charis Coulter, Martha Ann Garrett, Betty Jo Grubbs, Jean Humphreys, Phoebe Jackson, Jo Anne Seizer, Jane Wardlaw, Dot Womble, and Anne Zimmerman, Mortar Board president.

The Florida State Chapter of Mortar Board at Florida State University is "dedicated to the high spirit of service and fellowship, to maintain a high standard of scholarship, and to recognize and encourage leadership," as stated in the Purpose of Mortar Board also stresses outstanding junior and senior women for membership. Juniors are tapped the end of each semester.

Tally-Ho Yearbook To Be Distributed On Friday, May 21

The 1954 edition of the Florida State University yearbook, The Tally-Ho, will be ready for distribution next Friday, May 21, it was announced by Jean Sheffield, Fred J. Yoesel, director of Student Organizations.

The Tally-Ho's may be distributed differently this year, with several points of distribution, he revealed. As in the past, the distribution were not revealed, but Mr. Yoesel stated that all details would be completed by the staff's executive edition of The Florida Flambeau.

Miss Sheffield, in charge of campus organizations on campus would be contacted to help with the distribution. The spread of several distribution centers, we hope to avoid having students wait in a line three hours, an undetermined length of time."

Miss Sheffield was very pleased with the work of the Tally-Ho this year, stating, "Becky Brown and her staff have worked hard and have come out with a book that all students should be proud of."

Yoesel also commented on the promptness with which the book was published, stating that publication, "It took much work on the part of Becky, her staff and the printers and engravers," Yoesel concluded.

Collegians Give Final Concert Tuesday Evening In Opperman

Florida State University's Men's Glee Club, the "Collegians," presents their final concert of the year next Tuesday evening at 8:15 in Opperman Music Hall.

After an intensive schedule of travel and concerts, associated Mr. J. Barron Smith, director, the thirty-eight male voice choral group will close the season with a concert featuring "Jimmy Rose's, quintet, "Four Jacks and a Jill," "Three Brothers," and of course on the edge of the Forest," Second Avenue, the Central Plan with such names as "Big Chief Moore, Pee Wee Hunter, Editor The Line" Smith, and the hill trombonist, Topped Jones.

I dropped into Preacher Rolle's establishment in Miami, and it took me back to New York and made me feel at home again. At least I saw that it hadn't disappointed in the South. I'm also told that it is still going great guns in New Orleans.

Siudent Radio Station Begins Broadcasting End Of Semester

Station WFSU, student-operated radio station at Florida State University, will go on the air as soon as permission is obtained from the Federal Communications Commission, announced by faculty advisor Roy Flynn. Flynn is also director of public relations at FSU.

"The FCC has been notified that it may monitor tests now being conducted at the station," Flynn, "and it will probably clear the station for broadcasting before school is out. Station WFSU is now broadcasting test recorded music at various times throughout the day. These tests are unscheduled and have been going on about one week, said Flynn.

He added that after consent from the station will go on the air from 2 through 6 p.m. for the remainder of the semester and during the summer. "It will rely mainly upon the National Association of Educational Broadcasters for transcribed music, which will make up the main part of the schedule," he said.

Next year, WFSU will begin an eight-hour per day schedule running from 2 through 10 p.m.

The station will be FM and reception should be good within 15 miles of the Music Building, where the studio is located, he said. The Seminole Broadcasting Association will have as much time on the air as it can, one of the station's biggest service to the student and community will be its afternoon program of unhurried taped light music from 2 until 6 p.m., according to Flynn.

Flynn noted that a unique feature of the station will be its selection of programs from NAEB, which are produced in universities specializing in country and in foreign countries.

"Programs such as foreign symphonies, Chicago Roundtable, and English drama will be available to the station."

He continued that WFSU had purchased the SERAC library of over 5,000 recordings, all of which will be available for use in the summer. Also, all live programs on campus, such as concerts, speeches, dramas, plays and recitals will be broadcast by WFSU, said Flynn.

NOTICE TO SOPHOMORES AND TRANSFERS

Every student completing his or her sophomore year, and all upperclass transfer students are required to take the Graduate Record Examination in Opperman Music Hall, Wednesday, May 19, from 3-5 p.m.

The Test Service Bureau has announced that a fee of $5 will be charged to any student not taking the examination at the scheduled time.

Dixieland Jazz Is South's Own So Lets Bring It Back 'Home'

By WILLIE SMITH

I know, many of you have told us Northerners to go back from where we came. Maybe we should. Sometimes I wanted to. I have learned to love your Southern hospitality, the burning desire to know one thing before I return to your great country is "New Jersey" for the summer months.

Before home, we have something we call Dixieland Jazz. The cry is "Bring it back home." Many and more of "that stuff" Colleges in the North are flooded with it to such a degree, that it is heard at least once a week-end. Whether it be a Friday night dance, a Saturday night party, or a Sunday afternoon concert, it's there.

We got it from you Southerners and I'm told it's rather healthy came out of Basin Street in New Orleans. It's moved in Chicago and New York and took a leap to New York City. It never died in Chicago or New York and such names as Nick's in Greenwich Village (exclusive of Eddie Condon's), Jimmy Ryan's, uptown, downtown, Jazz Museum brothers; and of course on the edge of the Forest, Second Avenue, the Central Plan with such names as "Big Chief" Moore, Pee Wee Hunter, Editor "The Line" Smith, and the hill trombonist, Topped Jones.

Choral Masterpiece Presented Saturday, Sunday at Opperman

By JOYCE POTTER

King David, one of the great choral masterpieces of the twentieth century will be presented Saturday and Sunday, May 15 and 16, at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall by the University Singers and the Symphony Orchestra. It is free and open to the public.

One of the biggest and most ambitious undertakings of the School of Music, King David is the work of Arthur Honegger, late Dr. Wiley Housewright, director of the University Singers. It is so large and difficult that very few universities have the facilities to give it, according to Housewright. Major symphony orchestras and choruses usually undertake this task, he added.

This biblical psalm telling the story of David from the time he was a small boy and when the giant, Goliath, is his challenger, to the days of Israelites and his death is completely student performed with the exception of Mrs. Louise Van Dyke Sedore, who was once a professional actress and singer.

Soloist for the production are Eugenia McAvoie, Sandra Darling, Carole Nydegger, Claude Rhea and Wendell Hall Tarwater. Narrator, Sara Strane, relates the story between musical selections.

The psalm written by Arthur Honegger after the drama by René Morax, is under the direction of Dr. Housewright, and Mr. Robert Glenn who heads the University Symphonic Orchestra.

Since its premiere in 1921 at Jorat, Switzerland, King David, which is a product of the Modern French School, has been performed many times in many countries by major music organizations. In 1923 it had a three-month nightly run in Paris. In this country it was produced for the first time in 1925 by the Philadelphia Orchestra and Choir at Yale, as well as NBC and the Worcester Music Festival.

The different sections to the life of David are portrayed with songs chosen by setting of each scene. The first solo in the production is that of the Witch of Endor, sung by Miss Rhea. The scene of the triumph of the Israelites over the Philistines included the victory song "David is Great."

One of the high points of the production is Saul's visit to a witch who is supposed to be dead, to call people back from the dead. He asks for Samuel and the witch Mrs. Sedore's voice, incantation or chant.

Festival Closes With Concert Monday Night

Activities marking the opening day of the 1954 Florida State Band and Orchestral Festival were climaxed last night as approximately 1500 Florida high school musicians performed in a mass concert in Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

Twelve bands, comprising half of the attending northern Florida bands, first vote on plans for their individual marching performance and later for the massed band concert, spokesmen announced.

A second program is slated for tonight, with the drill contest scheduled to begin at 9 p.m. in Doak Campbell Stadium. Prize for Florida State University students is 50 cents upon presentation of ID card. Tickets are on sale at the Music Building and will be sold at the gate.

Festival activities scheduled for today, it was noted, are solo and ensemble judging, 9 to 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. in rooms 101 through Music Building; twirling judging on the front lawn of the Music Building at 9 a.m. 10 a.m. and between 1:30 and 3:30 p.m.; band clinic and concert conducting trials, and the dress rehearsal at 7 p.m.

Music to be played at the massed band concert tonight will include "Suwannee River" by Foster; "North-South College Alma Mater" by Bennett; "Gaucho March" by Messner; "Storm King March" by Finlayson; "Leipzig March" by Alford; "Rifle March" by Kieffman and "The Thunderbird Badner," adapted by Pillsmore.

Tomorrow, solos and ensembles will be judged in rooms 222 and 235 Music Building from 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 to 4:00 Concert will be judged from 9 a.m. until noon in Opperman, Music Hall. Later eight grades high student conducting competition will be held.

The festival, sponsored by the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce, is being held (Continued on Page 4)

For Sale: Doggies, Mongrels; They Are Swamping Campus

By BOB OUTTING

Wanna buy a dog?

If so, I am the man to see. We have on this campus, somewhere in the species of the canine kingdom, mostly nonconforming mongrels, who just will not conform to be a fine pet.

The first of the tide and the one account my heart is "Woodie". Woodie is a good looking dog except for that lousy color). This poor mutt keeps plowing up the lawn, digging holes in cars and bruises that would cause any lesser lad to drop dead. Woodie's chief claim to any personal choice for a mutt defense.

Once I tried to determine his lineage, but gave it up as a bad job and concluded that here, indeed, was another from a long line of Confusion Setters.

Next on the list is a hemi-type dog named Sam. Sam, who is the favorite of dream mysteries everywhere, is a big, rangy, shiftless type of brown and white dog. This dog undoubtedly reflects the sorry attitude of many of college youth in that he is usually concealed in the same position somewhere in the shade.

Sam's appearance is more easily recognized by his big hanging ears and also. He is horned with a conclusion between hound and Shetland pony.

Another pooch that is a favorite with me is a little cocker spaniel with a small body, big head, eyes the "particular" eyes in old cocker spaniels. This little dog is not built to unfortunately suffering from severe hallucinations. He thinks a motor scooter is his father.

Picture, if you will, that above pooch flying down street with ears held back, legs looking like drumsticks, his head turned to the right so with what HE thinks is the old man. (OH WELL Sam's (Continued on Page 4)

Hysteria Hides Communist Threat, Obscures America's True Values

Ever since the close of World War II this country has been subjected to an increasingly intense campaign of propaganda about the dangers of Communism.

There are undeniably dangers in Communism. There are certain dangers of Communist trouble in the United States.

But the "threat of Communism" has been used for cheap and vile political purposes. One cannot excuse the demagoguery as being "politics as usual," a trick to win elections. Things have gone much further than that, for the calculated hysteria has not only obscured the real dangers of Communism but has also threatened some of the basic qualities that make American democracy better than Communism.

Most Americans have come to have a conditioned response to the word Communism. Its great evil, they will tell you automatically, is "suppression of the individual." "killing of initiative or "warmongering imperialism." These are the things people have been taught to say by their sources of information.

The self-righteous, self-appointed patriots throughout the country are preventing students from studying Communism. They are preventing wherever possible any intelligent discussion of the subject. Some of these people are well-meaning, but universally they are doing great harm to the nation. We are not learning the causes of Communism. We are not taught that Communism for the most part thrives on misery, poverty and hunger. We do not realize that Communism usually is transplanted into political soils never enriched with a background of self-government and democratic institutions.

The role of the so-called intellectual in Communist activities is probably overemphasized. For the most part these "intellectuals" have been well-meaning people who have been touched by the suffering of others. They have heard the Communist line and, being unprepared to deal realistically with the problems at hand have fallen for the cliches and "easy" solutions.

The examples of these "intellectuals" shows how half-information or misinformation is dangerous in a time of crisis. It is dangerous when it turns a relative few to one extreme. It is far more dangerous when it allows a large majority to fall for the line of self-seeking politicians and be deluded into sacrificing some of their most important liberties.

We must realize that Americam democracy has never guaranteed a particular form of economics. Even as early as Thomas Jefferson there were conscious statements of this fact. Rather our economics has changed with the times and the conditions. We have evolved from frontier individualism to laissez-faire capitalism to a mixed economy with government regulation where necessary. This evolution has been completely natural. It has been in an effort to bring the greatest good to the greatest number of people. Small talk of man's being a "red" just because he is for TVA or government-regulated medicine is so much political flim-flam.

The real distinction between Communism and political democracy is the former's suppression of civil liberties. One has only to read the works of leading Communist theorists to know they believe political liberties must be sacrificed for an indefinite length of time.

Paradoxically, that is exactly the trend in present-day America. Constitutional liberties are being abrogated — not by Communists but by the loud-mouthed glory-seekers who say they are "saving" America.

People's reputations are being ruined without recourse to constitutional defenses.

Above all the cherished privilege to disagree is being trampled. Disagreement is not wanted. Conformity to a shallow type of patriotism is the order of the day.

In view of these facts it is difficult to see how even McCarthyite goals, much less methods, can be condoned. McCarthyism, a new form of fascism which has whipped up considerable public support, and not Communism, which justly has very little support, is the real menace to American freedom.

Dear Mama Seminole

Dear Mama Seminole:

H(a)l H(a)l the gang's all here. George hears war-whoops of hundreds of screaming papooses with mouths and special means for even greater volume. Big chiefs on campus make big play for more braves and maidens on reservations next year but why oh! why does play come on last week-end of semester?

Georgie with reflection on the past year of student Senate operation finds the item of most importance or of most emphasis seems to be investigation of the Flambeau which showed the infancy of certain senators which seem to reflect the opinions of the students. The investigation seemed to bring the Flambeau out as the investigator with more valid charges than the Senate could find or understand. With showing of such competancy, Georgie wonders how Senate gets powers if now has.

Here, on the other hand, can lowly braves be expected to set a better example than our elders in the MA hearings. When a group of veterans that take valuable time and money to hold MA hearings are allowed to run out on national government it does seem that our lowly student Senate who recognize the waste in such things and end them in a few hours, could be given the right to run the student body. How about it big chiefs. You set certain rules and have them put on outside those rights you reserve. Let's end this right of the big Chiefs to tell brave how to hrush teeth or to comh hair.

Love all,
Georgie Seminole

Students Should Analyze McCarthy Record

In last Tuesday's issue, The Florida Flambeau ran a story concerning a poll that was taken among students at FSU to determining their views on Senator Joseph McCarthy and his communist-hunting tactics.

It gave the opinions of only seven students but their views captured a range of feelings which generally represent a consensus of all students. It shows that many are still not fully cognizant of the overall McCarthy record, while others believe the press is to blame for spotlighting McCarthy.

These two tendencies may have come about because a careful analysis of McCarthy's record has not been made. Many students only read what they see in the headlines and McCarthy is seen in the headlines often — or he finds the paragraphs of the news story and let it go at that.

Beginning on the night of February 9, 1950, when he first launched himself into the public spotlight by claiming he had a list of 205 persons who were State Department communists, and in the ensuing weeks reneging on that figure little by little, McCarthy has continued to make many charges which in the end he could not support.

Analyzing and comparing newspaper reports would reveal this. We believe only after a continuous, careful and overall study of the McCarthy record, can one judge the man entirely. In doing this, you have the answer for what McCarthy stands for.

VISIONS OF VICTORY
Library: The 'Ulysses' Plight?

Three outstanding newspapers, The New York Times, New York Herald-Tribune, and The Washington Post-Times Herald, after a careful study and analysis of McCarthy's Fort Monmouth investigations definitely proved that McCarthy had found no supposed espionage or Communism.

The problem of overplaying McCarthy in newspapers has been raked over the coals many times. We will cite a recent incident by a Manhattan, Kansas newspaper who thought the same thing. Therefore, they decided to shift all McCarthy stories from page 1 to page 3. There was strong disagreement from other dailies, and one, The Lawrence Courier-Journal said in an editorial that we think comes as close to answering the overplaying as any that could be offered: "Banishing McCarthy to the inside of the paper suspends the one rule on which a newspaper can be run. That is the pure act of news judgment. Men handling the news have to make the delicate decision each day as to which stories will be of paramount interest to their readers . . . the man who can run a newspaper decides to 'play down' the news of any individual, he is fooling with the fiercest sort of fire . . . In his news columns . . . he must observe the single standard: is it news? McCarthy is news, all over America, and almost every day. Publicity also generates him . . . Publicity will not save him, if the public grows weary of him and stops reading about his activities."

Vance's Plight Is Teaching Too Well

By BRUCE GALPHIN

I could not leave Florida State without paying tribute to the one man who I believe has the clearest conception of the purposes and methods of education.

At this university Earl Vance seems to be fighting a losing battle to keep a clear and constructive plan for education before the eyes of the educationists.

The program which he conducted so successfully in his years as head of the department of journalism has been abolished. The intellectually provocative courses he originated have either been dropped from the curriculum or are in danger of being removed now. The kind of education he advocates so articulately is being shunned throughout the university by a blind wave of technical, trade-school courses.

Vance's influence is imprinted indelibly as the thousands of students he has taught believe the same here in 1978. A mild and temperate man, he nonetheless has shifted the fire of students, administration, to make him aware of the world he lives in, to look "quite through the deeds of men."

This ability to develop students' powers of critical analysis has often brought Vance the displeasure of the powers that be. Vance's philosophy is that our actions and beliefs are stronmly influenced by our sources of information. We are often induced to act against our better interests not out of stupidity but rather out of ignorance.

But he believes all people are essentially educable. Once informed of the truth they will look after their interests. Teaching people to act in their own best interests and the best interests of the country demands they learn the true from the false. It means destroying the false idols of popular opinions. It requires a certain disillusionment about our customs and ideals.

And naturally it involves an understanding of how persons in power attempt to maintain the status quo. It rips naked all shamanism. In doing so it has angered the wrath of those who are profiting by the deception.

So while Vance's courses through the years have produced devoted and intelligent students, they have not always been so pleasing in official circles.

I need not speculate on the annoyance and displeasure that the fact remains that Vance has been pushed more and more into the background

Is Having A Bad Case Of Nostalgics

By AL PIERCE

Hmmm . . . Is Florida having bad case of nostalgics. Is got big nose-wiping sessions over packing up Duck Pond and the Law Building? Is writer's room looking like small swimmin' hole after every class? Is sting out three years' collection of mash-mooh.

Picture, please. Alabaster silting on top of four-foot high pile of old Flambeaus, matchbooks, pencils, pens, bubble-bent coat-hangers, snapshots, empty wine bottles (now used for candlesticks), and 3,000 Student Party stickers for car which I still have. Sniff.

Is Junk pile graded on down from top to all corners of room and azmiest door . . . comes a knock on door . . . "Come in, but be careful—is in precarious position." Neighbor pushes hard exinet door, shoves pile of junk, dislodges cocktail mixer and assorted lovely items to floor as junkpile levels out to two feet . . . comes voice "Sa, what you doing?" . . . Is then built "Knitting a Persian rug. Wot's it look like I'm doing!" . . . Neighbor mutters and stumbles over pile of junk.

Is coming back "Wot you giving away?" . . . Immediately is loading up neighbor's arms with choice articles saying "is very valuable thing" . . . Is then (forcing bent, beal-up hot plate on top of armload and running like blazes) "Is Red Francuco earthquake on and of time" . . . Is then back with group of inmates carrying off sentimental nothings till finally is alone. Is then pick up big basket of valuable stuff to dump in trash can. THE DISSENTER
Student Gov't Merits Up To Students

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Student government seems to many little more than a laboratory for the student interested in politics or in personal prestige. It is a place where the big politics not with the elected officials, but with the members of the student body on campus.

There is no question that student government affects practically many matters which are now controlled by the university administration. The real issue is not what student government means relatively little.

Yet one cannot look at the election returns, which show that only about one-fourth of the one-third of the eligible students bother to cast ballots, and honestly say that student government deserves to have more power than it does.

The students who are actively interested or involved in student government are the students they know what it is doing are in the minority. Those who don't drop by the polls and condescend to cast ballots do not swell the number to more than a small minority.

No officer was elected this Spring by a majority of those eligible to vote for him.

Some of these men had don't care. Some are so lost that they do not know the campaigns are in progress or that elections are being held.

The student who complains that when student government shows it is interested in student welfare on many matters which are now controlled by the university administration, they are not using their student government means relatively little.

They also consider campus politics "beneath us" are the ones who scream the loudest when something they don't like happens.

Much of the indolent majority does not realize is that the worth and power of student government can only be measured by the value of the student interest that is its liberty and its refinement.

When the thirteen states of the Confederadoon ratified a federal constitution the were no existing government worth the mention.

Through local initiative and interest they made one.

It is that way here. Student government is what it means to anything unless it represents a majority of the students.

Those few who attended the student government installation ceremonies last night in the dormitories, fraternities, sororities, and from specialty groups are those of the students.

There are many merits to the idea of a bicameral system as the senator would be in direct constant, contact with his constituents. When one doesn't them every day. He would be in office would be dodging interests and common goals.

Interest would be aroused. The senator would be highly represented, instead of indirectly represented by a few people with unpractical and merely symbolic class system.

The man who can easily avoid the ballot bonna now need worry he need put no encouragement on the lobby of his dormitory.

Class executives could be elected at the same time.

The idea need not result in an overly-large Senate. There could be a senator from each area of 300 constituents—floors or dorms.

Elections Illegal, But Leave Them That Way

Add this to your did-you-know department: Did you know the entire class elections were conducted illegally?

Terrible, isn't it?

We want to go on record as approving the illegal method. Please, Please, Please. Don't let's go through that again.

But—they were illegally conducted, because the votes were counted by the IBM electronic scorer. The old elections code didn't provide for such counting, so former elections chief Bill Stancik had to get special permission from the Student Senate. Unfortunately, the second section of the bill provides for use of the IBM system only for the student body elections.

This doesn't exactly make the newly elected officers illegitimate, but it does go to prove something, doesn't it?

Hollywood Isn't All Chocolate Cake

By DAVID DREIS

When you hear stories about the shallowness of Hollywood's stars, you can pretty much take it for the truth if Dick Wesson's viewpoint means anything.

Wesson, building up to one of movieland's top comics, was under contract to Warner Brothers and was given supporting billing in their top grade productions from The Desert Song to Calamity Jane. Almost everyone around wondered for the comic with the big broad smile.

Then without any warning, Warner Brother decided to cut costs and dropped many of its leading actors. One of the names on the Drop List was Dick Wesson, funny-looking guy of it was that Dick had no inking of it until many of his formerly "close" friends started walking on the other side of the street. He moved toward a director of his last picture, to find that he was busy in a meeting and a wave of the hand. He thought something was up. When he came out of the top man's office he knew what had happened.

Now the young comedian is free-lancing and yet is trying to latch on with another studio. He's finally easy for an established star to free-lance, usually their future is secure. However, a newcomer looks only for advancement and has a rougher time of it.

Katherine Grayson bowed out of her Metro contract because she could not see eye to eye future with Mario. She'll come back in town on her terms now. Gable is one of the few stars to free-lance and get an M-G-M production at the same time. He's a smart cookie. He quit the studio so he'd be eligible to get the pension. He couldn't get it if he'd stayed with them. He's never worked for anyone but Mairo these many years.

Getting back to our original subject, however, Wesson believes that Hollywoodites are not as bad as they are painted to be and because he's not firmly established, he'll almost have to start all over again. We doubt that—unless as he says, there's shallow people.

TYRONE POWER NOTES

Pageant magazine has a fine article on Sinatra's comeback . . . shows him getting off plane with no welcoming committee . . . From The Sidelines

By Ken Kingery

Flambeau Sports Editor

With all Florida State University's sports drawn to an end, with the exception of Track, let's look over our progress for the season of 1953-54.

The ever-improving Football team, coached by Tom Nugent, master-mind of the Seminole squad, won five well-fought games, while dropping the same number. Some of the sufferers of the Indians' attack were V.M.I., N. C. State and Tampa. Next-years' squad will be, if grades permit, strengthened by a whole host of newly-acquired material.

The State Champ, basketball team, finished the season in fine fashion. Only three boys will be lost, Jerry Westhafer, Duane Gordon and Edwin Reeves, to the 1954-55 squad. They should be better than last year.

Gymnkana, former NCAA Champs, placed third in the national meet this season. They will be weaker, but will be the best in the south as they were this season.

Swimmers for the Seminoles have been working out two times a week, under the direction of Coach Bim Sachs. Look for Joel Lurie, former distance man for the Seminole tankmen, to pair with Norm Shipley in the backstroke. Dick Rhoton may be trying the 150-yard medlay, leaving Ernie Stock a wide open field on the breaststroke, and relays. Mike Tschirriter may break the old 1500-meter school record next year, time will tell. Watch Bob Spaulding on the fancy diving event, next year, he's coming! All these boys went undefeated in dual-meet competition last season. Stock was the standout for the Seminole mermen. He placed 4th in the breaststroke event in the NCAA Meet. This makes Ernie, FSU's first ALL-American in this event.

The Volley-ballers, sparked by All-American, two times Howie Gould, lost in the finals in the Southern Meet in New Orleans. Rat Johnson, Bernie McCann, and others could make the team a little stronger, due to their experience.

The Baseballers finished up with a 14-9 record, but will lose "Cooter Mills," and Reed Hudson, two of the best all-round players ever to play together here at Florida State.

The Golfers had their last match cancelled, so they end up with a very fine 9-2 record. Freshmen Bunk Berry and Jack Veghe, drove the club-minded boys to another successful season. Many thanks to Coach Veller in the great work he and the boys have done.

The Netters of Florida State, won 13 matches and dropped five through the course of the season, which started April 16th. Dave Kennedy broke the four-year set-winning record in three years, he compiled 29 wins, the old record was 28. Hal Shaca was the Captain of the 1953-54 Seminoles.

The Seminole Thinclads, coached by Ken Miller, will meet the Mississippi Southern Combine this Saturday, and then that will finish their season, unless they can break away from their exams to enter the Gs. AAU's.

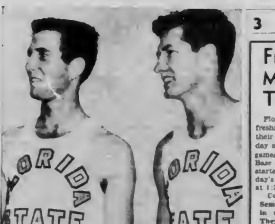
SHORT ENDS

Look out Georgia Bulldogs! the Florida State Seminole football team has signed a pile of great talent for the coming season. Choo-Choo boy, who has promised to come has a last name of Justice. That's right, a 4th cousin to the famed Choo-Choo Justice. He is an All-American from North Carolina, who will play in the All-Star Game in August. What's Tommy going to do with his other quarterbacks? He, not counting the above one has signed three others for the coming season. Corso and Mercer may be in at the half-back slots. Yet with all this talent in the backfield, the coaches say the line will be our strongest place. If this is so Auburn, and Mississippi Southern had better notice.

FSU Thinclads End Season Tomorrow

The win-hungry Florida State Seminole track team will close their regular season with a promising thriller with the Southerners from Mississippi at the West Campus Track. The first event will be at 10 A.M.

Coach Ken Miller's boys, after dropping every meet since the Macon victory, have their best chance to win their last meet of the season. Again, the problem is not enough men. The Southern boys are well-rounded as the Harriers were in the meet last week.



Here's something of interest, the Cubs visited the Mississippi team by the same score they beat us by. So, while it will be up to Carlos to fight the discus thrower from Mississippi.

Jimmy Chatell, Larry Hounsha, and Ken Jarrett will be expected to run the 440, 880 and mile run in that order. Chatell should take his 440 in easy fashion. Hounsha should establish a new school record. Jarrett, who has found it hard to keep from winning, could cop both the mile and the two-mile runs.

Dave Davis will be the FSU entry in the 100-yard dash, which should be the race of the day. Joe is also entered in the 220 low hurdles. Charlie Watson, running the best he has ever run, will be the boy to beat in the 220 low, and 120 high hurdles. If Davis' turn to win the laws, we take turn it Steve." that's all Charlie had to say about his biggest chance to win his events. Davis has been a Watson exer. ever last in Watson twice. Joe has the very best start, Watson finishes very fast, that's rough on the opposing hurdlers.

Ron Wesner, surprisingly strong from his illness, is definitely a threat in the javelin throw. He threw it 181 feet last week. Warren Strickland and Carl Green will be the shot-putting for the Tribe.

In the mile relay, Frank Bright, Charlie Watson, Davis and Chatell will make up the all-freshmen team, should take a victory there also. This will be the last time the fans and students of Florida State will see these thinclads in action, we don't know where you will all, but come on out and help them win this one.

EYE SOUTHERNERS FROM MISSISSIPPI — Tenney Brown, ace high jumper, and star Hurdler Charlie Watson, are looking for a few places in the coming Mississippi Meet Saturday.

CANTERBURY BREAKFAST

Spokesmen for Rose Hall, Episcopal student house, have announced a special breakfast to be held in honor of graduating seniors and graduate students.

The breakfast is scheduled for 9 a.m. Sunday morning, and is sponsored by the Canterbury Council.

WESLEY FOUNDATION

The Wesley Foundation, Methodist student group, will hold its annual semi-formal banquet, today. Tickets for the affair are $1.25.

The Wesley Players have announced the election of new officers. To be installed soon, are Johnnie Rodenberry, Gloria Parrish, June Smith, Ernestdeen Johnson, and Don Teal, officers for the year 1954-55.

At the evening fellowship Sunday, beginning with supper at 5 p.m. a panel discussion will be held on the subject, "The College Campus and the Christian Corrective." The panel consists of Bobby Temple, Vinson Williams, Mary Ann Howes, and Carrol English.

BAPTIST COAST PARTY

The annual BSU Coast Party honoring seniors will be held this Sunday at 1 p.m. The group will leave the Baptist Student House at 1 p.m. and go to the Clarence Bichard Cottage near Panacea. The total cost will be 85c. Dean Harland was named general chairman of the social with Betty Hill in charge of food arrangements.

Internationals Elect McGlyn New President

Sean McGlyn was elected president of the Florida State University International Students Club recently at the group's last meeting for this academic year, it was learned.

The other six new officers elected are Elka Frank, vice president; Julius Salace, recording secretary, Carol Lazuski, corresponding secretary, and Dr. Graham Bradley, treasurer. Sva Sass and Ann Sheldon are the two social chairmen for next year, it was noted.

Dr. Raymond Sheline of the Chemistry Department, in an informal talk, described his experiences in international workcamps. "Of course, it is wonderful to help building homes for people who are badly in need, but that is the secondary aim of the international, interracial and interfaith workcamps," he said.

The most important experience for the participants in a work group either is the United States, South America, or abroad, is to work together with young people from various countries with different beliefs, according to Dr. Sheline. He also stated that working together for construction purposes bring the participants much closer to each other and to the respective countries in which they work, even more than traveling or visiting them.

A picnic will be held at Wakulla Springs on Sunday, May 18.

Scholastic Honorary Adds 20 Members In Initiation Service

SENIOR HALL DANCE

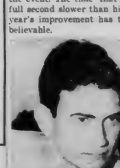
"An informal dance will be held at Senior Hall tonight," states Larry Strom, Social chairman.

Music will be provided by a Negro combo for dancers from 8 to 12 p.m. in the Upper Lounge of Senior Hall. Refreshments will be served.

"We hope that everyone will attend since there will be very few dances open to all students since exams will make its appearance soon," commented George Goldstein, secretary.

SPACE TRAVEL LECTURE

Dr. Conway W. Snyder, a senior physicist of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, will address a open meeting of Sigma Pi Sigma, Physics honor society, at 8:30 p.m. tonight in 124 Science Building. He will give a lecture on the possibilities of "Atomic Energy and Space Travel." Topics to be discussed include the science of astronautics or the theory of space travel; the theory of rocket propulsion and the possibility of chemical rockets for interplanetary travel, (if any).



Members who want to go as honor of the graduating club will meet in front of Longmire Building at 2 p.m. A second group would leave at 12:30 p.m. from the same place, Younathan announced.

In The Spotlight

By JIMMY JOANOS

Saturday morning out at west campus a Seminole named Joe Davie ran and won the hundred yard dash event in a track meet against the University of Miami in ten seconds flat. This was no surprise to the fans gathered for Joe has been turning in similar outstanding sprint performances regularly the season. What is surprising, however, is the tremendous increase in speed that the freshman from Orlando has achieved in one year's time

Last year as a Boone High School of Orlando senior he entered the hundred yard dash in the state regional meet held Cawthon Field in Jacksonville. In this encounter he failed to even qualify for the final heat of the event. The time that he ran was 11 seconds flat—a full second slower than his sprint last Saturday. The one year's improvement has truly been vast and almost unbelievable.

JOE DAVIS — Newly initiated 100 yard dash star for the Seminoles, will be entering the low-hurdles also, tomorrow on the West Campus track.

It was basically as a low hurdler and a relay man that Joe was able to earn three high school track letters not as a dash man. As a twelfth grader he placed first in Florida's Big Ten Conference meet in the 180 yard low hurdles and placed second in the Florida State High School Class AA meet. Joe ran a leg of the winning 880 yard relay team at the state.

This year as a member of Coach Miller's Seminole squad Davis has been highly versatile. In his first meet as a college trackster he set the Freshman Division 60 yard low hurdles record at the Atlantic Coast Conference Indoor Games in Chapel Hill, N. C. The distance was covered in eight and one tenth seconds. On the same night Joe placed fourth in the 60 yard dash and ran a leg on the second place FSU freshman mile relay team.

Since that first meet Joe Davis has earned points for the Seminoles in the 100 and 220 yard sprints, the 440 yard middle distance run, the low hurdles, and as a member of mile, sprint medley and 440 yard relays. Rumor has it that the day may soon come when Joe will participate for FSU in the broad jump event. Joe has won ten medals at major meets entered by FSU this year to tie for that lead with the team's high point man Jim Castrel (Joe's roommate).

Joe Davis, a strict adherer to training rule; doesn't mind working hard in practice. In a recent interview Joe in response to a question about his interest in track remarked, "I enjoy practice and the competition involved. I really enjoy track." He is high in his praises of his FSU teammates and coaches.

The Seminole track team on Saturday of this week at 10 a.m. will face the Mississippi Southern cinder team at the west campus track. This, the last Seminole home meet of the season, promises to be highly competive. It would certainly give our team—of which we have reason to be very proud—an added boost in spirit if a large crowd of us went out to see the match. Hope to see you there.

Will Johns Ride The Victory Train?

By WARREN COBB

Pardon me folks this is the Charley-Charley Choo-Choo
Track 25 ... Oh ... man ...
You can afford to board the Charley-Charley Choo-Choo
We've got a man We've got a man with a plan
Now tell the sisters and the brethren ... kind ... take NOTE
Go get ... by the dozens ... and VOTE
Knew from the beginning—Charley would be winnin
For the opposition it's the final ...
With Charley your conductor—you can never go wrong
So ... the happy passengers in ... this song
Victory bells are ringing—everybody's singing
Toot Toot! Tallahassee, here we come
There's gonna be a great rejoicin' at the station
When Charley comes ... for Charley's certain to win
Come on aboard and let his loyal subjects never roam
For the Charley-Charley Choo-Choo ... home
Toot! Toot! Tallahassee here we come

The first primary, giving Johns 250 000 votes Collins 218 000, and Odham 186,000 has led some to the conclusion that Charley will ride the victory train May 25 and Collins will be in the caboose

Johns himself says that he will receive a "vast majority" of Odham's vote because "the people who voted for Odham are the same kind of little people who supported me."

But how little are these 188,-000 people sitting on the fulcrum of the balance of power? So little in self-respect they do not resent being called "little"? So little in reason they believe a $134,058,523 road program can be paid for when there is now an estimated $37,270,381 cash-on-hand in state funds, bond sources, secondary funds, cancelled warrants, etc.? (These are the figures from the present State Road Board appointed by Acting Governor Johns).

By what alchemy this discrepancy is to be transformed into a solvent solution is more than a problem in mathematics It is a problem in metaphysics.

But if we are to swallow the bait and believe our ears, Florida will soon be an asphalt jangle. The Everglades themselves will be paved. For the Old Pros have firmly established their major premise: All God's chillun got cars—or ride trains.

So now the tracks are cleared of one obstacle—an obstinate voice in the wilderness — and the OPA (Oh Promise Anything) Express is rolling toward its chartered destination.

It passenger list, however, is a hybrid aggregation of strangers on a train. The little people are blowing the whistles and hanging out the windows with their banners waving. But up in the engineer's cab seasoned hands are pulling the throttle and throwing the switches.

Millard Caldwell, Francis Whitehair, Carl Gray, Rex Sweat, Judge Clark, and Fuller Warren are not little people

Neither is Cecil Webb, chairman of the so-called "action road board," which succeeded McCarthy's "do-nothing board," as it has been designated by Charley Johns. What he failed to point out was the tremendous deficit inherited by the McCarty board from the Fuller Warren administration. Under Dick Simpson, chairman of the "do-nothing board," this staggering deficit was finally absolved and the board was just beginning to operate in the black when Dan McCarty died an dthe Charley-Charley Choo-Choo roared in to scatter his program and policies to the four winds.

Two months later Simpson was suspended after refusing to "do a favor" for Ed Ball of Jacksonville, president of the DuPont interests in Florida

Ball is another of the boys at the controls of the Charley-Charley Choo-Choo.

Oak Ridge Physicist Addresses Honorary On 'Atomic' Energy

Dr. Conway W. Snyder, a senior physicist of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, will address an open meeting of Sigma Pi Sigma, physics honor society on "Atomic Energy and Space Travel," in room 124 Science Building tonight at 8 30 p.m

The talk will be a discussion of the scientific possibility of space travel, spokesmen said Topics discussed will include the science of astronautics or the theory of space travel; the theory of rocket propulsion; chemical rockets for interplanetary travel, and the application of nuclear energy to rocket propulsion.

The meeting is open to all interested persons, spokesmen announced.

Dr. Snyder is now doing basic research in neutron reactions in the High Voltage Group of the Physics Division at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory. He holds a BA degree from the University of Redlands, an MS from the State University of Iowa and a Ph.D. from the California Institute of Technology

Widmark Stars In Underwater Epic; Shane and Holiday Return

The silent underwater collisions of warring submarines, the suspense of secret landing parties invading a forbidden Arctic island and the staggering realism of an atomic explosion represent the powerful action in Hell and High Water, a screen play by Jesse L Lasky, Jr and Samuel Fuller, which started last Wednesday at the Florida Theater and will play for a week.

The CinemaScope production in Technicolor writes a new chapter in technical experiments by Twentieth Century-Fox, the pioneer film company The newest edition stars Richard Widmark and Bella Darvi with Victor Groncen, Gene Evans, Cameron Mitchell and David Wayne.

The film is the first spy drama in CinemaScope with its startling action filmed below as well as above the Arctic Sea. The unusual premise centers around the hand-picked crew of a self-sacrificing group of individuals from many nations who, backed by business and scientific leaders, are on a secret exploration of suspected Communist atomic shenanigans somewhere on an Arctic island.

All the action of the film is restricted to the captive-world of a submarine riding the crest of emotions unleased, be it fear desire or hope as 29 men and a woman cut their silent course into hell and high water

Still another innovation in "Hell and High Water," is the presentation of a new screen personality, BELLA DARVI, new French import. WIDMARK plays the role of the rugged he-man which he has popularized.

Coming to the State Theater this weekend in star-studded combination is Shane and Roman Holiday, two of the top pictures of the year

SHANE, starring ALAN LADD and VAN HEFFLIN is one of the most outstanding Westerns of the year. BRANDON DEWILDT was nominated for an academy award for his performance in this picture.

Aubrey Hepburn and Gregory Peck take the spotlight in Roman Holiday. Miss Hepburn received the academy award for her performance in this picture

Oliver Hobbs, local chairman of the Florida Bandmasters Association, has assisted with arrangements for the festival, it was learned. Judges for the competition are Henry Fillmore chairman, Jackie Smith, nationally-recognized twirling expert; Joseph Bergeim, chairman of the Music department north division high school, Milwaukee

Carleton Stewart, conductor of Mason City Iowa Manicipal Band; Glen Cliffe Bainnm, recently retired director of bands at Ithaca College and William D. Revelli, band director at the University of Michigan.

King Elected FTA President; Lastinger Discusses Charges

Mr Sam Lastinger, associate professor of education, led the installation of new officers and a discussion on "attacks made on public schools," at the last meeting of the Future Teachers of America Club, held Wednesday night.

Spokesmen announced that their newly installed president, Martha King, was also recently elected to the executive council of the Florida Association of Future Teachers of America at its annual meeting in Miami tory units, chartered day student organizations, and groups of two or three or four fraternities and sororities, thereby guaranteeing equal representation.

Other newly installed officers include Edna Andrews, vice-president; Ethel Geisler, secretary, and Ann Futch, treasurer.

Equally important, no one group could control the Senate.

But whatever the plan, the student body must demonstrate majority interest in student government If it does not do so, then who else will?

heard Mr Fred Vogel, counsellor for student organizations, say that student government would be given more power by the administration if it only developed a corresponding sense of responsibility

That responsibility must be exhibited first by the students themselves, for the elected officials are in theory only their mouthpieces Democratic government is government by the people. If the people do not bother with their government, it ceases to be true representative govearnment and turns into either a political forum or a runaway monster.

There are ways to arouse interest At Thursdays' installation Vogel suggested one of them. It is a method which I, as a private student, have urged for a long time Many others, in and out of government, have also suggested its adoption Representation by precinct is the plan, and it would take only a simple constitutional amendment to bring it about.

Instead of having the student senators come from such large, unwieldy groups as the four classes, they would come from

Letters to the Editor . . .

'Carousel' Is Schedule

To the Editor:

I was interested in the column by Mr. Drels which appeared in Tuesday's FLAMBEAU regarding musical productions on this campus. I am always appreciative of this type of interest in musicals and feel that one or two comments might be appropriate.

The LIGHT OPERA GUILD, for several years has attempted to produce each fall a show along the lines followed by many "Starlite Operas" throughout the country. Such fare may vary from the presentation of the ever-popular Gilbert and Sullivan operetta (e.g. The Mikado and the Pirates of Penzance) through the musical comedy type of show to the near-opera production of Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus," which we did last fall. Three years ago we staged Jerome Kern's Roberta and two year's ago our show was Victor Herbert's Sweethearts.

I am pleased to announce that in December of this year we will produce Rodgers and Hammerstein's successful Carousel. This is in keeping with the policy of variety of offering

It is not easy to select and obtain a musical comedy. For several years I have tried to obtain a musical comedy. For several years I have tried to obtain Oklahoma, for example. However, its success as a road show attraction has kept it away from the amateur market. Recent musicals are very expensive in terms of royalties Older musicals are often marked with extremely "dated" scripts despite the fact that the tunes may be excellent. Since our organization can spend only what we take it at the box office, having no other appropriation, a limited budget necessarily affects our choice

I would like to say further that we have had some very fine co-operation from the Department of Speech in past years Mr. Charles Reimer and Mr. Russ West have been instrumental in some of our lighting and scenery schemes and have contributed many hours of effort in this direction I have always been happy to see music students in Speech Department productions and we have always welcomed Speech majors in tryouts for roles in our shows As you know a happy combination of singing and acting ability is difficult to obtain, not only on a university campus, but in the professional theater, as well.

Incidentally, may I say that in view of the very short time for preparation and the large number of people involved on the stage, I felt that the directors and members of the Choral Union did an amazingly skillful job of preparing a very exacting production of Il Trovatore recently. The experience obtained through these presentations is valuable.

Campus interest in and appreciation for all of our musical activities at FSU are essential to the continued success of the many fine organizations here We always strive to give the finest performance possible and will continue to do so.

Sincerely,
ROBERT L. BRIGGS,
Director,
Light Opera Guild.

'Pressure Groups'

To The Editor,

When I ran for Junior Senate in the recent elections, I promised my voters that I would strive to get liberal things efficiently done in Senate Although I was not elected, I still will do my best to accomplish these ends as a one-man "pressure group." With this in mind, I attended last Tuesday's Student Senate meeting (the new Senate's first). To put it mildly, I was appalled! The race had been full of "sincerity, capability, liberality," etc. I found it lacking in Senate. Parliamentary procedure was at a low ebb Also evident was a lack of comprehension of the Student Body Constitution

A move was made to penalize those who leave Senate early (just as is now done to those who arrive late). There was much hemming and hawing and it did not pass. Of three I noted who openly spoke against the proposal, two were not present at adjournment!

A person takes upon himself a major obligation to represent the students when he is elected to Senate. A person cannot represent when he is not present. A true demonstration of sincerity would have been to unanimously pass this resolution without further consideration!

There is no excuse for this state of affairs. Many of the Senators are returning and should already know parliamentary procedure and their constitution (since they helped write it); the rest have had ample time to become familiar with these aspects of student government.

Many constructive things can be done if the Senators are willing to work for them The title "Senator" is not meant to label a person winning a popularity contest; it labels a person with an obligation to the students

Sincerely,
Jack Norton

impression that because we contracted the "disease" from you, that you would still have that crazeeee type music still in existence down here.

Where did it go???

I've looked and I've looked but to no avail. Few people seem to know what it is Others say, "That it went out years ago." I've even heard rumors that it is "square." God forbid! With such great men as Roy Eldridge and Louis Armstrong still blowing strong

You Southerners really gave the nation a type of art that will live forever in the world of jazz. However, it seems that it has been forsaken where it originally was created. The only place the fire is being stoked is in the North where they appreciate the music you sent to us.

I would like to be enlightened as to why it has been cast from its original source. Certainly you're not ashamed of it. The type music played around here can't touch the "drive" issued forth from such songs as "That's a Plenty," "Saints," or "Muscrat Ramble." What happened to it man???

gram is "The Lament of Gilhoa," which is a song by the women for their men who have fallen in battle. The largest scene is the dance before the ark in which a song of praise and Thanksgiving is sung to the Lord who promises to be with the people.

In the scene of "David and Bathsheba" David sees Bathsheba bathing and falls in love with her. However, Bathsheba already has a husband. Not to be defeated, David sends her husband out into battle to be killed and then Bathsheba is his. For this sin he has committed, David is punished by the Lord, with the loss of his first child.

In the final scene, David dies and Solomon is crowned as the new ruler of the Israelites

Elton Trueblood, Colwell to Speak To Senior Class

Baccalaureate Set For May 28; Senior Class Day Is 21st.

Dr. Elton Trueblood, chief of Religious Policy of the United States Information Service and Dr. E. C. Colwell, dean of the faculty of Emory University, have been announced as the principal speakers at the baccalaureate services and commencement exercises of the '54 class, respectively.

Dr. Vasilia Shores, chairman of the faculty committee on graduation, revealed the names of the principal speakers in an announcement at the official schedule of graduation ceremonies recently.

Commencement services for school and graduating seniors are scheduled for May 28 at 8 p.m. in Doyle S. Campbell Stadium on the FSU campus, President Doak S. Campbell, President of the State University, will confer degrees after the commencement address by Dr. Colwell.

Trueblood, who recently visited the FSU campus during Religious Emphasis Faith Week, will speak at the baccalaureate services scheduled for 8 p.m. May 28 in the Stadium, said Dr. Shores.

Dr. Shores also announced that dress rehearsals for both the commencement and baccalaureate exercises. Graduating seniors are required to attend the rehearsals at 5 p.m. May 27. Additional information concerning the rehearsals may be obtained from Dr. Shores.

Dr. Shores, dean of women, said the commencement exercises and baccalaureate services would be held in the Doyle S. Campbell Stadium in case of rain. Dr. Shores also announced that the commencement Formal, if it is decided, is to be held after the graduation exercises, beginning at 9 p.m. in the Duval Hotel Ballroom.

Other senior class activities include Senior Class Day, Friday, May 21, to be climaxed with a program at 5 p.m. in the Amphitheatre, announced Jane Scott, chairman of Class Day.

The chairman requested all graduating senior women to wear white dresses on that day, and that the men wear white shirts, ties and coats.

The Class Day program will be led off with a procession of the seniors and their honorary brothers and sisters. Chris Jones and Chester Maddox will be presented will present the class flowers written by Jane Scott. Nannette McClain and Leonie Gale.

The class poem will be read by Jo Hamilton. Jim Jordan and Jim Coleman will sing the class song written by Lenore Lee.

During the service, seniors will hand over their caps to junior brothers and sisters when the class president gives his or her junior brother, a student at FSU, Scott reveals. President A. B. Martin will make the presentation to the University on behalf of the class, after which the class will send the Committee heads for Class Day are Nancy Meyers, music; Ann Hendrick, art, and Norma Jean Prater, publicity.

Heads of the graduating class are Colin English, president; Charles McDaniel, vice-president; Sonya Meyers, secretary; Audrey Oliver, treasurer; Annette Morrow, social chairman; and Judy Simkins and Bobby Bowden, marshals.

LIBRARY BOOKS DUE MAY 26

All students, including graduating students, must return library books on or before Wednesday, May 26, according to H. Walker, Registrar, has announced.

Additional charge of 25 cents per book will be made if a book is not returned by date. Also announced is the following schedule of library hours during exam week: May 21, Friday, 8:00 A.M.-5:00 P.M. May 29, Saturday, 8:00 A.M.-4:30 P.M.

SENIOR PROM MONARCHS . . . Jane Conyers and Colin English, Jr., were crowned queen and king of the Junior-Senior Prom Saturday night. Both outstanding seniors, they were chosen by by earlier vote of the senior class, and crowned by A. B. Martin, Vice-President of Florida State University.

Conyers, English New Royalty; Crowned Saturday In Suwannee

June Conyers and Colin English were crowned queen and king of the Junior-Senior Prom by Dr. A. B. Martin, Vice-President of Florida State University, Saturday night at 10:30, in the Suwannee Room.

The Royal Court was comprised of students elected by the juniors and seniors and included Polly Lassiter, Gail Tomlinson, Ann Yates, Joanne Hicks, Carolyn Calhoun, and Dot Johnson. The men in the Court were Milton Carothers, Fuzzy Knight, Kirk Chadwick and Charlie Milner.

A night club theme was carried out for decorations, centering around the idea of a "Blue Room." A blue revolving chandelier, spotlights, palms, and candle-lighted tables around the edge of the room completed the scheme.

Small white square of cake with the numerals 1954 and 55 were served as refreshments and the clever cigarette girls, Joyce Reynolds and Virginia Hunter, gave out samples of Camels and Philip Morris cigarettes, thus adding to the night club theme.

Harry Mosley, newly elected President of the senior class, and Shirley Traxler, Sally Hammer, Joanne Sanders, Helen Hamilton, Maxine Fletcher, and Mary Rebsamen served on the decorations committee.

Mary and Nancy Morris, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Morris, were flower girls in the royal court while Sandra Farquharson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Farquharson and Billy Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Leap acted as crown bearers.

TALLY-HO OPENINGS

All students interested in working on the 1954 Tally-Ho yearbook are invited to attend a meeting today at 5 p. m. in the Tally-Ho office in the Longmire Building.

TRAFFIC COURT

The Student Traffic Safety Court will meet for the last time tonight at 8 p.m. in the Westcott Building, announced Chief Justice Pinky Nowlin.

Tally-Ho's Set For Circulation End Of Week

The 1954 Tally-Ho yearbook will be distributed to students Thursday and Friday of this week at stations located in Westcott, Longmire, and the Student Center, Becky Brown, editor of the yearbook, has announced.

The yearbooks will be distributed between the hours of 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. Thursday, and between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Friday. Stations will be located in Mrs. Grace Bateman's office in the Student Center, Room 103, Student Accounts, in Westcott, and in the APO room in Longmire Building, officials revealed.

Students are requested to present their ID cards at the stations. One-semester students will be asked to present a receipt from the Business Office, where they must pay a fee of $2.50 for the yearbook.

Becky Brown, editor of TALLY-HO, expressed her appreciation for the hard work and good job the staff had done on the 1954 TALLY-HO.

Special thanks, she added, go to Janice Middlebrooks for the cover drawing. Miss Middlebrooks is a graduate art student at the University who actored on layout and art work for the 1954 Tally-Ho.

Gymnastic Honorary Initiated At FSU; Named 'Gymnastica'

By BOB GUTTING

A new honorary fraternity Gymnastica has been organized at Florida State by Dr. Hartley Price.

According to Dr. Price, the fraternity will be limited to the gymnasts alone, but will be open to any one who has aided the organization.

The purpose of this organization, which is slated to be a permanent one, will be to "promote and maintain an interest in gymnastics, tumbling and pageantry, to cultivate an appreciation for gymnastics, to cultivate an appreciation for beauty of line, of form, and of movement, to promote a fraternal spirit among members of Gymnastica, and to foster gymnastics."

Charter members of the FSU chapter include gymnasts Dick Gutting, Carmine Regna, Joe Regna, Don Holder, Larry Wooten, Dick Ireland, Jack Miles, Pat Fennell, Gutting, Stephen and Gene Rabitoli, both currently serving with the Army, and Jack Sharp, now in the Air Force.

Other charter members who are not gymnastic are Jay Sewastynas, Clarence Hale, Mary McNutt, and Mrs. Hartley Price, who were nominated for membership for active participation and support of Gymnastics and gymnastics on campus.

At a meeting Tuesday, May 18, seven pledges of the newly-formed organization will be initiated. These include Jim Pinkard, Rafael Lecuona, Jim Tisdale, Mary Lou Brady, Cindy Fennell, Gutting, Stephen Koder, Don Rapp, Dorothy Rich, Barbara Kinnaird, Frances Baker Thurlow, Barbara Vickers, Anita Wall and Benny Wallace. Ultimately, it was originally formed by Dr. Price in 1933 at the University of Illinois, but fell off from the budget because of the depression, a group of gymnasts petitioned Dr. Price to put on a gymkhan show. Their petition was successful and they formed their own organization, Gymnastica, under the sponsorship of Dr. Price.

The Gymnastics organization on this campus is destined to be the Alpha chapter. Among other things it hopes to stress Olympic Games. Bill Rosenblum, Don Holder, and Rafael Lecuona are working hard to will Rosenblum also represented the United States in competitions against Czechoslovakia, Japan, and in the Pan American games in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Dick Gutting, another charter member, is also well known in gymnastic circles for having participated in the Olympiads by winning two National transmoline

GatlinResolution ProtestsChange; Calls It Unethical

Introduction of a resolution by Junior Senator Ken Gatlin "protesting the unjust, unethical and undemocratic action of the administration in altering the student constitution" is expected to lead the order of business in today's Student Senate session.

Gatlin's resolution, which also states that the altered sections will not be recognized by the student senate as the official Constitution of the Student Body, came as a result of President Doak Campbell's unprecedented move in making two changes in the after the constitution had been ratified.

In a story in Friday's issue of The Florida Flambeau, it was revealed that a "deal" had been made with giving the President arbitrary veto power over student senate legislation and denied the senate the right to confirm or reject the changes made after the ratification of the student-faculty budget committee.

Gordon Gaster, men's vice-president also announced that a final report was upcoming from a committee studying the possibilities of having voluntary accident insurance here. He revealed that the committee would request that it be instituted and that the plan be ready for consideration by the senate by September 21.

Also on the agenda for today's session is a report from the May 1954-55 senate and the last for the school year, in the report of a special committee studying a resolution introduced by Senator James Moore and Jesse Raiford last week requesting the administration change the constitutional amendment. The resolution asks that only unmarried students under 21 be requested to live on campus.

Further business to be consummated by the senate, Gatlin says, is confirmation of Student Body President Pete Nimkoff's five cabinet appointments and his appointments to the Summer Elections Commission.

The five students to be confirmed for cabinet positions include Bobby Graham, Phoebe Jackson, Betty Ann Monroe, Jim Coleman and Jack Bryan. The cabinet positions were discussed at an open meeting last week.

Also coming before the Senate today is the Student Activity Fee budget hearing, to be held in a meeting to the Organizations and Finance Committee. The budget hearing is expected to be held by chairman of the finance committee and a vote sent to committee in favor of a motion to accept the budget without consideration.

Knowledge On Foreign Affairs Slight; Indo-China Deal 'Hazy'

By ESTHER RANCIER

A recent poll of student's knowledge of current events indicates that students have fallen prey to the idea that current affairs are foreign to them.

Because college students have often been accused of ignorance on current topics, the poll was made to decide the validity of the charge, using the question, "Do you think the United States should go to war over Indo-China?"

Although the poll used a small cross-section group of students, it seems significant that each one questioned declared, "I don't know." Ultimately, however, each was able to show some grasp of the situation in their statements.

Kenny Peterson, Lake City, a business major, declared, "I don't understand it. I'm not good enough experience in Korea without going to Indo-China."

An Iranian graduate student in music education, Harpic Dedhor-Dumanian, had just the opposite opinion, stating, "I'd like to see them go to war because that will put a stop to Communism once and for all."

Social work major, Sonya Marcellino, declared she doesn't want a war because, "If there's a war in Indo-China, there'll be a war in the whole world."

"Unless France is absolutely unable to take care of the situation," Virginia Lee, English major, doesn't believe the United States will go to war. "However," she continued, "I think we should fight along with the other United Nations if other Communists rest the French."

Dr. Fred Darling is trying to draw out to get us involved because they know we are vitally concerned," said Anne Hoffman, a piano major. "The government considers Indo-China the first line of defense in the east, but they don't want to start another Korea," she concluded.

Sigma Kappa, Sigma Chi Win Annual Little Brown Jug Sing

Sigma Kappa and Sigma Chi, men and women's social fraternities won fist places in the annual Little Brown Jug contest sponsored by Sigma Alpha Iota and Phi Mu Alpha, national musical honorary fraternities, this past weekend.

Sigma Kappa won the cup for their rendition of Marilyn Evans' "Of thee I sing, Baby," while the Sigma Chi's took top honors with a "Sigma Chi Medley" from "Kansas City," from the musical, Oklahoma.

Other finalists in the Campus Sing contest, in which 15 groups participated, include Alpha Gamma Tau Omega, and Lambda Chi Alpha second and third places, respectively in the men's division.

Delta Zeta and Chi Omega, national social sororities, took second and third places, respectively, in the women's division. Each group sang two selections.

Judges for the contest included Miss Betty Jane Grimm, Mr. John Surrat, Mrs. Walter James, Mrs. Eugene Crabb, and Mr. Harold Chapman.

Wilmot Jones, member of Sigma Alpha Iota was the mistress of ceremonies. Gail Jackman, senior in the music school, entertained the audience by singing and playing piano songs and other popular songs while the judges reached a decision.

The groups were judged on the basis of rhythm, intonation, tone, balance, blend, diction, appropriateness of song and showmanship.

1954 ID Card Is Admittance To First Tilt

This Spring semester's student ID cards will be used to obtain tickets to Florida State University's football season opener with the University of Georgia next Fall, according to announcements.

Eddie Cubbon of the FSU athletic business office said yesterday students can present their ID card for the September 18 game. He noted incomplete details will be instructed during Orientation Week about obtaining tickets. He said ID cards should be presented at the West Campus Athletic Ticket Office by 5 p.m. September 17, or by noon p.m. the day of the game, at the gate ticket booth at Campbell Stadium.

Cubbon said he expects a record crowd at the FSU-University of Georgia tilt in September. He urged all students, except graduating seniors who expect to be back, to "hold on to your ID card over the summer."

Fraternity Rushing Delayed; Scheduled For September 25

Fraternity rushing at Florida State University will be delayed next fall according to an announcement by new Inter-Fraternity Council president Bob Sundberg.

Rushing for men, according to Sundberg, will take place between September 25 and October 2. Formal rushing will not be commenced rushing the first week of school, which would fall next semester the week of September 19.

Sundberg also announced newly elected officers of the IFC. They include Jim Crews, Kappa Alpha, vice-president; Jodine Hall, Sigma Nu, treasurer; and Dale Winegarden, Phi Delta Theta, secretary.

SUMMER QUARTERS REQUESTED

All residents of Tallahassee and nearby towns who have available living quarters are urged to register them for rental during the FSU Summer session, stated the Director of Men's Residence Halls, Robert Brewer, Jr.

Brewer requested interested parties to contact his office immediately to Bryan Hall, extension 4321. He added that a listing of the rentals is very much appreciated.

"I do not think it should make any statement about it until I've had an opportunity to read the decision."

Dr. Culpepper, declining personal comment, said "I have no opinion as to what effect it will be discussed in the Board of Control's meeting in Gainesville." The meeting to be held in Gainesville, Monday, on the FSU campus, begins at 9 a.m. and lasts all day.

Dr. Culpepper, former Dean of Students Welfare at FSU, was asked if, after the Supreme Court decision, he felt that the End of segregation FSU and Florida Public Schools would be continue as separate institutions will no racial restrictions.

"I don't know at this point," he replied.

Dr. Culpepper added, "We are interested in getting information concerning the ruling before we make any study for the purpose of determining course of action."

Pete Nimkoff, president of the Student Body, issued positive comments. "As the chief executive, "Ordinarily it's not my business to comment on a legal opinion before you read it, but from what I have heard it is a progressive and liberal, and on the basis of the Florida Constitution, I think the court's only choice."

The Florida Flambeau could not be reached for comment at the office of Acting-Governor Charley Johns. Governor Johns was also out of town and had not made any statement. They added that they had been officially informed of the decision.

Dr. Doak Campbell, officials at the State Headquarters of Levoy Collins were also unable to make any statements. Collins is running candidate seeing in Jacksonville.

NOTICE TO SOPHOMORES AND UPPERCLASS

Junior English examinations, required of all second-semester sophomores and upperclass transfer students, will be given tomorrow from 3 p.m. through 5:00 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.

A fee of $5 will be charged to any student making the examination. It was announced

High Court Bans RaceSegregation Without Dissent

Most Queried Here Noncommittal; Await Further Information

Segregation of white and Negro students in public schools is unconstitutional, according to a unanimous decision of the United States Supreme Court. Released yesterday, the opinion climaxes months of deliberation by the nation's highest judicial authority.

The decision, denying "separate but equal" arguments, said that segregation denies Negro children equal educational opportunities and is a denial of the Fourteenth Amendment.

According to the Associated Press, the Court's opinion said in part: "We come then to the question presented: Does segregation of children in public schools, solely on the basis of race, even though the physical facilities and other 'tangible' factors may be equal, deprive the children of the minority group of equal educational opportunities? We believe that it does.

"We consider it in the field of public education the doctrine of separate but equal (sic) has no place. Separate educational facilities are inherently unequal(illegible)."

"Therefore we hold that the plaintiffs (Negro parents from the Topeka, Kansas area) case to the court) and others similarly situated for whom the action has been brought are, by reason of the segregation complained of, deprived of the equal protections of the laws guaranteed by the 14th amendment."

In its decision the Court announced that the questions of how and when to end the practice will be settled in hearings this fall. It added that the Attorney Generals, who have permit or require segregation—it is number—will be given representations in other hearing as amici curiae. (friends of the court).

The decision aroused only noncommittal comment from Dr. Doak S. Campbell, FSU president, and Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, executive secretary of the Board of Control, which governs FSU, Florida A&M University, and the University of Florida.

Dr. Campbell said "I presume our state authorities will follow decisions and will be governed accordingly.

Tourist Survey Reveals Habits; 'Influences' Of Florida Visitors

Bob Veley, a graduate student in hotel and restaurant management, has completed a study of tourists in factors that influence tourist travel, practices, and buying attitudes toward tourist facilities and lists of best customers from the Sociology Department. tourists were interviewed during a period of five months, the author found that:

Sixty-four per cent of the tourists originated east of the Mississippi River. Of these, 56 per cent came from the Southwest. The average tourist spent seven days in Florida. Seventy-five per cent of the tourists stopped in Tallahassee for one night lodging.

Over 58 per cent of the tourists were in the 30-50 age bracket, time between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. Thirty-four per cent of the tourists preferred to obtain information of a city compared to 18 per cent who preferred the outside.

Forty per cent of the tourists knew about the Capitol Buildings in Tallahassee and 27.3 per cent knew about Florida State University. Thirty per cent of the tourists learned about the Tallahassee attractions by word of mouth. Fifty-five per cent of the tourists stop at tourist homes more than about the Tallahassee attractions.

Over 67 per cent of the tourists come to Florida because of recommendations by friends. Seventy-five per cent enjoyed Florida at least a little more than other resort areas they had visited.

Climate and scenery were the two most liked features about Florida. Chinese and traffic problems were the two most disliked features about Florida. Seventy-five per cent enjoyed Florida at least a little more than other resort areas they had visited.

Outgoing Editor Assesses FSU After 4 Years: Farewell Editorial

By BRUCE GALPHIN

(Author's note: It is customary for the graduating editor of THE FLORIDA FLAMBEAU to write a farewell editorial. In this I would like to make a brief assessment of the FSU I have come to know in four years.)

Florida State University is like a giant in chains. Or rather, it is like a precocious child whose body grew faster than its head. Most of its energies seem to have been devoted to doing rather than thinking.

When one looks at the history of any fast-growing nation or institution, this emphasis on physical growth is not surprising. It is customary and fully to be expected. To grow from a war-time women's institution into a postwar, boom-time coeducational university was a great change. It meant considerable expansion of facilities. The great push of veterans did not allow much time for planning, either, and a rather haphazard building was reasonable if not desirable. Like Topsy, FSU too often "just grew."

Things are different now. In some respects the university is still growing, the enrollment has leveled off for the last two or three years. There is more time now for conscious construction. It is time to take stock of where the institution is and where it is going.

Such work is being done now, notably by the University Study Committee. But one of the most part the problem is still considered some one else's. This committee doubtless realizes that improvement for the future demands criticism of the present. Often people object to criticism on the grounds that it is not constructive. But if it is wise criticism, it at least describes the problem and points out faults that need changing.

Causes are not always easy to trace. If the students, the administration or the faculty can be said to have one failing that is not to say any one of these groups errs deliberately. Rather it is to describe a situation or point a finger. No fault may be ascribed to one group but the cause may lie in part in another. The following analysis, then, is not meant to be harsh but to provide food for thought.

The Student Body

The student body of FSU is typically pleasure-seeking. Learning to use one's leisure time and to mix socially is part of an education, of course, but it should be kept in proper perspective. Holding a cigarette with a studied casualness, learning the latest dance step and dressing as trade are thought far more important than finding what makes the world tick and discussing important current affairs.

The FSU student wants more than anything else to submerge himself into the herd. He is terrified at the thought of being unconventional. His idea of being daring is to stage a fraternity panty raid or work himself up needlessly over such things as Bermuda shorts.

He scorns his fellow students who are more interested in ideas than fashions, and this scorn is often turned to bitter snobbery. He almost makes a fetish out of avoiding controversial issues. In a world where international relations are taut as a tightwire, he is painfully uninformed about such things as Indo-China, Communism, trade barriers, civil liberties and imperialism.

When a man does not think, then some one does his thinking for him. This is the case at FSU. The typical student disdains even the mention of political controversy. "Politics! Silly.' Means nothing to me'" he grunts. Then when student government passes an unpleasant rule or allows the administration to impose unfavorable regulations, they scream like stuck pigs.

The students do not realize the strength of numbers. They do not see the value of concerted action. They do not know that no rule can be effective when an organized majority opposes it. But even if they realized this, they would not know what to fight for. Their objectives are not crystallized, but rather an amorphous mass.

Student government itself needs to wake up. Its first trouble is that it contains too many glory seekers. These students do not have a clear idea of what the students need. They tend to look at the campus as it's shallow level. They do not think in terms of ultimates or even secondary effects. No matter how optimistically student government begins each year, it usually lapses into the doldrums.

This is not to say there are not a few informed and devoted public servants in student government. But these few have disheartenningly tough sledding.

This is the picture of the FSU students, but they are more to be pitied than censured. They are no more than their education system inspires them to be. They are only mirrors of their times.

The Faculty

The faculty ought be expected to enlighten and inspire the students. There are a number of excellent teachers on this campus who do just that. For the most part, though, the faculty leaves something to be desired. There is not enough bold spirit of leadership. Sometimes there is no more clear conception of the purpose of education than among the students.

First, there are some sub-standard, inferior teachers. Not much can be said about these except that they exist and add nothing to the college scene.

Then there is a very bad outbreaking of what may be called professional egotism. This disease is common among even the better teachers. Its symptoms are a demand that students concentrate almost exclusively in the teacher's own field. They just can't overcome the belief that to be educated is to be master in one area only. They pass this belief on to the unsuspecting student.

Finally, there is a widespread and pitiable timidity. Many professors know what would be good for the university but are afraid to assert themselves. They are for the most part fully aware of what is not. They know salary increases are powerful tools to maintain a well disciplined faculty.

But one wonders whether sometimes it is not more important to live with one's conscience than with a surplus in the bank. It is indeed shocking when professors in the finest flowering of academic freedom in America submit to the challenge a suggestion that the university constitution be rewritten to "bring it in line with practice" when that practice is obvious abrogation.

The Administration

Ultimately the direction the university takes is up to the administration. At the same time one must remember the administration serves a public relations function and as such must bear the brunt of outside criticisms. It must defend the school as nearly as possible the educational demands of the Florida public. It must pacify the militant fanatics and super-patriotic groups.

But one wonders how far it is necessary to compromise. One wonders where diplomacy ends and educational ineffectiveness begins.

One trouble on the administrative level is top-heaviness. Many other universities of comparable size have only three or four schools. There is really a case for so many schools here. Many belong in the College of Arts and Sciences. Reorganization would cut down on expenses and duplication of course.

A second trouble is an over-eagerness to have plans approved. This leads to an attempt to keep the faculty and students in the dark at times. Naturally the administration wants its plans carried through, but the American tradition is one of compromise. Where people who participate in a decision, the better that decision is in general. There is no reason why college government should deviate far from national attempts at democracy.

Finally, there is little tolerance for dissenting opinions among the students. There is no eagerness to help them achieve self-government. As the policy-seekers and unprepared students run student government, one must sympathize with the administration for not wanting to turn over too much power to the students.

But a way to further the student cause would be to help the students be aware of important issues. This implies the necessity for criticism, for criticism is the conscience of democracy. It implies the necessity for expression of minority opinions on the part of the faculty. These two goals do not face to well at present.

This is the picture of FSU. It is not meant to be negative, although it is critical. It does not detail but does not ignore the positive side: a vigorous, ambitious, essentially friendly campus. It attempts to point up only problems which need most consideration.

THE POINT IS

Something To Ponder On Until Fall

By BOB FOLSOM

During the past week faculty and University staff members talked to me about campus issues, which not only concerned The Florida Flambeau, but FSU students as well. Its something to ponder on until next September.

One was Dean Laurence Campbell of the School of Journalism. He reiterated the principles a newspaper should adhere to, one being that of presenting the news clearly and not jumping to hasty conclusions, as he said has been done in the past. I queried Dean Campbell on the dozen journalism courses being dropped this year, and wasn't this a part of the trend of vocationalism creeping over campuses?

He said no, they were being dropped to make way for radio and television courses . . . professional courses becoming more in demand.

Dean Campbell, persuative in his comments, backed them up with evidence during the remaining and new courses made students use their thinking powers as much as is demanded by those courses being dropped.

IS HERE ALABASTER

CONTEMPORARY READING, Former editor Bruce Galphin very ably presented this issue last Friday, and the fact still remains, the CONTEMPORARY READING is definitely after as much or more a broadened background for students than any of the newly offered courses, and is still being done away with.

PSU Public Relations Director Roy Flynn pointed out a number of errors in last Friday's news story concerning the PSU radio station. He said WPSU-FM is not student-operated, although they work there, but it is a University function and University-financed. There is no broadcasting from the student activity fee and provided to the station, as is done at the publications.

He pointed out the two purposes of the station is to provide quality listening to Tallahassee and area, and to train students in the field.

He said he realized there were probably no students on the campus who knew that FM sets would be installed as soon as possible in dormitories and Greek houses. He could not give a definite date of installation.

One of the definite requisites for a comedy team is a student-supporter; it is the inherent to spur a team on. This sometimes forgotten fact was brought up again the other day by Mr. Edward Cubbon, the new athletic business manager.

Mr. Cubbon is predicting big things for FSU sports, and it just might come true shortly. In order to have student support you must have an equal or a better playing in the big time. FSU is approaching that league rapidly. Unfortunately, one of the best years of next season will be played before school officially opens.

That could be left behind. Students, however, weary of the heretofore weak football schedule now see the chance to watch a worthy opponent within the city limits, and also in other big games throughout next season, said Cubbon. Football will be a winning team must have and certainly deserves.

Dear Mama Seminole

Dear Mama Seminole,

Having been subjected to braves and maidens of the refined tongue, George st last has lost his native dialect. I must say that it is completely without regret. The narrow limits of the "injun talk" have tied George'a tongue on many fine points.

Having spent one semester of being critical of our University, in my final word, I wish to point out some very fine qualities of our Alma Mater.

We are continually surrounded by one of the most beautiful campuses in existence and rarely take note of the fact as we look about us.

As we go rushing through Westcott "tunnel," very often we are met with a wolf con gentleman with some beautiful flowers in his hand. Just how numb to such a bright sprint can we get?

In last week's Flavian, Galphin wrote an article about one of our finest Professors. A few weeks ago, when talking with a group of students about an Honors Program for our University, we were looking for a few professors who we thought were really interested enough in the students gaining knowledge to be a continuous inspiration toward that goal; and to my astonishment, there are a great number of them from all parts of the campus.

I believe that FSU, with proper guidance of great leaders who will not shudder every time a McCarthy points a finger, can grow into a seat of learning with few equals.

Love all.

Constitutions: Only Strong As People Backing Them

By MARTIN DUCKMAN

In theory, the constitution of the Student Body of Florida State University has not been changed in any way. In effect, the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs and the administration have changed it.

Actually, no power can "reserve" or change a constitution except the people who ratified it. But since constitutions only reflect the power behind them, it is very easy to change one by refusing to abide by it.

If the power of ambition and determination rests with the people who wish to be governed under a constitution, then the constitution will have power. The Constitution of the United States of America is an excellent example.

But if the existing power is held by those who do not wish to abide by a constitution, power in the form of a reactionary military or entrenched bureaucracy, then the constitution may be only a symbol and a worthless name.

It was the case in Europe during the last century when constitutions were granted by rulers only to appease mobs fired with unrest and spirit of revolution.

Constitutions were actually feared by rulers for that very quality. They knew that since they held the power there was no danger of being bound by the constitution. But they also knew that by granting a merely symbolic charter to the people they might feed fuel to the fires of liberal spirit seeking to right hereditary wrongs.

It is actually frightening to think how even the strong United States Constitution is thwarted every day by the "red hunters" in Washington and even the executive and legislative branch. Charging that "Communists" do not deserve protection of the Constitution, they have established the precedent of using it for expediency's sake only.

That is to say that under their interpretation only the Constitution, which must also protect the rights of the guilty to safeguard those of the innocent, must only protect the innocent and crucify the "guilty."

But how do they qualify to damn the guilty?

Yes, it is easy to thwart a constitution without intimidating the citizenry into changing it, as only they in theory can do.

But in our case we must consider another factor concerning the student administration's policy. How much faith should they put in a student constitution when less than one-fourth of the student body bothers to vote yes or no on the constitutional referendum?

All history, international, national and local, proves that constitutions and governments are but straws as the people back of them.

CONVERSATIONS WITH SAMMY

Sammy Doesn't Think He'll Return

By ORCHID ALONSO

The last issue of The Florida Flambeau has come and gone without my picking his clothes. Now that there is no room in the columns, he does not wish to remain. Exams bore him.

I asked Sammy if I would see him again and he said he doubted it.

"I don't think I'll came back to Florida State University. I find the whole thing a great place, but I have come to realize that a state university can be a great place. It has a 'duty' to all the people of the state. It can not be liberal nor progressive. It can not be an arts university. I want to be free. If there is no Mama Seminole to answer to, nor a Board of Control to get the blame for the lack of progress and student liberalism. The same Board of Control, I hope you'll notice, that lodgers the University of Florida at Gainesville."

"What do you mean? Everyone knows that we have the same board of control."

"Yes But have you noticed how little space FSU' Einher they still think this is a girls' school or someone is not calling a spade a spade."

"Oh, I see, Well, Sammy, I think its best you say nothing more on this subject."

Trying to channel Sammy's mind like a Hollywood medium field, (?) I asked him what he thought about President Campbell, and what is making his classes of the student constitution so attractive.

"Well, its this way. One change would give him arbitrary power of senate legislation. He has that anyway. Although it would strike at the duplicating the work of the faculty review board, which with Dean K. W. Warren as spokesman, has proven apt in reviewing all senate legislation. It is best, I believe, to let him have it, stated in the student constitution as what he does now anyway. Secondly, it would give him the power to veto any move, he will not have to explain his approval that the Board of Control give him the power anyway.

"As for the second clause denying the student body the right to confirm the president's choice for members of the student-faculty budget committee, I cannot recall any other instance where so large of the administration's power is delegated by students—or even representation and prior notification."

"Then you approve of his move, I ventured to ask."

"No, it was no poor taste to change the constitution the way we as Americans but can't like having a constitution changed so arbitrarily whether hundreds or not. The change could have, and would have been accomplished through proper channels anyway. I don't know what the rush was"

College is, conversely, a new life—a new experience— a release from the rigid confinement of the family; an open door to the realities of life in the adult world. College should serve as a link between the sheltered private hustle of home and the complicated outside world we know today. . .

Sure, this process of converting children into men and women must be a careful, necessarily slow 'at times' procedure. But, for pity's sake why don't student's shoulder more of the responsibility? Why don't students must come in contact with life's starkest realities to know and understand them better and to learn rules are now with them later on? Do we have to whether a flatiron is hot or not, before we learn it? Are we going to be fool enough to learn that fire will be burned once? I don't think so. And so it goes with college . . .

Events That Made News: 1953 — 1954

Nine Hectic Months Mark New Changes

Controversy Over ROTC, Housing, Jazz Concert, Political Parties Highlight Year

By OSCAR JOHNSON

What made news this school year?

That is, what was everybody talking about, and what filled the fifty-four The Florida Flambeaus put out? To answer this, the 1953-54 Flambeau files were brought out and dusted off. This is what was revealed:

This school year got off to a flying start, with a record number of students enrolled, as 200 women and 260 men were pledged to various sororities and fraternities — which seems to adequately sum up September.

Bruce Galphin was confirmed as editor of the Student Senate and co-ed visitation in the infirmary was confirmed by Chief Proctor H. O Hashaway early in October. Florida State University began considering dropping out of the Florida Intercollegiate Student Government Association in favor of something better. Later, the Southern University Student Government Association was formed with FSU as a charter member.

Also in October, Frances Bailey Stokes was named chairman and Perry Como the 1954 Sandspur production, and Lou Andrews was chosen as Director, Ray Flynn, Student Body Public Relations, announced a new radio station to be operated for the students—station WFSU-FM. Last week this station began test broadcasting of recorded music, and Flynn said that it should receive the approval of FCC and begin broadcasting regularly before the end of the semester.

About this time, a noted education named Robert M. Hutchins visited an article for The Saturday Review which did not exactly approve of the FSU concept "Flying High." Quoting from the article, "... The award of college credits at Florida State University for being a clown is in no way a threat to the traditional higher education and academic freedom as any of the carryings on of Senator McCarthy or Congressman Velde." Publicist Flynn replied to Dr. Hutchins in a letter explaining the purpose and functions of "Flying High." Later in the year, an FSU graduate was named after Hutchins, which seems to prove that students have a way of failing to forget such differences.

The closing days of October saw another first as the president of the Student Body, Milton Carothers, was granted a salary ($75 month) for the first time in university history.

November marked a turnout of 877 at the Freshman Class Elections, and a 2-A per cent Homecoming celebrations began at FSU.

News was made December 8 in an article about the resignation of the editors of the newspaper of the University of Georgia, who were told after printing an editorial on segregation that their funds would be cut off if it happened again, and to make sure it didn't, all news and editorial material would from then on be censored by a student-faculty committee.

In mid-December, FSU lost its Dean of Student Welfare as Dr. J. Broward Culpepper accepted the position of executive secretary of the State Board of Control.

Florida Staters had hardly finished eating the fruit cake brought back from the Christmas vacation when Vice-President A. B. Martin announced that there would be no extended Easter vacation. There was some comment on the decision and it was later changed by Martin and President Doak S. Campbell.

Soon afterwards, Lou Andrews resigned as Director of Sandspur to "avoid further friction" with the management.

February 25, a second political party was formed on campus — The State. This party copped but two offices in the Student Body Elections, but later showed its strength as it won the presidency of the Sophomore, Junior and Senior classes in the Class Elections.

On March 2, the Student Body Senate appointed a committee to investigate rumors that ROTC was going to be compulsory next fall semester and from then on. The Senate was also the scene as a faculty committee returned the manuscript of the new Student Body Constitution with many pros or corrections and later two post-ratification changes.

The ROTC matter was made more disagreeable to the students when it was learned to be true and that the decision had been made some months previously.

Flambeau editorials and letters to the editor expressed student disapproval of the move because (1). It seemed to be in obvious conflict with the FSU constitution, by which the university is governed, since the Faculty-Senate had not voted on it. (2) It had not been made public to the students previous to that time so that it might be discussed and (3) only a minority of the male students reported as 248) had in the past chosen to follow ROTC. President Campbell replied that the change had been made after a suggestion by the Board of Control, which had stated a general policy of equalizing practices at the two schools (FSU and UF.)

It was expected that the subject would be aired at the next Faculty Senate meeting.

Editor Bruce Galphin attended Annapolis with his other students, but they were asked to leave the Senate floor and obtained previous written permission. In the March 16 Flambeau, Galphin printed an open letter to President Campbell, asking permission to attend future meetings.

Eleven days afterwards, the former printed article headlined "Adm Students Asked to Quit Meetings" describing how four Negro students had been asked to leave a performance of the FSU Laboratory Band because they had made no previous arrangements to attend.

That afternoon, Vice-President Martin met with Editor Galphin and Dean Laurence Campbell of the School of Journalism. Martin told Galphin that he did not know how much longer they could justify the existence of the campus publications to such authorities as the State Board of Control.

The journalism head said that if the present system (of student elected editors) did not work, then the system would have to be changed. He mentioned that at many universities the editor is chosen by a board of publications.

Three days later, the Student Body Senate gave a unanimous vote of confidence to the newspaper, describing their criticism essential in a democracy.

This month, President Campbell announced the findings of the administration toward the Flambeau controversy, saying that the present manner of the election of editors of the campus publications is a fundamental weakness in the Student Body Constitution. In the same release Student Body Vice President Gene Lawler revealed that President Campbell had told him this, and also that he already had been more tolerant of the student publications than he (President Campbell) felt that the system would have to be changed or "sooner or later it will meet a violent end."

Going back to the middle of April, the student union had settled down to a leisurely pace. Summing up the year from that time, FSU saw a Class Election (TKE) on campus; a high school band festival here for the first time; Florida Staters were the scene of the top Southern Universities Student Governments Association posts; the 1954 Junior-Senior Prom and Class of 1953 Seniors prepared for graduation.

Top Performers Highlight Theater Season's Plays

By DAVID DREIS

The stature of the Department of Speech was raised a few notches this year as top performances of famous plays was the standard set by the Augusta Conradi theater.

With more and more people attending the department's productions and leaving with the feeling of an evening well spent, the department is adding an additional play to its roster for next year. The play will be for children primarily and will constitute the beginning of the FSU children's theatre.

Looking back at the year's dramatic events, the variety of the productions is outstanding. Dr. Paul Davee, newly-arrived professor from the State University of Iowa, took over the directional chores for Clarence Day's "Life With Father." It features Charles Coghlan as the middle-aged family man who "won't be baptized . . . Dammit!" In supporting roles, Eb Thomas, Lloyd Kay and Barbara Graham were outstanding.

Following this comedy was the William Shakespeare play, "Romeo and Juliet" directed by Dr. Lyra Orr. It featured Shakespearean veterans Marjorie Bailey and veteran Robert Strane. Eb Thomas and Charles Bechtold also took hold over a cast of experienced Conradi players.

Dr. Davee came back to prove that even a freshman can hold down a leading role if he be star is good enough. He cast Kathleen Culpepper in the lead role of "The Heiress."

"Supporting her were Nancy Dickenson, Robert Strane and Franklin Adams. This was the first time Adams had portrayed something other than character roles. He portrayed the conniving gold-digging boyfriend of the heiress.

For the final play of the year, "The Insect Comedy" by Karl and Anton Kapek was produced. Dr. Orr again directed a surrealistic play by Tallahassee play-goers. Last year he directed "Life of Man" a Russian play done with the modernistic touch.

The "Insect Comedy" was a satire on life as portrayed by insects. Outstanding performers in the cast of twenty-two were Robert Strane, Eb Thomas, Franklin Adams, Gerald McClelland, Mickie Dobbins and Tom Lewis, Jr.

Much Progress Is Made In FSU's 50-Year Plan

By JOYCE POTTER

As the 1953 school year draws to an end, many of the projects started this year as a part of the 50 year plan, also near completion according to Mr. Rod Shaw, business manager.

Probably the largest project undertaken was the new Westcott auditorium which is expected to be ready for use in September.

The other two buildings nearing completion are the Geology Building, located between the Student Center and West Hall, and the New Dendrology Building in back of the baseball diamond. These buildings are also expected to be ready for use in September according to Mr. Shaw.

Not only have new buildings been added to the campus, but landscaping plans have also been carried out. One of the projects was to improve the looks of the area around the stream running between the campus and the Student Center.

For years students have been using the steam pipe which stretches across the stream as a bridge, causing a well-worn path to develop. To remedy this situation, shrubbery has been planted along the stream, blocking the old path.

Recently, 50 foliage palms were imported from lower Florida to add to the tropical look of the campus. The regular work of transplanting flowers, shrubs and the general up-keep of the campus continued all year.

One of the best improvements according to Mr. Shaw and students was the installation of stop light at the intersection near the student center.

Dogwood Hall, after withstanding many years of useful life, finally gave up and was condemned as unsafe for inhabitants. Work is now in progress to recondition it.

Street lights have been installed all over campus and the road out to West Hall has now been completely lighted.

Architects are now drawing up plans for buildings which will be started next year if things go according to present plans, Mr. Shaw revealed. The first of these buildings is the Bio-Science which is estimated at $750,000. It will be located in front of Seimie Hall.

The new Home Economics and Home Demonstration Extension Building will be located on Call Street, facing immediately north of Dennis Murphree Hall and West of the present Demonstration of School. The present building is located on West Campus. This building which is one of the first to move from West Campus to the main campus is estimated at $850,000.

The largest undertaking is the new library and Library Science School Expected to cost $2,100,000, the library will be located on Call Street facing Landis at the north end of Landis Green.

The Mens' Gymnasium will be erected south of the ROTC Building by the Tennis Courts. This will bring many more of the senior sports activities to the main campus rather than to West campus where the old gym is located, commented Mr. Shaw. Sometime in the future all of the P.E. physical education area will be moved to the main campus, he added.

Many plans for building new sorority and fraternity houses are in the making, but most of them are as yet indefinite. As soon as the residence halls are vacated for the summer, the annual job of repainting and general repair will begin. This general repair will also cover the Seminole buildings, Shaw revealed.

SUSGA, Student Charter Are Senate Achievements

Senate Completes Biggest Task Of School Year After Many Compromises, Changes

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

As the year draws to an end, search through the 1953-54 files of The Florida Flambeau indicates that the Student Body Senate was one of the newspaper's most dependable sources of news.

The biggest task was preparation of the new Student Body Constitution, on which the Senate worked for a year. Ratification of the Southern University Student Government Association constitution (SUSGA) made FSU a charter member of that group.

Other issues like compulsory attendance at football games and investigation of the Flambeau occupied the legislative body from week to week.

In one of the earliest meetings, at the end of September, the Senate heard President Milton Carothers urge withdrawal from the Florida Intercollegiate Student Government Association. The group failed to take any action to approve Bruce Galphin as Flambeau editor-in-chief. Galphin, managing editor, was due to succeed editor Marcia Morris, who did not return to school.

At the next meeting, however, the Senate heard Editor Bruce Galphin, after Wayne Terry resigned, promise with being "anti-fraternity."

The senior staff of the paper stood by Galphin and at the Senate's next meeting he was confirmed. It also moved not to pay a salary to the President of the Student Body was begun. He was later voted a salary of $75 dollars a month.

The Senate was quiet until November 19, when it approved a constitutional amendment which established the office of house president. It also passed a resolution asking the Flambeau to print the names of its absent members in reports of Senate meetings.

The Senate was inactive during Homecoming week. On the first of December, it censured Bob Folsom as Pow-Wow editor and passed a resolution condemning the Student Council on University Band.

A bill on publication of roll call votes stirred up controversy at the January 5 meeting. The bill by Coyte Morton to require roll call votes on all issues and their subsequent publication in the Flambeau was amended to provide for such polling and publication only upon request.

A Flambeau news story and editorial on the issue led to charges at the next Senate session that the Flambeau had been "misused," had been "guilty of distorting the news", and had "attacked another campus publication". A committee was appointed to investigate the charges and to initiate impeachment proceedings if the investigation warranted.

At the same meeting Senator Joan Halford introduced a resolution providing tape recording of Senate duties. She also stated that the tape be made available to interested parties to eliminate misunderstanding.

The Senate adopted her resolution, changing it to make the tape available when Senate consent only.

The committee set up to investigate the Flambeau found insufficient evidence to justify impeachment proceedings.

Official presentation of the report had to wait through a session in which was adjourned due to lack of a quorum. The report was later accepted without debate.

President Milton Carothers made a strong urging the Senate to ratify the constitution of the Southern University Student Government Association. By doing so, the Senate made Florida State University a charter member.

The Senate swung into conflagration of the Student Body Constitution after the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs returned the original document with 78 corrections and changes in many instances compromises were reached and agreed upon.

Modification of the Honor Code was another item of Senate business. A class now has the opportunity to elect the honor system but loses it after two instances of cheating.

Bill by Chris Young made numerous reports to the Senate on parking and traffic conditions on campus.

Forgetting previous bitterness with the Flambeau, on April 6 the Senate unanimously voted confidence in the student newspaper. After Dr. A B. Martin, vice-president of the university, expressed disfavor with the publication.

Perhaps the most heated debate of the year came after President Carothers suggested that freshmen be required to attend all home football games. Carothers attempted a compromise when the suggestion seemed doomed to defeat, but all compromises failed as well.

Among the more humorous Senate episodes was that of George Seminole. Several attempts to find out the identity of the anonymous Flambeau columnist failed. On one occasion Chris Young, sponsor of a resolution asking the columnist's identity, impatiently withdrew his resolution. He was threatened with impeachment at the last meeting of the year for withdrawing his motion after being given the dean's information by editor Bruce Galphin.

Young also became the first Senate chairman pro tem, as far as can be ascertained, to ever preside over a meeting in a pair of shorts.

Among resolutions passed during the year was one asking for a football game between FSU and the University of Florida and one asking for equal distribution of rose track athletic scholarships money between the two state institutions.

Gene Lawler, vice-president of the Student Body, was presiding officer of the Senate. Roy Chapman was vice-president, presiding officer of men's Senate. He succeeded Wayne Terry who left at the end of the first semester. Lillian Avis presided over Women's Senate.

Other members of the Senate were Joan Halford, Gordon Oaster, Jim Moore, Joan Halford, Carolyn Close, Jo Jones, Dave Bachman, Jimmy Boles, Joan Tavel, Ann Hays, Charis Coulter, Anna Lindsay, Nancy Graham, Bob Berto, Diane Gordon, Donnie Hollis, Chris Young, Renie Hall, Jane Soper, Frank Shaw, Jim Martin, Phoebe Jackson, Coyte Moore and Chris McCauley.

Fifth Amendment Acts As 'Shield' For Innocent; Unfair Incrimination Result Of Investigation

By IMMANUEL WALLERSTEIN
World Frontiers)

In recent days, the Fifth Amendment to the U. S. Constitution has become the best-known section of that document which is the basic law of our land. And in the attendant discussion, the basic and the pitfalls of the Fifth Amendment have tended to become obscurely enmeshed for purposes of factional decision, the element must be separated out and utilized analyzed.

First of all let us recall the classic phraseology of the witness who employs the safeguard of the Fifth Amendment. "I refuse to testify on the grounds that it tends to incriminate me." Note the critical word, "tends." The word is also neither legally nor morally nor logically does such testimony necessarily imply guilt. The witness may be guilty, of course And of so, he has a right to use the safeguard of the Amendment.

But let us pose another situation. Suppose in a community there has been a series of murders. One evening someone is murdered on the city park at 9 p.m. Suppose further an innocent citizen has been walking in the park between 8:30 and 9:15 but has seen nothing of the murder. He is then questioned as to where he was at 8 p.m. If he admits being in the park, this may TEND to incriminate him. It is circumstantial evidence, which in the absence of other clues, may convict him, especially if the jury is wrought up because of the series of murders. A few witnesses before Congressional committees today face a parallel situation.

Use of the Fifth Amendment is here justified.

Of course, there are still other justifications claimed by some of the Fifth Amendment witnesses. Some object to committee investigating methods and motives and seek refuge behind the Fifth Amendment. But this re-course has neither a legal nor moral nor logical basis. For if a witness should desire to defy authority, he may do so but should then be willing to face the consequences of his action (as for example Thoreau did

Or, if he wishes in challenge authority, he may refuse to testify on the grounds of the First Amendment, as a few individuals have done. Then if he chooses legal issue for the Supreme Court to decide. But in both these cases, the Fifth Amendment, which provides against self-incrimination, is clearly inappropriate. This is primarily a moral issue, however, as legally it is inherently impossible to prove misapplication of the Fifth Amendment.

What then of the professor who refuses to testify, on the grounds of the Fifth Amendment? He may do so, as we have seen for a variety of reasons. It is up to censors a concern of the university?

There has been an increasing tendency to penalize teachers who utilize the protection of the Fifth Amendment by terminating their employment. This has not been done on the grounds that these teachers are present or former members of the Communist party, as this is precisely the most potent Administrative action by universities has been taken, explicitly or IMPLICITLY, on the grounds of non-cooperation with Congressional committees thrunch use of a Constitutional safeguard. And it is said that such use reflects upon the good name of the university.

The free university is based as a belief in the transience of official truth, the worth of Holmes' marketplace of ideas. It is in the creation of this type of institution that the good name of a university lies.

Society has always been reluctant, at best, to sanction this institution whose function is so disconcerting. But it is hardly the place of the university to join the pack that wishes to destroy it. The competence and personal integrity of the professor have long been the only valid criteria of his membership in a community of scholars and teachers.

The use of the Fifth Amendment before Congressional committees is, in most cases, irrelevant in these criteria. Such use may be politically inept, morally wrong, legally dubious—no matter the judgment you hold.

But it is precisely the right of the individual professor to make these "mistakes" which the university should uphold. Insofar as the university does not resist the pressures of society and uphold these values, it shall contribute to its own destruction, and a wreck far more damaging to the society than its continued employment of a few unpopular or foolish professors. FSU Sorority Breaks Ground In Ceremonies

Alpha Omega chapter of Alpha Xi Delta, national social sorority, broke ground Sunday for a new chapter house, the first of eight sorority and fraternity houses scheduled to be constructed in the next few years.

The ceremony was held for the new Alpha Xi Delta chapter house Sunday afternoon at 447 West Park. The group's former house on College Avenue was sold to the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity several weeks ago, it was disclosed. The ground was broken with a silver shovel symbolizing the chapter's 25th anniversary.

Mrs J Edwin White, president of the advisers group, Madelyn Ricker president of Alpha Omega chapter and Mrs. Herbert Slaney president of the Tallahassee alumnae group were reenumined as the groundbreaking. Mrs. White, formerly Miss Norma Baker one of the advisers of the organizing group helped when the sorority affiliated with year the National Alpha Xi Delta it was revealed.

The sorority which has been meeting in Lonemire Building expects to be living in the house by the last of October, 1954 the Construction Company, also contracted to construct the new Florida State University Auditorium, has the contract with this institution whose function is so disconcerting.

'Black Lagoon' Thriller Filmed In Wakulla; 'Lucky Me' Shows

"Creature From Black Lagoon," Universal International's science fiction thriller features 352 underwater scenes, many of which were filmed at Wakulla Springs last fall, will play tomorrow and Thursday at the State Theater.

Co-starring Richard Carlson and Julia Adams, the dreams of the Amazon "Gill-Man"—last living link with the beginning of time—is considered one of the most difficult undertakings in the life of submarine photographer.

Utilizing an enormous underwater camera devised and operated by Charles C. Welbourne, a camera crew equipped with lead belts, swim fins and aqua lungs worked underwater for 32 days—an actual total of 153 submerged hours—to complete the difficult assignment.

This is a story in which the Creature, half man and half fish, stalks the mysterious Black Lagoon, an uncharted part of the Amazon. When scientists, Carlson and Miss Adams, with coworkers Richard Denning and Antonio Moreno pursue him, this monstrous "Gill-Man" strikes back with amazing fury.

The creature, aroused by the strange emotions by his first sight of a woman, abducts Miss Adams to his underwater domain, and the scientific expedition becomes a desperate struggle for survival.

Doris Day, Robert Cummings and Phil Silvers are the latest stars to light up the brond Technicolor screens as Warner Brothers' "Lucky Me," a new musical extravaganza comes into the local screne Tuesday through Saturday at the Florida Theater.

According to advance reports a gay, song filled romance with plenty of light comedy, "Lucky Me" is interspersed in Warnercolor, has ten new songs by Sammy Fain and Paul Francis Webster.

Miss Day plays an ambitious showgirl who finds herself stranded with a troupe of show folk in sunny Florida. She sings such sonas as "The Superstition Song," "Parisian Pretties," "Where to the Moon," and "Lucky Me."

Robert Cummings has the romantic lead opposite Doris in the role of a songwriter who masquerades as a garage attendant and moons that the closest he ever gets to romance is anywhere the boobs pine out of guys' convertibles—until he meets Doris.

The third member of the star triangle is Phil Silvers, bespectacled and quick witted, who has a serious crush on Doris, and talent he finds hard to sell in his role of a hazy name crooner.

This zaie musical was also filmed in Florida.

Blackstone, Prothro Awarded Ford Foundation Fellowships

Dr Walter Blackstock, assistant professor of English, and Dr Prothro, associate professor of political science at Florida State University, have been awarded Ford Foundation faculty fellowships, it was announced Dean R. Campbell announced yesterday.

In making the announcement, President Campbell said the University sponsored the applications for the fellowships and that leaves of absence will be recommended for the two award recipients.

Dr. Blackstock has chosen Harvard for his advanced work where he will study under Archibald MacLeish, poetry Pulitzer prize winner, former assistant secretary of state and Librarian of Congress, who now holds the Boylston professorship chair of literature at Harvard.

Author of several volumes of published verses, Dr. Blackstock will teach a course on "Modern poetry in America" at FSU, and write a complementary treatise on the subject. At Cambridge, he said he will work on the general theme of democracy in poetry.

Dr Prothro has revealed plans for post doctoral work in political science and other social studies at Columbia University in New York, in connection with his competence as a university teacher at FSU.

Prothro said he will explore the possibility of uniting empirical research and political theory, and audit courses under well known authorities for their specialized views.

About 200 of these faculty fellowships are made each year in the entire country, it was revealed. Dr. Marion Irish, head of the political science department, studied last year at Harvard on a Ford fellowship.

Driving Course Held At FSU; Teach 'Safety'

Students, faculty, staff and townspeople are being urged to drive safely through Florida State University efforts to cut the slow Florida traffic death rate totaling more than 900 a year.

There is a course in Driver Education and Training designed to train Florida high school teachers, who in turn, will teach safe driving to Florida's youth. One hundred graduates of the course, taught by Jim DeCosmo, instructor in driver education, are now in the state each student teach some one else how to drive.

So many, according to DeCosmo, wish to learn, that his students have a long waiting list.

The dual training cars used for instruction and practice are furnished the university each year by Alford Chevrolet Co., Tallahassee.

Of 21,000 plus high school students eligible to take driver education last year only 5,136 enrolled. DeCosmo said. He noted that of 447 secondary schools only 59 had driver education courses and added that Florida is ranked forty-seventh among the states in driver education.

In the words of DeCosmo, the FSU teacher training course is designed to correct this situation by "providing the prospective teacher with the desirable attitudes, specialized information, and techniques necessary for teaching driver education and training in t ethiish school."

WEALE'S ARTICLE PUBLISHED

Arts, Crafts 'Camp' To Develop Skills; Slated Here, June

High School students attending a second annual Summer Arts and Craft Program here at Florida State University next month, will be given a chance to develop hand skills of all kinds, spokesmen for the camp announced yesterday.

Offering supervised recreation, creative outlets and training in conventional handiwork areas, the camp entitled around art and craft activities, besides giving the youngsters a taste of university life, they added.

Programs of study have been revealed to include drawing and sketching, painting in most media, fashion Illustration, sculpture, ceramics, jewelry making, textile designs, silkscreening and other printing processes. General crafts such as woodwork in the industrial shop will also be offered.

Work of the campers, it was noted, will be exhibited beginning June 29, in the "Promenade Gallery" of the Education Building. Counseling work will be under the guidance of university faculty members.

Letters to the Editor . . .

Thought Encouraged

To the Students:

I agree whole heartedly with President Campbell's statement that the student publications should be held responsible for anything they print. However, I don't exactly understand what he has been "tolerating" when it comes to student publications. Has the Florida Flambeau printed any libellous matters? If it has, or for this matter any other school paper, then by all means reveal it. Surely anything that is untrue or detrimental to a person's character should be uncovered.

No, I don't think we can find the answer in calling the student publications libelous. Perhaps the threat to the papers, that they will meet a "riders end" stems from something else. Could it be that too many truths have been exposed?

Perhaps the powers up above are finding the nose being tightened and a little too much pressure being exerted by the students who believe in FSU and want to see their school graduate from the shadow of an ex-girls' institution to a big time school known for its leadership, educational programs, and influence powers.

The only thing I see that's wrong is the fact that not more of the students are supporting their school publications. Why can't reporters and editorial writers report what they see and find? If it's the Florida Flambeau's feeling that something is wrong it's the paper's duty to report as it sees it. And if someone wants to create an opinion about it, and write his idea down for the student body to read about it, that's his prerogative.

To threaten is to be scared or afraid. Certainly the student run publications should be a rodent paper, run by the students without undue pressure from a few who fear the paper must uncover something. Let thosis be Shoncovered rather than Dscouraged!

Respectively,
Willie Smith.

Role Is Finished

To The Editor!

As a soon - to - be graduated senior, I should like to say FSU with perhaps a tinge of nostalgia. Instead, it is more with a feeling of duty that I write now as a student at this institution is finished.

Once I was under the impression that the role of a university was to educate students and to conduct scholarly research. I still adhere to this view, in spite of the emphasis placed on other values by the administration and faculty of university.

Apparently the destiny of FSU, in the eyes of Wescott, is to be giant facsimile of a real university, with lots of students, lots of buildings, and lots more of publicity.

There is not so, then why do press releases invariably contain bloated enrollment figures?

Why has the administration arbitrarily directed students to live in dormitories next year?

Why has the administration imposed compulsory ROTC for next year?

Why has the administration usurped the formerly independent Student Body Constuition?

Why has the administration seized the formerly independent radio station, WFSU, and turned it into a public relations mouthpiece?

The answers to these questions indicate a pattern. A University that will be great is the number of buildings, students, and publicity, but small in those values that make a worthwhile institution of higher learning.

I am glad that my role here will soon be complete.

Moments ago his instructor said, "Good luck son. Now you try it alone." And as the young cadet turns to his plane he feels a sudden thrill run through him. He is sure he's ready... after those long months of tough, hard training. And he is ready. He'll win his wings, because those who chose him know he has the qualities a pilot must possess.

You too can know the same thrill that a young man feels now... if you have the stuff in you to become an aviation cadet. Ahead of you lies a great adventure... flying with the U. S. Navy or Air Force in the planes that guard our nation's shores.

You'll meet them all. Planes like this T-28, North American's trainer for the Navy and Air Force, that outflies many World War II fighters. And when you've won your wings you may graduate to a squadron that flies FJ-3 Fury Jets, Korea-famed F-86 Sabre Jets... or America's fastest production jet fighter, the supersonic F-100 Super Sabre.

Frosh Team Splits Pair With Air Base; Season's Last Game

In the final sport's action of the 1954 spring season Patrick Air Force Base scored three runs and only one hit to edge Florida State University's baseball team, 3-2. The win gave the service team a split in its two-game series with the Seminoles, who took Friday's opener, 6-7.

Starter Ron Fraser was the loser in the game. Two walks and a hit batter produced the winning run in the sixth inning.

Carlos Hendrix was the big gun for the Seminoles. Hendrix batted three hits in four trips and scored both runs. Jim "Hoolie" Kaufman had two hits in three trips and catcher Johnson got Patrick's only safety.

Tom Sullivan was the winning pitcher in Friday's game. The series ended the Rinks' season with a 4-4 record.

Sophomore Council Elects Soper, Moll

Jane Soper, past senator and newly elected student senate chairman, was recently chosen president of the newly-lagged Women's Sophomore Council at Florida State University. It was announced this week.

Other officers leading the 45 freshman girls in the organization include Evelyn Moll, vice-president; Peter Dana, secretary; Gretchen Kerr, flag chairman; and Martha Sue Mizell, song chairman.

According to treasurer Swaim, the group has already begun their service projects. Besides selling tickets for the Sophomore-Senior Frolic, Miss Swaim stated, the Sophomore Counsellors are getting set for the traditional serenade before school closes.

Miller New Prexy Of Village Vamps

Betty Jo Miller was recently elected president of the Village Vamps according to June Yates, publicity chairman of the organization.

Lynda Lane, Janet Kathleen Davis, Patricia Lee Rouen, Dorothy Anne Mayo, Marcella Bailey, Patricia Rinaldi, Loulis Shaw, Joel Carter, Charlize Cousins, Linda Lou Davis, Carrol English, Carol Geurts and Betsy Jo Grubbs.

Carolyn Anne Grumbley, Joyce Kirk, Dorothy Ann Lockwood, Janet Kelly, JoAnn Lipsitz, Myra Lollingsworth, Ann Mandel, Sarah Murray, Morris Rice, Peggy Stanland, Elizabeth Shannon, Mary Belle Yates and Ivey M. Wade.

Other officers elected include Jo Ann Hutto, vice-president; Nancy Warner, secretary; Marsaret Ann Ballinger, treasurer; Bobbie Lou Lester, project chairman; and June Yates, publicity chairman.

Miss Yates also announced that the Village Vamps are the official campus hostesses this year, serving at many receptions and teas.

She revealed that the Village Vamps' main project this year were the decorating of the Westcott gate for Circus Weekend and ushering at speech department productions.

Freshman women are tapped into Village Vamps each year during the second semester. Upperclassmen are not tapped but the tappees serve in the organization as long as they are in school, it was noted.

National 'Honorary' Initiates Thirty-Five Education Students

Thirty-five new members were initiated into Kappa Delta Pi, national education honorary at Florida State University recently, spokesmen revealed.

Principle speaker at a banquet following the initiation was Dr. Harold Benjamin, professor of education at George Peabody College for Teachers.

New members chosen for scholarship, leadership and aptitude for teaching include Ara Andrews, John f. Cooper, Harry Day, Jan Eichinger, Mrs. Bernice Johnson, William Lane, and FSU Faculty members Dr. Mary Kate Miller and Hilda Steed.

Managing Institute Held For Training

An institute designed especially to consider the training needs of administrative employers in the "blue collar" industries will meet soon at Florida State University.

Slated for June 1-2, the conference will include executives, training directors, and other representatives of such industries as canning, pulp and paper, chemical, manufacturing, utilities, ship building, armed services, and transportation. Smaller concerns and other industries are expected to take part, spokesmen noted.

The Institute in Industrial Training is being offered as the university in cooperation with the Associated Industries of Florida, The Florida Industrial Commission, the U. S. Bureau of Apprenticeship, and the Florida Department of Public Instruction.

Mills Captures Hitting Title With .368 Average

Shortstop Billy (Cooter) Mills, the only graduating senior on the FSU baseball team, batted his way to the best Seminole hitter of the 1954 season. The four-year veteran compiled a very healthy .368 average in 23 games this spring. He cracked out 32 hits in 87 times at bat.

Husky first baseman Jimmy Toomey, with a .347 average followed second behind Mills in the batting department. However, the Gloucester Mass. freshmen topped the team in doubles (7) and runs batted in (19).

Solid hitting honors were taken by team captain and right-fielder Bob Hudson, of Sarasota. In his second year as a varsity regular Hudson hit five doubles, four triples and a pair of home runs. He also got 14 singles and batted .313. Hudson was right behind Toomey in runs batted in with 18.

Besides capturing top hitting honors Mills also entered the FSU rebooks in three categories. His 32 hits in one season tied the mark set by Lee Bailey in 1951. He hit his 32 safeties from his short stop position established a new record. Finally he took some kind of an FSU endurance record by playing 70 consecutive games, including this year's schedule of 23.

In third place in the hitting race was last year's top hitter Billy Campbell, who fell below his 1953 season's performance with a .318 average.

Leftfielder Lee Corso, a football player from Hollywood, Fla., but he only got to the plate 25 times and banged 10 hits. Corso, a somewhat unusual case in that after earning football practice and played in the last ten games.

Sophomore Max Lont of Jacksonville will be the leading FSU pitcher with six wins against three defeats. Jim Atwood, a sophomore from Hollywood, followed only 12 earned runs in 52 innings to win the ERA crown with a 2.7 average. Atwood, who also led in strikeouts with 45, won three games and lost four.

Draft Will Take Casteel, Summer

FSU's future hopes in track will suffer a blow, for it was learned yesterday that Freshman speedster, Jimmy Casteel will be drafted this summer. Casteel, who is from Avondale, Georgia, is a specialist in the 220 and 440 yard dashes, and has set new FSU track records in both events. His best time in the 440 is 49.4 clocked in a triangular meet with Alabama and Loyola of New Orleans. 22.1 is his top time in the 220.

Casteel also collaborated with Larry Hountha, Joe Watson and Bright in the record-breaking mile relay team.

Sociology Classes Studying Drinking, Date 'Relationship'

AMES, Ia. (I.P.)—Uncovering facts concerning college students' conduct and morals including the relationship of drinking and of dating, are projects of those studying sociology this summer 234-B under Thomas Gillette, instructor of Sociology at Iowa State College.

The different approach to Sociology in an undergraduate course, begun last fall, devotes the first part of the quarter in giving the students "concepts" to use as tools. Once they are familiar with sociological methods, a large portion of the remaining time is devoted to students developing their own projects. Gillette pointed to the recent survey completed by two 234-B students regarding "the correlation between drinking and dating of college students." The survey studied two different college groups of somewhat churchoriented, the offer an "informal organized assemblage."

The students' research concluded, "There is little correlation between drinking and dating but there is a stronger correlation between drinking and dating within the drinking group."

Gillette said, "This is taking the history out of the textbook and the classroom, and applying it to life itself." He feels that this will enable students to get more out of the course as well as give them a more mature insight into society.

GRADUATE CLASS ELECTS

Val Tarwod has been elected president of the Graduate Class heading a group of officers composed of Myron Blee, vice-president; Morrys Rice, secretary; and Mrs. Lydia Boyce Pauls, treasurer.

Dr. Ralph L. Witherspoon, professor of psychology and director of the graduate school's program, has been chosen advisor of the 800-member class.

"Passing Fancy" Stars In Contract

Quarterback Bobby Thomason and End Pete Pihos, two of the ballsdown professional players who will make up the backfield for Florida State University's all-star "Passing Fancy" football clinic here June 10-12, have signed 1954 contracts with the Philadelphia Eagles.

Thomason, former VMI quarterback and his chief target, Pihos, helped the Eagles win their last six games in 1953 after the National Football League club got off to a slow start.

Twenty-five-year-old Thomason led the league in touchdowns, connecting for 21 as he completed 162 passes in 304 attempts. Pihos, ex-Indiana star led the NFL in the pass receiving with 63 for 1-049 yards and 16 TD's.

The Eagles' prize pitch-catch combination will join pro greats Otto Graham, Bobby Layne, Sammy Baugh and Harry Gilmer on the instructional staff for FSU's all-passing clinic, a novel idea of Seminole Coach Tom Nugent.

More than 80 high school and college coaches and players have already enrolled for the three-day football carnival which will feature actual demonstrations of passing by the clinic staff.

State, County Units In Need Of Workers

Vacancies for Public Health Nurses and sanitarians with the State Board of Health and County Health Units exist in all parts of the state according to an announcement by the Florida Merit System in Tallahassee.

A few vacancies exist at present, and a larger number will arise beginning with the new fiscal year July 1.

Nurses must be graduates of accredited schools of nursing and must be registered, or eligible for registration, in Florida. Sanitarians must have a degree from an accredited college or previous experience.

Full information and application blanks may be obtained from the Merit System Office in Tallahassee, or from State Board of Health or county health unit offices in various parts of the state.

FSU Junior Gets Sports Publicity Job

An FSU junior and former FLAMBEAU sports editor was appointed director of sports publicity at Florida State school contracts with the Philadelphia announced Sunday 31 year old Pat Hogan, once a star high school athlete in Little Rock Arkansas, will thus officially take over the job he has held temporarily since December of last year.

Hogan, who is probably the youngest college sport's publicist in the country, steps into the important post after three years experience as a sportswriter for the Arkansas Gazette and assistant sport publicity writer at FSU. The Gazette is the oldest daily west of the Mississippi. Hogan worked for the paper during his senior year in his school and for two years while he attended Little Rock Junior College. In the meantime he was given all-state basketball recognition in Arkansas as a senior. He also played baseball. In the fall of 1952 he transferred to FSU.

The thin blond haired Hogan succeeds Bennett Land, who served from June, 1952 to December, 1953. Hogan was the number one assistant to Land, who also is from Arkansas. Then Hogan took over as acting director, when Land was forced to retire because of illness in December.

Continuing to assist Hogan, will be Tommy Sands, a junior from Tallahassee. Sands is also a former Flambeau sports editor.

WETHERELL APPOINTED

Howard Wetherell was recently appointed National Assistant Executive Secretary of Sigma Chi, national social fraternity.

He will officially assume his duties early in June, and will work with the Leadership Training Workshop during the summer. Later he will be in charge of undergraduate chapter affairs and will make visitation throughout the United States and Canada.

Wetherell is one of the founders, and the immediate past president of the FSU chapter of the FSU chapter of Sigma Chi.

Student, Faculty Investigations Bring Unwarranted Intimidation

By D

ACP—After a series of personal interviews with student leaders across the nation, Redbook magazine has concluded that both our students and faculties have been intimidated in America by irresponsible investigators, hysterical leaders and other self-appointed 'thought police.'

Here are a few of the interviews samples:

Howard Willens, past president of the University of Michigan's student legislature—"Today a student goes out of college with a textbook adherence to the U.S. system, instead of having considered other systems and found ours best. In a healthy democracy everybody ought to be politically active. But I think today's students will avoid any political activity when they get out. Why shouldn't they? They're taught to without from it in college."

Barbara Jettinhoff, editor of the Ohio State Lantern: "Communism is a touch-me-not subject for both professors and students. As a result students don't know enough about it—and it's

Rita was a good mother. The woman who reported it was publicity-seeking but the press was on Rita's side. The woman never got her name in the paper. About Marilyn Monroe: everyone in Hollywood and of the entertainment community: Earl Wilson, Walter Winchell, Leonard Lyons and Mauritz McLeMore state that the blonde is like a breath of fresh air. She does so earth. Well, that answers those problems.

Before I column let me look over my extra notes: To the university assistants who consistently do get the attention on the air, congratulations. Jerry Mahoney Hal Gray, Jim Chandler, Leo Andrews, Rick Hutto deserve the congratulations. Does Roy Flynn for putting into action these fine people. Also the Wesley Foundation for using a column of Karl Marx's Communist Manifesto'.

Citing "those appalling conditions," Redbook says its survey showed that "students are politically conservative and unlikely to accept communism as any terms. They have also proven themselves capable of handling free and open discussions of the subject of communism."

The article quotes Robert Neary, a student at the University of Michigan, who said, "We aren't as far to the radical—in the sunlight."

Jack Miles won the all-American rings title in 1951, plus the NAAU flying rings championship in Detroit the same year. Jack has the distinction of holding the only All-American title on the team.

Gene Rabbitt also distinguished himself in the gymnastics world. He won the NAAU side-horse championship four consecutive years, 1949 to 1952. He also won the NCAA side-horse title in 1950 at West Point, New York.

The Reens twins, Joe and Carmine, have been active in gymnastics. While at FSU, the twins have compiled a record of over twenty individual titles between them!

Rafael Lectman, the newest member of the team, has been active in gymnastics since 1946. At the last meeting of the year on Thursday night, the "Ramines' award, equivalent to Oscar, will be awarded to the graduating senior who has contributed most to Wesley Players during the four years of service.

BAPTIST STUDENT UNION

"Vocation With Pay" is the theme for the week at the Baptist Student Union. Monday's inauguration is at 6:45 followed by the installation of the summer executive council at vespers.

Emily Pace is speaking to the morning watch group, Friday, 7:30-7:50. Breakfast is served at the student house. During the week, Exam Teas will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons from 3:30 until 4:30.

RUGE CHAPEL

Reverend Hamilton West, Bishop Coadjutor of the diocese of Florida, will confirm a class and preach at Ruge Chapel 7:30 p.m. this tuesday.

Bishop West is known to many as a former Episcopalian Chaplin at the University of Florida. Everyone is invited to attend the services.

Russell Wins Fulbright; Gets England Study

Douglas Russell, instructor in costuming, makeup and fundamentals of speech at Florida State University will go to England in a few months as a winner of a "hurdly-comedative" Fulbright scholarship.

Russell has been costumed all the characters in every speech department play for the past three years, will supplement his education in England and will see productions in rehearsal and performance at the world-famed Stratford-on-Avon where the Shakespearian plays were first presented, spokesmen revealed.

For nine months Russell will attend classes there and then return to FSU to continue his work. He has costumed the two Shakespearian plays at FSU, "Taming of the Shrew" (1953) and "Romeo and Juliet" (1954).

For a few summers Russell has been in charge of costumes at Ashelund, Oregon, Shake-pearian Festival. This summer he will again go to Ashelund and the Fulbriant award will pay transportation from the Shakesperian Festival to New York and from there he and his wife will leave for Europe

Tuesday's Artist Series Show To Feature Percussionist Trio Including Drums, Dance, Piano

At Amphitheater

The Dance, Drums, and Piano Trio, featuring Daniel Nagrin, David Shapiro, and Ismail Gould, will appear at Florida State University Tuesday June 22 as the first selection of the summer Artist Series, according to Mrs. Hubert Vernon, spokesman.

The trio, said Mrs. Vernon, combines the visual appeal of a dancer with a virtuoso percussionist, who plays on twenty-two different percussion instruments, and a piano. The program is slated for the Open Amphitheater at 8:15. Mrs. Vernon stressed that the program is free and open to everyone.

"Tune-Up" Opens Program

The program, according to reports, opens with a "Tune-Up" number in which the three men on the stage casually, the dancer tunes his instrument, and the pianist plays a complex scale. The selection is described as "three virtuosi in visual and rhythmic counterpoint." Other selections include "The Cat Beat vs. The Down-Beat" and "Humorous and theatrical survey of percussion through the ages from the cave man through Strauss to Spike Jones and climaxed by the Indian Dance from "Annie Get Your Gun."

Reports indicate that the performers are experienced in the field of entertainment. Daniel Nagrin, the dancer, created the role of the Wild Horse Indian ceremonial Dancer in 'Annie Get Your Gun' Nagrin is also reported to have taken over Gene Nelson's place in "Lend an Ear."

Nagrin also appeared in 'I Dig Rock-by mers', "Just for You."

The pianist, David Shapiro, was a Fulbright summer appearance with the Comic Opera Players. They did a rendition of the "Old Maid and The Thief."

Shapiro is actively conducting operas in Tanglewodo, Massachusetts, and New York.

Ismail Gould, also noted as tympanist and head percussionist of the Little Orchestra Society of New York, started his career with the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D. C. at the age of seventeen.

Gould, who is currently also serving as percussionist with the New York City Center Ballet Company Orchestra, toured Latin America last summer.

Gould Symphony Member

Gould has been a member of the South Carolina Symphony, the New Orleans Symphony, Victor Borge and his Orchestra, and Billy Rose's production, "Violins on Broadway."

The Artist Series program, which is brought to FSU audiences each noted entertainers as Cornelia Otis Skinner, Claude Rains and the Oscar Hammerstein Opera Company, will present this summer, besides the Trio, The Knickerbocker Mixed Vocal Quartet for June 29; Jared Reed, Ballad Singer, July 20; and Henry L. Scott, Comic Humorist, for July 27.

The Artist Series has also presented the First Piano Quartet and The Don Cossacks Chorus this year.

EXOTIC—Exciting describes Daniel Nagrin, dancer for the Dance, Drums, and Piano Trio which will appear here Tuesday, June 22. The program is free and open to the public and is sponsored by the university Artist Series program.

FSU Orchestra, Music Camp, Compose Fulltime Symphony

This summer the orchestra will combine the Music Camp and the University personnel into a full-time Summer Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Eugene Cobb.

At these summer concerts the very best in orchestral literature will be played. Symphonic arrangements of Broadway Show Tunes will add spice to the repertoire.

All summer school personnel who play string instruments such as violins, cellos, violas and who are interested in playing in this summer symphony orchestra are asked to contact Mr. Cobb at the school of music or to leave their name with the office. Age is no barrier!

The main rehearsal is held weekly, on Friday night at 6:30 in the instrumental room of the School of Music. The Music Camp Orchestra rehearses daily from 10:30 till 12:30. Possibly some of the night players could attend these rehearsals.

Sunday evening, June 20, at 8:15 the Summer Symphony Orchestra will have a combined program along with the Music Camp Band in the Music Hall.

Some of the selections to be played at this time are: Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, Bachanals by Saint Saens, Symphony for Fun by Don Gillis, Kiss Me Kate Selections, Oklahoma Selections, Music of the Baroque Era and possibly some of Arron Copeland's Ballet Music from "Billy the Kid." There is no admission charge and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Gymkana Shows For Postal Clerks In Select Program

Florida State University Gymnastic group is not resting this summer. Their performance will be the highlight of Florida Federation of Post Office Clerks meeting today and tomorrow. The show will begin at the Armory at 8 following a convention banquet which begins at 6:30 tonight.

Under the direction of Dr. Hartley Price, FSU gym coach, the Gymkana group's program will feature comedy calisthenics, juggling, trampolins acts and unicycle riding.

Performers will include Don Holder, Jim Padigan, Ann Tucker, Margaret Stewart and the Tallahassee Tumbling Tots.

The Tots under the direction of Mary McNair, will include: Mary Cummings, Donna Duke, Linda Carswell, Carol Edmonton, Charlene Brock, Brent Pichard, Kay Laing, Betts Ann Barrett, Helen Barrett, Louise McCall, Barbara Cash, Frank Demmark, Ricky Stevens, Brenda Liner, Jimmie Sue Williams & Carole Renfroe.

High School Students Attend Educational Camps Enmasse

Florida State University has opened wide its gates this summer to several hundred high school students who will attend a variety of summer camps and institutes.

Offering arts and crafts, journalism, music, science and speech, the camps begun June 14, and will run from two to five weeks.

The department's offering the various camps state that they offer high school students ideal vacations: well planned recreation along with the best possible instruction in their special interest fields from our university faculty members.

MUSIC CAMPS

The 13th annual Music Camp is scheduled from June 14 through July 16. It offers orchestra, band, chorus, baton twirling, dance band, private study, conducting, music theory, and recreation all rolled up into five full weeks.

The Music Campers already number 280, boys and girls about equal. The boys are living in Senior Hall and the girls are in Broward Hall.

JOURNALISM INSTITUTES

The School of Journalism will hold two institutes. It is inaugurating a Yearbook Institute, June 14 through 27, which will be followed on June 27 by its third annual Newspaper Institute.

These two institutes are planned to stimulate and train youngsters who will be high school seniors in the fall interested in school publications.

SCIENCE CAMP

The Second Science Camp being held June 13 through June 25 will include laboratory work in astronomy, archaeology, biology, botany, marine biology, physicology, sociology, chemistry, geology, meteorology, physics, mathematics and psychology.

Some of the planned field trips will take in FSU's marine laboratory on the Gulf of Mexico, Wakulla Springs, St. Marks Wildlife Refuge and the State Seed Testing Laboratory.

ARTS AND CRAFTS

The second annual Arts and Craft Camp is being held June 14 through July 3. Oil painting, water color, ceramics, sculpture, fashion design, weaving, furniture design and sketching trips are a few of its planned activities.

SPEECH INSTITUTE

A Speech Institute, planned ahead as an annual event, will be held June 21-July 10. According to Dr. Clarence Edney, speech department head, the institute will give high school students practical experience as well as point-up instruction in public speaking, debate and forensics.

Dr. Van Sant Asks That FSU Students Enter Adult Teaching

"Get into the field of adult education as quick as you can," Dr. Thomas Van Sant, Director of Adult Education of the Baltimore Public Schools, advised Florida State University students Tuesday night.

About 150 teachers and prospective teachers heard the adult education experts in the field of the summer lecture series sponsored by the School of Education, and Kappa Delta Pi and Phi Delta Kappa, education honor societies.

"Be of service to your fellow man; be your brother's keeper," advised Dr. Van Sant. Adults throughout the world must be reached with this purpose so they can help educate their children he stated. It is the adults who raise the children and teach them about God and democracy; problems of today cannot be solved by our children in school, but by our educated adults, he said.

Van Sant explained that over 30 million adults in the United States are attending some form of adult education classes today. He stated that the movement is gaining strength in this country and throughout the world, and that the need for educated adults is recognized.

To Van Sant, the encouraging thing about entering adult education is the audience will not be made up of "credit-hungry" students, but of adults ready to learn.

Van Sant told his FSU audience that adult education can be organized in many groups, in service training being an example.

A social hour in the Longmire home Tuesday night followed the talk.

The next lecture in the series is scheduled for next Tuesday, when Dr. Ralph McGill, the professor of education, Teachers College, Columbia, will speak on "Student Personnel Work as Deeper Teaching."

Shores Book Reveals Source Of Most Basic References

Where to find answers to questions is the subject of a new book just published. The author is Florida State University's graduate dean, Dr. Lostis Shores.

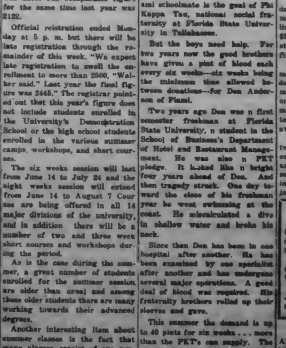
Taking seriously the often repeated quote that education is not so much knowing the answers to questions as knowing where to find the answers to questions, Dean Shores has set out to describe in his new book, "Basic Reference Sources," the places where 99.44% of all the questions asked by the American people can be answered.

Some of the sources described are the leading dictionaries for adults, high school and college students and for pre-school children. The use of the dictionaries and how they happened to be built make a readable chapter.

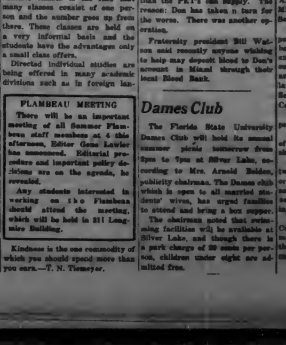
An encyclopedist in his own right, the author goes into the compiling with a guide to assist in a set for the home. After reading this chapter the householder should no longer fear the book salesman at the front door.

There are other classes of reference books discussed in some 19 chapters, including biographical sources, atlases, gazetteers, audio-visual sources, government documents and indexes.

Under the index there are specialized chapters on the basic reference sources in the various subjects of the sciences, social sciences, humanities, fine arts, education and the variety of forms and sources necessary for reporting research are described and classified.



"Basic Reference Sources" is published by the American Library Association. It is Dean Shores' seventh book in a writing and editing career that included more than 200 published articles in some of the leading magazines and journals in the United States and Britain, including the Saturday Review, Coronet, Overbook and the associate editorship of the Brvalnus Collier's Encyclopedia.



Polls Open Thursday For Summer Elections; Ten Offices at Stake

Man On The Effel Tower

Polls at 9

Summer Elections, the first in the history of Florida State University, have been set for next Thursday, according to plans announced by Betty Willmon, chairman of the Summer Elections Committee. Candidates have until Monday at 5 p.m. to declare their candidacy.

"We want to conduct as efficient an election as possible," stated Betty, "so it has been necessary to put off the election for two extra days in order to secure necessary publicity. Anyone interested in running should definitely inquire at Mr. Vogel's office in the basement of Longmire Building before Monday at 5 p. m."

Eight Seats at Stake

Offices at stake are eight seats on the new Summer Council, and the chairmanship and Secretariat of that body. The Summer Council was provided for this spring in the newly-ratified Student Body Constitution. It is to assume supreme executive, legislative, and judicial powers of the Student Body during the Summer Session. (The article of the Student Body Constitution providing for Summer Government is reprinted elsewhere in this issue.)

The committee conducting the Summer Election is composed of Miss Willmon as chairman, with Judy Jones and Robert Bondi as members. Helen Rodney and Elliot Whitten are assisting. Election regulations announced by that body are as follows:

Campaigning may begin actively next Monday at 5 p. m., at which time literature may be distributed and posters put in place, provided that posters are not placed on trees or shrubbery.

Expenses Limited

Campaign expenses of candidates, including gifts received, are limited to the following limits: Chairman, $25; Secretary, $25; Council members: $15. A statement of expenses must be filed with the Committee.

The following academic requirements are stipulated by the Student Body Constitution: The Chairman and Secretary of the Council or have achieved a 1.5 last semester and have an overall 1.3 average. Council members need a 1.3 average.

The council is to be composed of seven members, either junior or senior standing and two men and two women of sophomore or second semester Freshman standing. The Chairman must be a junior or senior.

SUMMER ELECTIONS

Thursday, June 24 Polls open from 9 am to 5 pm in Westcott, Student Center and Strozier Hall.

Offices to be Elected:

Chairman, Councilmen, a Chairman, and Secretary.

Who may Vote:

All students including graduate students, who have paid the Student Activity Fee.

Over 2500 Expected To Enroll For Summer Session Courses

This week Seminoles tramped back to the Florida State University campus as summer registration opened for the six and eight week sessions. Monday morning was the opening day of registration and as the dawn of the Women's Gym opened there were long lines waiting to come in.

Registrar Charles Walker announced today that the registration for this year is up over last years enrollment. He said the figure after Monday's registration was 2213. The comparable figure for the same time last year was 2122.

Official reistration ended Monday at 5 p. m. but there will be late registration during the remainder of this week. "We expect late registration to swell the enrollment to more than 2500, Walker said." Last year the final figure was 2445." The registrar pointed out that this year's figure does not include students enrolled in the University Demonstration School or the high school students enrolled in the various summer camps, workshops, and short courses.

The six weeks session will last from June 14 to July 26 and the eight weeks session will extend from June 14 to August 7 Courses this year being offered in all the major divisions of the university, and in addition there will be a number of two and three week short courses and workshops during the period.

As in the case during the summer, a great number of students are enrolled for the summer session are older than usual and among these older students there are many working towards their advanced degrees.

Another interesting item about summer classes is the fact that many classes consist of one person and the smaller group is there. These classes are held on a very informal basis and the students have the advantages only a small class offers.

Directed individual studies are being offered in many academic divisions such as in foreign languages, accounting, art or history and criticism of art, chemistry, economics, geography, public administration, and secretarial science.

PKT Need Blood Donors; Student Hurt in Accident

Forty pints of blood for a Miami schoolmate is the goal of Phi Kappa Tau, national social fraternity at Florida State University in Tallahassee.

But the boys need help. For five years now the good brothers have given a pint of blood each every six weeks—six weeks being the minimum time allowed between donations—for Don Anderson of Miami.

Two years ago Don won a first semester freshman at Florida State University, a student in the School of Business's Department of Hotel and Restaurant Management. He was also a PKT pledge. It looked like a bright four years ahead of Don. And then tragedy struck. One day toward the close of his freshman year he was swimming at the coast. He miscalculated a dive in shallow water and broke his back.

Since then Don has been in one hospital after another. He has been examined by one specialist after another and has undergone several major operations. A good deal of blood was required. His fraternity brothers rolled up their sleeves and gave.

This summer the demand is up to 40 pints for six weeks . . . more than the PKT's can supply. The reason: Don has taken a turn for the worse. There was another operation.

Fraternity president Bill Watson said recently anyone wishing to help may deposit blood in Don's account at Miami through their local Blood Bank.

Dames Club

The Florida State University Dames Club will hold its annual summer picnic tomorrow from 5pm to 9pm at Silver Lake, according to Mrs. Arnold Bolden, publicity chairman. The Dames club which is open to all married students' wives, has urged families to attend and bring a box supper.

The chairman noted that swimming facilities will be available at Silver Lake, and though there is a park charge of 25 cents per person, children under eight are admitted free.

STICKLER, MEYER PLAN

Two Florida State University professors have been named by the National Association of Biology Teachers as members of a five man committee to plan a Southeastern Conference on Biological Education to be held at the University of Florida, August 28-September 6.

They are Dr. Hugh Stickler, director of educational services and service and Dr. Samuel L. Mayer, head of the botany department.

The conference will bring together those concerned with the training of biology teachers, high school and elementary school teachers, school administrators, members of state departments of education and subject matter specialists.

The specialists will seek ways to improve biology teaching at all levels. The conference is supported by a grant of $15,000 from the National Science Foundation.

DAME HONORED

Dean J. Frank Dame of Florida State's School of Business has been elected an Honorary Fellow of the American Institute of Management. He is among the 74 distinguished leaders of business and education so honored this year, according to the Annual Review of the Institute, just released.

Nominations to Fellowship are made each year by the Fellowship Committee of the Institute in recognition of outstanding contributions to the advancement of the profession of management.

A nonprofit foundation engaged in the study and improvement of management through educational activities, the Institute's Associate Members number over 12,000 business leaders and educators.

MOON RECOGNIZED

The Florida State University faculty in its last general meeting gave recognition to Dr. Hubert C. Moon, deceased, for the service he has rendered the university through the unselfish performance of his duties as Director of the Teacher Internship Program.

Dr. Moon was a faculty member of the FSU School of Education from January 1940 until his death in January this year. He was director of intern teaching, and in this capacity had become well known throughout the State. He was called on frequently to serve as consultant for teacher education workshops and for curriculum laboratories.

Dr. Foon was a native of Leesville, Ga. He was graduated from the University of Florida in 1931 and received his master's degree from that institution in 19-33.

After serving as principal of Sealey Memorial School in Tallahassee for four years, he entered the George Peabody College for Teachers and was awarded his Ph.D there in 1940.

In a resolution in commemoration the university faculty said in part:

"Those who knew him best loved and admired him most not only for his devotion to his professional duties but also for his love of humanity and the beauty which he brought into his own life and into the lives of those who were fortunate enough to be associated

The Summer Flambeau Welcomes All, Explains Editorial Policy, Columnists

With this, the first issue of THE SUMMER FLAMBEAU, it seems fitting to extend a sincere greeting to our readers and to make some sort of introduction for ourselves.

Summer sessions are noted for their relative dullness and lethargy . . . the multitudinous clubs and organizations mostly be dormant and await the annual September renaissance. However, there has been no lack of extra-curricular exertion in the Flambeau office these past few days. The members of our skeleton staff have feverishly prepared for this issue and the five issues scheduled to follow.

Old readers of the Flambeau (that is, those who read it as far back as this spring) cannot help but notice the difference in typography and makeup. The clean, unadorned Tempo headlines have been replaced by the traditional, businesslike Bodoni typeface. This has been one of the many changes of custom and habit necessary in moving from the Tallahassee Democrat to Dye Press, Inc.

Though our format may differ, our editorial policy remains the same. We repeat the stated policy of last September: "Editorially, we will make a special effort to bring competent, interesting writers to our columns. The staff editorials will, in general, reflect the majority view of the entire staff; but we will give wide opportunity for people of varying points of view to present their ideas through the medium of signed columns . . . This is our goal: to publish an interesting, informative and thought-provoking newspaper, written with discretion and keeping the reader in mind."

One further note about signed columns: "The editor retains the right to approve or disapprove columns, but he will change nothing. Only under extreme circumstances when the editor considers a column to have wandered too far from the broad governing principles of responsibility and restraint will a column be turned down. Point of view will not be a criterion."

Having thus outlined some of the ground rules governing this editorial page, it seems in order to introduce the authors of the singled columns appearing on the right-hand side of the page today. Granted good health and preseverence they will appear more or less regularly this summer:

Bob Folsom: The regular Editor-in-Chief of The Florida Flambeau, who will resume his duties this fall, Bob is sending us his column from Hastings-on-Hudson, New York. San Francisco, of which he writes today, is the site of his former professional employment as a journalist.

Chris Young: The amiable and notable disc jockey of WTAL, Chris in private life seems to have mixed clerical and political ambitions.

Tom Woods: A journalist of a different breed than that found on the second floor of Longmire, Tom is Editor-in-Chief of the next year's Talla-Hi.

Orchid Alonso: A sophomore from Tampa, Orchid was Editor of The Summer Flambeau last year, and is the new Flambeau Managing Editor.

Other columnists will make their debut in coming issues, but this should serve as an introduction to the authors represented on this page.

Remember, The Summer Flambeau is your newspaper. Its columns are open to you, and our goal is "to publish an interesting, informative and thought-provoking newspaper, written with discretion and keeping the reader in mind."

BOB FOLSOM

On San Francisco Cable Cars

Once upon a time someone coined the phrase: East is East and West is San Francisco. There was never a more true adage.

The adage, today, holds a particular significance, perhaps not on a national scale, but for one who has seen and felt the atmosphere of the city.

San Francisco has decided to keep their cable cars, and I say three cheers. For when it comes to San Francisco and their cable cars, I am a sentimentalist.

There are only a few cities in the country that have a truly cosmopolitan atmosphere. Most say New York, New Orleans, and San Francisco. Many things go to make up this atmosphere.

New York—Manhattan, that is, can boast of more skyscrapers, restaurants, creeds, more of everything. As a great metropolis, it is "the place to go for shows, crowds, dazzle, and adventure," as the late Frederick Lewis Allen wrote.

New Orleans draws its atmosphere from the French Quarter, or Vieux Carre, though this section is blue-nosed in some parts by shopkeepers that take unlimited privileges on a person's bankroll. The Quarter's scenic touch lies in its old French structures, while the yearly Mardi Gras adds much favor to the city.

But as I said, when it comes to San Francisco, I am a sentimentalist, and once the town gets in your blood, it is difficult to prefer any other.

It's a town where there isn't too much of what you want, nor too little.

Perched up on the bay as if at any moment it will ship in, different factions within San Francisco have battled for some year over whether the cable cars should or should not be kept in operation. Recent squabbles have been going on since January and were settled last week.

The municipal railway system was continually losing money and city officials decided to cut losses by eliminating parts of the cable system and some bus lines.

The opposition formed and a compromise proposal was made in which the cable car line could be consolidated into a system that could be operated at a profit.

This was placed in the form of a proposition and last Tuesday, San Francisco citizens voted on it, cutting up a comfortable majority in its favor.

The cable cars compete as a leading tourist attraction. The most famous of the cable routes is the Powell-Street line, which starts from the turntable at Market and Powell, runs by Union Square, up over Nob Hill, down, makes a circle, lurches back up the hill and down to the turnstile.

The Hyde-O'Farrell Street line weaves its way over Russian Hill, and bolts down to Fisherman' Wharf at a steep angle directly on a line with Alcatraz Island sitting out in the bay. This is now being merged with the Powell line.

Often there are pictures, ads or movie shots taken of a cable car as it rides over a peak on its route. The bay bridge is usually shown in the background.

Not only are the cables a source of attraction for tourists, but also, they remain something inherent and tangible for the San Franciscans.

Most likely, city officials are cognizant of this.

ORCHID ALONSO

Challenge of 'Practical' Trends Reviewed

Last week I sat in a sweltering auditorium and watched as several hundred high school graduates filed in to receive their diplomas.

I sat amid the proud parents with their gleaming eyes and glistening foreheads and listened to the salutatory, the valedictory, the presidents and thenks that the faculty, administration and parents got in turn.

I sneered (college or hard knocks, don't know which, has made me just a little cynical) as the student speakers advised everyone present that qtote now they were ready to face the world, unquote.

As I sat there I felt a little sorry for them and even had a stifle a wild desire to jump up and warn them that they were wrong, that they weren't ready to face the world, that they weren't prepared to even know what the world was all about.

It was about this time, that as a ray of hope, one of the speaker's voice came through to me. She was warning the students of what lay ahead for them. She was telling them that they had to have a goal, something to work for. "No one can attain happiness if they do not know what it is."

Gone were the platitudes, and if only in a small way, those graduates were being told to think, to realize that there was much to learn and that only an earnest desire to learn and to reach a goal could help them.

It was the only real statement of the evening and I fixed my eyes on the graduates, hoping to see some sign of realization. Some indication that they were ready to accept a challenge perhaps greater than at any other time, because the trends in schools have become so practical as to be unpractible. There was no sign.

I am being too harsh? I think not. Just recently, a graduation class from Florida State University was told that college graduates are still incompletely educated. The speaker, Dr. E. C. Colwell, dean of the faculties at Emory stated that in the "common" sense of the word, getting an education was gaining information and acquiring skills.

Colwell quoted Albert Einstein, and I will quote him also — "It is not enough to teach a man a specialty. Through it he may become a useful machine, but not a harmoniously developed personality. It is essential that the student acquire an understanding of a lively feeling for values. He must acquire a vivid sense of the beautiful and of the morally good. Otherwise he - - with his specialized knowledge - - more closely resembles a well trained dog that a harmoniously developed person."

Colwell also outlined what he believes is the nature of an educated man. It is not hard to understand and belief in it, underlining about the type of philosophy in teaching that would bring back to our high schools (the feeders of our colleges and universities) a worthwhile program of individual development in "non-coddled" classrooms.

Here are the highlights of Colwell's evaluation in three main points. First, students should be aware of the great tradition of the past for comparison with the present. Second, they must understand human nature. Third, he must know the structure and nature of society that makes his feel at home in the world, politics, and economics.

It is not the students' fault, but it is the student who will suffer. Some will suffer for lack of understanding, and still others will suffer - because there is so little they can do about it. But all will suffer because they have not in time. Which brings to mind this historical statement: no effort is ever wasted, but what we should have known yesterday.

CHRIS YOUNG

On Airsickness, McCarthyism, and Dog Pounds

I was flying to Tallahassee from Palm Beach Saturday morning (flying - - because I had managed to glean sufficient drachmas from my limited earnings to afford the luxury - - and vowing never to do it again because of the many uncomfortable drops of altitude the plane underwent drops for which I was not prepared) when another FSU bound passenger afflicted with mal d'air offered to talk about things which would take our minds away from a fiery death. She said, "I don't like McCarthy. Do you?"

I was rather surprised at such a blunt statement from a coed who appeared to be less inclined toward political partisan and more towards soirees. But I didn't relish the thought of dying alone, so I replied, "I like him." She bristled up like a cat facing a carnivorous canine, then purred, "Why?"

McCarthy is what America needs, someone who isn't afraid to step in the red. Washington's delicate pedal digits (or should it be "political digits").

Joe is conscious of the need for a legislative official who can see beyond petty partisan parleys which dominate both the domestic and foreign scene. His enemies say that he has no tact. They cry that he is ruthless and inconsiderate. I cannot obviate that to fight any subversive group whose aim it is to destroy and enslave, you cannot use kid gloves (and spats) are no good. McCarthy is being crucified by the press and the tools of our Saint Welch and company. Unfortunately, American public opinion is formed mainly by the press. It takes those who can read between the lines, those who remember what happened to the man who warned of the Pearl Harbor activities prior to World War II, to appreciate McCarthy. It is the petty, profiteering politicos, the biased press; who slay American's vigilant spirit as personified by McCarthy. History will prove his cause a just one."

The subject changed at that moment to the dog pounds. Those who looked as though he might be enroute to a Lynch-Joe-Party

TOM WOODS

The South, the Supreme Court, and Segregation

Ferverous excitement has gripped the Southland since the Supreme Court decision to ban segregation in the public schools, last May. State politico have been engaged in a mad scramble to find some means to skirt the ruling and many possible solutions have been offered.

First, a little background on the problem. The "separate but equal" doctrine was first established by the Supreme Court in the late 1800's case of Plessy vs. Plessy v. Ferguson. This meant that it was not a violation of the 14th Amendment to have segregated schools as long as equal facilities were offered to both groups. This decision has stood in a somewhat modified form until 1951 when the case of Sweatt v. Painter, case concerning the admission of a Negro to the Texas Law School, more or less ruled it out. In this case, the Supreme Court said that it was impossible to provide equal educational facilities when one considered the difference in such intangibles as prestige of the school, alumni, faculty, etc.

During the last few years, there have been several cases tiering colleges and universities in do away with segregation. These have been aimed at specific institutions and have not entered the realm of elementary and secondary schools. The latest case, however, is directed at all state supported schools.

Does this mean that white and colored children will be attending the same schools on any large scale in the near future? Probably not, and the reasons are several. First, the court seems unwilling to push the new ruling too fast in face of so much Southern resentment. To enforce this step immediately would require an army of federal troops, and such a case seems highly improbable. Secondly, the majority of Negroes do not seem anxious to enter white schools even if the opportunity was presented Evidence for this has been seen in Oklahoma, Texas, and Louisiana. Thirdly, the southern states may be able to set up some form of segregation which will get around the law.

Here are some of the proposals. In South Carolina, Governor-elect Timmerman has suggested optional schools. This would provide for setting up Negro and segregated schools as long as equal facilities were offered to both groups. This decision has stood in a somewhat modified form until 1951 when the case of Sweatt v. Painter, a case concerning the admission of a Negro to the Texas Law School, more or less ruled it out. In this case, the Supreme Court said that it was impossible to provide equal educational facilities when one considered the difference in such intangibles as prestige of the school, alumni, faculty, etc.

During the last few years, there have been several cases tiering colleges and universities in do away with segregation. These have been aimed at specific institutions and have not entered the realm of elementary and secondary schools. The latest case, however, is directed at all state supported schools.

Does this mean that white and colored children will be attending the same schools on any large scale in the near future? Probably not, and the reasons are several. First, the court seems unwilling to push the new ruling too fast in face of so much Southern resentment. To enforce this step immediately would require a setback to southern education. The most practical solution of fered thus far is one of sending Negro to most cases the Negro population of a southern town is centralized, it would be quite possible to build larger out of white school districts.

At any rate much research is being done to find an answer to the problem. Over $10,000 has been appropriated to study the problem. The council of Southern Governors is now holding an investigation to determine united action for the South. Several states and undoubtedly more plans will be presented.

In this chaotic state of affairs, we can draw some conclusions Segregation is on the way out. The colleges and universities will probably let down the bars first and the public schools later. Any devices to get around the law will be at best temporary, but should allow sufficient time to work on a solution without bloodshed.

Rogers, Stevenson and Wit

Nineteen years ago this nation suffered what seemed to be an irreparable loss with the death of Will Rogers. He could toss back a black lock from his forehead, and with disarming charm unleash a comment to devastate political stuffed-shirts and set the nation to laughing at itself and its troubles.

Only occasionally does a public figure show that spark of wit and humor that, as John Steinbeck puts it, sets him apart from "the weighty sarcasms, moral indignations, the flaggy patriotism and dingy platitudes," so common to public life today.

However, there is a man without Indian blood and without a lock of hair to toss back upon his abnormal pate, but with more than a hint of Roperesque wit and humor. Adlai Stevenson "draws his humor from his subjects. His jokes, far from obscuring his message, enlighten it."

Example: Commenting on recent foreign policy discussions, Adlai tossed off the remark that the Republican Party "is a house of many mansions, with many more wings than a boarding house chicken." The current Army-McCarthy investigations made the GOP remind him of "a blind dog in a meathouse."

Stevenson's background is too partisan to ever allow him to inherit the mantle of Will Rogers. But the same wit and charm seems to be there; despite the handicap of a crushing defeat, sufficient to bury other Presidential candidates in dullness and disillusion.

Life Span in H-Bomb Age

Into our present age, where life can be obliterated in a fleeting moment by a hydrogen bomb or jet propelled rocket, comes gratifying news.

Our life span is increasing by leaps and bounds.

Figures released recently by the U. S. Public Health Service reveal the average American's life span has hit an all-time high of 68½ years, an increase of nearly four years from the average life expectancy 10 years ago.

The weaker sex is not weak: they are getting stronger. Women on the average are outliving men by six years. The average lifetime expected for women at birth is 71.8 years, compared to 65.9 years for men.

If the bombs leave us alone, present day college students can look forward to long, fruitful years. By the time a student now in his twenties reaches 68½, the life expectancy should have increased six-teen years, and he'll have to go to 84. At 84 it will have increased 8 more.

Oh well, it was nice figuring.

Need for Free Inquiry

The business of a college or university is not propaganda but truth. Its means of disseminating truth is not by indoctrination but by free inquiry into facts, candidly presented in as objective a manner as the sources of information will permit. In this era of university curriculum we are no taboos except the taboos of bad taste and bad manners. Students in a free world need to know about socialism and communism and the pseudo democracy of the totalitarian states. By the same token they need to know about individualism, free enterprise, free religion, and all the personal freedoms that are indispensable to our forms of economic and political organization. Free inquiry is not propaganda; teaching about is not indoctrination. The facts will speak for themselves and, in my opinion, if the facts are candidly presented our world will not suffer by comparison. — Dr. Howard L. Bevis, President, The Ohio State University, in The Journal of Higher Education.

A Liberally Educated Man

The liberally-educated man is articulate both in speech and writing. He has . . . a respect for clarity and directness of expression, and a knowledge of words and usage other than his own. He is at home in the world of quantity, number, and measurement. He thinks rationally . . . objectively, and knows the difference between fact and opinion. When the occasion demands, however, he thought is imaginative and creative rather than logical. He is perceptive, sensitive to form, and affected by beauty. He exhibits flexible and adaptable, curious and independent. He knows a good deal about the world of nature and the world of man, about the culture of which he is a part, but he is never merely "well-informed." He can use what he knows, with judgment and discrimination. Whether making a professional or a personal decision, he acts with maturity, balance, and perspective, which come ultimately from his knowledge of other persons, other problems, other times and places. His personal standards are high; nothing short of excellence will satisfy him. But service to his society or to his God is the purpose of his excelling. Above all, the liberally-educated man is never a type. He is always a unique person, vivid in his distinction from other similarly educated persons, while sharing with them the traits we have mentioned. A liberally-educated man demands freedom. "We call those educated liberal," wrote a Renaissance educator, "which are worthy of a free man" . . . and we might add today, of a free society. — Harvard Alumni Bulletin.

Management MS Is Offered Here

A Master of Science Degree in Restaurant, Hotel ur Club Management can be taken at Florida State University by students who have undergraduate degrees in majors other than in business.

The program according to Charles Bovetta, dean of the School of Business, is being made available especially for those who wish to learn the business management and control aspects of the food, hotel and related fields.

Each student is required to complete a thesis based on some management problem that is of practical significance.

Subjects offered in the program include restaurant and hotel accounting, club management, laws of innkeeping and seminars in restaurant and hotel management.

Faculty who teach the work include: Dr. Donald E. Lundberg, head of the Restaurant and Hotel Management Department; Anne May Tracy, professor, past president of the American Dietetic Association; Gladys E. Hall, associate professor, past executive secretary of the American Dietetic Association, and Peter Dukas, assistant professor, former Restaurant Consultant in the New York area.

Letters . . .

Dear Editor:

We are a group of men over here in Korea who are very lonely because we do not receive any mail.

And we were just wondering if there were any girls who would like to write to some lonely G. I.'s in Korea?

We would appreciate it very much if we could hear from some girls in the states.

There are quite a few guys over here who would rather stand in a mail line than a pay line because over here mail is the only thing we really have to look forward to.

We would appreciate it if you could help us.

Thank you very much.

FSU Museum, Gallery Exhibits To Feature Paintings, 'Drums'

The Florida State University Museeum is exhibiting until June 29 a collection of primitive musical instruments from around the world, reports state.

Also included in the exhibit, it was learned, is art work of graduate students, in the University Art Gallery.

"Downbeat Primitive," sponsored by the department of nathropology and archaeology, features a functional exhibit of musical instruments in which the viewer can participate.

"We will have drums ranging from chest high voodoo drums from Haiti to tamberine-type Cheyenne Indian drums," said Dr. Hale Smith, museum director, "and guests are welcome to pound away on them with the drum sticks."

The art exhibit on paintings, called "Graduate Students—Past and Present" presents some 20 canvases, sponsored by the art department.

This exhibit's range and style and subject, it was learned, will show the scope of FSU teaching under its former art department head, Edmund Lewandowski, now director of the Layton School of Art, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Also as part of the functional ism of the drum exhibit, some of the wind instruments will be set up so a press of a button by a viewer and an air pump will play a note of the instrument. Some of the percussion instruments will also be controlled by electrical devices by the viewer.

The Museum and Gallery are open to the public free of charge from 12:30 to 5 p. m. Tuesdays through Friday; 1-4 p. m. Sunday; and 9-12:30 a. m. Saturday. The museum is closed Mondays.

Irish Is Author

Dr. Marian D. Irish, head of the department of political science, is co-author of a high school textbook in United States government, "The People Govern."

Dr. Irish and Laurence G. Paquin director of secondary education in Fairfield, Conn., the authors, consider the text as "a tool which teachers and students can use to prepare themselves for a destiny which has world importance — the assumption of the right, privileges and responsibilities of American citizenship."

The book is Dr. Irish's first. She first attracted the attention of the publishers, Charles Scribner's with a article in the February 4, 1950, edition of the Saturday Evening Post, "You'll Never Make them Loyal That Way."

In the article she said the basic weakness of American democracy is that its champions do not know what democracy is, and proposed a "Primer of Democracy" as an answer.

After Scribner's introduced the co-authors, it took them four years to write the book, which includes headings on constitutional government, financing by and for the people, capitalist economy, and "Government of Laws and Not of Men."

COUNSELING

Florida employers, employees and educators will have a chance to brush up on the most successful modern counseling methods at a Workshop to be held June 14-18 here at Florida State University.

The Employment Service and Agency Counseling Workshop has planned n two week concentrated course of work sessions, panel discussions symposiums and evaluations. This course is being sponsored by the General Extension Division of Florida in cooperation with FSU. Staff members of the University of Florida, State Department of Education, Florida State Employment Service and Florida State University will participate.

OELSCHLAGER CONSULTS

Dr. Victor R. B. Oelschlager, head of the Florida State University department of Modern Languages is one of 200 leading language scholars of the world who have agreed to act as consultants on the second edition of the Britannica World Language Dictionary, it has been announced by Robert C. Preble, President of the Britannica company and creator of the multilingual work.

The new Britannica dictionary gives word equivalents in seven languages - - English, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Swedish and Yiddish. These languages are spoken by about a quarter of the world's population, but considering only the Western World, they are the languages of about three-quarters of the residents of Western nations, approximately 625,000,000 persons.

The implications of the seven-language dictionary in the field of scholarship and commerce and travel are evident; even more important, however, are the implications in the area of international good will. The publishers have respectively requested that the heads of the nations whose languages are used in this work permit the second edition, now in preparation, to be dedicated to them jointly, and it is anticipated that this permission will be given.

LAWLER CHAIRMAN

Dr. Eugene S. Lawler, professor of education, finished a four year term as chairman of Committee on Board of Education Leadership of the Southern States Work Conference when that body completed its work last week at Daytona Beach, Florida.

Professor Lawler attended the Daytona conference after taking part in the Bicentennial Celebration of Columbia University in New York City. There he took part in the Conference on National Policies for Education, which featured Everta Culp Hobby, Eleanor Roosevelt, Adlai Stevenson, and Professor Robert M. MacIver as major speakers.

KARL MOHR ELECTED

Karl Mohr has been re-elected president of the Florida State University Choral Union, largest vocal organization on campus.

Carolyn Glenn is the new vice-president; Elizabeth Statt, business manager, and Louise McClure, publicity manager.

Herman Gunter, Jr. of the music faculty is director of the Choral Union which traditionally presents "The Messiah" during the Christmas season, and also several other concerts during the year.

Mathis Receives Market Research Advertising Prize

Jack D. Mathis, a senior student majoring in advertising at Florida State University, was named today as one of 15 students in the United States to receive a 1955-54 Market Research Council of New York Awards.

The announcement was made today by J. Richard Stevens, associate professor of marketing and advertising at Florida State University, who sponsored student entries in the competition as part of the class work in his courses. Mathis was also advised in developing his project by Dr. Royal H. Ray, head of the department of advertising.

The winning entry used extensive secondary research data to plan advertising policy and program recommendations for an actual Chicago manufacturer of industrial equipment. The entire study wne then made into an effective graphic selling presentation of the conclusions, such as would be presented by an advertising agency to the executives of the manufacturing company.

Florida State University and Tulane University were the only colleges in the South to receive awards for winning entries.

Nugent's 'Fancy' . . .

FSU drew nationwide sports interest last week with a most unique passing clinic. Three hundred fifty high school and college coaches, players, and other gridiron enthusiasts flocked to Tallahassee for the spectacular event. The clinic entitled "Passing Fancy" was held June 10 through 12.

Its origin can be accredited to Coach Tom Nugent. While attending several football clinics Nugent became aware of the tremendous interest in the fundamentals and techniques of passing. He soon came to believe that a clinic devoted only to passing would be most helpful. His idea received encouragement from other FSU coaches and the administration. The result being the highly informative clinic of last week.

The program featured gridiron greats Sammy Baugh, Otto Graham, Bobby Thomason, Bobby Layne, Pete Pihos, and Harry Gilmer. Nearly all phases of the passing game were discussed . long and short passes, screen passes, pass defense, pass catching, pass patterns, etc.

Among those attending the conference were head coaches Bob Woodruff (Univ. of Fla.), George Sauer (Baylor), Marcelino Huerta (Tampa) and Sid Gilman (Cincinati). Twenty-two states were represented.

Our congratulations to you, Coach Nugent, and to all others responsible for a very colorful undertaking.

Bowling Doings . . .

Intramural bowling got off to a grand start Monday evening. After one night of play two leagues (a men's and a women's) have emerged. Each league is composed of four teams.

The night's high scoring honors went to Floyd Jaggears of the "Sackers" with 177 for the men and to Elin Thompson of the "Flying Pins" with 112 for the women.

Openings remain on league teams. Interested individuals may fill them merely by appearing at the league's second round Monday evening at 7 p.m. All league competition is held on the alleys in the basement of the Women's Gym. Sounds as if it should be fun.

Famed Knickerbockers Appear In Amphitheatre Tuesday Night

Sing Fledermaus

The second Florida State University Artist Series program will be presented by the Knickerbockers in the Amphitheater at 8:15 June 29. It is one of the most attractive and unusual ever assembled, according to a recent report.

It features a variety of specially selected and staged music of all types and periods, ranging from folk-songs to operetta and musical comedy.

The pre-intermission "Fledermaus," staged and sung in English, contains in concentrated form some of the choicest portions of the inimitable score that has made "Fledermaus" a national favorite. The Knickerbockers have expertly blended Americana with a French pot-pourri; starting with a touch of Mozart, they finish with a dazzling medley of popular songs conquered by New York - a "Knickerbocker Fantasy"—created especially for them.

No Solos

Completely devoid of standard "solo groups," the entire show blends solos with group singing in an ever shifting, varied, and always delightful kaleidoscope of imaginatively staged first-rate music for everyone's taste.

The master hands behind The Knickerbockers are two of the most gifted young men in New York.

Don Smith, arranger and musical director hails from Oberlin. He is assistant conductor at New York City Center Opera and assistant musical director at New England famed Cohasset Music Circus. Mr. Smith also had a musical hand in last fall's Rambert Tour.

Gene Bayliss, choreographer at Cohasset, has credits at the Birmingham Opera's "Under the Stars," on Broadway, and on numerous TV shows, it was noted.

Smith's arrangements and musical direction were first teamed with Bayliss' novel and tastefully "staged last season — when this gifted team launched the Chanticleers quartet on their nationwide tour.

Played Stravinsky

The Knickerbockers have grown both long and short — and both lengths are equally becoming.

Tenor Adams Petrucki, whose fine operatic voice made him Stravinsky's choice for the New England Opera's "Rake's Progress," is a veteran of eight-six and dance band work, where his football physique and rugged good looks made him a favorite.

Rudy Nania, North Carolina native, became a radio professional in her teens, has swung out many a hit tune in ingenious summer stock and with Fred Waring - and has, at the same time, been a symphony soloist and pianist.

Wis Scholarships

In addition to their "brilliant and versatile professional" experience, two other Knickerbockers have distinguished themselves during student years by amassing a "formidable array" of important scholarships.

Largest record is chalked up by Jack Brady, winner of the Baton Rouge and New Orleans Opera Guild scholarships, a Goldwasky scholarship at Tanglewood, and, most recently, a professional scholarship at the Mannes Opera in New York.

Irene Calloway, recipient of scholarships at Louisiana State University and winner of the Baton Rouge Opera Guild award for two successive years, rates it off with a newly won Fulbright which will take her to Milan for intensive operatic training after her Knickerbocker tours.

THE KNICKERBOCKERS ... Appearing here as the second selection of the summer Artist Series on June 29 in the Moore Amphitheater will feature a variety of specially selected music of all types and periods. Four performers on the show, left to right are: Tenor Adam Petrucki, Soprano Irene Calloway, Contralto Ruth Pitts, and Baritone Richard Brode.

Alumna Chosen Book Chairman Of Pilot Club

Miss Mildred Parrish, Executive Secretary of the Florida State University Alumni Association, was recently appointed Pilot press book chairman for the Tallahassee Pilot Club International. This was announced by Mrs. Ruth Campbell, governor of the district.

Miss Parrish served as a press book judge for the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs at its recent convention in Tallahassee. She is currently president of the Pilot Club of Tallahassee.

Among her duties as FSU alumni secretary, Mildred has served for the past six years as editor of the FSU alumni magazine, The Magazine is the only one in the state of Florida to receive a national award from the American Alumni Council.

Prior to coming to FSU, she had several years experience in newspaper reporting and editorial work. Miss Parrish holds a master's degree from the Florida State University and a bachelor's degree in journalism from the University of Missouri. Her Missouri degree includes majors in special writing and news-editorial.

Pilot Club projects center around community service of local clubs as reported by the press, radio and TV. Pilot Club International is a classified service club of executive business and professional women.

OFFICIAL NOTICE

The Library will be closed the weekend of July 3, 4, 5, Saturday, Sunday, and Monday.

Students, Faculty Members Participate In Chemical Meet

Two Florida State University undergraduates were among those presenting research papers at the annual Florida Section Meeting of the American Chemical Society in St. Petersburg, Florida, recently.

Jeanne Allen, sophomore chemistry major, presented a paper to the undergraduate section in collaboration with Dr. Earl Priesler, FSU associate professor of chemistry. The paper dealt with ether reactions between copper and the important naturally occuring nucleic acids.

Hazel Bryant, senior chemistry major, discussed an improved synthesis of a amino acid analogue as a result of work done in collaboration with Raymond Shapira, FSU graduate student, and Dr. Karl Dittmer, head of the Department of chemistry at the University.

Dittmer in Symposium

At a special symposium on "Future Needs for Chemists in Florida Industries," Dr. Karl Dittmer spoke on the need for industrial support of undergraduate education of chemists.

Many other papers were presented by FSU people at the Florida Section Meeting in the various areas of chemistry, including the formation on physical and inorganic chemistry was John J. Grisard, graduate student, and Dr. Rowland E. Johnson, FSU assistant professor. Leading a discussion was Asthor P. Butler, FSU graduate student. and Dr. Ernest Grunwald, Dr. Arthur Finch, Dr. A. L. Bacarella, and Dr. E. Grunwald also presented a paper in this field.

In organic chemistry, Bruce E. Cleare, graduate student, and Dr. Robert L. Ellis, FSU associate professor, presented their research to the group.

Donald E. Lewis, graduate student, and Dr. Earl Dittmer presented studies to the biochemistry section. Also, Dr. Earl Priesler and Barbara Wells, graduate student, discussed observations on enzyme reactions.

Boys', Girls' States Overlap So Ideas Can Be Exchanged

Florida State University began playing host to students from 60 high schools throughout the state on Sunday, June 20, as approximately 360 boys attended the 16th annual Boys' State, sponsored by the American Legion. The Boys' State will continue until June 25.

The eighth annual Girls' state sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, will begin June 25 and last through July 2.

Officials of the Legion and Auxiliary plan the overlapping of the periods so that the outstanding boys and girls chosen by local civic organizations can meet, for an exchange of ideas as well as a big social get-together. Mr. Clyde V. Hayman of Winter Haveo and Mrs. J. P. Anderson of Tampa will be the directors, each assisted by 50 counselors.

Purpose Explained

The purpose of Boys' and Girls' State is to give future voters and office holders of Florida an understanding of government at state, county and local levels.

While there, teenagers are here on the FSU campus they will be taught the methods of democracy by electing their own governing officials and conducting their own state legislatures. They will also have the privilege of using the chambers of the State Senate and the House of Representative in the State Capitol for many of their meetings.

Fellowship For Study Abroad Available To Six US Students

Mr. Kenneth Holland, President of the Institute of International Education, 1 East 67th Street, New York City, has just announced that six fellowships for study in Italy have been offered to American graduate students by the Italian Government.

The awards, made available through the Cultural Relations Office of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, are for a minimum period of six months between October 1964 and March 1965. Age limit for application is July 1, 1964. Men or women in any field of study may apply.

Must Speak Italian

Candidates must be U. S. citizens, preferably between 21 years of age. Preference will be given to candidates who apply from the U. S. and have been previous study in Italy. Applicants must have a project for advanced study or research and must demonstrate capacity for independent study.

Although a knowledge of Italian is not required at the time of application, successful candidates are required to learn some Italian before taking up their fellowships.

Free tuition will be given fellows who wish to attend the summer orientation course, held especially for foreigners, at the University of Perugia.

$300 Offered

The Italian Embassy in Washington has offered $300 to successful candidates to be used for round-trip travel on an Italian ocean liner.

Each Italian Government grant bears a stipend of 600,000 lire (approximately $970). Free tuition will be given at a school or university for an entire academic year. Candidates in the musical field will be given extra funds for private lessons. A small stipend is also provided for travel inside Italy.

Central private agency in the U. S. in the exchange of students, teachers, and specialists, the Institute administers student and other exchange programs for public and private agencies in the U. S. and abroad. This year the Institute has arranged study abroad programs for the U. S. and Italy for 350 Italian and American students and specialists.

Summer Co-eds Invited To Nat'l College Queen Contest

Summer Play Set

By TOM LEWIS

Characters have been chosen and practice has been started by the Department of Speech summer play production "Papa is All", set for July 23, 24, 25. This play is the work of Patterson Green and was written in 1941.

The play is about a Mennonite family of the Pennsylvania Dutch farming variety. It is a comedy concerned with the problems of overbearing father and his family, who wish to break away from his control. The play is set in the kitchen of the farmhouse of the Ankamp family, with the action occuring in the month of May.

To Interest All

Dr. Paul Dave, director of the three act comedy, said that the play was picked in order to present something which would be of interest to teachers of secondary schools, many of whom are attending college during the summer.

Dr. Dave felt that the play was of a type which was worthy as dramatic literature yet was not beyond the limits of high school production. Because of the simplicity of the set and the relative ease with which actors could get into the parts, "Papa is All" should be a splendid very well by a high school cast.

Dr. Dave said that the play presented a very interesting aspect in the use of language. Pennsylvania Dutch phraseology and dialect make possible some very nice comedy lines and at the same time a naive quality which is very interesting.

The play, played by Lee Hilchen, is a club-footed man in his fifties, a bearded Mennonite who wants to keep his family together to keep from having to hire help around the farm. Mazea, a plain Godfearing woman, is played by Bonnie Hunter.

Kennedy Beats Joanos For Summer Council In Election Yesterday

Wins By Eight

Dave Kennedy was declared winner of the Summer Council chairmanship last night by a light vote of 133 to 125. Returns were released at about 4 p.m. yesterday, but were hand recounted before becoming official.

In the only other contested race Tom Ehrhardt and Roy Chapman were elected Councilmen in the men's upper division. They notched 80 and 78 votes, respectively, to the following totals for their opponents: Stan Alderman, 64, Tom Lewis, 53, Vern Williams, 51, and Herb Lackyo, 36.

Betty Wilson, chairman of the elections committee, was elected Councilwoman from the upper division with 11 write-in votes. Nancy Graham, the only name on the ballot for the two positions, received 172.

Johnson Elected

Russell Johnson received 110 votes, though he was not officially entered in the race, to become Councilman from the men's lower division, in which Jimmy Soles received 104 votes.

Mary Elizabeth King, 148, and Betty Hobson, 138, were elected from the women's lower division, and Shirley Harper, unopposed, became Secretary with 166 votes.

In being declared winner of the first summer election ever held at FSU, Kennedy beld the Semester Flambeau.

"I would like to express my gratitude for the vote of confidence that you have extended to me today. I will work diligently

COUNCIL MEETING

A special Summer Council has been called for next Monday at 5 pm in the Student Union, second floor Longmire, Dave Kennedy, new Summer Council Chairman, announced today.

for you the students and see that your wishes will be carried out this summer."

"I want to thank my opponent Jimmy Joanos for the clean campaign he has waged against me. We will work together to bring good government to you this summer."

Florida State students had been treated to a relatively quite and uneventful campaign this week, as the fifteen candidates scrapped for the ten available positions.

In contrast to the blanketing of fall and spring elections, only a few posters were evidence. Nearly all of these were for the chairmanship contest between Jim Joanos and Dave Kennedy.

Low turnout elections did receive unprecedented campaign publicity, however, when several newspapers picked up a report of Dave Kennedy's campaign slogan, "Capable, Sincere, Reasonably Hensgt." Kennedy is a member of the FSU Honor Court during the Regular Session.

Kennedy, according to observers, based his campaign partly on a "get out the graduate student" movement." Stressing the fact that he is a senior, he stated that "it is because of this being the first time that special and graduate students can vote that this election is of such great importance. Here is their chance to demonstrate to all students that they have an interest in student government."

Joanos, on the other hand, emphasized his experience as a student government officer (President of his dormitory, Sophomore Senator) and depended on his appeal with the Tallahassee electorate to bring him over the top. "It is doubly important that we make it a success."

Plans Inexpensive Campaign

There were an insufficient number of candidates in only one race: the women's upper division, in which Nancy Graham was the only name on the ballot. Jive dates was the only names listed for the men's lower division, however. Russell Johnson was not found by the elections committee to be qualified in time.

CONGRATULATIONS ... Jimmy Joanos, left, congratulates Dave Kennedy, right, winner of the Summer Council Chairmanship in yesterday's light voting. Kennedy compiled an eight-vote margin to top Joanos for the position.

New Student Dean Is Appointed For FSU

The Dean of Students at Oklahmoa A&M College has been named to replace Dr. Brownd Culpepper as Dean of Students at Florida State University, according to a recent announcement by President Doak S. Campbell.

Dr. Roscoe Ralph Oglesby, a native Kentuckian, takes over the duties left when Culpepper was appointed executive secretary of the Florida Board of Control. Culpepper had held the deanship since 1947.

Several Changes Lately

The change is the most recent of several major administrational changes to be announced lately. Last Summer, after two years with no major changes, Dr. Otis McBride, Dean of Men, was replaced by Dr. Louis Corson. McBride was then appointed as head of audio visual in the University.

An additional post was created during this time with the appointment of Mr. Fred J. Vogel as counselor and director of student organizations. Mr. Vogel works directly under the office of Dean of Students.

Oglesby, described by vice-president A. D. Martin as a "fine gentleman and a person I'm sure all students will like," is held in high regard by the FSU administration.

Well Qualified

Commented Martin: "He is well qualified for the position."

Oglesby, revived his Ph.D in political science at Duke University, his master's degree at the University of Virginia, and his bachelor's degree at Georgetown. The new dean has also done graduate work at Heidelberg and Harvard.

Before his appointment as Dean of Students at A&M College seven years ago, Dr. Oglesby taught at Duke University, Berea College, and Sweet Briar College. He has also served as special lecturer in international law and international relations in the Foreign Service School of George Washington University.

Dr. Oglesby is married and has three children.

Other out of staters who have been selected to FSU in the last year include Head Football Coach Tom Nugent, from the Virginia Military Academy, and Director of Bands Manley Whitcomb.

Methodists Make Summer Plans

Methodist students at Florida State University began making their summer plans last Sunday, June 20.

The following committees were appointed: Sunday School, Nancy Hudson and Sallee Woodward; Social, Hugh Hopper, Betty Jenkins, Margaret Hoadley, Ellen Kurtz, and Jack Pickett, the Susie Fellowship is under the direction of Jeanne Tilley and Jeannie Harper. Gloria Parrish has charge of Meditations. Social Hour committee consists of Shirley Seaman, Claudette Carley and Joe Klingenberg.

In charge of recreational activities are Joe Klingsmuith, Jane Kennedy, Sarah Whitehead and Kittie Kilbourne. Summer treasurer will be Curtis Simmons, with Jim Biederbeck in charge of the Publicity.

Wednesday nights will be the weekly meditations. Friday afternoon at 3:30 will be weekly social hours and Sunday School is from 9:30 - 10:30 in the Methodist Student House. Sunday evenings at 5 will be the suppers followed by fellowship.

All interested students are invited to take advantage of these activities at the Student House. Spokesman for the group, Miss Sallee Woodward said, "We urge all Methodists attending Summer School to come over and attend one of these functions. The doors are always open and our director, Mr. Austin Holliday and his wife Becky are always on hand with a welcome smile."

FSU Controller Receives Honor

Gruby W. Rea, Jr., comptroller of the Florida State University, has been elected a member of the American Institute of Accountants, national professional society of certified public accountants.

Mr. Rea holds a CPA certificate from the State of Florida, obtained by written examination, and is a member of the Florida Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

Summer Council Has Job to Do: Observers for National Congress

There is work for the newly-elected Summer Council to do.

Despite the gloomy predictions of a few members of this spring's Student Senate, which created the body, and the indifference of some of the body politic, which elected it, there is work at hand.

It is simply this: at one of its last sessions this spring, the Student Senate approved a plan for sending observers from Florida State University to the National Student Congress at Ames, Iowa, this August. Because of the last-of-the-semester rush, Student Body President Nimkoff was not able to designate the observers, and he left instructions for the Summer Council to assume the task.

At this point it is a natural question for almost any FSU student, and even the Summer Council, to ask: "Just what is this NSA business anyway?" In short, it is simply the following:

The United States National Student Association, or NSA, is a confederation of American college and university student governments. It was formed six years ago and now has a membership of about 350 colleges and universities, making up about half the college population in the United States. Each summer NSA holds a national convention, called the National Student Congress, in which delegates from each member school help shape the policies of the national organization and adopt resolutions on subjects concerning students.

The National Student Association has four divisions, or Commissions. Three of them, Educational Affairs, Student Affairs, and National Affairs, have their headquarters in Philadelphia. The fourth, International Affairs, is housed at Cambridge, Mass. (A summary of the work of the International Affairs Commission, and some evaluations of its work are set forth on page three of today's ppaer.) In addition, NSA has operated a foreign travel agency from a New York office.

It doesn't take too much research to reveal that NSA is a highly different sort of organization. It is directed entirely by students, with a National Executive Committee and officers that may be entirely new from year to year. It is financed privately, partly from membership dues, and partly from funds like the Ford Foundation.

Those students at FSU who have been aware of such a thing as NSA have usually heard about it only through unfavorable reoits of their sorority or fraternity. It is unfortunate that an organization as worthwhile as NSA should have incurred the wrath of these influential groups for adopting anti - discriminatory resolutions which were the honest conviction of a majority of its membership.

Whether FSU should ever care to join NSA or not, and the issue, after all, is debatable, it would seem wise wise for our student government to undertake to find out the facts. We have been represented by individual FSU students, paying their own expenses, at the last three or four National Student Congresses: in Colorado, Michigan, and Ohio. But never in any official way has our student government sent observers to gather material for an appraisal of the organization and to benefit from a summer association with sutdent leaders from all parts of the nation.

Summer Council has a job to do.

Democracy by Television

Television has at no other time been more important than during the Army-McCarthy hearings. Millions of Americans who probably would not have become informed without this pictorial presentation have followed the hearings closely. The courtroom suspense has become part of the housewife's and storekeeer's regular day.

America is awake, thoroughly awake, to the McCarthy issue. It's an encouraging sign. The radio-TV method of informing has its faults automatic prejudices are caused by the too-smooth, unpleasant appearance of Roy Cohn in TV lights or the clever, well-concealed propaganda devices such as McCarthy's frequent, impressive recognition of "our jury, the American people."

National polls show that since the beginning of the television hearings McCarthy's popularity has diminished. His side-stepping in important questions, his interruptions when the questioning gets too hot on employees, his name-calling to change the subject and bring more people into the melee of charges have been recognized and protested by the audience. Often important testimony and important questions have been buried under a junk pile of minor points and personal jabs, but the audience has realized that the issues are being buried. They will demand sufficient explanation in vital questions.

'Lid Is On' in Phenix City

A courageous man died last week. Albert L. Patterson, Attorney General-elect of the state of Alabama was shot to death in an alley near his law office in Phenix City last Friday night. He had waged his campaign for office on the platform that he would, if elected, run the hoodlums out of the state and Phenix City would be his first target. It is evident that the hoodlums of Phenix City believed him to be a man of his word.

The people of Alabama, stunned by the occurance, have taken rapid action against this lastest, and perhaps most vicious crime of the gangsters and racketeers who run and controll the town. Phenix City, with its bawdy houses, assorted dives, and gambling joints has long been the week-end playground to the servicemen at Ft. Benning across the river in Columbus, Ga. After the Patterson murder, the whole town, for the first time in its history is off limits to all military personnel. Natonal guardsmen patrol the streets, state investigators are everywhere, and the whole town is filled with tension. In the words of the townspeople who have witnessed many ineffective clean-up campaigns, the "lid is on".

Yes, the lid is on in Phenix City but for how long? The effectiveness of this drive to rid the state of the human vermin who have infested Phenix City is important not only to the people of Alabama, but to the people of the nation as well. If this cancerous hole of vice which has been sucking away at the moral fiber of the South is not cleaned up, it will throw a blight on the whole country. The horrow lies in more than the killing of a high state official. It is the brazen effontry with which these hoodlums eleminate anyone who will not play ball with them.

The gamblers and racketeers who have exploited human frailties for personal gain augmented by the "intellectuals" and so called free thinkers argue that the vice that goes on in Phenix City is a crime only by matter of opinion. They say that prostitution and gambling will be with us in spite of our efforts to eleminate it. They have used this argument for a long time and have unfortunutely been successful in many cases. There can, however, be no question to the fact that we can't allow these people to encroach upon the right of decent law-abiding citizens. We can't allow the control of our politics by criminals.

What of the decent citizens of Phenix City? Can we say it was their fault that the situation is as it it now? The answer is yes and no. No one can say that they didn't try to fight the racketeers. When things got to the point of open lawlessness the formed the Rusell County Betterment Association to do something about it. But they had waited too long and herein lies their guilt. They were not effective because the criminal were too well entrenched. The president of the Association returned home from a trip to find his house dynamited. Patterson, then the attorney for the Association, had his office burned by hoodlums. It was then that Patterson decided to get into the race for Attorney General, and it was shortly after he won that his bullet riddled body was found.

The situation wouldn't be so bad if it were confined to Phenix City, but such it not the case. We have our own potential "Phenix Cities" here in Florida and such is the case of every state in the union. The Kefauver investigations brought this out with a terrifying amount of evidence. We have seen the facts and have ignored them. Phenix City is an example of our reluctence to solve the problem. If this incident will bring permanent action, then Albert Patterson did not die in vain. Yes, the lid is on in Phenix City and now is a good time to nail it shut.

Letters . . .

DEAR EDITOR:

A few weeks ago three palm trees sprung up in front of the Music Building between two and five p.m. The next day, four majestic full-grown palms appeared simultaneously in front of Gilchrist Hall and the Education Building. This sudden growth of tropical palm trees on the FSU campus has amazed both faculty and students. The Tallahassee area, although widely known for its heavy annual rainfall, has never known to produce full-grown palm trees in three hours. The towering palms are indeed a wird contrast with FSU's gothic architecture and the graceful live oak and sweetgum trees on the campus. Florida State University apparently must establish its Florida citizenship by proving its ability to produce palm trees. In place of the ivy growing on Wescott, there may soon be bouganvilla. To make the tropical Florida picture look complete monkeys and parrots will have to be imported.

It is actually not the grotesque appearance of the trees that is so objectionable as the seeming attempt to make Florida State University look like it belongs in south Florida. Planting of palm trees is only one of the attempts to rival south Florida. Bob Mauldin, Public Relations photographer, was seen during the Easter holidays photographing a bathing beauty discreetly displaying her cheese cake in front of the dignified Wescott Building. This type of publicity may attract the playboy who has mistaken FSU for one of the ill-famed "snow-bird" colleges of southern Florida. Certainly it will not add much to our reputation if we are to become a serious minded institution of higher learning. Such publicity is offensive to those of refined taste, but the sudden appearance of palm trees on a campus with a leaning toward gothic architecture is adding insult to injury. People of discriminating taste can only hope there will be a hard freeze next winter to kill off the palm trees so out-of-keeping with the Deep South landscape of FSU. To beautify the campus as well as benefit the students, the money spent in planting the palm tree might have invested in a fund for a new Social Wellfare Building, eyesore of the campus.

Tampa Poses Question of Mafia Double Cross

In a recent informative article in Harper's magazine, an alleged authority, Luigi Barzini, Jr., described in detail the Real Mafia of Sicily. He closed his account by stating that there could possibly be no truth in the reports that the Mafia controls the American underworld.

The Flambeau is not Harper's, nor am I an authority, but I will strive to present here what I know of the underworld of Tampa, which is notorious for its alleged underworld and mafia connections.

The information is garbled. It is partly legendary, partly true, and partly misrepresentations, but it presents the clearest picture of Tampa's Mafia that I can think of.

Members of the mafia are members for life. Those who step out of it are dealt with severly. In many cases, resulting in bodies appearing mysteriously in many places.

The organization is hereditary, and sons of members all down the line are expected to remain true, with the same end in store for those who do not conform to this practice.

The Mafia came to America with the immigrants. In Tampa, it is noteworthy to add that I have yet to meet an Itaban who was not Sicilian.

The earliest known activity's of the Mafia was the smuggling of aliens. Stories are told of boatloads of immigrants picked up in Cuba murdered and thrown overboard after their passage money was collected, or perhaps to avert an encounter with a Coast Guard cutter.

After that market was depleted, their interest turned to gambling, boot-legging, and dope-peddling. Contacts were made with cousins and relatives in New Orleans, Chicago, New York, and Los Angeles, forming an international ring. Which, incidentally, has caused the Tampa Crime Commission to ask that the mafia be put in the list of subversive organizations to induce the FBI to step in.

Members of the mafia kept their old-world tradition of "mum's the word". There is a shooting in broad daylight within sight of crowds. No one sees anything.

Another old tradition they maintain, is the one called the "Society of Friends" in the Harper's article. Everyone helps everyone else out. When help is needed, anyone who can supply that help is called upon and they do as asked, no questions asked. In this way, they exert great influences.

Whole blocks of votes are dominated in some areas of Tampa. The mafia helps an official get elected, and the official closes his eyes. Charges of paying for police protection are not uncommon.

Judges are allegedly paid for dismissing bolita cases. Boadsmen appear out of nowhere to post bonds for arrested bolita peddlers.

Barzini states that the Mafia in Sicily resorts to murder only as a last resort and is a sign of weakness. Murders committed in Tampa usually mean that a warlord was in a way of an aspiring warlord. Other times it might mean that one leader or auxilliary leader was taking too much upon himself and assuming too much. Whish! He is no lunger any trouble.

Once in a great while, under public pressure, the police would put on a drive. Gamblers disappeared. Subpoenas icy on desks for months.

Tampans are lucky that they have a sheriff as efficient as they have. He has cracked down on, and nearly closed down, all gambling activities. But what many people wonder, is why the candidate of the mafia was defeated. The controlled votes went to the present sheriff and elected him. There was a double cross somewhere, but where, oh where?

Are You a real American? Do you sincerely believe in the principles of our Constitution?

If you can truthfully answer these two questions affirmatively, then don't let your eyes wander for a couple of minutes. I wish to prove that you may not hold the kind of American ideals which you should.

The Supreme Court recently ruled that segregation would be banned in Public Schools. This was the beginning of a transitional era that shall perhaps require more than a decade before full acceptance. It shouldn't require that long! If Americans will open their minds long enough to think individually, rather than conventionally, I'm sure the problem will be solved justly before that time.

After spending a tour of duty in the army, there is only one thrill that I can find at an army camp anymore. I had such a thrill last week while visiting Ft. Benning, Ga. At Benning, as at all U. S. army camps these days, you may find what I consider real Americanism. You may see groups of all colors and races working, sleeping and eating side beside. You will see them helping one another. During hostilities in Korea you could have seen them fighting with and dying for one another.

It was hard for Southern boys, like myself, to fully accept many of these "duties" in the beginning. But it was easier to learn that much of our past home and school education was completely wrong, and that it was our duty, both as Americans as soldiers, to accept and carry out these responsibilities.

Today, in the South especially, the White civilian people are spoiled, greedy and selfish. They are afraid their pride or virtues will be ruined if they are seen fraternizing with Negroes.

I feel sorry for these people. They do not appreciate the real meaning, the main principle of Amarican democracy. They will only block their minds with the non-supporting statement: "they should stay in their place."

What is their place, my fine cultured brethera? Is it scrubbing your floors, washing your cars, cooking your food and attending your children? Or is it having the opportunity to be a "free" American, as our constitution provides, and being led to take advantage of the same educational facilities that you have?

Think about this "John Brown," "Bill Smith," and "Tom Green." This is your conutry! Its future depends upon what you say, do and think. Are you going to let a problem like this be thrown in your face by communist propaganda, which you can hardly deny at the present time.

America may continue to build its war power, educate and culture its citizens, and retain the prestige she has held for over three centuries. But she will never be the Christian nation and the America she was intended to be until "all" American children are permitted to go to school, and grow up together with one another.

CHRIS YOUNG

On Dropping Dead, Growling, and the Evil Weed

Received a letter the other day which said in part, ". . . what's the matter with you? Defending McCarthy. Do you want to get hurt?" Answer: No. Second letter: ". . . only an idiot would support Joe. Are you an idiot?" Answer: Hope not. With reference to appeal for animal pound, received two snarls and one bite from cuntented campus canines. Results: No more controversial issues will appear in this column.

Question: Smoke or not smoke, what shall we do? According to the American Cancer Soceiety, a report was issued which linked tobacco with cancer. For several years magazines have been publishing articles dealing with the subject. The trouble is, everytima I read one of these articles or a story about "cancer-and-tobacco" on the radio, I give up the vicious habit. Several hours later, however, I resume inhaling the toxic fumes. But, this time I am worried. I perceive my lungs as mottled, decaying sacs too far gone to make abstinence of any value. And yet, if the evil weed is as potent as the group implies, I am cutting years from my life with every puff. To stop then means I might live for a decade or more before the painful demise bit.

As that thought hit me, however, I noticed an article accompanying the revelation about tobacco and cancer which said that the clouds of smoke were so dense at the meeting that it was difficult to see the chairman's table from the rear of the conference hall. This seemed to be incongrous with their findings. Then I reflected about my grandfather, a doctor, who smoked strong cigars, countless cigarettes, and a black mixture of Turkish tobacco which contained more nicotine, probably, than is produced in waste by the makers of NO-NICO cigarettes for hypochrondriacs. He lived to a nicotine-ridden age of 88. My thoughts wandered back to a Naval Medical Offciers' convention in San Diego in the late 40's during which about 100 cases of cigarette packages were distributed to the medicos. I was assigned to the sweepers' detail following ecah session . . . and it was some job to clean up that place. My tobacco-reverie continued back through old issues of LIFE. Remember the features on the birthdays of ancient aged 110 Amarican folks? What was their quoted secret of long life? "I chops a cord of wood every morning and smokes five cigars." or else, ". . . half a glass o' swamp dew an' six or seven home rolls, and maybe a pipeful, or two . . ."

I was sold on continuing my iniquitous habit when someone said, "People have been smoking for two hundred years and people have been dying for those same two hundred years. Everyone's going to go some day. Why not have a good time while you're here?" Question of the week: Got a match?

Journalism Gives Annual Institute

Twenty-five high school students are attending a first annual Yearbook Institute at Florida State University which will be followed immediately by a two week third annual Newspaper Institute.

Both institutes are sponsored by the FSU School of Journalism, and designed to give advanced high school students a better understanding of specific publication problems, Dr. Lawrence Campbell, dean of FSU School of Journalism, is director of both institutes.

"The youngsters learn by doing, hear lectures by national publishers and editors and participate in round-table discussions. We have separated yearbook and newspaper students this year to attain better results through individual and small group instruction," Dr. Campbell said.

NSA Recruits Students for Democracy in East-West Struggle

The following article about the International Commission of the National Student Association is reprinted from the Christian Science Monitor of March 17, 1953.

By Mary Handy
Staff Correspondent
Cambridge, Mass.

The Communists and the free world are playing a desperately earnest game of chess for the allegiance of university students all over the world.

Although the Communists have won little or nothing in the world of the United States, they have been, markedly successful in southeast Asia. South America and among students in many underdeveloped parts of the world.

The Communists controlled International Union of Students, with annual conferences, attractive magazines, and European radio broadcasts in seven languages is drawing students to its pro-Soviet offensive."

Meanwhile, a grouping of free-world students, representing national student unions in 41 countries is working on a much smaller budget to spread democracy. Its primary aim is to help students all over the world to work together without political bias.

This is the picture described by Leonard Bebchick, vice-president of the National Student Association in the United States, and director of the association's international headquarters in Cambridge.

This is what Mr. Bebchick, who is taking a year off from Cornell where he was a junior this year, is concerned with most day. On a student level he works to spread democracy among all the foreign students whom the NSA is associated with, spend their days poking fun at.

Mr. Bebchick and his associates are students in all parts of the globe. And they're convinced that its on the student level that one of the most vital battles between communism and democracy is going on today.

"Student life in the United States is not typical," they point out. "Twenty per cent of this nation's young people go to college. They are largely engaged in getting an education and only mildly active in political movements."

But in many Asian and South American countries only a minute fraction of the young people attain university education. Those who do are almost certain to develop into important leaders in their countries. Many are political forces while at school. Today's student leaders may be tomorrow's cabinet ministers.

The NSA has recently sent several graduate student teams to South America and Asia to survey student movements there.

While at Harvard James Grant, now an assistant to Harold E. Stassen, Foreign Operations Director, was sent to southeast Asia for the NSA. He came back with this report:

The total population in six countries there be likened to that of the United States—but the university population be found comparable in size to the student body at one American university—the University of California.

Student affairs in Burma are of vital importance to the nation, he said. While he was in Burma the inauguration of a student body president was attended by several Cabinet representatives, a group of members of Parliament, and two envoys from foreign embassies.

The need for trained personnel is so acute in Indochina that he found that every young lawyer who had graduated from law school the spring before already had become a judge.

Communists have rightly been considering student movements of equal or greater importance than labor movements in southeast Asia, this graduate student reported. They have been doing them with propaganda.

To back up these observations the NSA headquarters on the second floor of an old building near Harvard Square here has thousands of letters from student groups all over the world.

They are filed in cases from floor to ceiling. Writing and answering them keeps Mr. Bebchick, Leonard Radlo (a Dartmouth graduate), two secretaries, and seven partime graduate and undergraduate students busy.

There are also shelves of reports like James Grant's, made by graduate students in foreign countries. By thumbing through these letters and reports one can visualize the situation of student groups in Venezuela or Sweden or Indonesia. One can find what scholarships are available, what kinds of student government are prevalent, the possibilities for student travel and hostelling—and the strength of the Communist student movements.

Mr. Bebchick explains that world alignment of national student movements started in 1946. As a by-product of youth's idealism for peace following World War II, the International Union of Students (IUS) was formed.

To its headquarters in Prague came student groups from many countries including the United States. They talked about athletics, hostelling, student travel—everything that concerns students.

But in 1949 it became apparent that the International Union of Students was Communist-controlled.

So 16 national student groups broke away and held their own meeting in Stockholm. The National Unions of Students, they called themselves. They set up a Continuing Secretariat in Leiden, Holland. They denounced the IUS as "partisan political." They attempted to steer clear of politics themselves and work toward bettering the lot of students in many countries.

Gradually this free-world convocation of students has grown. In January, 1954, several hundred student leaders representing national unions of students in 44 countries attended its conference in Istanbul.

"It was a wonderful meeting even though it was so cold we had to wear our overcoats all the time," explains Mr. Bebchick. "The magnificent palace in which we met was unheated."

"It's a tremendous accomplishment that students from such a wide number of diverse cultures can meet for the purposes of common cooperation. It's a real step toward world cooperation. We considered plans for scholarships, student travel, study abroad, student influence on university administrators—even an international student identity card."

And most important, student groups from the democratic countries were working to show the value of democratic methods.

Students from all over the non-Communist World attended the Istanbul conference except those from Japan, Bolivia, Ecuador, and Panama. The national student unions in these countries belong to the IUS.

Student unions in Indonesia and Finland sent representatives to both groups.

For the first time this January an IUS Communist student leader attended the free-world meeting. "But," says Mr. Bebchick, "everyone was so interested in what they were doing they paid little attention to him."

The rest of the time, between conferences, student leaders in Leiden at the Coordinating Secretariat are working to develop free-world student cooperation.

Dr. Bebchick and his co-workers at the NSA international headquarters in Cambridge are arranging for scholarships in the United States, inviting student leaders to the United States, and working to improve conditions in many countries.

With students in other democratic countries, they are opposing a government move in South Africa that would impose segregation in universities in Cape Town and Johannesburg.

The NSA international work is largely financed by gifts from foundations. But its mission is too little known among Americans, Mr. Bebchick insists.

"The Communist youth groups have gotten the most publicity—even in the United States," he remarks ruefully.

He will show you attractive magazines with colored photos the Communists put out calling for peace and filled with articles about everything from Ralph Waldo Emerson to a story by a young British youth about "My Soviet Visit."

The only publication the free-world student group has put out, so far, is a rather amateurish information bulletin.

"It's vitally important what we are doing," says Mr. Bebchick. "We need to let people know about it. We need more support. Today's student leaders can be tomorrow's world leaders."

What Others Say About NSA

By making possible ever greater opportunity for the exercise of democratic responsibility on the campus, and by enabling American students and students of other lands to work together toward the solution of their common problems, the United States National Student Association is rendering a significant service to the people of this country and to the world.

Dwight D. Eisenhower

The good will and desire to cooperate shown . . . through the work of NSA is an invaluable means of furthering democratic thinking within this country and abroad. . .

May I express the hope that the United States National Student Association will continue making its significant contribution to international peace and understanding.

ROTC Unit Gets Superior Rating

Army ROTC cadets at Florida State University in Tallahassee drew a coveted "superior" rating in the Annual Federal Inspection of the nation's Army ROTC unit, a report from Third Army headquarters indicated recently.

The rating was based on a review of the cadets in ranks. The entire Army ROTC program at the university - - training, instruction, status of weapons and equipment drew a "satisfactory with no deficiences." Under the Army's rating system this also is a top rating.

Lt. Col. Philip S. Greene, professor of military science at FSU, said he was very pleased with the rating and the performance of the cadets and ROTC staff which resulted in the favorable report.

A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops.

NSA Represents US at Istanbul Conference

Editor's note: This is the first of two articles about the Fourth International Student Conference, in which the United States was represented by the National Student Association.

Representatives of the United States National Student Association have just returned from Istanbul, Turkey, where they attended the Fourth International Student Conference. This meeting, the largest and most representative of its type ever to be assembled, saw the participation of over forty National Unions of Students from all areas of the globe.

The first International Student Conference was convoked in December 1950 after it had become apparent that cooperation with the International Union of Students, an organization which many have termed "the student section of the Cominform", was impossible because of its non-representative nature and partisan political orientation. At the Second International Student Conference, held the following year in Edinburgh, a continuing Secretariat was established to serve as the administrative bridge between Conferences.

Congress Has Grown

Since its inception four years the International Student Conference has grown greatly both in size and scope of activity, and now stands as the only medium through which students, organized in National Unions, meet for the purpose of cooperation on an equal and non-partisan basis. The annual Conference serves upon a system of "delegated responsibilities" whereby National Unions agree to undertake the responsibility for various practical programs.

The Istanbul meeting initially was subdivided into four program commissions to consider the reports of National Unions on their individual progress and to plan future projects. Included among the problems discussed were those of student travel, study abroad, student sport, seminars and camps, student influence on university administrations, scholarships, student health, student economic and social affairs, and an international student identity card enabling holders to gain reduction in transportation and other costs while traveling.

There were several programs presented at Istanbul in which NSA was particularly interested. Since its inception at the Stockholm Conference, the Student Mutual Assistance Program has been implemented to a significant extent by NSA. This program, usually referred to as SMAP, aims to better educational facilities and to develop democratic student organizations and activities in the growth potential areas of the globe.

Technical Assistance

To supplement the present exchange of information and persons NSA investigated the feasibility of sending international student technical assistance teams to these areas. The Conference approved the resulting report recommending the dispatch of persons trained in various student skills and those technical skills needed for projects related to the educational community. The village projects in India are an example of this type of program which strengthens concepts of self-help and community consciousness, the foundation stones of viable and democratic student organization.

After detailed discussions with Asian student representatives at Istanbul, the Conference asked the NSA to continue with its responsibility to collect all specific information necessary for the dispatch of Cooperation teams to India and Indonesia this summer. In addition, the Conference agreed to send a fraternal observer team to Africa.

In the field of publications the Conference renewed the mandate to NSA for the publication of the ISIS Bulletin, a periodical that provides technical information on student skills and organization. Further, the Conference unanimously approved the NSA motion which empowered the Secretariat to acquire funds to publish a Comparative periodical of general student interest.

As a result of its investigation into the possibilities of a World Cultural Festival, NSA's recommendations that a number of cultural events of a widely representative nature be held coincident with the next ISC were approved.

Bannister Shows Sportsmanship

"If I should lose, let me stand by the road And cheer as the winners go by."

These words first appeared in Stanza one of Berton Braley's "Prayer of a Sportsman." They form a superior attitude of sportsmanship. An attitude similar to that of England's outstanding distance runner, Roger Bannister.

Bannister, as you remember, less than two months ago crashed the four minute barrier in establishing a world record in the mile run. His amazing mile was run in 3 minutes 59.4 seconds. Last week an Australian, John Landy, established a new mark with a 3:58 performance.

Bannister, surprisingly, did not express grief upon having his record bettered. He expressed himself as being pleased that it happened. In London, following news of Landy's accomplishment, Bannister commented: "It is a wonderful achevement. Landy has tried as hard as anyone to run the mile under four minutes and I am glad he has succeeded." Truly this is a wonderful attitude.

Furgol is Symbol of Spirit

Ed Furgol in capturing the championship in the National Open Golf tournament last weekend had much to overcome. Not only did he have to outplay outstanding golfers from all over the nation, but he had to overcome other seemingly more unsurmountable obstacles.

At twelve years of age, Furgol fell from a set of playground parallel smashing his left elbow. The incident left him with an arm ten inches shorter than the right.

Son of a poor immigrant he was deprived of many of the privileges enjoyed by most American youngsters. As a teenager he was forced to leave school and work.

Later as a touring golfer he played in over 200 PGA tournaments during a seven year period. Not once did he place first. But through it all he never let his spirit dwindle.

Today Ed Furgol is a national champion ---- a symbol of how far spirit can carry a man.

Wednesday night the Airforce team won its second game in two starts by defeating Florida Hall 14-3. Playing on a rain soaked field the victors were led by the nine-hit pitching of Lyn Dunseith.

At the plate Rex Inman paced the Air Force by collecting 3 hits in 4 tries to lead Florida Hall. Second baseman Schuckman starred defensively for the losers.

Openings remain for two teams in the summer league. Games are played every Wednesday night at 7 pm. Any teams interested are requested to call 2-2859.

Geography Board Winds Up Season Of Good Operation

A geography research organization at Florida State University, called the Resource Analysis Center, is winding up a first semester of operation with a record of accomplishment.

Principal work of the center has been the conversion of certain census materials to map form for classroom use. It also prepared maps for revision of the public school text and reference book, "Florida: South to Enterprise."

A start was made on a long-range project of collecting geographic reference materials for the southeastern states.

Activities of the new center are conducted by several faculty members and graduate students in the geography department, under the direction of Henry F. Becker, head of the geography department, chairman and coordinator of the research.

Work of the research center is not new because geography staff members have been concerned with the problem of land classification and resource use in Florida and the region for many years.

Because such work has grown out of a special need for research felt in the expanded geography department in the post-war years. He said it will serve as a clearing house for geographic resource information in the Southeast. Besides the consultant services of the FSU geography department for state and other public agencies.

Baptists Give Student Welcome

University students and faculty members will be "Pastor's Guests" this Sunday at the Tallahassee First Baptist Church during both morning services, according to reports.

A reserved section will be created in the center of the auditorium. The messages will be given by Rev. Miller Mikell, artist, illustrating with pictures and using ultra-violet lighting effects.

The men's class of the University Department will be taught by Dr. Harold G. Sanderf, Pastor. Sunday School begins at 9:45. Women's classes will be taught by Mrs. Lewis Bevis and Mrs. J. Lewis Hall. Supper for university students will be served in the Duval Wing from 5:45 until 6:15 Sunday.

Singspiration will begin at 6:30

School of Business to Award Plaques To Realty Student Next Year

The school of business at Florida State University received a plaque recently to be presented, beginning next year, to the graduating senior with the highest four year average in real estate studies.

The plaque was presented by Robert Brinkley, well-known Tallahassee realtor and national vice president, National Association of Board of Realtors and past president of the Florida Association of Board of Realtors.

In presenting the plaque Brinkley said, "I'm delighted to participate in this, because I have long since adopted FSU as my alma mater."

Present at the brief ceremonies was Jerry Parker, student president of the insurance and Real Estate Club at the university. He said: "Speaking for our organization I wish to say the students are happy to know that such a firm as yours, Mr. Brinkley, recognises what we are attempting to accomplish in our school and that you are willing to make tangible expression of your interest."

Charles Rovetta, dean, school of business, said: "The school of business is deeply indebted for this recognition. Real estate and its management is of vital importance in the lives of all people.

"It is especially significant at the present and forthcoming development of Florida. This award will serve always as an incentive in bringing opportunities in real estate to the attention of young men and women anticipating a useful career."

In addition to the plaque which will remain in the trophy room of the Student Center at Florida State University, a medallion of pin will be given to each graduating senior who qualifies commencing June 1955.

To qualify for the recognition the graduating senior must obtain the highest four year average in real estate studies and must be a major in real estate.

COUNSELING WORKSHOP

Twenty-two managers, interviewers, counselors, field training supervisors and special representatives of the Florida State Employment Service are attending a counseling workshop especially designed for them, June 14-25, at Florida State University.

Institutes Here For Child Study

Exceptional Next

Juvenile delinquency is increasing in Florida, but the rate of increase is undetermined because of population increases in the same period of time.

This was the report from the first of three specialist institutes, that of the Florida State Universities summer child development program.

The "Delinquent Child" Institute, which ended yesterday, will be followed on Tuesday with the beginning of the second in the series. This will feature the "Exceptional Child."

Bertram M. Beck

Beck Main Speaker

Main speaker for the program which ended yesterday was Bertram M. Beck, director of the special Juvenile Delinquency Project set up by the Children's Bureau to study the problem on a national scale.

Beck recently was the Key speaker at the national conference. He climaxed the state institute last night, speaking on "The Juvenile Offender." The national conference was called by Mrs. Oveeta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, to study the problem of the all-time figures on delinquency, it was revealed.

Judge Dozier Devans, it is reported, took the initiative in bringing about the Florida institute by conferring with Dr. Doak S. Campbell, on the for State action.

Judge Devane Comments

Last year, Devane, who is Federal Court Judge, charged that "the state of Florida spends millions of dollars for education, but exactly nothing towards the solution of the juvenile delinquency problem."

At that time, Devane commented that "until a fire was built under the legislature," nothing would be done.

Arthur S. Hill, educational director of the United Cerebral Palsy Association, will discuss new trends in the education of a cerebral palsy child in the institute starting Tuesday, and running through June 8.

The Institute, according to authorities, was planned to bring together Florida's special education teachers and various specialists interested in the exceptional child for a sharing of mutual ideas.

Smith, Witherspoon Direct

FSU's Dr. Walter D. Smith is serving as coordinator of the Institute and Dr. Ralph Witherspoon as director of the program.

Dr. Witherspoon is also director of the entire child development program. He made the keynote address on "What Makes Johnny Delinquent" in this week's program. Speaking as a psychologist, he said "a child becomes delinquent when the expectations of his surroundings are greater than the limits of his response mechanisms, or in other words, he is not able to face the situation demanded of him.

Trained Personnel

More and better trained personnel in the fields dealing with youngsters was called the main solution to the juvenile problem.

Also present at the Juvenile Delinquent institute yesterday was Dr. Herbert Williams, Florida representative who attended the national conference in Washington. Dr. Herbert flew back to Talahassee in time so that he

Local Zeta Chapter Is Voted Best

A Florida State University sorority has been accorded the best among her sister sororities all over the United States and Canada.

Zeta Tau Alpha, social sorority, was awarded the Grand National ZTA Award at the group's annual convention, held in the Roney Plaza, Miami Beach, June 21 to 26.

The award, based on scholarship, activities, standards and finances, was received for the local chapter by Miss Ruthie Armstrong, president.

Two Other Awards

The FSU ZTA's also copped two other grand prizes, including a Silver Cup for filling their quotas the past two years, and an award for selling the most National Magazine subscriptions in the province.

Miss Armstrong, official delegate, was accompanied on the trip by Miss Virginia Ann Cook, rush chairman.

Other officers, besides Miss Armstrong and Miss Cook include Nancy Fagen, vice - president; Susie Tyndell, secretary; and Jean Stigler, treasurer.

"Taps" Among All Trip

Asked about her reaction when she received this achievement awards, Miss Armstrong admitted that she "was thrilled." She added that she had never been so happy. "To think that out of so many chapters, yours is tops in everything."

Miss Armstrong had nothing but praise for her sorority sisters. "All the girls should be rewarded for the work they have done to bring this honor to the FSU campus."

Miss Armstrong explained that in the activities field, they were rated on such activities as honoraries, selected activities, and over-all relationships with others on campus.

Most Improved Scholarship

The local group also copped an award for the most improved scholarship.

National officers were elected for each group at the convention, with Mrs. Elliot Chapman of Cincinati succeeding Miss Helen Harrison of Los Angeles as president.

Mrs. Bruce Campbell, president of Province III, which comprises all the chapters in Florida, received the Honor Ring for service an alumna.

The group also initiated Mrs. E. G. Pierce, president of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs as the national initiate.

OFFICIAL NOTICE

The Library will be closed the weekend of July 3, 4, 5, Saturday, Sunday, and Monday.

Music Campers Plan Series of Concerts

Florida State University's 13th Annual Music Camp for high school students continued in full swing this week, with daily practices going strong in band, orchestra, conducting, chorus, twirling, and private lessons and theory. But in addition to the practice, a full slate of concerts of the various musical groups has been planned.

Leading off the schedule of concerts and recitals next week will be the Sunday night concert of the Music Camp Orchestra. Clarinet Quartet, Woodwind Quintet, and Brass Choir. This program, free and open to the public, will be presented at 6:15 p.m. in the Opperman Music Hall.

On Monday night, the Music Camp Chorus and the Combined Garnet and Gold Bands will present a program in the Music Amphitheater, at 7 p.m.

Carroll Member Of Music League

C. M. Carroll, manager of the Toledo Orchestra and former faculty member of the FSU School of Music, was elected to the 15-man executive board of the American Symphony Orchestra League at the annual convention of the League in Springfield, Ohio, recently.

Carroll was also one of the principal speakers during the convention, addressing a general session of the delegates on the topic "The Changing Concept of the Orchestra Musician."

Noting that the 18th century idea of the musician as a servant is still a common concept, Carroll called upon musicians — especially in the 600 U. S. community orchestras — to take a greater interest in the economic and management side of the musical arts.

Cerebral Palsy Wednesday's Lunch Topic

The third in a series of University Luncheons will be offered next Wednesday when Arthur Hall will speak on "New Trends in the Education of Children with Cerebral Palsy," in conjunction with the Guidance Workshop.

The luncheons, each Wednesday from 12 to 1 in the Trophy Room, Student Center, are sponsored for the purpose of "fellowship and recreation," according to Dr. Sam Neel, organizer. "All students and friends of the University are invited to go through the cafeteria line, and take their tray to the trophy room for a good lunch, fine fellowship, and an excellent program."

Forthcoming programs include "The University as a Family," with President Doak S. Campbell, July 14; "Educating the Educator," with Dean Ralph Eyman, July 21; and "What a Teacher Should Know About Forthcoming Economic Developments," with Dean Charles Rovetta, July 28.

Local Credit Union Grows To Over Hundred Members

Over 100 members now belong to the Florida State University Credit Union, according to a progress report released today by Bill Holt, treasurer of the organization.

"We have paid out over $6,000 in loans to members," the Credit Union official announced, "and growth has been steadily upward since organization only 3½ months ago."

The Credit Union, according to law, must base its dividends on earnings, and these dividends are declared annually, on December 31. University personnel may invest their savings in the Credit Union and all but a safe margin of these deposits is loaned out, according to Union officers.

The plan has been received with enthusiasm by the staff personnel of the University, according to Howard Davis, Deputy Treasurer, located in the Engineers Office, Maintenance Building. "The opportunity to borrow on a business-like basis from fellow workers gives the men confidence and security," Howard reports.

Don Farquharson, vice-President, points out that this is a good time of year to save and invest with the Credit Union. "Loan request, approved by the Loan Committee as needed for provident purposes will go unfulfilled if we do not get share savings.

CAROTHERS BETTER

Dr. Milton W. Carothers, Dean of the FSU Graduate School, is reported to be in fair condition at Tallahassee Memorial Hospital, where he has been suffering with a kidney ailment.

Mrs. Carothers revealed that the dean could have come home yesterday had it not been for their son, Graham, who is confined at home with a virus infection.

The dean's wife said, "We certainly wish to express our appreciation for the kindness of the people at FSU who so willingly donated their blood for Milton."

Fla PTA Congress To Discuss Parent-Teacher Relations

How parents and teachers can work together for the good of the child will be discussed during an area conference at Florida State University July 6-7.

The Florida Congress of Parents and Teachers and Florida State University's School of Education will co-sponsor the conference. They have enlisted resource assistants from the General Extension Division of Florida, State Department of Public Instruction and the Florida Education Association as well as their own personnel to help out on group discussions.

Mrs. Edith McBride Cameron of the extension division will speak at the opening general assembly. She will be introduced by Mrs. E. D. Johnson of Quincy, president of the congress. Dr. R. L. Eyman, dean of the FSU School of Education, will make a welcoming address.

A social hour in the main lounge of Longmire will follow the program with members of Phi Delta Kappa and Kappa Delta Pi, men's and women education honoraries, as hosts.

A series of work group sessions, 11-12 noon and 1:30-3 p.m., are planned for Wednesday. Such subjects as "Reaching the Parent and Lay Citizen Who Does Not Attend PTA" and "Making PTA Successful at the High School Level" will be discussed.

"Promising Practices in Parent-Teacher Cooperation" will be discussed by a panel of representatives from all fields as a climaxing general meeting at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday in Science Lecture Hall.

Dr. W. T. Edwards, Dr. Marian Black and Dr. Mildred Swearingen make up the committee planning and setting-up the conference which is free and open to the public.

New Councilmen Take Governing Body Offices

NSA discussed

The first Summer Council in Florida State history held its first meeting this week and transacted its business with dispatch, almost managing to set in motion a full-fledged investigation in the process.

A routine agenda, topped by the election of Roy Chapman as Chairman protempore and the appointment of three standing committees, was dispensed with quickly by the rewieving Councilmen.

Assuming office were eight Councilmen elected in last week's balloting: Roy Chapman, Tom Ehrhardt, Nancy Graham, Betty Willmon, Jimmy Soles, Russell Johnson, Betty Hobson, and Mary Elizabeth King. All were present except Betty Willmon, excused, and Tom Ehrhardt, unexcused. Dave Kennedy and Shirley Harper assumed their positions as Chairman and Secretary, respectively.

The Summer Councilmen heard Gene Lawler, Editor of the Summer Flambeau and past Student Body Vice-President, explain the National Student Association and propose a plan for sending observers to the National Student Congress at Ames, Iowa, this August. The matter was referred to a special committee composed of Betty Hobson, chairman, and Roy Chapman.

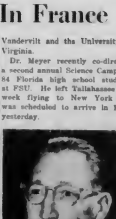
A committee was also proposed to investigate the alleged use of Student Activity Funds to install air-conditioning in the basement lounge of the Longmire Building. However, Mary Elizabeth King, appointed to investigate the matter, has since reported to the Flambeau that the money was derived from the Summer Building and Equipment Fund.



Three standing committees were also appointed: Roy Chapman will head the Rules Committee with Russell Johnson and Betty Willmon. The Constitutional Committee will be headed by Jimmy Soles with Betty Hobson and Tom Ehrhardt. Nancy Graham will chairman the Recreation and Social Committee, with Mary Elizabeth King and Jimmy Soles.

KENNEDY APPOINTS COLONELS

With all the pomp and reverency that Longmire's student officialdom could muster, nine Honorary Colonels were commissioned this week.

Taking honorary, non-working positions on the staff of Summer Council 1954 Chairman Dave Kennedy are four men and five women: Pat Thornton, Chrenes Grantham, Guy Johnston, Chris Young, Orchid Alonso, Shirley Traxler, Willis Mac Davis, Josephine Weeks, and Helen Lanier.

The "Colonels" are to act in a completely "honorary capacity," Kennedy stated.

Dr. Sam Meyer

FSU Botanist Attends Congress In France

Dr. Samuel Meyer of Florida State University will be the only National Academy of Science delegate from the South to attend the eighth international Botanical Congress being held today through July 14 at Paris, France.

Head of the FSU department of botany, Dr. Meyer is one of ten delegates chosen by the secretary's Office of International Relations, National Research Council, for the Paris assignment.

Dr. Ralph E. Cleland, Indiana University, has been appointed chairman of the American delegation, made up of educators from the West, Midwest and East, two representatives of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Florida scientist.

"Fifteen Years of Research on the Physiology of Movement" is the title of the paper Dr. Meyer will present to the Paris congress. He joined the FSU faculty in 1951, having previously taught at the University of Tennessee, Emory, Vanderbilt and the University of Virginia.

Dr. Meyer recently co-directed a second annual Science Camp for 84 Florida high school students at FSU. He left Tallahassee last week flying to New York and was scheduled to arrive in Paris yesterday.

Vocational Ed Teachers Meet For Two Weeks Short Course

More than 200 teachers and supervisors in the field of vocational industrial education will complete a short course today after having studied three weeks at Florida State University.

A similar program, also called Trade and Industrial Education Short Course, will begin next Tuesday and will continue through July 23 at FSU. Dr. Edward K. Hankin, head of the FSU Trade and Industrial Education Department, is director for both short courses.

Educational philosophy, principles and methods are being studied in the courses, given in cooperation with the Florida Department of Public Instruction.

Dr. Hankin said that some of the "students" are meeting requirements for teaching or supervisory certificates while others are working for degrees.

"Many are attending by a recently developed curriculum whereby they can earn credits towards a BS degree by examinations based on experience of skilled workers," remarked Dr. Hankin, explaining how they qualify with only three years of course work.

A majority of the adult students are full time teachers or supervisors in county vocational schools. More than 40 coordinators of diversified cooperative training programs in various high schools are enrolled. Also represented are day trade vocational programs and such training fields as peace officer, railway, evening trade extension and apprentice, rural electrification, practical nurse, office occupation and commercial vehicle driving.

The adult students are from all parts of Florida. Georgia and Alabama are also represented.

Episcopals Visit Panama City

Episcopal students and friends will hold their annual Panama City beach trip Sunday, leaving Rogue Hall at 10 a.m. and returning after supper.

According to Chaplain Morley, the camp buildings at St. Andrew's State Park have been reserved for the outing. He stated that married students with children will find this a convenient place, since there will be a dining hall, reverention hall, and bath houses, offering relief from the sun and a place under cover in case of rain.

FACULTY RECITAL

Featured in Tuesday's FSU School of Music's Faculty Recital will be Flutist Bertil Boer, playing six compositions in Opperman Music Hall beginning at 8:15 p.m.

The program includes: Handel's Sonata in F-major, Louis Ganne's Andante et Scherzo, Impressions Exotiques by S. Karg-Elert, Paul Taffanel's Andante Pastorale, and La Fluite de Pan by Jules Mouret.

Educational Distemper at Chicago As Hutchins Philosophy Reversed

A sort of educational distemper seems to have broken out at the University of Chicago.

In a recent issue of the Chicago Maroon, apparently published especially because of the incident, Chicago Chancellor Lawrence A. Kimpton was quoted as saying that the University has a reputation for being "queer" and that "therefore this school has attracted every God damned queer kid in the area."

Kimpton later denied making the statement, and rephrased his remarks as follows, "I said only what I have said many times before - that the undergraduate enrollment has fallen, and the reason it has fallen is due to the erroneous impression that we are a school for quiz kids . . . I want a broad cross section of young, healthy Americans."

Kimpton pointed out that the median student admitted to Chicago scores in the 93 percentile (of those admitted to college) on the college entrance boards exam, and said "This is too high."

It is at this point that the academic plot thickens. Kimpton made his remarks, which the Maroon labled "a slur upon the student body," before the Order of the "C," a body engaged in promoting scholarship for athletes. Frank Whiting, president of the organization, apparently in complete accord with the Chancellor, said: "Hutchins educated only the intellect; we want to educate the whole boy . . . the present administration has done the University a great service in bringing back a more orthodox educational set-up."

Chicago spokemen vigorously deny it, but signs seems to point toward a reversion to the athletics first, scholarship second emphasis prevalant at less distinguished campuses than Chicago. T. Nelson Metcalf, Director of Athletics, for instance, insists that scholarships for athletes are not to be confused with "athletic scholarships." He says, "I would object to anything that was an out-and-out subsidy." But the line between "athletic scholarships" and "scholarships for athletes" seems to be, at best, an indistinct one. The only possible motive for giving scholarships to athletes would seem to be to induce them to come to the University of Chicago to play varsity athletics. Non-commercial altruism seems too unlikely.

It could be that the daily newspapers and the wire services are on the right track. Despite administrative statements to the contrary, they continue to write enthusiastic accounts of Chicago's return to bigtime athletics. For example, one Associated Press correspondent has written, "We can see no harm in athletic scholarships . . . we believe Chicago belongs in the Big 10."

Everyone expected changes when Robert Hutchins vacated his post as University Chancellor, but few casual observers expected that the Hutchins discipline would be set in reverse. What Hutchins stoically opposed the new Chancellor seems to eagerly embrace. Bigtime athletics or no, Chicago is becoming a different school. We doubt that it is changing for the better.

Academic Freedom Attacked

The bastions of academic freedom have been under attack of late on the campuses of the nation . . . Attitudes of fear and suspicion govern the campuses. A recent newspaper poll in Los Angeles stated that one out of two high school teachers in that city are "afraid to teach in the manner in which they, as trained educators, feel they should teach to best educate our children."

Students themselves are afraid to join in unpopular causes even when they believe them to be right. In this age of the mass, common man, any deviation from conformity in ideas or in custom is immediately beaten to the ground, less the insecure caller. The necessity of standing with the crowd is exaggerated to the point where conflicting ideologies are not even examined.

The House Un-American Activities Committee seems to have the impression that an un-American activity consists of a student's expression of ideas which are unpalatable to some members of the society. This basically un-American philosophy in itself has found root in at least one campus organization throughout the United States. The Students Associations of America organization finds its calling to "keep tabs on all leftist activity of any nature at (any) school by any means which may be deemed expedient."

In other words, America first, right or wrong. Are our legislators so sacrosanct that they should not be freely criticized? Is criticism so dangerous that America might topple?

This stultification of ideas may be a cause of the tremendous political apathy found in our country. If people obtain political office they are not to utter one word contrary to the party line. It's much easier to operate a drill press eight hours a day, and at night read about who has been kicked out.—The Wheaton Record.

A Moderate View on School Segregation

Ever since the momentous day when the Supreme Court charged segregation in public schools Unconstitutional, there has been a constant eruption of public opinion.

Pro-segregationists have openly announced that they do not care to compete with the Negroes socially or professionally. "Giving them advanced educational opportunities and a chance to mingle socially with whites can not be tolerated!" scream the rabid white supremists.

The other faction, equally rabid, cry that "all men are created equal Why shouldn't they go to school with whites?" It is interesting to note, however, that although idealistically, the latter are correct, they have not readily admitted that they would approve of the social and professional competition that should be, and of a right ought to be, the outcome of the whole question.

Clear thinking persons, not so rabid or loud in their acceptance or denunciation, question the validity ar even the sincerity of the all the notigreated him by the High Court decision. These years will be filled with despair and troubles. The odds will be against the Negro in employment, notably in the educational field. Where now there are 70,000 Negroes employed as educators in segregated schools, the number will be cut sharply and will not tend to increase noticeably.

In the gracious North, where schools are not segregated, there is an evident discrimination in educators of the Negro race wherein jobs on school staffs and administrations are concerned.

As one writer said recently, non-segregation is here to stay . . . let us hope that good can be accomplished with the established facts.

Written by one philosopher to outdo another philospher will be thrown in for kicks. Said the Persian Poet Khayyam: Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die. Says George Santayana: Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die. But do it in moderate lett we die miserably and die today.

TOM WOODS

Revolution Is 'Crazy, Mixed-Up'

It's revolution time in Latin America again. This one, however is shaping into one of the craziest mixed-up fiascos in the history of the Americas. A few days ago an army, made up for the most part of Guatamalans, attacked their homeland from Honduras. The rebels who have designated themselves as the "army of liberation" have thus far been unsuccessful in overthrowing the government headed by the pro-communist Arbenz administration.

Here are some of the incidents that have given this "war" a very peculiar odor. First of all the Arbenz government knew that a rebel army under the leadership of Carlos Castillo Armas was being massed at the Guatamalan-Honduran border before the invasion started. They had plenty of time to send troops to fortify this area if they so desired. Instead of this they protested to the Honduran Government to stop the rebels before they get started. They have done little to oppose the invasion thus far. The rebels on the other hand, outside of dropping a few bombs on Guatamala City, have done little to defeat the Arbenz army and overthrow the government. In fact, many reporters on the scene say that the two armies are maneuvering to avoid each other.

Sunday night, Arbenz added to the confusion by declaring the Presidency and turning power to Col. Diaz who promptly pulled another joker from the deck by outlawing the communist party in Guatemala. Wednesday, Diaz resigned, and handed the government over to Colonel Elfego Monzon who is trying to talk peace. The reasons being all of this are open to speculation. So let's speculate.

The big gripe is over land reforms. The Arbenz government in the late Robin Hood (and Communist) tradition has been in the process of splitting up the big estates and giving the land to the peasants. It is no secret that the United Fruit Company an American Concern, has extensive holdings in Guatamala has been quite upset about the whole affair. Many people believe that they are putting up a good size hunk of cash to help finance the rebel army.

Our own government considers the Arbenz regime unfriendly to the United States. They also feel that it is dangerous to have a communist controlled country that close to the Panama Canal. And we have been backing the rebels. Last year the U. S. sent shipments of arms to Nicarragga some of which doubtless have come into rebel hands.

It may or may not be a coincidence that Henry Cabot Lodge, the chief delegate to the U. N. is now serving as President of the Security Council. Thus far Mr. Lodge has done a good job of keeping the United Nations from interfering in the war.

The probable explanation to the reluctance of either side to fight is that this is a game of psychological warfare. Both sides are vieing for the support of the peasants who don't seem to care who is in power. The rapid turn aver in the government suggests to this reporter that someone is being bought off.

At any rate if the communists aren't run out of Guatamala the U. S. will not fare. So far we seem to be holding the winning hand, but in a Latin American Revolution anything can happen. Let's hope the cards don't change before we cash in our chips.

Summer Politicos Take Note . . .

(A.C.P.) The University of Minnesota has had an Apathy party in power, year after year, and nobody in the party could muster sufficient energy to write a platform.

This year party President Art Skants turned the trick. His platform, he says, was "conceived in indolence and born in lethergy." Among other things, the party platform promises not to:

See all sides of an argument.

Lend our support to athletic enterprises and such enterprises that might possibly be construed as active.

Worry about aims, ideals, goals, objectives . . . group identification, social adjustment, points to ponder, however, moreovers, buts, ifs and ands.

Volumes might be written upon the impiety of the pious.—Herbert Spencer.

An idea isn't responsible for the people who believe in it.—Don Marquis.

Letters . . .

Dear Editor:

I have just finished reading Anne Morgan's article about "palm trees" in the current issue of the Flambeau, and I might suggest that the author learn a little bit more about palm trees before setting herself up as an authority and handing out advice to the FSU landscape artists.

The "tropical palm trees" that Miss Morgan speaks of are actually sabal palms or palmettos found in almost all parts of Central and North Florida and are far north as Savannah, Georgia and Charleston, South Carolina. If Miss Morgan had visited some of the South Florida colleges she would soon see that the Royal Palm and Coconut Palms found there were put there by the colleges themselves as is the case at FSU's palm trees. Moreover, the University of Florida has an abundance of the palm trees that are being planted here and I'm sure even Miss Morgan would not consider Gainesville in South Florida.

As to a bard freeze coming next winter and killing off these new FSU palm trees, I am sure Miss Morgan will be interested to know that they, and others like them, have been thriving for years in Albany, Georgia, which is well north of Tallahassee and that FSU's trees can withstand frost while the South Florida types that I mentioned cannot.

In addition, the trees being planted on our campus have been designated by the state legislature as the official state tree. Please tell us, Miss Morgan, what is wrong with planting the state tree on the campus of the state university in the state capital?

"I Pledge Allegiance to Joe McCarthy, and to the Committee Which Stands for Him . . ."

JEROME BERNSTEIN

New Columnist 'Steps on Pedal Digits'

Being a new student at FSU I waited inquetiently for the Summer Flabbeau to appear on the stands. Upon learning that I could obtain a copy in the Westcott Building I hurried over and soon was reading my first issue. It pleased me very much but later when I laid aside the paper my article remained in my thoughts. The subject matter was McCarthyism.

During the recent McCarthy-Army controversy, it had been suggested that perhaps Senator McCarthy might be involved in an illegal situation in connection with his possession of a 24-page letter containing secret FBI information on Communist infiltration of the Army.

When questioned about this the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin stated that he had many informants not only in the Department of the Army but in other branches of the government; and that it was the right of every American who was a government employee to give him or any other senator information if they thought it was in the best interests of the United States. Even if it meant disobeying the orders of the President. It should be noted that the majority of the Senators did not agree. What Senator McCarthy calls the 'right of every American' could eventually lead to the disregard of the Law of the land.

Now that the hearings are over and it has been shown by cold, fleeting testimony that perjury must have been committed the three Democrats on the committee have requested that perhaps a housecleaning may be in order for the staff of the subcommittee, which is headed by Senator McCarthy. In answer to this, Senator McCarthy declared that the three Democrats were being "clever, dishonest and extremely dangerous to the country." In other words his committee staff is in perfect shape even despite the fact that some members may have perjured themselves under oath. He went on to say that it was a deliberate attack on the Department of the Army not to mention other branches of the government; and that it was the right of every American who was a government employee to give him or any other senator information if they thought it was in the best interests of the United States. Even if it meant disobeying the orders of the President. It should be noted that the majority of the Senators did not agree. Heat, Heat and the Falling of the Fall of Rome

The main topics for discussion today center an juvenile delinquency, vivisection, and the cruel and oppresive, torrid and torturesome, beetichy humid and terrible heat. As I recline and ponder of perspiration typing this tome, I wonder what the type setters are going to do with what they did (do) with regards to the big blobs of sweat which drop on this paper and obliterate word after word. Along this same line, the FSU library book checkers will wonder if perhaps I were swimming with THE RISE AND FALL OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE. That afternoon when the mercury gently tapped the century mark on the thermometer, found me delving into the mysteries of Human Events. I had hopes of finding cool reading. But the best overame me; and so to my own bath tub went this body and the volumes. However, much to my unhappiness THE RISE AND FALL OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE

Department heirarehy. "How are you, Sir?" I gleefully gyrated (while bathed in perspiration).

"Ugh, Schoosh! Whew!" was his solo reply. Remember. He was a brilliant man. Next, I sauntered through lower Westcott and encountered another two on the hot. The Chodorkoff's degrees number more than five. "Good afternoon, Doctor?"

His reply: "Fiwu! Chod-schley) Fumfph." That's all. No more. He could speak six languages according to a reliable informant!

I trugged over to the corner of Copeland and College to solicit a ride to town to purchase my survey. A well-versed philosopher from the School of Arts and Sciences offered me a lift. I offered only the conventional greeting given by a student greeted with free transportation. His talk consisted of: "Miserable weather. Must be hot out there. Rather warm weather we're having. Wonder if it'll rain. (He had the brains and access to the equipment which could determine whether or not it would rain . . . only ask me?). Yep, plenty hot today."

I left his wheeled oven, wended my way towards the metropolitan section of Tallahassee. Walking my way was one of the local politicians who had won office in the recent election. His speaking ability had won him hundreds of votes. During the cool pre-election period he had greeted nearly every pedestrian on Monroe. This afternoon he struggled to atop the sizzling cement blocks unaware that I was about to say, "Howdy . . . nice weather. When I did, he retorted, "Teh . . ." in a most unimpressive tone. a group of students, fresh out and standing on, their feet. I sat poppy, headed toward a local drug store. They were dry, with a spring in their step. I glanced where they'd been . . . in search of homework to do, partial to morbic. Although I had "assigned, and THIS to write, the appeal of THE SINS OF JEZEBEL DREW me toward the frigid fountain to feast my famished soul upon the fabulous sins of Jezebel. QUESTION (of the WEEK): Why did they have to bring a movie with a arid, desert setting to Tallahassee in the middle of a heat wave?

FSU MARINE HONORED

Marine First Lt. James H. Bolton, of the Florida State University Class of '52, has been awarded the Letter of Commendation with Commendation Ribbon and Metal Pendant by his battalion commander Lt. Col. Charles McCoy.

Bolton received the award in Korea for outstanding service. He was with the first Tank Battalion of the U. S. 1st. Marine Division in Korea.

United Artists Never Produced

One of the largest movie studios in California is in reality no movie studio at all. United Artists has had many films carry its label, yet has never produced a film.

Where it differs from motion picture companies is that it provides theater line-ups for independently made films. They usually split the profit with the indies for the distribution setup alone. That's why U A, in its thirty-fifth year has been coming up with top films. They try never to distribute films that won't sell.

It started with Charles Chaplin who got in touch with the reality of Pickfair in 1919, Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, who got in touch with a man with "really big" money. They decided to release all of their independent ventures under this banner. Other people wanted in, so the corporation spread its wings.

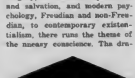
This year, United Artists has a few big films under its belt for near-release. They cut in on Universal's tie with J. Arthur Rank and are now releasing his Purple Plain starring Gregory Peck. It's in Technicolor and pretty hot. Following this The Barefoot Contessa, written and directed by Joseph L. Mankiewicz and starring Humphrey Bogart, Ava Gardner, Edmund O'Brien.

If the above aren't enough to satisfy your taste, the next big film is Vera Cruz starring Gary Cooper and Burt Lancaster. It's done in Technicolor and wide-screen. Of course, to make money, the westerns take their hold and GEORGE MONTGOMERY-TAB HUNTER'S GUNBELT is an example. Well, United Artists still is one company which consistently ranks on top of quality.

In size, here's the way the companies line up in movieland. The largest companies are TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX, WARNER BROTHERS, METRO GOLDWYN-MAYER, PARAMOUNT, Next in rank is COLUMBIA, UNIVERSAL, and RKI. Smaller studios: ALLIED ARTISTS, MONOGRAM, REPUBLIC, EAGLE LION, PANORAMIC. They are apart: UNITED ARTISTS.

Please bring this to the attention of the Tally movie Moguls. I want to see THE SAINT'S GIRL FRIDAY, a top whodunnit with LOUIS HAYWARD resuming LESLIE CHARTERIS' detective character. It's RKO and VARIETY turned flips . . . also THE GOOD DIE YOUNG with GLORIA GRAHAME, RICHARD BASEHART, ROBERT MIRELY and JOHN IRELAND. It's another Britisher using an American cast for a good suspense-filler.

A Plea for Education for Privacy



An article which has aroused considerable interest appeared last winter in The American Scholar, quarterly journal of Phi Beta Kappa. Written by Dr. Marten ten Hoor, professor of Philosophy and Dean of the College of Arts and Science, University of Alabama, it received wide publicity through TIME magazine. The SUMMER FLAMBEAU quotes extensively from it here.

"The proposition which I am defending," says Dean ten Hoor, "is, frankly, a half-truth . . . Stated concretely, the proposition is this: Never in the history of the world have there been so many people occupied with the improvement of so few. To sharpen the point by a specific example: Never have there been so many people making a good living by showing the other fellow how to make a better one.

While "such allegiance to good causes," Dean ten Hoor adds, "may be worthy, I must confess that I view all this indiscriminate zeal for reform with a jaundiced eye. It does seem to me that these days there are too many leaders and too few followers; too many preachers and too few sinners.... self-conscious sinners, that is . . . Nobody has enough spare days to improve himself, so busy is he with attempts to improve his neighbor. There is something wrong with that equation. It seems to me that it is time to try to balance it. I suggest that this can be done by shifting some weight from one side to the other, by shifting the emphasis from social improvement to self-improvement."

In making a plea for education for privacy Dean ten Hoor identifies some of the essential elements of this type of education. "The first requirement, clearly, is to learn how to think ...not out loud or in print, but privately. The thinker himself, not his neighbor, is to be the beneficiary . . . What is meant is systematic reflection, the constant purpose of which is to bring order out of the multiplicity and variety of things in which the human being is immersed . . . To possess one's soul is an intellectual sense means to have found some answer, or partial answer, to the questions: What is the nature of this world in which I find myself, what is my place in it, and what must be my attitude toward it? The problem is one of intellectual and spiritual orientation.

"In education for privacy, however, more is involved than philosophical orientation to the cosmos. There is equally urgent need for education in the establishment and maintenance of moral harmony. From the days of primitive religion, through Greek tragedy, the Christian epic of sin and salvation, and modern psychology, Freudian and non-Freudian, to contemporary existentialism, there runs the theme of the uneasy conscience. The dramatic specter of moral guilt is the principal character in many of the greatest creations of literary genius. No matter what the learned explanation, the psychological state is one of inner moral disharmony. Though it may have outer causes, it is a private affliction and must be cared privately . . . A vision of the good life, the spirit must have; for devoid of it, the imagination is without moral perspective, conduct without guiding principles, and action without trustworthy habits . . . Education for privacy must therefore include the education of the moral personality, the gradual acquisition by the self of moral resources. . . .

"A third requirement in the education of the personality is in the development of emotional stability. Of all the immediate causes of unhappiness, emotional disorder is unquestionably the most serious and the most common. Currently there is a feeling that under the pressures of modern life its incidence is steadily increasing . . . He (the contemporary individual) must learn that there is little he can do to remove the external causes, the irritants in his social and physical environment. In order to maintain or restore emotional stability within himself, he must learn to control the effects of these irritants on himself. Education of the emotions is education in self-control, in equanimity and serenity.

"To these three objectives of education for privacy — the attainment of philosophical point of view, a steady vision of the good life, and serenity of spirit, I should like to add one more: the individual should be able to live externally with himself. He should accumulate resources on which he can draw when he is at leisure . . . There is a marvelous cure for boredom, universally available, readily tapped and virtually inexhaustible: the fine arts.

"An understanding of the world, a vision of the good life, serenity of spirit, appreciation and practice of the fine arts.— these, then, are the elements of the integrated personality, the development of which is the immediate object of liberal education. These are the resources which are accumulated in the course of education for privacy . . . Resources of the spirit are like savings: they must be accumulated before they are needed. What they are needed, there is no substitute for them. Sooner or later, the individual faces the world alone. At that moment may overwhelm him if he has no resources within himself . ."

In conclusion, Dean ten Hoor says, "I wish to pay my respects to the other halftruth, the improvement of others . . . That objective together with the other objective, self-improvement, compose the whole truth, which is the grand objective of liberal education. Education for privacy and education for public services are complementary to the whole personality. He who is not educated for privacy is hardly fit to educate others. . . .

"The safe leader, in terms of the elements of education, for privacy, is one who understands his place in the world and can thus envisage the place of his fellow-men; who can morally respect himself and can thus be respected by others; who has learned to control his emotions and can thus be trusted to exert control over others; who has learned to live in peace and contentment with himself and can thus with propriety urge others to do likewise.

"If he (the individual) wishes to lead his fellows, he must first learn to lead himself. Without education for privacy he will not the merit leadership nor learn

Basic Aims Feature of Istanbul Conference

Editor's Note: This is the second of two articles about the Fourth International Student Conference, at which the United States was represented by the National Student Association.

The United States National Student Association, along with other National Unions of Students attending the Fourth International Student Conference in Istanbul recently, faced basic policy problems quite different from the organizational difficulties encountered when considering such practical programs as student travel and sport.

Perhaps because of the present and future international importance of most foreign student leaders these discussions of basic aims and purposes were the most significant feature of the Conference.

One of the most notable decisions made by the Conference was its resolution of the question of practical versus political activity. Although the original members of Cosec placed prime emphasis on practical programs, never newer and more politically conscious National Unions desire more political activity.

At Istanbul there was increased recognition of the fact that many of the so-called "politicla" problems constitute eminently "practical" difficulties when viewed in terms of different social, economic, and political circumstances. Also, most delegates lame to realize that the content of student problems differs greatly because of these same factors.

Therefore, while practical cooperation will remain the basis of the International Student Conferences, complex problems which confront the students will be considered and acted upon as long as they concern students as such and decisions taken are of a non-partisan political nature. This is in line with the policy that NSA follows in its consideration of domestic political issues.

On a motion of the Scottish Union of Students, the Conference established a representative ten-nation sub-commission to consider such inherently tricky problems and to report appropriate measures to the plenary floor. NSA's William Dentzer, past President of the Association and former Associate Secretary of Cosec, was elected Chariman of the group which met for four days.

In its reports, the Commission called upon all participating National Unions to aid students in Uganda, Malaya, Gold Coast, India, and other nations in the exchange of information, scholarships, text books, etc. It, further, passed a resolution deploring the action of the South African government "in threatening to impose racial segregation on certain of the South African universities both as a denial of the universal character of higher learning which knows no boundaries of race or nationality and as an invasion of the independence of the university."

Recognizing the lack of widespread knowledge and accurate information on many vital issues, the Conference established a permanent commission of academic freedom and university autonomy, the distortion of free educational practices and other problems affecting freedom of access to the universities and equal educational opportunities."

This Commission, composed of five outstanding students selected on a basis of competency nomination by National Unions, would serve as a fact-finding body to guide the Conferences in their actions on educational issues.

In addition, the Committee re-elected present personnel of the Secretariat which includes as Associate Secretary Mr. Avres Ingram, past International Vice-President of NSA.

Tallahassee Motion Pictures To Offer 'Jungle Jim,' Crime

Pictures ranging in subject matter from Jungle Jim to bigtime crime will play at the State Theatre today through Thursday.

Playing as a double feature offer today and tomorrow are "Killer Ape," with John Weismuller as Jungle Jim, and "El Alamein," a war-picture starring Scott Brady.

"Beachhead!" a picture dealing with the mission of four Marines in the jungles of a South Pacific island, begins Sunday for a three-day run. Starring is the technicolor film are Tony Curtis, Frank Lovejoy, and Mary Murphy.

Preston Foster, John Payne, and Colleen Gray will combine their talents in "Kansas City Confidential," which plays at the State Wednesday and Thursday. The film deals with an ingeniously planned big-money robbery.

At the Florida Theatre, "The Naked Jungle," starring Charlton Heston and Eleanor Parker, will continue through tomorrow

Playing Sunday and Monday is "Flight Nurse," starring Forrest Tucker and Joan Leslie. The film, which is in technicolor, is the story of a flight nurse in the United States Air Force and her experiences in Korea.

The newest film version of Sigmund Romberg's immortal "Student Prince" will begin a four day run at the Florida Tuesday. The picture stars Ann Blythe—melodic songstress of "Rose Marie" and Edmund Purdom. In his musical numbers, Purdom will go through all motions, but the voice will be that of Mario Lanza, singing the timeless melodies from the great musical. The picture is filmed in Cinemascope

Bevo's Marks

To spectators who witnessed the forty-three point basketball scoring "spree" of Clarence "Bevo" Francis Tuesday night in Centennial Field, his past records are now understandable. But to persons not present for the "Basketball Under the Stars" program these same records may seem miraculous.

Last year, playing for tiny Rio Grande College "Bevo" scored 1,255 points over a period of 27 games to set a new record for small college players at an average of 46.5 points per game. Other records he established over the same period include the most field goals, 444; the most free throws, 367; the most points scored in one game, 113; the most field goals in one game, 38; and the most free throws in one game, 37.

His performance Tuesday night proved "Bevo" to be worthy of his titles. Using over four different types of shots from many angles he split the cords at will.

In the first basketball game of the night's full program "Bevo" and his Boston "Whirlwinds" were pitted against the Hawaiian "Surfriders." The "Surfriders" came from behind late in the final period to emerge the victors, 74-72.

In the nightcap Abe Saperstein's world-renowned Harlem "Globetrotters" defeated the Chicago "Brown Bombers," 71-67. The "Trotters" led by clown Reb Hall and captain Sweetwater Clifton provided the stands with the hilarious antics for which they are famous.

The night's program was further sparked by a between-the-halves variety talent program, itself worthy of high praise.

Another Tallahassee performance of "Basketball Under the Stars" in 1955 would surely attract more than the 2,008 paid fans of Tuesday night for "A good time was had by all."

Ga. Baseball and Segregation

The thought of Negroes and white attending the same school is presently rather unpopular in Georgia. Officials of our neighboring state have raised loud voices of protest to the recent Supreme Court decision. At present Georgia along with South Carolina is regarded by many as one of the two most upset Southern states in regard to the issue.

In regard to the world of sports, it is with close interest that this corner observes the recent entrance of two Negro baseball players into the Georgia-Florida league. The two men Perry Bellamy, an outfielder, and Silas Harmon, an infielder, were recently signed by the Waycross, Ga. team of the Class D league.

The reception given the baseballers by the eight South Georgia towns comprising the league will be noteworthy. It is my guess that they will be readily acceptable after they have demonstrated their baseball abilities to be satisfactory. The move could mean a lot toward easing the way for the abandonment of school segregation in the near future.

Floyd Does It Again

For the third straight week Floyd Jaeggars has emerged as the Men's Bowling League high scorer. In Monday night's league matches the captain of the "Suckers" bowled 160 and then 168 to average 159 for the night.

Other outstanding single games rolled in the men's league include a 169 by Ivan Johnson of the Meteors, the 167 Tere' Lynwood James' 159, and a 168 by Don Beck of the Ten Pins.

A Plea For . . .

to recognize it in others. He will strive in vain for happiness and success in private or public life until he has achieved understanding, goodness, serenity, and contentment within himself. That, according to my exegesis," says Dean ten Hoor, "is in this connection the meaning of the Biblical test: 'For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?' It is surely what Thomas Hardy meant when he wrote: 'He who is with himself dissatisfied.

Though all the world find satisfaction in him,
Is like a rainbow-crimmed bird gone blind,
That gives delight it shares not."

Of making many books there is no end; and much study is a wearness of the flesh. — Ecclesiastes XII, 12.

Art Exhibition Shows Selective Drawings, Colors

"Watercolors and Drawings," a selection of thirty of the best watercolors and drawings from the 1953 Whitney Annual exhibition, opened at the Florida State University this Tuesday and will close July 28.

The "Whitney Annual" is one of the two or three most important exhibitions held in this country each year. Inclusion in one of these exhibitions comes as a token of achievement to any American artist, since it is an invitational exhibition, and only artists who have made their mark are invited to submit work.

The names of the artists represented in this selection from the 1953 exhibition reads like n Who's Who in American art: Lyonel Feininger, John Marin, Morris Graves, Jackson Pollock, Willem de Kooning and many others of similar stature.

According to Dr. Adolph Karl, acting head of the Department of Art, the selection to be shown here exemplifies Herman More's, director of the Whitney Museum, express intention. If you cannot get to New York every year to see the exhibitions in the famous art galleries, the University Museum of FSU will bring you fill the gap.

Current Gallery hours are: Sunday, 1-4 p.m.; Monday, closed; Tuesday-Friday, 12:30-5:00 p.m.; Saturday, 9-12 noon.

Broken Hip Doesn't Stop Camel-Back or 'Autoette' Excites Summer Visitor

By MAGGIE HALL

Unveiling on unusual conveyances is no new thrill for Mrs. Marion E. Cleveland, attending the Summer session at Florida State University. But, says Mrs. Cleveland, this is by far the most interesting.

Mrs. Cleveland, from Ft. Lauderdale, had the misfortune of breaking her hip two months ago, and, as she explained it, rather than just sit nt home, she decided to do something worthwhile — come to school.

"But I couldn't make it without my crutches, wheel chair, and autoette!" The "autoette" is the conveyance which hac caused such speculation among students on campus the last two weeks.

Run By Battery

Run by a battery, the three-wheeled little cart in brilliant red is used by Mrs. Cleveland for transportation on campus. She uses crutches and a wheel chair to get along in the buildings and classrooms.

When travelling to and from buildings, she folds up her wheel chair and deposits it in the back compartment along with her crutches. and she's off.

Mrs. Cleveland related several experiences in which she used other unusual conveyances, for the educator, who now teaches in Dunia, was once a missionary in the Middle East and has traveled extensively.

EXCITING TRAVEL -- by her little "autoette.', Mrs. Marion Cleveland continues to see the world, regardless of a broken hip. Mrs. Cleveland, a summer student, describes it as "thrilling."

Once Rode Camelback

In Egypt, she recalled, she rode camel-back to visit the pyramids in the desert. In China, with her missionary work, Mrs. Cleveland rode on everything from wheel barrow- to rickshaws.

While in the Middle East, Mrs. Cleveland noted, she visited the American University in Beirut, Lebanon. She also flew to Jerusalem and Cairo. It was at the latter where she underwent her camel journey.

Mrs. Cleveland is staying in Landis during her stop here in Tallahassee.

Originally from Washington, D. C., Mrs. Cleveland is doing graduate work beyond her masters in the fields of guidance and education.

"Lots nf Fna"

Asked why she had chosen FSU for her advanced work, she replied that she liked it down here. She has done other graduate studies here before. Once in 1950, and again in 1952.

Riding in the cart or "autoette" has proved to be "lots of fun" she commented. "Everyone waves or smiles."

Mrs. Cleveland also revealed that there has been many comments and questions wherever she goes. "I can't recall any funny comments, although there have been many. I just think its lots of fun."

Mrs. Cleveland brought the "autoette" up from Ft. Lauderdale in a jeep, it was made known. Commented the injured woman, "It is very easy to handle."

Stick Steering

She steers with a stick, much like that of a plane. Just push left and the cart turns right. Its that easy.

Reports indicate that the average cost of a cart such as Mrs. Cleveland's "autoette" costs approximately $900. As for fuel, it coats approximately 3 cents a mile to drive it on its batteries.

When questioned, Mrs. Cleveland appeared calm and was very co-operative. The many questions asked her apparently did not in any way affect her gracious good humor nor was she tired of listening to the questions.

could report on the Washington conference.

Speakers included Lawrence E Higgins, executive secretary of the Louisiana Youth Commission and FSU's Dr. Ralph L. Witherspoon giving the psychological aspects of delinquency. Discussion leaders were Dr. Lewis Killian of the university's department of sociology, and Dr. Earl Limon Koos and Dr. Vernon Fox of the FSU School of Social Welfare.

Panel Discussion

A highlight of the week's institute was a panel discussion on ways of helping delinquents. Participating were Harold Hunter, juvenile court counselor of Alachua County; Karl Engel, chief of police of North Miami; Miss Doris Hill, Leon County child welfare worker; Dr. Paul R. Fuller, FSU psychologist; Mrs. Odessa Steyerman, Thomasville, Ga., parent; Mrs. Mary Bridges, Panama City classroom teacher, and Miss Frances Smith, Quincy visiting teacher.

Other prominent speakers for the three-day FSU Institute were Judge Dozier A. DeVane; Judge Lawrence Renfroe of Leon County, who is president of the Florida County Judges Association; Mrs. Sylvia Carothers of the Florida Children's Commission, and Judge Richard Robbins of Palm Beach County.

Dance Band, which gave its first concert of the season this past Wednesday night, under the direction of William Holston.

In the concert to be presented Sunday night, the program includes 12 selections from Mendelssohn to Gillis. It will lead off with two Charales: "Let All Men Praise the Lord" by Mendelssohn and "He That Shall Endure to the End" by Marcelli, with Eugene Crabb directing.

Following the opening number, the following composers will be heard Sunday night: "Tomborrin" by Grety-Reibold, with Thomas Stone as guest conductor; "Passeaglia and Rughetta" by Harold Johnson, with Thomas Wikstrom as guest conductor; "Symphony No. 5½" by Don Gillis; and "American Salute" by Morton Gould.

Clarinet Quartet

The Music Camp Clarinet Quartet, composed of Louis Vertich, Elizabeth Armes, Evelyn Lucy, and Larry Keating, and directed by Harry Schmidt, will perform "Rondo" by Pleyel and "Marche Des Petits Soldats De Plomb" by Gabriel Pierne.

Following the Clarinet Quartet, the Woodwind Quintet will perform "Overture in B Flat Major" by Lucien Cullet. The Quintet is composed of Barbara Wilson, FSU, oboe, Raymond Revell, flute, Connie Neel, horn, Sandra Fletcher, bassoon, and Dixon Reddick, clarinet.

The Brass Choir, under the direction to William Cramer, and with Robert Carwithen, FSU, as organist, will present "Symphony for Brass Choir" by Victor Ewald and "Canzoin duo decmi toni" by Gabrieli Giovanni.

Play-Goers See 'Papa' In Conradi

Summer Speech Play Depicting Papa's Role Plays For Last Time

By TOMMY LEWIS

The summer play of the Speech Department has its last performance tonight. "Papa Is All" finishes off a hard, hot session of work for actors and directors with this show. Curtain is slated for 8:15 p. m.

The story, about a Mennonite farm family, was chosen because of the interest it would have for many of the teachers who are on campus this summer. It is of the type that they could use in their high schools, as it takes a very simple set and requires only a small cast.

Different Drama Style

This play is very different from the style of drama put on usually on the regular school year. It is comedy and is therefore quite unlike last year's tragedy "Romeo and Juliet" or this spring's "Insect Comedy." Because of the light comedy nature of the matters, they are better able to bear the heat of the stage in summer.

The costumes are like the dress of the pioneer days' Mennonites. Papa and Mama are particularly true to the style although Jake appears as any modern farm boy and Emma is a little more colorful than the usual Mennonite.

Davee Is Director

"Papa" is under the direction of Dr. Paul Davee who has been aided by Dr. Lynn Orr and Mr. Carl Zerbe in the preparing and designing of costumes, sets, and lights.

The play is set in the kitchen of the Aufdung home. The time is the late spring of 1941, although it would be impossible to tell the year by either the set or the costumes. Papa is not one to waste money on modern conveniences and "shiftless" ideas.

Papa, played by Lee Hildman, is close with his money and his family, and has very set ideas as to right and wrong. Mamma, the wife who fears no one . . . except Papa, is played by Bonnie Hunter.

"Papa Domineers Children

Ed Thomas plays Jake, the son with a love for mechanics, about whom Papa has spread a rumor that he is not quite right in the head. Emma, June Mizell, would like to leave the farm and get married if Papa would only give her the chance.

Mrs. Yoder is the neighborhood gossip who almost causes disaster by her loose talk. Nancy Craig plays this part. Gerald McClelland, as Trooper Brindle, save the family from Papa's wrath and helps to bring the play to a happy ending.

US Causes Allies to Suffer According to VanAssenderp

The citizens of the United States seldom stop to realize that the policy of the United States in effect requires its allies in Europe to give up claims to large overseas territories and very often to relinquish part of their sovereignty at home also.

This statement was made Tuesday night by Dr. Andre L. Van Assenderp, professor of World Relations at Florida State University as the regularly scheduled Educational Lecture Series sponsored by the school of education, Phi Delta Kappa, and Kappa Delta Pi.

Quoting from Secretary of State John Foster Dulles' speech to the Overseas Press Club recently Dr. Van Assenderp stated that there are three main reasons why the United States has an interest in the struggle for freedom of colonial peoples.

Sympathetic to Colonials

In the first place, he said, the United States' history of colonial freedom makes them feel sympathetic with the colonial struggles. The United States is also aware of the communists' attempt to prevent world peace, he added, so the United States has sought to contain communist aggression.

Van Assenderp went on to say that the United States and Russia are competing for the minds of the South Eastern Asians, but that the United States' work usually does not bring that if it goes into a country directly to influence its thoughts, the United States may be accused of bringing to its own brand of imperialism. Also, he pointed out, if the United States attempts to aid the colonial powers who are its allies, it will be convicted of aiding colonialism.

Asians Reorganizing

Van Assenderp continued by saying that communism is making a strong bid for the allegiance of South East Asia. One of their most powerful appeals is the fact that they are demonstrating that Asians can reorganize their own productive machinery, as in the industrial center north of Karachi where they manufacture everything from "canned fish to jet engines."

There are three of these such industrial centers; they are strategically located near China, India, and Burma, each serving as a "showcase" for all of South East Asia.

South East Asians Neutral

Actually, he pointed out, the South East Asians tend to be neutralists but in a peculiar sense. They have decided that as long as possible they will trade and be friendly with both sides. India, Burma, and Indonesia are examples.

He stated that this neutralism stemmed from the feeling of the South Eastern Asian Nations that they need to consolidate their forces before taking sides in the overall dispute.

If what appears to be the present policy of the United States, to contain communism with the present boundaries with the cooperation of its allies can be maintained until the New South Eastern powers can consolidate their resources, it may be possible to be valuable to the Western Powers.

Money Allotted FSU Zoologist For Embryo Study

A National Science Foundation Grant of $3,100 for study in experimental embryology has been awarded Dr. Charles B. Metz, of the Florida State University Department of zoology.

Most of the funds of the grant will be used to establish a laboratory of experimental embryology at the university. "This laboratory will provide for the training of graduate students and furnish facilities for visiting investigators," Dr. Metz said. He said the research will emphasize the experimental embryology of marine invertebrate organisms.

Dr. Metz's project, for which the grant was awarded, will concern experiments into the nature and role of specific substances in fertilization.

Dr. Metz is also currently conducting research under a three year grant-in-aid from the American Cancer Society. He received his PhD from the California Institute of Technology and is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, American Society of Zoologists, New York Academy of Sciences, Society of Experimental Biology and Medicine, Marine Biological Laboratory and Bermuda Biological Association.

Body Chooses Soles Official NSA Observer

Councilman Jimmy Soles, re-elected to the regular Senate in last May's election at Florida State University will be the official FSU observer at the National Student Association Congress to be held August 19-21 in Ames, Iowa.

Soles was elected following the disclosure by Chairman Dave Kennedy that he would be unable to attend the Congress. Kennedy was elected by the Council at its last session. Soles made the original motion in the Council asking that the full $100 expense money be paid to one observer to defray the expenditures of travel.

Soles will report to next year's Senate, of which he is a member, on the activities of NSA. He was elected over Ken Gaskin by Chairman Kennedy's tie-breaking vote.

Wants Freshmen Elected

In other business of the Council a resolution requesting that the 1954-55 Student Body Senate take necessary steps to amend the Student Body Constitution to allow first semester freshmen to hold Senate positions was passed. The resolution was introduced by Chairman of the Constitutional Revisions Committee.

On the question of extending the deadline on day trips for women the Council decided to be summer session, Councilman Russell Johnson announced that he and Councilwoman Ann Bryant had not been successful in their meeting with Assistant Dean of Women Elizabeth Dillon. Johnson noted that Miss Lynn had already studied the regulation along with members of the Council and they all felt it expressed approval of the present regulation.

Extention Vetoed

At present, the regulation calls for women on day trips to return to campus by 11:30 p. m. The Council had striven to have that changed to 12:00.

A similar request was passed by the regular Senate last semester, but it had not yet been considered by the faculty due to an error on the part of the Women's Council Chairman.

Absent at the meeting this week were Nancy Graham, Betty Wilson and Secretary-Treasurer Turner. There is one more meeting of the Summer Council slated for this Summer. Open to any general public, the meeting is to be held in the Senate Chambers on Second Floor Longmire at 4 p. m. on July 22.

Over Three Hundred To Receive Diplomas

The Registrar's office announced today approximately 320 candidates for degrees to be awarded at Florida State University graduation ceremonies August 7.

Dr. Venia Shores, professor of History and in charge of the summer graduation said that the ceremonies will be conducted in the music amphitheater at 8:00 p.m. the 7th. If weather prohibits ceremonies there, she said, they will be held in Opperman Music Hall. Dr. Shores said that graduate candidates should be reminded that a rehearsal will be conducted the night before at 7:30.

Dr. Brumbaugh Speaks

Guest speaker for the summer graduation will be Dr. A. J. Brumbaugh, director of Study of Higher Education in the State of Florida.

Dr. Brumbaugh told The Flambeau that the topic of his graduation speech would be "The Best Is Yet to Be." Speaking along these lines, and giving an idea of his feelings about FSU, Dr. Brumbaugh said, "Until recently we have thought that the products of science and technology constitute the ultimate in benefits to mankind. But now they have created agents that are threatened our very existence."

"The best that lies ahead is achievement in the dialogue peace among the nations of the world so that we can use the products of science and technology for constructive, rather than destructive, purposes," the education director declared.

The major part of his address will be related to some of the barriers which must be removed in order to achieve lasting world peace.

Prior to his recent appointment as Director of Study of Higher Education in State of Florida, Dr. Brumbaugh was a President at Illinois State Normal University, Illinois, affiliated with the University of Chicago. Other positions held by Dr. Brumbaugh during his colorful education career include the presidency of the American Council on Education, Washington, D. C., and Dean of Students and Professor of Education at University of Chicago.

Music for the graduation ceremonies will be given by Ramona K. Beard, Organist and Associate professor of music at FSU, and Betty Glenn, Contralto and assistant professor of music at FSU.

Miss Beard will play Pomp and Circumstance by Elgra and Mendelssohn's War March of the Priests. Miss Glenn will sing Malotte's Twenty-Third Psalm, accompanied by Miss Beard.

Oglesby Takes Up Post As New Student Dean

Former Okla A&M Dean Fills Vacancy Left by Dr Culpepper Last December

Dr. R. R. Oglesby, new FSU Dean of Students this week assumed the duties of Dean of Student Welfare vacated last December by Dr. Reward Culpepper.

The new dean who resigned his post as Dean of Students at Oklahoma A&M (Ag.) to accept his position here told a reporter that "working with young people has always interested me, and being Dean of Students gives me an opportunity to work with and for the students."

Dr. Oglesby said that his title here, formerly called Dean of Student Welfare, is a more informal and better accepted in U. S. colleges today.

Mrs. Oglesby will be the dean of men and women, registrar, dean of admissions, vocational guidance center, coordinated counseling service, personnel record, and the university health service.

A native of Ada, Oklahoma, Oglesby has spent most of his mature years in Virginia. He is a graduate of Georgetown (Ky.) College, the University of Virginia, and holds has PhD in political science from the University Alma, he has done graduate work at Harvard and at Heidelburg University, Germany.

He has taught at Berea College and Sweet Briar College and for the past four summers served as special lecturer in international law and relations in the Foreign Service School of George Washington University.

Married and father of three children—Roslyn, 11, David, 6, and Danny, 2, Dr. Oglesby is a member of the Rotary Club, Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity, American Society of International Law and the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators.

Dr Hardee Announces SCPA Meet Will Be Held in North Carolina

Dr. Melvene Hardee, coordinator of counseling, Florida State University, announced recently that the 1954 summer conference of the Southern College Personnel Association will be held at Mars Hill, N. C. August 18-21.

The conference, a week's program of lectures and group discussion, will be held in cooperation with the Southern Regional Education Board and the Hazel Fonadation.

Keynote speaker on the opening day will be Dr. Ralph Bindwhistell, University of Louisville and member of the Interdisciplinary Committee on Culture and Communication.

The delegation hopes to define the needs of students in higher education, particularly in the South, and to plan programs in both academic and personal areas which will better meet the needs of men and women students.

In attendance will be college and university presidents, vice-presidents, deans, department heads, business managers, registrars, chaplains, and teaching faculty.

GREEK GRADE ERROR

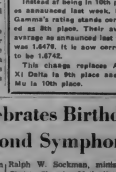
The Dean of Women's office announced today that an error in IBM had caused Delta Gamma's grade to be tabulated wrong, thus affecting the standing of three sororities which were announced in last week's Flambeau.

Instead of being in 10th place, as announced last week, Delta Gamma's rating stands corrected as 8th place. Their overall average as announced last week was 1.6479. It is now corrected to be 1.6742.

This change replaces Alpha Xi Delta in 9th place and Phi Mu in 10th place.

Dohnanyi Celebrates Birthday Rescoring Second Symphony

Characteristic of Dr. Ernst von Dohnanyi is his determination to spend his 77th birthday, July 27, on his Tallahassee farm, relaxing in a summer job he has set himself of re-scoring his second symphony.



No symphony has a stranger history. It was written during the last years of World War II when the Hungarian composer was fleeing from his Nazi invaded homeland. Always Dohnanyi was composing, while he and his family found refuge in obscure villages in heading for the vast security of Vienna. Finally he finished his symphony in March 1945, writing the major part of the four movements while bombs fell and while bombs falling all around him.

Only a great composer and a perfectionist would have tampered with such a gigantic work already published and performed. The original symphony is 70 minutes, while the new version is shortened by eight minutes.

RECEIVED DOCTORATE

Dohnanyi was one of nine to receive an honorary doctorate last month at Florida University's Quincentennial Commencement. He was the only one given a doctor of music degree, and he was in impressive company—doctor of laws degrees were given to Benjamin F. Fairless, president of U. S. Steel, Gov. Frank J. Lausche of Ohio and degree citation which salutes him

To quote from Dohnanyi's new

he has long been internationally renowned.

As a youth, his genius was encouraged by the greatest musicians of the day, and he in turn has encouraged and given constructive counsel to his students and fellow artists.

"Vouchsafed a long life by a beneficient providence, he has lived three years for the glorification of his chosen art and the enrichment of mankind."

Recital to be Given By Claude Rhea

Claude E. Rhea, tenor and graduate student in FSU's School of Music at the Tallahassee First Baptist Church, will give a recital tonight at 8:15 in Opperman Music Hall.

Rhea, known popularly for his vocal talents in Tallahassee, leaves next month to assume duties with the Faculty of the School of Sacred Music at New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisiana.

This Monday night recital will be in five parts. He will begin with a selections of Haydn and Handel, then will sing selections from old and Ger—an periods, selections of Mozart, Beethoven and others. He will conclude with songs of contemporary British - American period.

Rhea will be accompanied by Ryan Edwards at the piano and Harpsichord.

NEW POW-WOW IN FALL

Florida State University students will receive a new and smaller Pow-Wow at registration fall. It was learned today.

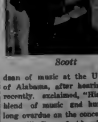
The new Pow-Wow, edited by Bob Polsom, is approximately half as bulky as the old. But crammed into its 160 pages of 9½ by 5 inch size is the same amount of information found in former editions.

Staff members for the publication were Polsom, Editor-in-Chief, Franklin Adams, Art Editor; with Lona Cochran, Russell Johnson and Barbara Bachman as staff writers.

Final Summer Artist Series Offers 'Will Rogers of Piano'

Henry L. Scott, called "The Will Rogers of the Piano" by Life Magazine, will give a unique recital of classics, swing, and concert humor in the Florida State University Amphitheater Tuesday night at 8:15 as the final Summer Artist Series program.

Motion pictures and radio have shown that much can be done toward the broader appreciation of music through the medium of entertainment. A particularly striking example of this was a motion picture that made the works of Chopin familiar to everyone almost overnight.



Creates Music Consciousness

Scott believes that blending the arts of drama, humor and music on the concert stage will in the long run do the most to make America music conscious. With this in mind, he originated the "Will of concert humor." Concert humor is based on the premise that humor has a place in the concert hall, just as much as in opera, in literature and in the plastic arts.

The results of his pioneering work are already showing themselves in the concert field. The "solemnity only" idea is changing and his "opera formula concept" of drama, humor, and music is taking its place. This is what gives Scott the credit by music and drama critics as "The World's Most Versatile Pianist."

New Art Form Valuable

The value of a new art form is often estimated by the importance connected it in the field of education. Dr. Alton O'Steen, dean of music at the University of Alabama, after hearing Scott recently, exclaimed, "His expert blend of music and humor are long overdue on the concert stage. He will, I'm afraid, win more converts to serious music than all our concert entrees." Another university president declared: "Henry L. Scott's concert is the great single contribution to the advancement of music and art humor in America today."

Scott

Failure of Senate to Censure Only Postpones Needed Action

We can't pretend to be particularly surprised about the action, or failure to take action, of the Senate this Tuesday. Only the naive would suppose that that august body would dare to discipline Joseph McCarthy.

McCarthy today has built himself into a strong position. Few Democrats dare attack him for fear of being smeared. Most Republicans avoid a quarrel with him out of political expedience. It is doubtful that a motion of censure will come to a vote in this session of Congress.

Perhaps the best summary of McCarthy and his position was given this month in Harper's magazine: "Here is a man who has no social philosophy, no legislation to propose, no organized following, no durable alliances, no loyalty to his own party, no program, no position on a significant issue, no public posture as a friendly fellow, no record of achievement in his specialty, no concern for clearing his past of scandal, no desire for principled reputation, and no idea what to do with power when—by the default of a few hundred cowardly colleagues—he found himself stuck with it."

Certain statements made this week upon the resignation of Roy Cohn as chief committee counsel once again indicate the McCarthy technique of irresponsibility and hysterical anti-communism.

Cohn said that "his reputation had been torn to shreds, merely because I was associated with Senator McCarthy, who has become the symbol of hatred for all who fear the exposure of Communism."

McCarthy said, "The smears and pressures to which he (Cohn) had been subjected make it clear that an effective anti-Communist cannot long survive on the Washington scene."

These sort of statements help explain why the Senate is so reluctant to act on Senator Flander's motion of censure. No one wants to become the target of the lies and phoney martyrizing McCarthy specializes in.

Nevertheless, the conclusion is inescapable that McCarthy is Congress' creature and it is up to Congress to tame the rodent.

Thank You . . .

With this issue the Flambeau completes its publication schedule for the summer.

We entered upon this venture with high resolve, and though the issues we have since produced are not all we have liked them to be, nevertheless we are not ashamed of our efforts.

It seems only proper at this time to extend our sincere thanks to some of those who have given generously of their time and patience, in order that this be a better newspaper As usual, the Public Relations Office gave us invaluable assistance. The Audio-Visual darkroom helped with our photographs. Mr. Fred Vogel, Counselor for Student Organizations, has consistently lent us a sympathetic ear and much valuable advice.

Perhaps we should also commend the Summer Council. This new creature of Florida State, the source of many good news stories, helped us resolve our doubts by insisting that we continue when continuing seemed futile.

But more than anyone else we owe thanks to our readers. They are the ones who have suffered our too-frequent lapses into garbled English and typographical transpositions. To our readers and to columnists like Jerry Bernstein, who found an entire sentence omitted from his column last week, we offer the following translation from the Shanghai Commercial Express:

"In the course of printing a small part of the Selected Works of Mao Tse tung, vol. II, we found the first word "his," on the first line of page 490 was indistinctly printed but was erroneously changed into "chi"

. . . This is a serious error . . . caused by the fact that in carrying out this important task our attitude was not serious enough and our system was not strict and thorough enough. We accept the profound lesson this time and will hereafter intensify ideological reform, maintain a solemn working style and raise our work efficiency, and pledge ourselves to make amends for this serious mistake by taking concrete action. We hereby tender our apology to the readers and make the above self-examination."

Welcome . . .

An important change in the Florida State University administration took place this week when Dr. R. R. Oglesby arrived to take over the post of Dean of Students.

Dr. Oglesby comes to FSU with the highest of recommendations. The O'Collegian, student newspaper at Oklahoma A&M, editorialized: "Oglesby's leaving creates a vacancy which will be hard to fill . . . A&M loses an invaluable asset . . . He understands students and has gained their confidence."

The College Council, roughly analogous to the FSU Council of Deans, said in part: "We have admired you for your ability as an administrator, for your ideas and objective thought, for your kindly concern, for ideals of higher education."

On the basis of such statements, and upon the easy and unaffected way in which he has taken on his presponsibilities at Florida State, we feel confident that he will be a success in his very important new position.

Know When You're Gagged?

We note in the Journalism course announcement that a dozen courses will not be offered next fall. A few among them will we consider the most illuminating and thought provoking courses on campus, and whether or not some of them will ever be taught again is a matter of concern. At least to us, for we think not.

Not having queried the department on why they have been discontinued for next year, we can safely assume it is one of a possible three or four reasons: budgetary, lag student enrollment or to make way for newer courses deemed more necessary. There may be another reason.

No matter in what light you look at the move, it is only another example of the trend of vocationalism creeping over colleges like a black sickness. This campus is no exception.

Just before we started this column we were scanning the front page of a state newspaper. On it was an editorial cartoon, depicting a figure representing America's youth carrying a book in his hand with the words "The Future" on it, and looking at a cloud which represented the communist threat. The Future part of it strikes us now, and it goes hand in hand with the word "think."

Think seems to be a forgotten word today. Why is it forgotten? Partly it is the student's fault. But not entirely. How can you do not have the courses which are able to present the proper materials to stimulate ideas, is one not entirely be the student's fault. How much of the future to be being prepared for, then?

One of the Journalism courses, for example, getting the axe is called "Contemporary Reading." The 1954-55 University catalog refers to this course as "A study of 'Quality' magazines mainly to gain a comprehensive understanding of the cross-currents of present day thought as expressed in its literature." Those 'Quality' magazines are the Atlantic Monthly and Harper's, and no two finer magazines exist today which give the student a more comprehensive understanding of today's events, besides entertaining the reader with timely and highly interesting articles. They are lasting, too.

In the Contemporary Reading course, many articles in pan-issues are discussed, and they remain as fresh and timely as they were, say, five years ago. In addition, it forms an integral part of other courses offered, such as political science or economics. The learning gained in C. R. helps to a degree in any course you take at this University.

Glance around today and count the number of courses taught out of a textbook—there it is, right in that book — all right, read it and memorize it. Or the number which in effect say, all right, I'm placing this in your hand, all you have to do is hold it, study it, throw it, blow it or eat it. Then count the number which offers issues to the students and though presenting an opinionated picture, also leaves the issues for the reader or student to ponder and decide on for himself.

Reading material from magazines such as we named above helps the student to think as much or more than any textbook ever will. But the course which does that is being erased, and then someone comes along and tells the student to think. What a laugh.

The liberal arts and vocational-aliam make up the educational system basically. Cancel one out, and you don't have an education-al system. You have robots. Vocationalism is being stuffed down throats and students are gagging from it. We wonder, though, how many students realize they're being gagged. When they don't that is worst of all.

Letters . . .

To the summer school students, faculty and staff of FSU:

The Summer Recreation Committee would like to take this opportunity of thanking you for your participation in our programs. It is always a pleasure to become acquainted with many new people and to renew acquaintance with old friends. We thank you for your patience when the Weather Man has been contrary with us at the outdoor movies, and for your sportsmanship when the bus broke down, and your interest in all of the marine life when we found the tide out at Panacea, and for your good humor throughout this summer when our best laid plans haven't always gone smoothly. May we thank many of you who joined our committee to spirit by helping with the setting up of tables and chairs at various meetings, and for helping to carry in and out punch cups and punch bowls. May we thank those who made the annual picnic a memorable occasion of fellowship and beauty. We would like also to thank the Student Center Staff - Miss Anna Tracy, Mrs. Janet Mastin, and Mrs. Grace Bateman for their help in the luncheons, dances, and many special events. We would like to say thank you to Mr. Ben Adams and his staff for the ice cream social, the picnic food, and the good lunch and cookies for our Book Reviews and many parties. We want to thank the Women's Residence Staff for use of their parlors and facilities. And may we thank Miss Jane Adams for her help in arranging for our use of the Longmire Parlors.

May we thank Dr. Sam Neel and his committee for the fine luncheon programs on Wednesdays and Mrs. Roy Flynn for the Book Reviews. We also owe thanks to Mrs. Robert Vernon for circulating our news in "This Week." And our thanks to Mr. Vogel and his secretary in the Student Activities Office for helping to answer our telephone. We appreciate the help of the Graduate Class, The Dames Club, and the Newcomers Club.

A complete list of those persons and staff members who have helped us would be another university directory with Audio-visual Department on the list and continuing down the line to Zoology.

Our hope for the summer was to offer some pleasant times for our students from all over the world and we appreciate the manner in which our foreign students have helped us accomplish this purpose.

Getting Your Discharge Papers From FSU?

This week holds an important date for me. It commemorates the second anniversary of my discharge from active duty with the Navy. I vividly remember that final day in the service. We were awakened that morning to the sweet strains of "Tiger Rag" on the public-address system. After dressing for the final time in Navy-blue, we were ushered out to a pavilion just across the street from the Navy brig. At the same moment we were in process of being mustered by the petty officer in charge, several hundred prisoners, charged with assorted felonys, were answering call within their barbed-wire enclosure. What a contrast! This group of enlisted men were well familiar with the fellows line'd across the street from them. Every day a new group would line up and then march away to cast off their bonds of government service.

That afternoon at three o'clock an officer called my name, handed me an envelope containing my discharge papers, a button, and said, "Humph." I was free. During the past four years I had lived an interestingly regimented life. What now? Back to Florida? Yes, but I decided then that I would make it a memorable trip. I had travelled by train, bus, plane, to and from my ship and home on leave during my enlisted period. However, I never had a chance to enjoy this country. Now I was going to, for I had resolved to hitch-hike from San Diego, California to Palm Beach, Florida on New York City. The most amazing part of it all was that I accomplished this feat in less time than it would have taken to travel by bus, subtracting, of course, the time spent standing-see-ing. And, the total cost of my journey was less than $20.00! Only once during the time was I tempted to give up thumbing. That occurred on the eastern side of Hoover Dam in Nevada. I was standing on the highway facing several hundred miles of desert waste. It was high noon and the temperatura hovered well above 100 degrees. I was cited in my woolen blues. I scanned the dam-bridge for signs of cars. There were none. I viewed the skies and saw nothing but big black birds (they seemed to me as though they were vultures). I stood, waiting, sweating growing hungry and thirsty. My luck eventually changed, but not before I had made my will (mentally), and resolved to lead a new life.

What has this to do with graduation? Next month many of us will be receiving our discharge papers from Florida State University. We'll don our uniforms and walk past the officer to receive our certificate of honorable service. But there in the stadium will be the faces of those yet to have considered the rigors of academic life. We'll leave them; some of us will begin a short military career, others will assume positions in business. Many will pursue courses for higher degrees. Some may decide to hitch a ride to their destination. It may appear as the romantic, the easy way to reach the pot of gold. However, it has its pitfalls, its deserts, and long periods of stagnation.

A Hope for Georgia: Churches Christianizing

Editor's Note: The following column is in reply to a letter ("hot-headed and besides the point"), received by Bruce Galphin following his Flambeau article last week. Flambeau writers can be notorious if it seems, even if they are former students working in Alaska.

The headline "Ex Editor Takes Dim View of Georgia" may have given readers the wrong slant on my last column.

Not that things are not dim enough. The political atmosphere I described is here, all right. There is widespread determination to circumvent the Supreme Court.

But the headline perhaps mistakenly conveyed the idea that I have made a retreat from the state. That evidently has been the feeling of some readers.

Rather I am sorry for it and wait to help it, though my part may be small.

And the picture is not entirely dim. There are hopeful signs, though they may be considerably weaker than in Florida.

There seems to be a awakening of the churches here of late. At the Southern Baptist Convention in St. Louis, Mo., ministers were urged to comply with the Supreme Court decision, and segregation was described as unchristian.

Just about a week ago there was a similar statement from the Christian Council of Atlanta, representing 58 churches. On the suggestion of one Northern minister that the place to begin integration is in the Council itself, it was revealed that the plan is already being considered.

Probably the few ministers involved do not represent the majority opinion, even among churchmen. But it does show leadership in the right direction. And it shows something which may soon have great significance.

It may be that the churches are being Christianized. That is, it may be that the quiet philosophy which gave made Christianity such a great religion is being applied in a sorely neglected fields.

The measure of greatness of a philosophy or an institution is not its ability to maintain one set of rules for all times. It is great and it is good inasmuch as it is alive, applying the basic premises of the past to new problems. This seems to be happening to a greater and greater extent in the South, and it is something for which the church may justly be proud. It will meet stiff resistance, but the great men and institutions through history have always had to fight against existing conditions.

Not all the churches are not alone. The Southern Regional Council has been working in its quiet, unpublicized sort of way. Such leading figures as the Constitution's Ralph McGill have been taking sober steps toward the New South.

But it is in the political field that things are the darkest. There are few signs of a new generation of thought among the candidates and incumbents. There is little daring, little vision. And after all, it is the political mechanism through which many changes are made, even though the source be elsewhere.

It would not be fair to Georgia or to Georgians if I did not make these generalizations of previous statements. Things are dim but not black.

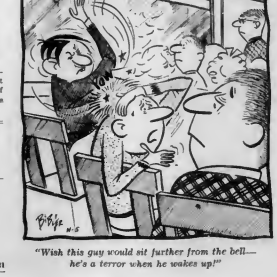
France and the European Defense Community

France, twice invaded by German Armies within a period of twenty-five years, has had a right to be hesitant concerning the rearmament of Germany; but by o-ing this right over excessively she has denied Western Europe the use of the Belgian Valley, the third greatest industrial center in the world, and the use of 12 German divisions in warding off the Russians from staging a sneak attack. The free world heartened when it learned that Premier Mendes-France of France had told the United States that the French General Assembly would take action, for or against EDC before 1 quits this summer.

Under the European Defense Community Treaty, France and Germany along with Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxemburg would integrate their armed forces into one unit with a high command under NATO plus a common general staff and common budget. This would involve some sacrifice of national sovereignty over the various national elements but would form a six-nation defense force of a standing 44 divisions. This force plus the added strength of the United States and Britain would act as a strong deterring factor in any plans the Soviet Union might have about starting World War III.



German contribution to this army would include six infantry divisions, four armored divisions and two motorized divisions, plus an air force of 1,500 planes and 80,000 men, and a 20,000 - man navy. By having EDC ratified this summer it has been estimated that Germany would have her 12 divisions and supporting naval and air units ready to more lote line by the middle of 1956.

Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and West Germany have so far been the only countries who have ratified the EDC Treaty, leaving Italy, who has been preoccupied with Yugoslavia over the support of Trieste, and France as the only two countries who have not. Once Italy and France put their stamp of approval on the treaty Germany will be able to turn out a flood of supplies for EDC. It would take West Germany a period of 12-18 months to start producing small arms and ammunition from a starting point with plans to three years to produce heavy equipment like tanks and planes.

Because of this uncertainty over the future of EDC the United States and many European political and military leaders have been forced to look for another solution toward West European defense. One such plan would be to grant Germany a 'Sovereign State' with a national army within the NATO framework. But again we run into France and her fear af an rearmed Germany.

Despite this uncertainty, one point has been agreed upon and that is some kind of German defense force must be created, if not as part of EDC then as a seperate unit. Both the French and Italian governments recognize this plus the fact that political and national pressure for and against rearmament has been building up inside West Germany while they have debated. They know the final decision rests with them and that it must come soon. It is ironical when one remembers that it was France who first suggested a European Defense Community.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS by Dick Sibler

"Wish this guy would sit further from the bell— he's a terror when he wakes up!"

Selective Service Called 'Bribery'

ATLANTA, Ga. (I.P.) — Branding Selective Service as a "form of bribery" that allows the best qualified to escape military service, President Blake R. Van Leer of Georgia Institute of Technology, a reserve Army officer since 1916, recently called for universal military training to "make everybody serve." Colonel Van Leer stated that "anybody who was any-body and wanted to" has been able to avoid the draft.

Colonel Van Leer said ROTC enrollment is the only "valid reason" for deferment of a student.

If you make people think they're thinking, they'll love you.

If you really make them think that they'll hate you. — Don Marquis

NEW BUILDINGS soon to become a part of the Florida State University campus are the general classroom building, top, which will accommodate 1500 students each semester, and the men's gymnasium, bottom, which will have a seating capacity of 5,000. Though only artists perspectives now, they are scheduled for construction beginning in "30 to 90 days."

Ground Soon to be Broken for New Buildings

Florida State University's "Fifty Year Plan" will become nearer realization soon, as ground is broken for new buildings costing nearly five million dollars.

Work will begin during "the next 30 to 60 days" on a general classroom building and a men's gymnasium, FSU Vice-President A. B. Martin revealed today. Shortly thereafter, construction is scheduled to begin on a new library and home economics building.

The newest surge of construction comes just as several other structures are being completed: the Geology building, the Demonstration School, and the new Westcott Auditorium.

Several departments have already moved into the Geology building across from the Student Center. New occupants include: the geology and geography departments, and parts of the departments of mathematics and sociology. The Demonstration School is scheduled for occupancy in September, and the auditorium will be used sometime after the first of November.

Most of the new construction will take place within a short distance of the Student Center, itself now an "old" campus building of several months seniority. The general classroom building will be located between Call and Tennessee streets across from Senior Hall. The Library will be on the north end of the green, facing Landis Hall. The men's gymnasium, on the other hand, will be situated about halfway between West Hall and the stadium.

"When finished, the men's gymnasium will be one of the most efficient physical education plants in the United States," says Dr. Howard Danford, head of the department of physical education for men and Director of Athletics. According to Dr. Danford, the building will be the result of several years of planning, including the study of many buildings on other campuses.

Tentative plans call for a six-lane bowling alley, locker rooms, nine classrooms, four handball courts, 24 offices, a student lounge, a gymnastic area, a wrestling room, and three full length courts for basketball and other sports. The main floor, more than four times larger than in the present women's gym, will be equipped with special folding bleachers, seating 5,000 people, that fold into the wall when not in use.

Outside dimensions of the building will be 321 by 154 feet. The appropriation made by the legislature for its planning and construction was $2,100,000.00.

The general classroom building is planned to accomodate about 1,500 students each semester. Some of the departments to be housed in the building, according to tentative plans, are bacteriology, botany, the Oceanographic Institute, physiology, and zoology.

Flexibility will be the keynote of the new classroom building. Tentative plans call for 25 lecture-laboratory rooms, and a 150-seat auditorium-type room for large lecture classes. The building will be three stories high on one end and two stories high on the other, in order to take advantage of the sloping terrain. Appropriation for the building was $750,000.

We Must End the Horse Thief Menace!

Editor's Note: The author is a Chicago attorney, who was in 1951-53 Chairman of the Committee on Civil Rights of the Chicago Bar Association. His essay was originally published in the Chicago Bar Record and appears here with permission of the Saturday Review.

BY EDWIN A. ROTHSCHILD

The horse thieves must be stopped. No state has effective laws to stop them. In Illinois, for example, the only statute directed at horse thieves is the Act of March 2, 1875 (Ill. Rev. Stat., ch. 38, sec. 297), which provides as follows:

Horse stealing. Whoever feloniously takes or steals any horse, mule, or ass shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than three nor more than twenty years. The words "horse," "mule," "ass" shall include animals of both sexes (1) and all ages.

This law is inadequate. It punishes no one except the person who has been caught stealing a horse. The typical horse thief does not get caught stealing horses. He steals horses without getting caught or else he does not steal horses at all. Either device enables him to slip through the loopholes of the present law.

A new law is essential. We need a law which defines the thief as well as the horse. We need a law which will expose horse thieves and drive them from public life. A bill for such a law is drawn herewith.

Section 1. Definitions

(a) "Horse" means each and every animal which can be classified as a horse, including but not limiting the generality of the foregoing, plough horses, saddle horses, cow ponies, milk horses, race horses, mules, burros, asses, donkeys, ponies, colts, nags, mustangs, and every other horse of every kind, nature, and handicap whatsoever, of any one or more sexes (2), sizes, weights, ages, races, creeds, colors, or combinations thereof.

(b) "Horse thief" means any person who steals, attempts to steal, or aids in the stealing of a horse, or advocates, abets, advises, or teaches by any means any person to steal, attempt to steal, or aid in the stealing of a horse, or in the commission of any act intended to facilitate the stealing of horses, or who is a member of or affiliated with any horse-thief front organization.

(c) "Horse-thief front organization" means any organization, corporation, company, partnership, association, trust, foundation, fund, club, society, committee, political party, gang, or any group of persons, whether or not incorporated, permanently or temporarily associated together for action or advancement of views on any subject or subjects, one of the purposes of which is advocating, abetting, advising, or teaching the desirability of any action, advocacy, abetting, advice, or instruction, which will advance or facilitate in any material respect the stealing of horses.

Under this section no one will be able to deny he is a horse thief merely because he has not stolen a horse.

Section 2

It shall be a felony to be a horse thief.

This is preventive jurisprudence. It is folly to wait for the commission af a crime before restraining the criminal. Why lock the stable after the horse is stolen?

Section 3

Any person convicted of violating Section 2 shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary for not less than fifteen or more than one hundred years.

This is five times as effective as the present law (5).

Section 4

No person shall hold any office of trust or profit within the state or be employed by any agency of the state or by any agency receiving tax exemption from or paying taxes to the state unless he shall take the following oath:

"I swear (or affirm) that I am not now and never have been and will not in, during my term of office or employment, a horse thief, a crypto-horse thief, (4) or associated in any way with any agency heretofore or hereafter designated as a horse-thief front organization by any federal, state, county, or municipal official."

This is a very effective provision. It is a well-known fact that no horse thief would dare to take a false oath. Other people should be proud to swear that they are not horse thieves. (5).

Section 5

No person presently employed within the state shall be continued in employment unless he shall establish beyond a reasonable doubt that he is not suspected of being a horse thief.

Since this is not a criminal provision, it is proper to place the burden of proof upon the employe. Who knows better than he whether or not he is a horse thief? People who work for either people should be above suspicion.

Section 6

All other laws on the subject shall be continued in force.

Two laws are better than one (6).

Section 7

This law may be cited as the Anti-Horse-Thief Act of 1953.

What kind of people do you think would oppose an anti-horse-thief act?

(1) Some people steal gallstones.

(2) See footnote (1).

(3) Sentimentalists may say that this section is severe. Have the sentimentalists thought of what the horse thieves would do if they were in power?

(4) One who, if he had seen a horse and could have stolen it, would have liked to. Webster, 3rd ed.

(5) They should also be proud to swear that they are not pickpockets, burglars, Communists, men, murderers, anarchists, or traffic violators. Appropriate legislation is recommended.

We have had fun working with and for you and hope that you have had some fun too. In the spring we thought of you as Eager Beavers and took that as the theme for our booklet. Now that we have seen the enormous piles of work which you have done on the desks of your professors: we know that our theme was not ill chosen. For those of you leaving this week end may we say again, "Come back for Homecoming". For those of you remaining may we remind you that if you have a birthday we are still celebrating them at 10 p.m. on Saturday nights at the Student Center.

Flambeau Reporter Inquires, Uncovers Opinions of Paper

Pencil and paper in hand, tongue in cheek, I wandered over the campus to gather ideas and smatter ering suggestions on the appearance of the new SUMMER FLAMBEAU,

Susan Weisenbarger, sophomore, commented on the general appearance of the paper by stating she was "very pleased". The improvement in make-up was remarkable. Lets have more features in future issues."

A junior in the school of education saw the funny side of it. Said Nancy Hudson, "I am glad to see the cartoons in it". She continued, "the staff is doing an excellent job."

Enoch Hanna, a sophomore, also commented on the appearance. "I was much impressed by The SUMMER FLAMBEAU. It shows a great improvement."

Jimmy Geoghagan remarked that the articles are now of "greater" student interest. "Keep in the articles that we the students are interested in."

A statement was finally made regarding the editorial page. Barbara Miller said, "I was most interested in the article about current race questions by Tom Woods."

Gene Crawford, school of business sophomore also commended the summer staff for the "excellent" first issue.

Indian Gridmen to Start Autumn Workouts

One Hundred Expected For September Opening

Over one hundred gridders are expected to be on hand when Florida State University opens its Fall practice session here on September. The Seminoles will have less than three weeks to prepare for their September 18 opening encounter with the University of Georgia. FSU is unable to open its drills earlier due to a recent NCAA rule prohibiting all member schools from beginning football practice before September.

Coach Tom Nugent's tentative plans call for three workouts daily in addition to lecture and movie instruction. Present plans call for a rotating session plan whereby each candidate will attend two on-field sessions per day.

All men reporting for practice will be expected to be in good physical condition. It is highly possible that a portion of the first day's schedule will be devoted to scrimmage.

Head Coach Nugent's staff will be composed of Vaughan Mencha, Winston Siegfried, Vince Raquinas, Bob Harbison, and Mike Long, all of whom were present at the Seminole school last season. It is also expected that a new assistant coach will join the staff in the near future. The identity of the new member has not been disclosed as of yet.

The daily schedule at present is set to begin at 7 a.m. with breakfast. From 9 to 10 a.m. will be devoted to a lecture ora movie. At 10 the first on-field session will begin. Lunch will be served to the gridders at twelve. Between 2 and 3 p.m. another lecture or movie will be presented. Another on-field workout is stated for 3 - 5:30 p.m. The boys will be served dinner at six. At 8 p.m. a lecture or film is scheduled prior to the final workout at 9. The entire schedule at present is only tentative and subject to change.

Twenty-two lettermen of the 1953 season are expected to be among those reporting. Lettermen include Ends: - Jimmy Lee Taylor, and Bud Leonard; Tackles - Bob Barber, Don Powell, Jim Olsen, Al Makowiecki, and Ray Staab; Guards - Jerry Jacobs, Eddie Johnson, Dale Bates, and Al Pacifico; Center - Bob Crenshaw; Quarterbacks - Lee Corso, Harry Massey, and Len Swantic; Half-Backs - Buck Metts, John Grimer, Carl Green, Billy Graham, and Stan Doboz; Fullbacks - Ronnie King and Joe Holt.

Seminole Spotlight

Emerson, Nugent, & Optimism

Emerson once wrote, "They can conquer who believe they can." In 1953, soon after arriving in Tallahassee to become FSU's head football coach, Tom Nugent delivered an address to a student welcoming rally. In his talk Coach Nugent made a statement, "There is magic in believing."

In mustering my optimism for the 1954 grid campaign I find it a much easier job than I experienced in '53. I can remind myself of the 22 returning lettermen and the other promising graduates from the reserve and red-shirt team. In fact it seems that FSU has capable and experienced men fitted for every position on the field.

The ends will be especially strong. Left end Jimmy Lee Taylor picked on last season's All-Florida and Little All-American teams is returning. At Right End the leading candidate at present appears to be big 6 foot 7 inch Tom Feamster. Feamster, a 245-pound giant sat out last season on the reserve squad after transferring from William & Mary. As a W & M freshman Tom drew All-American mention. Other promising candidates for ends include letterman Bud Leonard, Robert Green, Cinco Gibson, and Jimmy Trade. All were on hand for drills last spring.

Junior Jerry Jacobs and Sophomore Al Pacifico seem to be leading the rush for the Guard assignments. Both are lettermen. Returning Guards include versatile Eddie Johnson, Dale Bates and Charlie Jacobs. Jacobs and Johnson are two-year lettermen.

Harry Massey, a senior, leads experienced Sophomores Lee Corso and Len Swantic for the Quarterback position. All three are returning lettermen. Massey completed 31 for 91 passes for 480 yards and 4 touchdowns in 1953. Corso completed 14 of 33 attempts for 142 yards and Swantic 9 of 24 for 265 yards. All appear very capable field generals.

The Seminoles have a large repertoire of outstanding halfbacks. Lefthalf Buck Metts last season gained 381 yards on 56 rushes for a 6.8 yard average per carry. After the VMI game he was selected Florida's "Back of the Week." Righthalf Billy Graham is an extremely potent open field weapon. Veteran fullbacks John Grimer, Carl Green and Stan Doboz are all top caliber Grimer and Green are likely to be offensive standouts.

Fullback will include lettermen Ronnie King and Joe Holt and transfer Gene Cox. All are powerful runners. It is impossible to pick a leading candidate among the trio. It is also possible that John Grimer will be called upon to play this position rather than halfback.

Kennedy Is Observer To NSA Meet

Delegate Promises Impartial Report Of NSA Next Fall

Dave Kennedy, Chairman of Florida State University's first Summer Council, was designated by that body this Wednesday as an official observer to the National Student Congress at Ames, Iowa, August 22 through 31.

Kennedy was elected at the regular Council meeting, by a vote of 9-2 over Ken Catlin, member of the 1954-55 Student Senate. Kennedy will be able to make use of the full $100 appropriated this spring by the Student Senate to defray expenses of an observer.

In a formal statement to the Flambeau, Kennedy said: "I appreciate the privilege of representing FSU at the NSA convention in August. I have no prejudice or preconceptions about the National Student Association; when I arrive at Ames, Iowa, I will impartially investigate NSA. I hope to return in the Fall with a complete evaluation of NSA and some concrete recommendations about whether or not FSU would profit by affiliation."

Other business at the meeting included a discussion of the Honor System and its application to the summer session. Several Councilmen complained of cheating on exams, particularly by older students who attended during the summer session only.

On a motion by Roy Chapman, chairman pro tempore, the Flambeau was directed to print a notice to the effect that the Honor Pledge is effective during the summer session.

Summer Council amended the Student Body Constitution, which lists the powers ordinarily granted to Honor Court during the regular session.

Councilman Russell Johnson brought up the question of University regulations concerning day dogs. He reported that he had seen them loitering and that it was possible rules could be liberalized. A special committee composed of Johnson and Betty Hobson was appointed to investigate.

Picknickers Hear Choral Union At Reservation

Over 500 students, faculty and members of their families gathered at the FSU camp, The Reservation, last night to enjoy an annual picnic and hear a program given by the Choral Union.

The choral group, under the direction of Herman Gunter, Jr., sang on the pier, decorated with colored palms, as Lake Bradford reflected the surround scenery. The later gave the voices special amplification and the twilight hour was a most especially suited for the special program.

The program began with an arrangement of "How Can I Leave Thee" by Roy Ringwald, with soloist Evelyn Freemont and Shirley Traxler.

Selection Rendered

In the second part of the program were "I Thou But Suffered To Guide Thee," "Jesus, Priceless Treasure," "Agnus Dei," "How Lovely is Thy Dwelling Place," "Music When Soft Voices Die, "The Island," "Old Abram Brown," "Monotone," and "The Curtains of Night."

In the third part of the program was an arrangement by Maurice Gardner of "I Am A Poor Wayfaring Stranger." Others were Spiritual Suite" "I Believe Children," and "I Have A Mother in the Heavens," with soloist Joan Warren and Richard Warren. The last number in the third part of the program was a quartet with Jean Conner, Joan Childers, Jim Clark and Eric Berg.

Johnson Heads Plan

Lastly were "Some Little Maid," "I Love My Love," "John Henry," and "Cindy." Councilman Johnson for the picnic were Miss Lill Johnson and Miss Sue Herndon. Professor Jack Hamlin's class in recreation headed the committees for food service, ticket sales and entertainment.

Miss Christine PSimer, head of summer recreation, stated that the annual affair was very successful and many of the attendants reported to her a very enjoyable evening.

Station WFSU Back on Air at New Studio

By LOU MERRITT

Tallahassee's newest radio station on the air.

Emanating from modern studios in the basement of the Music Building, WFSU-FM has a summer broadcast schedule of four hours each day - - from 2 to 6 p.m., seven days a week.

In charge of scheduling each day's program of music is Mrs. Sara French, assistant to station director Roy Flynn, head of the Communications and Radio dept. Mrs. French makes use of transcriptions, LP's, the music from Broadway shows and musicales, and the department's large library of tape-recorded concerts and recitals given at FSU.

The new station has a wide range of facilities at its command.

Its stereo, modern air conditioned studios are high-ranking among stations of comparable size anywhere in the country. The pride and joy of the campus station is the new Collins dual channel console. In addition, there are new Gates turntables playing records of any speed: 78, 45, or 33⅓ rpm.

AT THE WFSU-FM CONSOLE is Rick Hatto, FSU senior. Hatto is acting as chief announcer of the new broadcasting music four hours daily, from 2 to 6 p.m.

WFSU-FM provides an excellent proving ground for would-be announcers. All the announcing is done by FSU students interested in radio and television work. Rick Hatto, former student station manager, is now acting as chief announcer. In the fall, students will be given an opportunity to gain practical experience in announcing, acting, programming, production, and management.

One thing is conspicuously lacking about this new station: Commercials. There have been no complaints about this so far, and none are expected.

Clearer reception on the -FM band is an acknowledged fact. However, very exact tuning is required. Many fail to be aligned by a radio repairman for good reception in a particular area. The difference between good reception and poor reception lies in careful tuning, set alignment, and good aerial.

Efforts are being made to install FM radios in all the dormitories, and sorority and fraternity houses. Radio personnel are also investigating the possibilities of inexpensive adapters to attach to standard, AM radios.

With the beginning of the fall session, WFSU-FM will be on the air from 2 to 10 pm. The station operates on an assigned frequency of 91.5 megacycles.

Former PTA Head Says That Home Decides World Future

Calling herself a hyphen between parent and teacher organizations, Mrs. Edith McBride Camerun addressed a large audience of area representatives, who are primarily interested in the education and welfare everyday problems and becoming citizens in the world.

Home Decides Future

"Actually the future of the whole world is decided at home in deciding on the welfare of children, our greatest national resource," Mrs. Cameron said.

As a climax to the morning and afternoon workshops today, a general meeting is scheduled for 3:15 this afternoon in the FSU science Lecture Hall. "Promising Practices in Parent-Teacher Cooperation" will be discussed with a number of state and area resource people in the field participating. The meeting is free and open to the general public.

Dr. W. T. Edwards, Dr. Marian Black and Dr. Mildred Swearingen of the FSU School of Education will round the committee which set up the area conference for better parent and teacher understanding and cooperation.

PAPA IS DEAD—Or so everyone thinks. Emma (Jane Nicell), left, is overjoyed when Jake (Eb Thomas) tells her that papa is dead. Actually, however, Jake confesses will witness this scene next Thursday and Saturday. Curtain time for both performances is 8:15.

Karl Becomes Acting Head Of Art Dept

Dr. Adolph Karl, associate professor of art at Florida State University at Tallahassee, has been appointed acting head of the Department of Art, Dr. Doak S. Campbell, FSU president, announced recently.

Dr. Karl replaces Edmund Lewandowski who resigned recently to become head of the Layton School of Art, Milwaukee, Wisc.

Dr. Karl came to FSU in 1949 as acting associate professor of art. Before coming to FSU he was head of the Department of Arts and Crafts at Teachers College Mayville, N. D. From 1946 to 1948 he was director of the art staff at New York University.

He received his BS degree in art education in 1942; his MA degree in history of art at the State University of Iowa, and his Ph.D in New York University in 1953.

Dr. Karl is a member of the Southeastern College Art Conference and past president of the Tallahassee Art League. He is an historian specializing in American and contemporary painting. His doctoral dissertation was on the "New York Realists," American painters of the early 20th century.

Music Camp Ends

The Florida State University Summer Music Camp will give its Final Concert in the Amphitheater tonight at 7:30 p.m., climaxing its 13th year.

The concert will be in seven parts with six different organizations and groups will participate.

Leading the program will be the Summer Music Camp Chorus, conducted by Dr. Robert Bennett, Jr., assisted in their performance will be Richard Kounz' THE SONG OF MAN; A DREAM IS A WISH YOUR HEART MAKES arranged by Rawley Ades; and Clay Warnick's arrangement of SWEET GEORGIA BROWN.

Part two of the program will be an exhibition by the Baton Twirling Class, directed by Mrs. Danna Koziz.

The Summer Camp Dance Band will make their appearance thirdly in the program. Directed by William Helston they will play Erskine Hawkins' TUXEDO JUNCTION; LITTLE BROWN JUG arranged by Bill Finnegan; and ELKS PARADE by Bobby Sherwood.

Fourth in the program will be the presentation of awards and certificates by Dr. K. O. Kuersteiner, Director of the Summer Music Camp and Dean of the FSU School of Music.

Following the recognitions will be parts I (MARCH) and III (TIROLESE) of Rossini's SOIREES MUSICALES arranged by Benjamin Britten; and Cole Porter's KISS ME KATE arranged by Robert Bennett. Featured soloists will be played by the Summer Music Camp Orchestra, directed by Eugene Crabb.

Part six on the program will be the Summer Music Camp Gold Band, conducted by Manley Whitcomb and Oliver Hobbs. Under the direction of members of the band they will play Haydn's OVERTURE ORLANDO PALADRINO arranged by M. Dworkin; and BRADLEY BALADE IN D MINOR (EDWARD) arranged by Harold Walters. Under Hobbs' direction, the band will play STEPHEN FOSTER RHAPSODY arranged by Long; and SELECTIONS FROM "ME AND JULIET" by Rodgers and Hammerstein and arranged by Robert B. Benett.

The program's conclusion will be by the Summer Music Camp Garnet Band, conducted by Oliver Hobbs and Manley Whitcomb. Hobbs will conduct the band as they play Franz Bertios' OVERTURE BEATRICE AND BENEDICT arranged by Fenna Henning; and MARCH OF THE STEEL MEN by Charles Beisterling.

Fla Charter Inadequate Says Parker

"The present Florida Constitution reflects the confusion of the Reconstruction era," stated Miss Daisy Parker Tuesday night in another of the programs being sponsored this summer by Kappa Delta Pi, Phi Delta Kappa, and the School of Education.

Miss Parker told her audience in the Longmire auditorium that many of the detailed provisions of the first Florida Constitution have been carried down to the present document, despite four complete revisions since then.

Florida was a quite different state even when the present Constitution was adopted in 1885. According to Miss Parker, at that time there were 43 counties and the entire state had a population of a little more than 300,000. The present populous counties of Dade, Broward and Palm Beach contained a total of 335 people.

Many Curious Errors

Many curious errors have crept into the state Constitution, stated Miss Parker. For example, in one section it reads "air and comfort to enemies," in stead of "aid". There are three sections number 48.

Miss Parker attributed the deficiencies of the present Constitution to the fact that the legislators have very little time in their 60-day session to do more than pass necessary appropriations, seven amendments will be submitted to the people for ratification this November.

"The voters of Florida are Constitution - makers," Miss Parker stated, since any amendment must be ratified in a general election to become effective "However, it has been said that a rate of amendment it will take 52 years to completely revise the Constitution."

Miss Parker spoke of the fact that LeRoy Collins, who will take office as Governor in January, has outlined a plan for a Constitutional revision commission, which will draw the entire Constitution to be revised without the legislature acting on a large number of separate amendments.

Present Difficulties

One of the difficulties with the present Constitution is the way in which it details all legislative, judicial and executive functions. This is in contrast to the federal Constitution, which gives only a broad outline. The Federal Constitution has been amended only 22 times in almost 170 years, whereas the Florida Constitution has suffered 89 amendments just in 1885.

The next lecture in the series will be given by Andre Van Asselberg, Professor of Professional Medical Science. He will speak on "Southeast Asia and Pacific Emergency," at 7 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.

Episcopals Have Wakulla Party

A swimming party and watermelon cutting at Wakulla Springs has been planned for Episcopal students this Sunday, according to Chaplain Morley. The group will leave Sage Hall at 2:30 pm Sunday, it was announced.

John McGowan is serving as Chairman of the Canterbury Club this summer, and Spencer Roads is acting as treasurer.

Delta Zeta, Sigma Chi Wins Honors

Delta Zeta Social Sorority and Sigma Chi Social Fraternity retained their titles as leaders in scholarship among Greek groups, according to a recent report from the Dean of Men and Dean of Women.

The sororities, according to rank and averages are as follows. Delta Zeta 1.8595; Alpha Gamma Delta 1.8119; Pi Beta Phi 1.7937; Zeta Tau Alpha 1.7920; Chi Omega 1.7415; Kappa Alpha Theta 1.7065; Kappa Delta 1.6885; Alpha Xi Delta 1.6691; Phi Mu 1.6572; Delta Gamma 1.6479; Alpha Chi Omega 1.6466; Delta Delta Delta 1.6174; Alpha Omicron Pi 1.6160; Sigma Kappa 1.5884; Gamma Phi Beta 1.5189; and Alpha Delta Pi 1.4617.

Fraternity overall averages and rank were: Sigma Chi 1.6683; Theta Chi 1.2968; Phi Delta Theta 1.2239; Lambda Chi Alpha 1.2740; Alpha Tau Omega 1.2350; Delta Tau Delta 1.1749; Kappa Sigma 1.1646; Sigma Nu 1.1429; Phi Kappa Tau 1.1303; Sigma Phi Epsilon 1.1182; Pi Kappa Phi 1.0727; Pi Kappa Alpha 1.0686; Kappa Alpha 1.0781; Sigma Alpha Epsilon 1.0669; and Tau Epsilon Phi 9932.

Although Delta Zeta was not in first place the first semester of this year, its over-all average won them the annual Pan Hellenic trophy for scholarship.

Jared Reed, 'Ballad' Singer, To Appear At FSU Tuesday In Next Artist Series' Program

Program at 8:15

FOLK SINGER WHO REALLY SINGS...In the earned title of Jared Reed, pictured as he will appear here Tuesday night in the Amphitheater, playing and singing songs America loves, the work songs, ballads, songs of adventure and ballads of the New World and those brought from the Old World to the New.

Jared Reed, American folk singer recently lauded by the THE DENVER POST as "one of the freshest entertainers ever offered in the region," will appear as the Third Artist Series program here in the Amphitheater Tuesday night at 8:15.

Born in South Carolina and having choice theater opportunities throughout the country all of his life, Jared is one member of a family associated in many phases of theatrical activity. His mother, known professionally as Isadora Bennet, has been publicist for Ballet Theatre and other artistic groups and performers who tour the country.

When Jared was a child his father, Donald Reed (now one of television and Broaway's favorite character actors) built and directed the Town Theatre in Jared's native Columbia, later became a director of the Eastman Theatre in Rochester, N. Y., and on the Warner lot in Hollywood. It was during these years we ndJared had the opportunity to travel all over the country with his family that he started to build a repertoire of folk songs from among all the regions he passed through.

Naturally along with this itinerant life, Jared encountered innumerable schools in varied regions of the country, the most important being Christ School in Arden, N. C., where the Blue Ridge and the Smokies meet. Others were Riverdale Country School on the outskirts of Manhattan's skyscrapers and Wake Forest College in the heart of North Carolina's tobacco land.

When he entered the Marine Corps as a private, Reed was to realize the many years of wandering, emerging from this, however, as a first lieutenant with a bag full of songs swapped with Aussies and our other Allies in the Pacific during World War II.

Following his service career, Jared, along with his sister Bunny, also a folk singer made their debut into the theatrical world. They appeared on Broadway in such musicals as "Texas Li'l Darlin' " and Paint Your Wagon." Critical, unpretentious art delighted listeners in such top Manhattan supper clubs as the Bitter End, the Limelight Blue, The Penthouse Club and The Village Vanguard. His concerts at Carnegie Hall and Town Hall have become an annual affair just as his night club and radio and TV appearances have become regular events.

The reddish-blonde, blue-eyed, freckled folk singer's first love is singing the work songs, play songs, songs of adventure and ballads of the New World and those brought from the Old World to the New.

The best description of Reed's kind of entertainment and his performance can perhaps be summed up from what VARIETY has proclaimed: His performance, they said, "... should establish him as a name in this field. He has an excellent collection of Old English, Irish and American folksongs as well as spirituals. All are given a high degree of feeling and styling. His guitar accompaniment is full-bodied and gives substance to his songs ... able to deliver the deeper and higher tones with true pitch and intensity."

Mediocrity has no greater consolation than in the thought that genius is not immortal.—Goethe.

Flambeau Plans Are Vague According To Gene Lawler

Flambeau publication plans for the remainder of the summer session are somewhat indefinite, Editor-in-chief Gene Lawler announced today.

"We are sorry for the inconvenience it caused when we cancelled last week's issue," Lawler stated. We definitely plan to go ahead with an issue for next week."

Last week's decision not to publish followed a failure by the Summer Flambeau staff in obtaining cancellation of contract with the printers. "Under the circumstances," said Lawler, "it was just asking too much of the staff to go ahead with the issue. The decision not to publish was unanimous among the senior staff."

Staff members have protested to the decision. Assistant Editor had difficulty in printing at Dye Press, Inc., its new publishers. Dye won the summer contract this spring by underbidding the Tallahassee Democrat.

After hearing Lawler explain the reason for changing the publication schedule to omit last week's issue, Summer Council endorsed the Flambeau action by a vote of 6-2. The two dissenting Council members were Jimmy Soles and Russell Johnson.

Following the meeting Soles stated, "I think that all staff of the Flambeau have an obligation to fulfill and it is up to them to carry it out—no matter how difficult."

Speakers Win S. E. High School Institute Awards

Eight winners in the first annual Southeastern Summer High School Speech Institute on the campus of Florida State University in Tallahassee, were announced yesterday by institute director D. Thomas R. Lewis, professor of speech.

First place in debate went to John Daniels and Ruby Combs of Miami Jackson High. Miss Combs was undefeated. Second place in debate was won by Louis Tidwell and Charles Willard of Plant High in Tampa. Doreen Thomas and Leverne Reeds, also of Miami Jackson High, placed third in debate.

Daniels as judged the best individual debater.

Miss Tidwell placed first in original oratory. Miss Thomas and Miss Combs were second and third.

Daniels was first in extemporaneous speaking, Miss Combs second, Miss Tidwell third and Willard fourth.

ANNUAL DANCE HEADS TONIGHTS RECREATION

Cawthon Hall Patio will be the center of recreation tonight, with the annual Mid-Summer Night Dance, from 9 until 12.

Miss Mary Lou Harrelson, spokesman for the dance committee, said that the dance is to be semiformal, that refreshments will be served during the dance and that it will be free to all students and other members of the campus.

Music for the dance will be by "The Devilairs."

Hear Ye! Hear Ye!

Taking advantage of its official prerogatives, namely Article 14, section 41 of the Student Body Constitution, Summer Council this week notified the Flambeau to make the following announcement: Article IV, section 10 is binding on summer session students.

In simpler terms, this means that all students are reminded that the Honor Pledge applies to students during the summer session, as well as to the winter, when Honor Court is in session.

Florida Faces Up To Necessity Of Living With Court Decision

"The highest Court of the land, the guardian of our national conscience, has reaffirmed its faith—and the undying American faith, in the equality of all men and children before the law."

This is the opinion of the New York Times toward the Supreme Court ruling outlawing school segregation. This is also the opinion, more or less, of a majority of the citizens of the United States.

Because of this public support, there is little likelihood of a reversal, from any quarter, of the new doctrine set down by the nine unanimous Justices in Washington. The question for the South, therefore, is how to live with the ruling, how to adjust to a reversal of centuries-old folkways.

We in Florida can be proud that our state has had no emergency legislative sessions, that there have been few wild and inflammatory statements. Instead, the question is being approached with calmness and intelligence. Witness the Attorney General's Advisory Committee, on which Florida State University is playing such an important role.

Our prediction is that the end of segregation will come more quickly than many native Floridians suppose. Nevertheless, the next few months and years will be trying. It is fortunate that Florida has a more cosmopolitan and tolerant population than most areas of the South.

But Florida is only part of the picture. Our progress will be marked along with that of a dozen other states. We cannot speak for themselves. The Flambeau reprints below the editorial comments of student newspapers of three of the most highly respected Southern Universities.

Texas . . .

The Supreme Court decision to end segregation in the schools was one of the best public relations moves that the United States has made. The country's stature increased throughout the world with this step toward the Constitutional promise of "free and equal" status.

The court's decision to wait until October before specific details are stated was not only wise but a necessary one. The new decision to wait even longer is undoubtedly an extra precautionary measure; it will give more time to get various thinking on the best way to proceed. A short period of readjustment to the new system, a cooling-off time for those people who violently disagree with the ruling in a needed preface to the long period of readjustment that lies in the future.

There will be attempts to avoid mixed classes in the states that are strongly affected by the ruling. Georgia's threat to change to a private school system is a hit drastic, but shows the strength of the Georgian sentiments. In many cases, zoning will function so that mixed classes will not occur. Other methods of separation will undoubtedly be devised.

The adjustment period will be a long and discouraging one. Negro children who will be affected may well dread the coming years more than the most prejudiced Southerner—they will be unacknowledged martyrs for the future equality of their race. Those who first feel either the open hostility of classmates or the kind of subtle inner fear that becomes a part of members of minority groups may look forward to one of the most terrifying experiences children could endure.

The final solution to the problem of ending educational discrimination is not found in any arbitrary rulings. That's merely the beginning, the opened door. The real answer lies, as in most problems, in education. This is the part of the process that will take such a tragically long time.

Only when children can go to school without an instilled idea that there are differences other than in pigmentation, only when Negro children can go to school without considering their attendance as either a privilege or an ordeal but merely a matter of course will there be equality. The prejudices of today's adults are too firmly implanted to change because of a court decision. But—with proper education, these prejudices need not be realized by the adults of tomorrow.

—The Summer Texan,
University of Texas.

North Carolina . . .

Southern schools, this University among them, must now face the truth—that "separate but equal" is a meaningless phrase, that places of learning, if separate, are inherently unequal.

We hold this one—like those other great truths declared in our Constitution—to be self-evident: It is time to stop postponing brotherhood. This is a time for the turning of thought and opinion into wide, new channels, a time for the yielding of old prejudices and ignorance and hatred before the patient and powerful light of Christianity.

South Carolina's Governor Byrnes and many like him in the South, many of them our friends and people we love, now stand eclipsed. Their South is gone, or it is going, and the bitterness and antagonism no longer seem very significant, though we do not deny that there is bitterness yet to be overcome before perfect equality is achieved, even in North Carolina, even in Chapel Hill. It is simply that the path is now very clear indeed, and if the Southern states and the University, three is no other path, though we be emotionally reluctant at first to follow it.

—The Daily Tar Heel,
University of North Carolina.

Alabama . . .

Segregation will continue in Alabama for some time. Reform will be a gradual process, not sudden. However, there is not a signal for 'hot-heads' to scatter their own peculiar brand of hell. There are some of us who are outraged merely for the sake of notoriety.

Here on our campus, liberalism extends beyond the boundaries of that exemplified by the population of the state. Racial equality has occurred in the armed services without violence. Likewise, there will be very little antagonism over the mingling of minds on an educational problem.

A True Tale of Chivalry Told for Moderns

The following tale is true. If the incidents seem unrelated, it is because the success of the story depends not on well-defined historical passage, but on the use of each device.

Many hundred years ago, when Knighthood was in flower, there was a little boy living on a farm. Now, Jacques, as the little boy is called, had poor dead Don Quixote so he thought that the most fabulous thing in the orld was to be a Knight and carry ladies' favors at the end of spears, killing dragons and abd knights.

Jacques' father was a peasant and thought the boy quite off his nut, but through a stroke of luck or something, Jacques became the page of the boy his age by being allowed to enter the Baron's Castle as a page.

The life of a page was a hard one, but Jacques didn't care. He still had dreams of someday becoming a knight, and this was only a first step. While in the castle, Jacques met many other pages, but most of these were sons of other Barons and Dukes and Earls and Counts so they didn't care too much for him. Besides, these other pages were much richer than he was.

But Jacques never gave up trying. After his work was done, he would sneak off on a horse and imitate the Knights. He had many falls, but soon, through his unfailing efforts, he became quite a horseman. One of the Knights finally felt kindly towards him and allowed Jacques to use the use of his sword. Jacques was fast becoming a man, and he practiced fighting by himself and with his Knight friend.

One evening, a neighboring Baron who had just lost his only son, came to the Castle where Jacques was and came upon Jacques in his secret practices. The Baron admired the boy and took him with him to his own castle, where Jacques was given ample and careful instructions in killing dragons and bad Knights.

Jacques had worked hard, but now he enjoyed the favor of the court and didn't want to waste all his time practicing. He would overlook his lessons and go carousing with the other Knights when they were off duty.

Soon, however, the Baron, thinking Jacques quite ready to defend his honor, fixed no joust between Jacques and a younger Knight. The joust was the downfall of Jacques. Quite tired from his night-life and not prepared, he lost the joust and barely made a showing. The Baron was angry and hurt. Jacques had accepted his help and had done him wrong, and Jacques was expelled from the court and the Baron locked himself to ride his wounded pride.

Jacques though all this was just one of those things and he had gained more than those around him so he still questioned it over the peasants. Soon, however, he noted that his friends didn't think that was enough. They didn't think him capable of doing anything. Jacques knew that wasn't true. He could do it, he just hadn't felt like it. Several weeks passed, and Jacques was starting to feel out of place at home. He knew his place was in the

Woods Speaks of the Woods

So far during the summer this columns has been focused on such points of interest as war, crime, and national affairs. This week, however, I am ready for a change of pace. The inspiration for this bit of tranquility comes from an excerpt of a poem from Wordsworth. I came across this in a book by Ralph McGill entitled The Fleas Come With the Dog, and it reads as follows:

The world is too much with us; late and soon,
Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers;
Little we see in nature that is ours;
We have given our hearts away, a sordid boon!
This sea that bares her bosom to the moon,
And are up-gathered now like sleeping flowers;
For this, for everything, we are out of tune;
It moves us not . . .

When I read this I thought of the millions of Americans who jump into their cars every week-end and race madly to the beaches, golf links, and various other crowded week-end resorts. Exhausted, sunburned, and suffering from the sore muscles typical of the week-end athlete, the average American returns home for a week's rest at the office.

Commercialized recreation is perhaps more typical of the American culture than any other. Such a situation usually arises with the combination of leisure time money, and a lack of imagination. We spend billions a year on gambling, drinking, and second rate movies. All of this because we are so frustrated by our desire to go to a certain place only to say we have been, to participate in a certain activity only because the Jones are doing it, and to escape reality by losing our identity in some crowd.

For the life-long city dweller I must express my pity. He has missed a great part of worthwhile things in life. It is in the city that the terms 'self enjoyment and monetary gain are synonymous. Even a business tycoon can rarely endure a week on his plush country estate without numbing his senses with alcohol. Truly, the most contented and happiest people I have ever known were country people. The people who live with nature and derive their entertainment from it are less likely to acquire the superficially and affectedness that is far too frequent in today's society. In fact, this reporter who inwitentially was country raised found himself falling into this superficial rut. In an effort to do something about it I plotted a return to nature. By accident, however, I came upon a place which had more real beauty about it than any (with the exception of Juniper Springs) I had encountered before. Many of you may have heard of Natural Bridge which is about twenty miles from Tallahassee. For someone raised in the North Florida swampland it was an overwhelming experience. It seemed that for the first time in my life I truly saw the exotic beauty of environment of my early youth. I, like many of us, had taken it for granted all my life and had never really seen it for the marvel of nature that it us.

Locarno vs. Anzus- Seato in Southeast Asia

With the signing of the Locarno Pact on October 16, 1925 in the quite Swiss town on Lake Maggiore, German-French and German-Belgian frontiers were guaranteed to be inviolable while the Rhineland was to be kept demilitarized. Germany, France and Belgium pledged never to war on one another and to settle all disputes peacefully. Shortly after this signing of the pact Germany joined the ill-fated League of Nations while the Allies withdrew from the Rhineland.

On March 7, 1936, eleven years later, Hitler declared the pact void and marched his troops into the demilitarized Rhineland. Comment on this action was made by England's new Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, "There is no reason to suppose the German action implies a threat of hostilities."

Two weeks ago this same Anthony Eden declared to a cheering House of Commons that a similar non-agression pact with Red China be signed. This pact would guarantee the present frontiers of communism and prevent us from taking advantage of a revolt in Red China, in order to recover lost parts of Indo-China and elsewhere, in practical everyday language this would mean our abandonment of Nationalist China on Formosa, the only formidable Chinese opposition to the Reds in China have to fear.

Along this same line the New French Premier, Pierre Mendes-France, and the Premier of Red China have met in Bern Switzerland to obtain a truce in Indo China. To achieve this truce France has been put on notice that she must give Laos and Cambodia complete independence with the right to secede from the French Union. Actually this means the neutralization of these two countries without the means of defense. In Vietnam, the largest and most populous of the three Indo-Chinese states, the French have indicated their willingness to agree to a partition near the 16th parallel but will fight for the port city of Haiphung in the Red River delta. They would also favor, if it could be worked out, a coalition government. An example of what happens to this type of government can be found in Czechoslovakia.

All this, along with the French abandonment of an entire zone of the Red River delta, a zone which includes 1,600 square miles of rich rice producing land and 2,500,000 people, points out that the same feeling of "Peace at any Price" is becoming prevalent once again in Europe as it did in 1938-39. A distinguished neutral diplomat in London recently said, "The atmosphere in this country is almost exactly as it was in September 1938. How do I know? I was here at the time of Munich."

To conclude this mood the

For Those Who Didn't Leave for the Fourth

The Tuesday after the Fourth you may have been one of the thousand(or-so travel-weary students who returned to campus after having spent several days at home basking in the sunlight, partying with old friends and neighbors, shooting fireworks on the Fourth, and/or enjoying good home cookin'. However, several hundred students who chose to remain amid the ivy-covered towers of the pine and palm studded FSU campus for various reasons ——home too far away, too much homework waiting, etc, etc. I shall devote all of this space to consoling those who did not leave campus and informing those of you who did venture out to the uttermost reaches of Leon County that a holiday campused isn't bad at all. In fact, it can be a most satisfying and restful experience.

Friday I stood in front of Westcott, tears mingling with the perspiration, and bade farewell to those of you who had chosen to sacrifice FSU Fourth festivities for a routine weekend at home. When the last car had disappeared over the crest of College Avenue, I eagerly headed toward the library to spend the remainder of the evening rummaging through the 1804 edition of Daily Rainfall in India hoping to find an ancient gnat which had been squashed by some ante-bellum damsel to add to my collection, and the old issues of Life magazine —— both most gratifying and time-passing occupations. My excitement mounted as I trotted toward the brick bookeris which housed that one-half of learning. Suddenly I was stricken with remorse and horror for there, tacked to the oaken doors, was a sign which foretold despair for me —— CLOSED FOR HOLIDAYS.

I was contemplating suicide at that moment, but I forced myself and resolved to find some other form of recreation. I was not going to give up so easily. How about feeding the gold fish in the Wescott fountain? No fish. Count the bricks on the south wall of the new auditorium? Uh - uh! Buy a cool drink in the Student Center? Ah, there was the rub. When I reached that air-conditioned oasis I found a score of happy, exiled students engaged in a fascinating game ——blowing straws over at the ceiling trying to hit the little holes. I was about to join the strong-lunged clique when the manager arrived on the scene and dissolved the sport. We dispersed —— each going to his lonely cubicle to invent some sort of non-academic form of recreation.

Saturday morning as I trudged through the humid, echo-filled emptiness of the Science Building an idea was conceived within my spacious cranial cavity. Why not stroll through the beautifully landscape and stadium "happy resting ground" on Park Street and study inscriptions. (It might uncover something useful. It did. My only concern was for that passerby who probably thought within himself that it was time for a vacation when he spied a lean, lanky fellow flitting from one tomb to tomb, stopping to read slab carvings, bending, straightening out, wiping a pair of black horn-rimmed glasses, and flitting on again. One surface-sizzling mona was inscribed with "SAY." She provided a quiet and comfortable resting spot before I decided to retreat to the cinema. It was Monday before I realized it. One bus driver, a hungry canine, and a six-year-old child had spoken to me. I had listened in vain for the sound of a fire-cracker. I watched the car-loads of tired students returning from home. It was at that moment that I made up my mind that when the next holiday came, I would leave the campus no matter how broke I was . . . Sopchoppy, Boca City, or Split Pea.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS — by Dick Bibler

Dear Editor:

In his column Jerome Bernstein approved the suggestion that Sen. McCarthy's investigation staff be "housecleaned" (i. e., fired.) The reason for his approval is that members of this staff are under suspicion for perjury.

Now as I have been given to understand, part of "McCarthyism" consists in equating suspicion with proof of guilt. Just who are the "McCarthyists" anyway?

And in this case, the suspicion is not very probable. The McCarthy story stood up much better under questioning than the Army story.

I suppose the "housecleansing" would extend to Frank Carr. But when asked what evidence they had of Mr. Carr's wrongdoing, the Army put up nothing.

Yours,
Van G. Peterson.

Florida Theater Presents Liz Taylor in 'Elephant Walk'

A lot of elephants, or more accurately a big lot, offers and exciting time at the Florida theater this weekend. There is not much new in the plot of Elephant Walk except the elephants. Liz Taylor plays a teacher who is brought to a jungle plantation by her husband, Peter Pinch. After some rocky comfort from dashing Dana Andrews because her husband has a "Father Fixation" and insists on building the plantation exactly on the elephants' water trail, after his late father's orders, they involves itself after a cholera epidemic and a stampede by the huge pachyderms. As far as acting and photography goes, this show is said to be best in town.

At the State theater there's a double feature. Audrey Totter plays the Woman they Almost Lynched. The other movie is Tropical Heat Wave, fortunately being shown in an airconditioned theater.

Both drive-ins have double bills for the weekend. At the Capitol there is Lawless Breed with Rock Hudson. Richard Widmark stars in Destination Gobi on the same bill.

At the Perry Highway Outdoor theater there is a science fiction thriller: Riders to the Stars, with Richard Carlson, plus Rob Roy with Walt Disney's Richard Todd.

Other movies for the coming week are Act of Love with Kirk Douglas and Dorothy Dandridge and the Gladiators (Florida); Prisoner of War with Ronald Reagan and Dana Andrews and Demetrius and the Gladiators (Florida); Prisoner of War with Ronald Reagan and Dana Andrews and Demetrius and the Gladiators (State); Keys to the Kingdom with Gregory Peck and Gentlemen Prefer Blondes with Marilyn Monroe, Betty Grable and Lauren Bacall (Capitol Drive In); Dangerous Mission with Victor Mature and Follow the Fleet with Fred Astaire.

Killian Acts as Coordinator

FSU Faculty Aid in Segregation Study

By GENE LAWLER

In two and a half short months Attorney General Richard Ervin will present a brief to the U. S. Supreme Court outlining Florida's recommendations for carrying out the epochmaking school segregation ruling.

Between now and October Mr. Ervin will depend on the advice of an Advisory Committee on which Florida State University is heavily represented.

Working full-time this summer as coordinator of research for Attorney General's Advisory Committee is Dr. Lewis Killian. Now "on loan" from the University, Dr. Killian is an associate professor of sociology during the regular session.

"One of the hardest things to do," says Dr. Killian, "is to make clear to people just what the function of this committee is. We sometimes hear ourselves referred to as 'the committee to preserve segregation' or 'the committee to do away with segregation.' Actually, we are only a fact-finding committee, and we don't even know what our report will read like yet."

The committee itself is composed of twenty members, including Ervin and Thomas Bailey, Superintendent of Public Instruction, as ex-officio members. Besides Killian, FSU is represented by Dean Ralph Eyman, Mode Stone, and Sarah Lon Hammond, all of the School of Education.

The committee plans to tap a number of sources of information for its report, which is scheduled to be turned over to Mr. Ervin's department in mid-August. Extensive work is being done to determine the attitudes of Florida citizens toward school segregation and the Court's ruling.

LOOKING OVER a few of the thousands of question-naries on school segregation returned to the office of the Advisory Committee are Dr. Lewis Killian, FSU sociologist, and Fay Tyler Norton, FSU graduate student in psychology. Dr. Killian is on special assignment from the University to act as coordinator of research for the Committee.

Dr. Killian's office in the basement of the Capitol building is filled with boxes of letters received from all parts of the state. These are the questionnaires returned by the thousands of civic leaders polled by mail for the survey: county and city officials, school officials, newspaper editors, radio station managers PTA presidents, Florida legislators, and a sampling of ministers.

A good return seems assured. And many of those questioned were interested enough to write a page or two of comments in addition ... sometimes with unintended meanings. Witness the Tallahassecan who replied: "Segregation is coming . . . but don't cram it down our throats. The South isn't ready for segregation yet."

Those who weren't on Dr. Killian's mailing list may still have an opportunity to express themselves—if they live in one of ten selected counties now being objected to intensive personal interviewing. "We selected these Florida counties as giving us a fair cross-section of the state," states Dr. Killian, "on the basis of urban development, geographic location, and composition of the population. They should represent a wide variety of situations in which the impact of the Court's decision may be felt."

The chosen ten are Duval, Lake, Lafayette, Orange, Pinellas, Washington, Gadsden, Hillsborough, Charlotte, and Escambia. Surveys are already being conducted in Dade and Palm Beach counties under the direction of Dr. Dan Larson of the University of Miami.

The questions being asked by the 16 specially trained interviewers are intended to determine what the leaders in these representative communities are thinking. They are not supposed to "sell" any particular solution or to express any personal opinions, according to the Attorney General.

After the opinions of thousands of Florida citizens have been obtained, there comes the job of evaluating and organizing into statistics. Here again FSU enters the picture in the form of the Sociology Research Laboratory. Dr. Robert McGinnis is in charge of making an IBM analysis.

A survey of the initial reaction of the Florida press to the Supreme Court decision is also being carried out. Fay Tyler-Norton, an FSU graduate student in psychology, and a member of Dr. Killian's staff, is in charge of this project.

But opinions are not enough. Actual experience can also serve as a guide. It is for this reason that a study of Florida voting registration is being made by Dr. Malcolm Parsons and Dr. J. L. Sutton of the FSU school of Public Administration.

"Our approach," says Dr. Parsons, "is to attempt to determine the extent to which people take advantage of a legal right, namely that of voting." The Supreme Court decisions of the last decade outlawing the "White Primary" offer a some-

Not Yet Equal, But Improving

Since the famous decision of Plessy v. Ferguson in 1896, the doctrine of "separate but equal" has governed the segregated schools of the South. Always separate, but rarely equal, the South can nevertheless point to some improvement in its school appropriations during the past decade. The table below lists the expenditures per pupil for white and for Negro children. Figures are adapted from "The Negro and the Schools," by Harry S. Ashmore, University of North Carolina Press.

	1940		1962		1962
	White	Negro	White	Negro	Negro as % of White
Alabama	$41	$14	$128	$102	33% 80
Arkansas	30	13	102	68	43% 66
FLORIDA	62	27	195	153	44% 79
Georgia	47	15	164	111	31% 68
Louisiana	64	20			32%
Mississippi	42	7	117	35	17% 30
N. Carolina	42	27	152	129	65% 85
Oklahoma	59	63			106%
S. Carolina	51	15	169	96	36% 56

what analogous circumstance to the present decree outlawing segregation in schools, he states.

A quick look at the figures being analyzed by the two professors indicates a substantial change in the voting pattern of Florida has taken place within the past ten years. In 1940, fewer than 2,000 Negroes were registered in Florida, and none of these could vote in the primary, because of laws then in effect. In 1946, after legal restrictions were removed, nearly 50,000 were registered. The number increased to 98,000 in 1948 and has been leveling off since 1950 until a figure just under 130,000 was reached this spring.

A Tale for Moderns ....

court, fulfilling the dreams of his life, for Baron was still anxious that not taught him how to till the soil.

Accordingly, he left on foot and arrived at the Castle of the Baron humble and penitent. "I ask," he said, "I know I did the wrong, Sir but I'm sure I can do it. If thou doest give me another chance, I can prove it myself." For Jacques finally came to realize that as long as he couldn't do right, he couldn't honestly face himself and say he could. He had to prove it to himself. The Baron was still angry, but he admitted that he needed to see for himself how truthful this boy was. So Jacques was admitted back to the Castle, and his studies for knighthood started all over again.

The last chapter of this tale was lost, but we have heard from reliable sources that Jacques was profing to be an expert knight and the Baron had fired him up with another joust.

Ex Editor Takes Dim View of Georgia

Editor's Note: Bruce Galphin, 1953-54 Editor of the Florida Flambeau, sends us this dispatch from Atlanta, Georgia, where he is a reporter on the Constitution.

By BRUCE GALPHIN

ATLANTA, GA.

I'm a newcomer to Georgia, I write, as an expert, about the flavor of Atlanta may seem unappropriate. But one is almost immediately impressed by the things unlike those one . . . the "something" different from other American cities.

There are the easy-going people — even in this fast-growing metropolis. There is natural beauty. There is the sweet, heavy smell of Nemsos on a summer night. There is a self-conscious aristocracy, careful of its fashion, its clubs and of its public appearances.

Old South Still Lives

And most of all there is an awareness of the past. It might be called reactionary rightwingism. But it is here.

My awareness of this aspect of the city's character was probably heightened by the time of my arrival. The movie version of Margaret Mitchell's well loved and highly loveable Gone With the Wind was showing for the fifth straight week at Loew's Grand. The crowd stood two and three deep in the lobby and around a city block to see the production, which had had such success at its premier in 1940 and on four succeeding showings.

The audience admired the actors, gasped at the ante-bellum grandeur, and then ignored the stated theme of the story: to live in the present. Like most people, they saw the action and were blind to the plot.

Somehow, many Georgians still think the slave days were the real Georgia . . . that what has intervened is a temporary blight on the intended purpose of things. The healthy progress of many other Southern states is but a weak child in Georgia.

This is reflected in the state's politics. The segregation issue here is met with none of the calm that has marked Florida's attitude. In Florida segregation was not even an issue in the governor's campaign. In Georgia it might well be ignored as an issue, too, because of the unanimity of opinion among the eight male candidates (one lone woman bravely says, "Obey the law"). But instead each is trying to outshout the other in an attempt to prove (vocally) that his is the best plan to preserve segregation. These range from a proposal to abolish the U. S Supreme Court to a suggestion that those preferring to attend unsegregated schools be given scholarships.

Negro Poorly Prepared

Whereas in Florida it was vaguely hopeful about the New South, here I am quite pessimistic. It is heart-breaking to see the Negro here . . . subservient, limping, sick, poorly clothed, physically broken before his time. He moves to the back of the trolley . . . and still further back when a White wants his seat. The truth is that he is poorly prepared to mix with the White. This may not be his fault. The condition may be forced upon him. But it is true. And the powers of Georgia intend that it shall continue to be true. A state that strongly professes Christianity daily decides against it.

It' is' hard to see anything ahead for Georgia but bitterness, turbulence, and possibly violence. The present takes a long time to catch up with this state. And meanwhile, the old-time Georgian keeps a wishful eye net upon the past.

Locarno Vs ...

United States has suggested an NATO-like alliance of the anti-Communist nations concerned with Southeast Asia to be known as SEATL Unfortunately this plan has not been met with to much enthusiasm in Britian and France. But with time running out, the three ANZUS powers, the United States, New Zealand and Australia, met and issued a call for "immediate action" toward the question that the two commonwealth powers in the Pacific share with the United States a greater sense of urgency for a collective security alliance than is shared by Britian at the present time.

Only time will tell whether another Locarno Pact or an ANZUS-SEATO Alliance will be adopted; perhaps the time is near when we and the countries directly involved will be forced to go ahead in Asia without Britian and France if they persist in coddling the Communists. For if another Locarno Pact is signed this would mean the beginning of the end for the United Nations, by way of admitting Red China to the U. N. A Red China that would hold the Veto Power along with Russia in the Security Council.

Tally Tennis . . .

The recent formation of a Tallahassee Tennis Club may be the needed incentive toward bringing this city up to par in the tennis world. For years the state as a whole has rated along with California as one of the two most tennis-wise in the U. S. A. With the leadership of such cities as Miami, West Palm Beach, Fort Lauderdale, St. Petersburg, and Tampa, Florida has been able to achieve a commendable record on the courts.

To many the increased emphasis on the sport in the capital city comes as a part of the vast increase of tennis interest throughout the entire state. Within the past five years Orlando, Jacksonville, and Daytona Beach have all come out of near tennis obscurity to emerge as hotbeds for court activity. I look forward to the time when Tallahassee will join the other cities of the state already in the tennis limelight. After all, why shouldn't the capital city of a tennis state become an outstanding tennis city?

Valiant Efforts . . .

While we are on the subject of commending those who are aiding the sports program here in Tallahassee something should be said about the valiant attempt to preserve a good record for the city in professional baseball. For almost the entire summer Tallahassee's new entry into the Class B Florida International League has been threatened with the possibility of bankruptcy. The situation became especially acute early this month. The shut down of the ball club seemed inevitable. In hopes of alleviating the situation a meeting was called for all city baseball fans interested in a solution to the problem.

It was at this meeting held Monday night at Centennial Field that Al DeFina, a local businessman, proposed the plan now being attempted. DeFina's plan is to sell raffle chances on two new Cadillac automobiles. Two hundred chances are on sale at $150 each. The plan if successful will net a sufficient fund for the team to finish out the season. The awarding of the cars is to be done at Tallahassee Rebel games on August 13 and 24, one car each game.

The fact that fans have not attended the games in sufficient numbers to support the existence of the Tallahassee Rebels by admission receipts is no sign that baseball is not wanted in the city. It merely indicates that a losing team draws small crowds. The Tallahassee team ended the first half of the season behind the other three league teams deep down in the cellar of last place. Currently after winning the second half with a surprising 'winning spree" the Rebels find themselves sinking lower and lower into the deep depths of the cellar again.

It is my belief that a winning team would find ample support here in Tallahassee. Baseball is one of the few sports having originated in the USA. It is considered as much an American tradition as the hot dog or an ice cream cone. Where it has spread into Europe and Asia it has aided the foreign relations of our country.

In the states it is greatly hived and enjoyed. What man having been reared in the US cannot remember childhood visions in which he pictured himself as a big-league shortstop or the man who broke the immortal Babe Ruth's home-run record?

But it remains that Tallahassee may never be able to present the public with the existence of an interesting-to-follow club if the current team goes bankrupt. Who again would be willing to attempt professional baseball in Tallahassee after the tragic death of the current team? I assure you that the years between now and then would be many. Mr. DeFina and your followers my hopes go with you in your attempts to keep baseball in Tallahassee.

Granny's Challenge . . .

I close this column with a quote from Gruntland Rice. "Granny" as many of you know died of a stroke Tuesday night at 73 years of age. The spirit in which Rice, considered the dean of modern sports writers, expressed himself has been a tremendous credit to the sports world. It is as a tribute that I quote the challenge he offered not only to those engaged on the field of play but to all people engaged in the game of life.

"When the great scorer comes
To mark against your name
He'll write not 'won' and 'lost'
But how you played the game."

Giants, Home-Run Hitting Mays Darlings of New York Fans

By BOB FOLSOM

NEW YORK, N. Y.

Currently the hottest thing in the sports world is the New York Giants and their home run hitting center fielder, Willie Mays. Maybe the fever isn't so contagious elsewhere but here in New York City it's running rampant.

It hit its peak last week in the crosstown series between the Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers. The Giants swept the six-game series spraying homers over all fences, and establishing themselves as No. 1 world series hopefuls. The betting hoya have them 8 to 5 to win.

With this early pennant fever breaking the thermometer and a team finally challenging the Dodgers, a hero had to be singled out....one that could capture the fan's eye....and who else could it be but Mays, who is hammering out homers ahead of Babe Ruth's all-time record of 60.

Hop on Bandwagon

A vastness of publicity and personality boys have now hopped on the bandwagon and it seems they can't get enough written and spoken about Willie, sometimes called the "Say-Hey Kid."

A quick survey of the situation shows that one New York daily is running his life story; the same daily runs a box on the sports page titled "Willie vs. Duke" giving the totals of each (Duke Snider is the Dodger center fielder and a hard rivalry exists between fans as to the better of the two); a Time assigned a top feature man to do a profile on Willie; a national magaioe recently did a picture layout and story on him; the columns have got him, and when he doesn't hit a homer, the Dodger and radio announcers make it seem like he did.

Television, Too

Television has caught up with Willie. I was watching a quiz show the other night called "Who's the Boss" (8:30 p.m.) where secretaries, agents, etc. appear and panelists guess their bosses. It didn't take the panel long to guess who a lady agent worked for. Then, Willie, handpainted tie and collar, walked out and modestly said he didn't think he could break Ruth's record. His lady agent said Willie couldn't get to his locker after the game nowadays because so many people wanted to take his picture. Moderator Kiernan thanked them and I tuned in another station.

At 10 p.m. I was watching another quiz show based on current news events, the News to Me. Well, you know who is in the news today. Willie, same tie and collar, walked out, modestly said about the same as he did at 8:30 and was thanked by moderator Walter Cronkite.

At 11 p.m. I tuned in the Longine Chronoscope, but Harold E. Stassen, director of the Foreign Operations Administration, was the guest.

At this writing, the Giants are still leading the National League. Willie is still slamming out homers, and while doing so continues to be the fan's choice. Right now, about 7,000,000. But what will happen if Willie goes into a slump?

Organ Student Represents FSU In Minneapolis

Helen Phillips, special organ student in the Florida State University School of Music, is representing the Southeast in national organ competition finals this week in Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn.

The competition is sponsored by the American Guild of Organists.

Miss Phillips won the Young Artists' Organ Competition sponsored by the Guild for the Southeastern region in a runoff in Miami last spring.

The young musician graduated with a major in American Studies last June from Florida State University. At the same time she finished her organ study in the university's School of Music with a certificate organ recital. She studied under the direction of Mrs. Ramona C. Beard of the School of Music and has spent the past two weeks working with Mrs. Beard preparing for the competition.

Miss Phillips has been employed the past year in Ft. Lauderdale as organist and secretary to the minister of Park Temple Methodist Church. During the year she has also been presented in recital in Miami, West Palm Beach, Gainesville, and at the St. Petersburg State Convention of the national organ Guild.

9 Credits Upset A-Typicals As Fly Boys Down Fla Hall

The Nine Credits upset Cole's A-Typicals 14-13 in a thriller Wednesday night in the University recreation league. Short-stop Pope smashing a homerun in the last half of the 7th with two men on for the winning margin.

In the opener of this double header the Airforce team defeated Florida Hall 11-5 with a 6 run uprising in the 6'th inning.

To date fleshiest infielders have been Dick Poor second baseman Air Force, third baseman Schuckman of Florida Hall, and D. C. Nelms, second baseman of the A Typicals, according to reports.

Research Work Allowed Money For Florida State Univ Study

Research work going on at Florida State University is indicated by announcement of the total of $17,259.18 being allotted by the university Research-Council as grants-in-aid.

The breakdown shows that more psychologists and chemists are involved in research with the largest amount of spending money. Both these science departments in the College of Arts and Sciences have five active in research. Psychology has $3,337 to use and chemistry $2860.

Three other science departments at FSU have working research funds amounting to over a thousand dollars - - sociology, physics and zoology.

Other FSU schools and departments with research working funds less than a thousand dollars are anthropology, botany, bacteriology, education, English, history, journalism, modern languages, music, physiology, political science and public administration.

KDP Receives Ten New Members Next Monday

Ten Florida State University summer school students will be initiated into Kappa Delta Pi, national educatiol honorary, next Monday in the Trophy Room of the Student Center.

To be initiated are Ruth Adell Childers, David Gretsch, Harvey L. Hatton, Robert C. Hensling, R. H. Alexander, Constance Cone, Lillian E. Depp, Von Ceil McCreary, Fern Irwin, and Alma Lucretia Meerdink.

Following the ceremony scheduled for 5:30 p.m., the new members, a majority of whom are graduate students, will be honored at a buffet supper. All members of the honorary are invited to be present.

FSU Receives Denmark Co-ed Winning Award

Officials af the American Home Economics Association announced recently that FSU will receive one Co-ed of 12 international scholars who received fellowship awards to study home economics in this country during 1954-55.

She will be Miss Inger-Marie Pederson of Aarhus, Denmark. Other international students winning are from Sweden, Switzerland, Ceylon and Korea.

Mrs. Elizabeth Seeney Herber, president of the association, said the international scholarship fund setting up the awards was started by the AHEA in 1930. The 19-54-55 winners bring the total to 95 of whom have been granted.

President Announces Record FSU Enrollment Of 8,451

Senate Debates' Suggested Site Of Next Meeting

Stancik Suggestion To Meet Downtown Finally Passes, 18-1

Student Senate may conduct next Wednesday's meeting in the capitol building chambers of the State Senate, according to a vote taken at the year's first meeting of the student group.

By a vote of 18 to 1, the student lawmakers decided to hold next week's meeting in the state chambers. "If possible."

Senator Bill Stancik suggested the event, remarking that the augurol surroundings would both increase student interest in their university government and be valuable from an educational point of view.

Stancik added that he has "100 per cent cooperation" from Dr. A. S. Martin, university vice-president, on his idea, and that "only details" remained to be worked out before carrying out the plan next Wednesday.

Stancik intimated that future meetings might be held in the old State Senate chambers if the first occasion produced the desired result.

Stancik brought into the discussion the publicity value of the idea and termed the Capitol chambers an ideal setting for Student Body President Pete Nunnally's plans for the University" address, which was slated for the first meeting but postponed.

Stancik's idea was opposed by only one Senator, Jimmy Soles, whose arguments was nevertheless strong.

Soles argued that actions, not a unsor setting, should impress the students, and claimed that several places on campus have a greater meeting capacity than the Senate gallery.

Senator Bobby Temple, agreeing partly with Soles, suggested that Senate postpone the action until just before the November elections. Another suggestion was that Senate hold such a meeting during Student Government Week. But Senator Jimmy Bass, although supporting that alternative, reminded the Senate that the State Legislature will be in session during that week.

The motion carried on a voice vote but Senator Stancik demanded a roll call. The motion again carried, 18-1, with only Senator Soles dissenting.

Stancik suggested that campus busses be used to transport interested students to the Capitol building.

Shortly before the meeting-place debate, Senate unanimously adopted Senator Soles' suggestion to report on the recent Congress of the National Student Association. Soles went as a representative from FSU, sent by the Summer Council.

Soles charged that FSU would "in no way benefit from affiliation" with NSA, and presented argument mainly on the Association's liberal inclusion regarding race, religion, and national origin as they affect collegiate enrollment, fraternities and sororities.

Under questioning, he admitted that both Miami and Georgia Tech are represented in NSA. He intimated, however, that those schools have better rating each year over the issues, which he asserted negates any advantages of membership.

Senate adopted a resolution expressing the views of Senate president Nunnally with regular Senators to attend all committee meetings if duty permits. Absences will count the same as absences from Senate meetings, with three unexcused absences constituting grounds for impeachment.

The same resolution also barred "steamroller" bills from Senate

STADIUM PEP RALLY SET

A pre-game pep rally for the Abilene Christian game will begin in Campbell Stadium at 7:30 Saturday night, announced head cheerleader Betty Ann Munroe today.

"The cheerleaders invite all students to sit in the cheering section and yell," said Betty Ann. "We want to really build up our school spirit this year. If you don't know the yells, check in the POW WOW. The spirit and enthusiasm at our pep rally last week was terrific and I urge all students to be better this week."

The cheerleaders are planning a big Beatlee pep rally for the FSU-Villanova game. It will be held October 8 at the east side of the Student Center at 7:00 p. m. The band, cheerleaders and football team will be there.

Flustered Feminine 'Sleuths' Search For Sorority's Trophy

Newspapers are often used as while they were gone the trophy missing persons bureaus, as every disappeared.
so often somebody tries to find a Asked why the sorority delayed missing editor, who, as it turns so long in hunting for the two-out, usually turns up in the river. and-a-half foot tall gold cup awarded But so far no one, until now, has last years' most beautiful homecome to The Florida Flambeau on coming float, Miss Wardlaw said the trail of a traipsing trophy.

The Gamma Phi Beta 415 W. College Avenue, are now beginning to look energetically for a homecoming float. Sweetheart and president Jane Wardlaw says was taken at the time of the Campus Sing around the first of last May. (They aren't sure just what day it was taken.)

According to the flustered feminine sleuths, the whole sorority was up at the Music Building competing in the Campus Sing, and that it could have been taken as a joke. "The joke has gone too far now," she added.

Under questioning she admitted the trophy had been taken by a week earlier by the SAE's in return for the Gamma Phi's immorally smearing the SAE house with paint, and that they thought perhaps the gold cup had gone off as another of its circuit wanderings. Appeals to all the fraternities and sororities, she said, have produced nothing.

Senators Accept Report By Soles 'Rejecting' NSA

The University Senate voted Wednesday to accept a report opposing Florida State University affiliation with the United States National Student Association, made by Sophomore Se nator Jimmy Soles, official delegate to the group congress during the summer.

Soles based his objections to USNSA membership on four points:

(1.) "USNSA policies are not policies which I feel we at Florida State University would agree with. Nor do I believe that we should join any group which we cannot in all good faith give our wholehearted support.

(2.) "USNSA is not in sympathy with the problems of the South and is not tolerant or understanding of the conditions, prejudices, and traditions which prevail in our section of the country.

(3.) "USNSA does not approve of sororities or fraternities and discriminate in terms of race while accepting their members. USNSA advocates and is actively working to have those sororities and fraternities barred from the universities where they exist.

(4.) "USNSA does not offer any services to its members which I feel our member schools cannot receive."

These objections were read by Soles before the Senate and were passed unanimously after discussion. Soles was asked by Senator Ken Caslin what actions USNSA had taken against fraternities and sororities. Soles read portions of the policies of USNSA in reply, after which the vote was taken.

When queried before the Senate meeting as to what policies of USNSA he based his second and third objections, Soles answered, "Upon the policies stated in the resolutions and resolutions concerned with the Fair Educational Practice Code of USNSA. I have copies of this code which I will be glad to show to anyone who wishes to study it."

Soles made his recommendations to cancel FSU affiliation on the basis of what he learned at the National Annual National Student Congress, where he was an official delegate. Speaking of his activities there, Soles said, "I attended as many sub-committee and commissioner meetings as was possible for me to attend. I attended all of the general sessions of the Congress, talked with students from practically all of the states represented and read and studied all of the resolutions, and conversed with other written matter I could secure on USNSA.

"After returning from the Congress I spent four days reviewing the materials I had, the notes I had taken, and the conversations I had been a part

Athletic Department Promises More, Better Football Seating

Florida State University students who found themselves sitting in the end zone seats and rear sections of the stadium Saturday night will not have to worry about this situation in future games, according to Mr. Eddie Johnson, athletic business manager.

Because the number of students was greatly over the estimated 3,750, the reserved section in the east stands could not accommodate all the spectators, Johnson stated. After the adjustments and zones were fitted, students were placed in the proper locations.

"This lack of space is being corrected now by adding 518 seats to the student section. The boundaries will then extend from the 40-yard line to the goal line. If this arrangement fails to meet students needs, additional revisions will be included," Cubbon added.

Freshmen are to exchange coupons at the Longmire Building for reserve seat tickets to every game, it was noted. This exchange will begin at one o'clock on the Tuesday before the game. If the game is played at night, the exchange will end at one o'clock the day of the game, and if an afternoon game is scheduled, the deadline is five o'clock the day before the game. Upperclassmen may obtain tickets at the Student Center.

Mr. Fred Vogel, Director of Student Activities, announced that students activity cards numbers 23, 24, 24 and 28 may be exchanged for football date tickets. These tickets allow half price for your date so the remainder of the season.

SENIORS MUST GET PLACEMENT

Graduating students should sign up immediately for an interview with the Office of Vocational Guidance and Placement if they did not do so at registration, according to a recent announcement.

Lists are posted on the vocational guidance and placement bulletin board on the main floor of Westcott. Interviews begin in approximately two weeks, with interterns having priority.

Greek Average Shows Sigma Chi, DZ High

Delta Zeta Social Sorority and Sigma Chi social fraternity obtained their titles as leaders in scholastic averages last semester according to official reports from the Dean of Men and Dean of Women's office.

The sororities, in order of rank and scholastic average, are as follows: Delta Zeta—1.8585; Alpha Gamma Delta—1.8119; Pi Beta Phi—1.7911; Zeta Tau Alpha — 1.7920; Chi Omega — 1.7119; Kappa Alpha Theta — 1.7092; Kappa Delta—1.6865; Delta Gamma—1.6742; Alpha Xi Delta—1.6644; Phi Mu—1.6731; Alpha Omicron Pi—1.6466; Sigma Delta Tau—1.6174; Alpha Epsilon Phi—1.6160; Sigma Kappa—1.5424; Gamma Phi Beta—1.5166; and Alpha Delta Pi—1.4617.

Fraternity overall averages and rank were: Sigma Chi — 1.6483; Theta Chi—1.3968. Phi Delta Theta—1.3248; Lambda Chi Alpha—1.2760; Alpha Tau Omega—1.2311; Delta Sigma Phi—1.1749; Kappa Sigma—1.1464; Sigma Nu—1.1425; Phi Kappa Tau—1.1402; and Delta Chi—1.1182. Pi Kappa Phi — 1.0971; Pi Kappa Alpha—1.0880; Kappa Alpha — 1.0781; Sigma Alpha, Epsilon—1.0693; and Tau Kappa Epsilon—1.0603.

Although Delta Zeta was not in first place last year, their overall average was three the annual Pan Hellenic Scholarship Trophy.

Sigma Chi has now won the IFC Scholarship Trophy for four consecutive semesters.

PRESIDENT HOLDS RECEPTION

Florida State University president Doak S. Campbell and Mrs. Campbell will be at home to welcome all married students and their wives and husbands Sunday from 4 to 5 p. m.

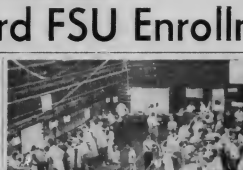
Games Aired Over College Station Only

Only one station in the Tallahassee area will carry the play-by-play description of the FSU-Abilene Christian football game tomorrow feature Jim Kirk at the microphone. Kirk, a former student, broadcast sporting events at Florida State University during his undergraduate days here.

Starting this Monday, a news program will be added to the program schedules at 6:00 P. M. This will be followed by a fifteen minute program of music featuring FSU students and student groups.

The station will also feature nationally recognized series programs such as The Chicago Round Table and the Jeffersonian Heritage. The latter program is produced by the Ford Foundation for educational radio stations.

Other programs and transcriptions from the British and French Broadcasting Systems will be presented through the facilities of the National Association of Educational Broadcasters. WFSU-FM is a member of this organization.



The station can only be received on the FM band and not through standard broadcasting frequencies. WFSU-FM is 91.5 on the FM dial.

FUTURE TEACHERS OF AMERICA

Future Teachers of America will meet for the first time this year Wednesday in Longmire Auditorium at 7 p. m., according to Mr. Sam Lastinger, associate professor of education. He said that Dr. Ralph Eyman, dean of the School of Education, and Dr. Mode Stone, associate dean, will discuss future teachers. All education students are invited to attend, he added.

INTERN APPLICATIONS DUE

Applications for teaching internship during the second semester must be submitted to the internship office by Noon, Friday, October 1, the office announced. The forms are available from the Internship Office, 204 Student Union Building. Prospective teachers should not wait to pick up the forms as soon as possible due to the considerable amount of information which must be filled in.

REGISTRATION DAZE—Note the expressions of the happy freshmen, the tearful faces of the professors as they say, "Sorry, that section is closed."

'Flying High' Begins Season; Auditions Planned October 5

"Flying High", Florida State University's nationally-famed circus, is about to begin its 1954-55 season under the supervision of Coach Jack Haskin.

The 200 members of the circus voted to hold tryouts on October 5 after the fraternity and sorority rushing.

"1954 offers the best group of circus candidates that we have ever had report for tryouts," Coach Haskin declared. Husky boys, and girls that are growing themselves useful as well as attractive comprise this group of hopefuls.

The following trips are scheduled thus far: October 29, Waycross, Georgia; October 30, Savannah, Georgia; February 15, Daytona; February 27, San Lando Springs March 15, Bradenton; March 19, West Palm Beach; April 2-3rd, Tampa; April 16th, Sarasota; Alabama; April 16th, Chattahoochee, Texas.

Tallahassee's Big Show will be May 5,6 and 7th. Trips tentatively are set: Orlando, Clearwater; Sebring; Winter Haven; Cocoa; Valdosta, Thomasville; Albany. Rehearsals have come in from Columbus, South Georgia; Troup Hill, North Carolina; Raliegh, North Carolina; Mimal Beach; Mobile, Alabama.

The troupe will be divided into three sections this season for travel so that no one person is on the road more than every other week. A "B" average requirement must be maintained at all times to be eligible for the trips.

Increase of 2500 Over Last Year's Enrollment Seen

Registrar Estimates Freshmen Number Better Than 1500

Eight thousand, four hundred and fifty-one students enrolled at Florida State University this semester, the university announced yesterday. This is the record enrollment in FSU's history, with registration still incomplete, officials noted.

The increase in enrollment from last year's 6,010 amounts to almost 2,500 students. According to Dr. Doak S. Campbell, president, increases is about evenly divided between men and women.

Information released to the press stated that 833 of the 8,451 enrolled are graduate or special students, with the rest undergraduate or graduate students working toward degrees.

During orientation week Mr. Charles S. Walker, registrar, estimated the number of freshmen alone as around 1,500. The official count on freshmen is not available at this time.

Registration for the fall semester will be from 8 to 11 Wednesday, October 6 in 134 Science as follows:

A—Additional Special Exams
A—08 p.m.
Intermediate Personality Scale
A—8-15 p.m.

Honor Code card, and was appreciative of the cooperation.

Walker announced that the deadline for scholarship changes has been postponed till Noon Tuesday, October 5 to accept all students contemplating changes to carry them out at once.

According to Walker, the overcrowding problem is relieved somewhat by the addition of a demonstration school building and the new Geology Building. The English Department, he said, is unable to use the COPC building as yet, and otherwise ROTC is compulsory for all new male students this year.

The School of Nursing, Walker noted, has moved into the demonstration school building and the Department of Building and Engineering Drawing has moved into the West Campus. Classes still using West Campus buildings, Walker said, are men's physical education, chemistry laboratories, the agricultural laboratory and library classes in education.

Seniors Must Get Caps And Gowns Prior To Sept. 30

Thursday, September 30 is the deadline by which time seniors must order their caps and gowns, announced Henry Massey, class president. Massey noted that the full dollars deposit and rental fee must be paid by that time, as well. It is announced that a table for ordering caps and gowns will be open at the Student Center Monday through Friday from 9 to 4 and Saturday from 9 to 12 Noon.

Massey urged his classmates to have their Tally-Ho pictures taken.

He reminded them of a class meeting to be held around October 15 at the same time Dr. Doak Sharp will ambush Senior Investigator Massey will speak Massey said, the real meaning of wearing caps and gowns.

Massey congratulated Mortar Board on their publication of the Senior Black Book, and pro, "should continue to get their money as long as the supply holds out. "Let's make this the best class to ever graduate from F S U," concluded Massey in his notice.

CHORAL UNION

New officers for the FSU Choral Union were chosen last week. They are Karl Mohr, president; Carolyn Cheek, secretary-treasurer; Gil Scott, business manager and Louise McClure, publicity manager. Officers announced that the group still welcomes any university students into membership.

University Art Exhibition Honors Students Of 1953-54

Awards Received By Four Students At Open Reception

The University Art Gallery is currently exhibiting works of sculpture, painting, and design in all media created by some 65 students of the Department of Art during the year 1953-54.

Honored at an informal reception on the opening night of the exhibition were four students receiving awards for performance and improvement during the last school year.

Bobbie Reidel, student of the freshman award, recently won another award for art in the student competition for the Seminoles Skyway grand opening in St. Petersburg, Florida.

Barbara Lester, who won the award as the outstanding sophomore art student, is a major in the field of advertising design in the department.

Winner of the junior award, Dorothy Kazmon Jr., is a student assistant in the Department of Art, while the senior award winner, Yvonne Streetman, is a graduate student in advertising design and illustration.

The second in a series of fall exhibitions honoring the best work done during the last year, the exhibition will run through October 31.

According to Dr. Adolph Karl, acting head of the art department, the exhibit is a representation of works in all media taught in the department, with the students all of the art classes.

Installation of the exhibit was under the direction of Russ West, curator of the University Art Gallery, aided by George Simmons, student assistant in anthropology; Jack Wise, and James John Van Elsuven, graduate students in art.

ART AWARD WINNERS—Left to right are Dee Heidel, Barbara Lester, Dorothy Kamens, Jr., and Yvonne Streetman, currently being honored as outstanding art students in the exhibition now showing at the University Art Gallery.

Dr. Karl announced that the University Art Gallery, located on the second floor of the Dairy Hall, will be open to students and to the public free of charge at the following hours:

Tuesday-Friday: 12:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.
Saturday: 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon.
Sunday: 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m.
Monday: Closed.

Experience, Training Make Expert Counselors

By BARBARA GERKEN

One of the most important positions at Florida State University is held by a group of women, experts in their field, who do a lot of counseling and their anonymous role.

Many of our Residence Counselors have undergone rigorous training in how to cope with their duties. Others, who have had with years of training under the master minds of psychology.

Miss Christine Palmer, freshman counselor and Miss Martha Cobb, upper class counselor are two such women.

Miss Palmer is the Residence Counselor at Reynolds Hall. She has spent 75 years working with young people and 5 years of that were in YWCA work, in clubs, camps and conferences with groups known as the Y Teens. Since many freshmen girls have had Y Teen experience, she has an immediate bond with the girls.

Before coming to FSU, Miss Palmer was a Director of Guidance in Public School. She experience, combined with a Masters Degree has made her eligible for this type of work.

It was Miss Palmer who originated the custom of installing the Residence Counselors in Residence Halls, and the installation of the Freshman officers when they take their accession of power.

As the year goes on, the girls will have opportunities to see Residence Counselor and the problems begin to take on a more personal nature. Then it may become necessary to call on Miss Palmer. Miss Palmer is free of the Dean of Women, or the Office of Co-ordinator of Counseling if she sees the problem as an individual girl.

Miss Palmer finds her work and takes great pride in all the girls who have lived in her hall. She works in close contact with the Junior Counselors who live with the Freshman girls. She feels that without the aid of these girls, who explain the rules and customs to the girls, she couldn't do her job as well.

Miss Martha Cobb, Residence Counselor of Gilchrist Hall, has a slightly different job. She has an upper class dorm, although this year Gilchrist is housing a number of Freshmen, because of the

54-55 Flambeau Policy Outlined
Letters, Column Procedure Stated

After a small crisis this summer, during when The Florida Flambeau lost its regular publisher, and published only four times, we are once again back with the Tallahassee Democrat.

The Flambeau is fortunate in having back, with a few exceptions, the editorial staff of 1953-54. An experienced staff, and one that will continue to maintain the prestige and the policies established by them in the previous year.

Notably, this paper will still continue to offer a conservative makeup approach toward news coverage and presentation besides complete news coverage. We hope to offer more enlightening, interesting and thought-provoking material gathered from national sources. An engraving plant is now located in the Democrat building, and with this facility easily available, we plan to brighten the readability of our pages.

In addition to upholding the values of the Flambeau, we will avoid sophomoric attacks upon individuals and conditions and offer constructive criticism when necessitated, always endeavoring to present the truth, written with dignity and restraint.

So there may not be any confusion, we want to make a clear distinction between the two types of editorials on this page, and also, the letters to the editor column.

The staff editorials, which are printed only on the left hand side of the page, usually reflect the majority opinion of the staff.

Columns, however, are sounding boards for the writers who write them. We will print the works of writers, regardless of viewpoint, to safeguard this paper from becoming too biased or one-sided.

The editor, of course, retains the right to approve or disapprove of a column, but he will change nothing. Only under extreme circumstances when the editor considers a column to have wandered too far from the broad governing principles of responsibility and restraint will a column not be accepted.

The letters to the editor column in the Flambeau exists solely for the benefit of the students of the university. It is there for the student to voice any opinions he feels necessary, and we welcome them.

The Flambeau prints all letters which it receives with certain qualifications: they must be signed, and we reserve the right to withhold letters that make invidious attacks on individuals. We request that letters be kept to reasonable length because of our space and page limitations.

The letter writter may ask that his name be withheld, but it will be withheld only in very unusual circumstances. If such a request is made, we either withhold the name or the entire letter. This serves to protect students. We do not, however, intend to let this privilege be abused. Fictitious names on letters will not be considered.

Those are our policies, and in the coming months, we will strive to improve on them, while at the same time, offer to the students a professional and aggressive newspaper they will be eager to read.

Campus Housing Problem Causes Anxiety

The campus housing problem has caused anxiety in many quarters, and at the moment, it seems to be in a critical stage, with no outlook for relief.

Women students are now living in Cawthon Hall recreation room and sewing room. Men students, some of whom are veterans, had to stay in the West Hall basement until some suitable quarters were found for them. They were soon moved into fraternity houses even though they had not pledged or promised to join a fraternity.

It would have been a wise, nor less thoughtful idea for the University to have informed the students of this situation beforehand. Then, the student's acceptance of this would have been much more justifiable.

This housing shortage is not totally a result of the new compulsory ruling requiring all male undergraduates to live in University housing. There weren't that many living off campus to affect housing to this degree. We are not apologists for this ruling, either, since we originally opposed it because it was an encroachment upon student's rights. We still oppose it. There was quite a bit of resentment registered by students, and they showed legitimate cause for their stand.

It is obvious now that mandatory housing should have been brought into effect only when adequate facilities were available, if it was going to be brought in at all.

But certainly the sting of this ruling has already been felt. It was proposed because the University was losing money by not filling the dormitories. If the enrollment picture continues as is finances will easily be met without compulsory housing.

What is needed now are more dormitories. The shortage of campus housing was caused by a combination of things. This was the target year for an increased enrollment of Korean veterans .and figures bear this out. Our high school enrollments are increasing, which means an increase in college figures. There is a lack of planning, though we respect the fact finances are required.

When spacious and attractive West Hall was built, for the moment it looked as if it could handle sufficiently the male enrollment. West Hall is readily becoming only a drop in the bucket.

FSU Makes The Jump to Big-Time Football

King Football arrived at Florida State University last Saturday night to the delight of the management, and to the distress of the patron.

Doak S. Campbell stadium experienced its largest crowd: around 20,000 watched the University of Georgia measure FSU, 14-0. The concrete stands were filled, the end zone overflowed, and folding chairs lined the outer edge of the playing field. The stadium parking area could not handle the volume of traffic that turned up, and soon just about every foot of parking space all the way from the Student Center to the stadium was filled.

The FSU student was treated to something new, too. The stands are now reserved, and many students found themselves on the ten-yard line, while others watched the players back from the end zone. Hereafter, the student need not come early to grab a general admission seat around the fifty-yard line. There is no such thing, but his reserved seat will always be waiting.

All this is something new in FSU attendance annals. What it means simply, though, is that FSU has decided to go big-time. A big-time football team costs money, and therefore a goodly portion of its support must come from crowds. In fact, practically all is derived from that source.

In this situation, seemingly, there can be for the students a ticket allowance only on a first-come, first-served basis, with no exceptions. The University realized this but did not forecast such an overwhelming turnout the first time.

Hence, it resulted in the lack of good seating arrangements for students. According to the Athletic Business Manager, Mr. Cubbons, this is being remedied for tomorrow's game. An extra 500 seats have been allotted to the students.

If the Georgia game is any example of things to come, and surely it was, then it will mean a quick reappraisal of stadium facilities. The parking spaces and walking areas need expanding, and fortunately in all that traffic snarl there were no serious accidents.

Accordingly, in this jump to the big time, all the needs of the crowd must be kept in mind.

"Hey — What About The Man?"

A Conversation Overheard

By DICK VICTORY

One day last week—I forget exactly which—I was sitting on one of the benches in back of the Longmire Building when a couple of freshmen (whose names, I found out later, were Rex and Lenny) strolled up and plopped down on the grass under a tree not far away and began talking.

Their conversation was easily overheard. It is only in the strictest confidence that I relate it to you.

The taller and thicker of the two, Lenny, seemed to be curious. He kept asking the other questions.

"Hey, Rex, hey, haveya seen your roommate yet, haveya yet?"

"Upperclassman. Not here yet."

"Let-me-tell-you. What a guy I got. What a guy. He's little. A little guy. A real runt. I could whup him easy. And I told him, too. Sure did. If he gives me any trouble—wham-bow, right in the kisser. I really told him."

"So?"

"So, nothing. He's nutty, that's all. Why do I always have to get the nutty guys? Just my luck. Everytime I went camping with the Boy Scouts when I was a kid they shoved me in with the Bugler or somebody. Five o'clock every morning. For two weeks! Can you 'magine that? A bugler. My luck."

"Maybe the guy thinks you're cracked, too."

"Nah, he likes me. A lot. Always asking he questions."

"He a freshman, too?"

"No, what a dope. Say's he's working on his mastera or something?"

"Masters?"

"Yeah, that's it."

"What kind of questions has he been asking you?"

"Nutty questions. That's why I know he's a nut . . . I don't trust that guy. I have to sleep with all the lights on at night, even. Guy's a real nut . . . Not that I couldn't whup him, though. I could."

"That all he does—just ask questions?"

"Questions and games. Nutty games."

"Games?"

"Yeah. 'Specially this one game. It's driving me crazy. Just a big blob of ink. And that little creep keeps asking me what it reminds me of. That nut. That little nut."

The Booklist

New McCarthy Book

McCarthy and the Communists (The Beacon Press) is the newest and sanest book about Senator Joseph McCarthy and his fight against Communism.

Written by James Rorty and Moshe Decter, who are labeled a "Taft Republican" and a "Stevenson Democrat," respectively, (perhaps in an effort of objectivity) and sponsored by the American Committee for Cultural Freedom, a group long known for its fight against Communism, this book makes a good attempt to settle the McCarthy issue.

It takes sides against the Senator, but only after a cold, factual study of Joe McCarthy's sincerity and effectiveness. That our security program had been lax and often ineffective is brought out and that Senator McCarthy awakened to a degree the American people on this subject, due credit is given.

But as for following up his charges leveled at various organizations and individuals with substantial evidence, this he did not do. The book meticulously reviews his investigation of the State Department's overseas information program and of Fort Monmouth, and points out that Senator McCarthy never uncovered a single Communist agent, nor produced any substantial evidence of Communist subversion.

One chapter is devoted to methods easily discernible as consistent patterns followed by Communists in their smear campaigns, and shows clearly how Senator McCarthy has aped the methods of the very people he has tried to expose. It includes, insinuation and innuendo, the slander amalgam, the personal spy network, and others, all significantly related to the Senator's methods.

The authors have gone further than any other book on Senator McCarthy by attempting to show in the last chapter how to combat Communism responsibly.

They say nothing specifically about How To Fight McCarthyism, but only to counter lies by presenting the truth. They are resigned to say (which many anti-McCarthyites may choke on): "The anti-bodies of the American social and political organism . . . may be trusted to contain and eventually to eliminate the demagogue from Wisconsin."

This may be working now. Senator McCarthy says he is cancelling his fall election speaking engagements. A month ago he would have laughed at even the suggestion.

The best writing to come along in some time concerning the airpower-atomic bomb race between the U. S. and Russia is Thomas K. Finletter's "When Russia Is Ready" in September's Atlantic Monthly.

Mr. Finletter, Secretary of the Air Force from 1950 to 1953, advocates a overhaul in our present policy: " . . . the United States must build a U.

The Point Is

Honeybun Is 1954 College Girl

By BOB FOLSOM

I met Honeybun the other day. Honeybun, who has golden hair and a smile leashed with atomic power, isn't a freshman, soph, junior or senior. She is a representation of the American college girl, 1954 edition.

Honeybun holds no desire to be another Marilyn Monroe, and yet she does yearn to be attractive to all campus mates, whether she is naturally attractive or not. Her boyfriend is a nice-looking, husky chap who smokes king-size cigarettes, listens to Saturday morning's top ten record show and occasionally skips classes.

She may or may not belong to a sorority. If she doesn't she may harbor a wish to. If Honeybun is a part of this college-bred institution, she loves the gossip and parties that go along with it.

You can't say too much about this to Honeybun, though. If the wrong thing is said, she may turn her girls out, march up College Avenue, and burn down Longmire; however if its the right thing, you can expect a bloc of votes at the next election. What election? Heck, I don't know. Just the next election.

The dial on a clock-radio could easily confuse Honeybun. If she gets A's she only comes by it naturally, and doesn't do too much studying. Being intelligent is nothing but a hit or miss affair for her. Either Honeybun has it or she doesn't. It's that simple.

In many things, Honeybun is quite ignorant, and tends more to remain domestic. She is lacking in practical knowledge, which means often times she is convinced too easily about many things. And unfortunately, she won't keep an open mind, primarily because she hasn't read enough. Honeybun doesn't know two contemporaries, say, like Salinger or Orwell.

Moreover she doesn't know or hasn't given a thought to the fact that there are no unfeminine talents, whether they are in politics or engineering, mathematics or medicine. And it isn't a matter of imitating men, as Honeybun might think. Most males would prefer Honeybun to stay up with them intellectually, or in other competitive ways.

But this is more saddening: Honeybun could go home after four years of college, and really not learned one thing. She might never think the reason this could be true was because of our one-sided educational systems today.

There is a way Honeybun could solve this, but I don't think she knows the answer. And one thing is sure, its doubtful that anyone will tell Honeybun just how to apply her education.

But I will. I do have faith in Honeybun, and I can give her the simple answer. Honeybun must find her curious mind.

Lately It Seems

Florida's School System Looks Dim

By ORCHID ALONSO

After a tour of the school systems in Maryland and Washington, D. C. it seems that Florida could not work fast enough to solve the problems predicted to crop up in the next few years.

It is one thing to hear descriptions of double sessions and over crowded classrooms, and another thing to see classroom after classroom with one teacher attempting to teach two classes—classes that meet for only half a day to make room for two other classes.

The problem is not merely one of more classrooms, it is an ever increasing problem of more teachers. More teachers are desperately needed everywhere. Florida's school population is expected to jump considerably in the next five years, and with the jump will come the same situation found in many states.

The only logical solution at the present seems to center on higher pay for those in the teaching profession. A higher pay raise for teachers would not only lure more students into the field from this state, but would also be a heavy calling card for out-of-state teachers. Florida legislators should stop thinking in terms of Florida Sunshine and more in terms of a safe educational system for the state.

Several considerations in the present situation in the state involve certification requirements and the abolishing of the high pay rank system. The two, although not obviously at first, will have a great effect on the future of the educational system.

In the first instance, an effort is being made to have the teaching requirements in various southern states uniform. This will enable teachers to teach from state to state in the south with more ease as far as certification is concerned. It is obvious that the southern states with the higher pay scales will rapidly absorb many of the teachers from the lower paying states—of which Florida is one.

With the abolition of the high paying ranks in this state, initiative for higher degrees will be stilted. Besides, those who do attain higher degrees will promptly move to a state that will pay them accordingly.

According to a reliable source in the State Department of Education, the rank pay was revised when a group of legislators conducted a survey of teachers in the state and found that a great number of them WOULD LIKE to be in a higher rank. This news apparently scared the solons and they immediately set about to save the people of the state of Florida from a huge increase in teacher salaries.

Says the reliable informant: Actually, only 17% of the educators in Florida ever attempt to attain a higher degree. BOO!

Kaye, Gable Films Soon To Appear

By DAVID DREIS

Before we half realize it another show business season will be upon us and this column, as many of you know, will report the latest goings-on in the entertainment Babylons of this campus and the ones in Hollywood, New York, Chicago and Miami.

The favorite chore of yours truly is (chuckle) spreading gossip the stars don't want spread and thanks to a few personalities we met in Noo Yawk this summer we'll be writing up the dirt . . . uh . . . news.

Right at this time we're tabulating all the possible Academy Award contenders so we can start making predictions, we were fairly accurate last year.

Of course, there were certain pictures we thought better than some, but not that many that we were dismayed by the choices. As everyone realizes by this time the Academy Awards are not destined to give the statuettes to those who have achieved aesthetic values-oh-art. Rather, it is given to those who have produced, directed or participated in a film which has given the most all-around entertainment to the most people. However, art values do come through many times.

MARLON BRANDO, up for the Academy Award for Streetcar named Desire in 1951 had always scoffed at the award so to keep up appearances he decided to do the 'right' thing. He sent a cab driver to the ceremony to pick it up. When Humphrey Bogart snatched it away for The African Queen, Brando really lost faith . . . the next year when he was up for Viva, Zapata! he didn't bother to send anyone. Question is—what's going to happen when Marlon attempts to snare an Oscar for On The Waterfront?

Moving away from the Academy Award race which will be decided next March, let's chat about the flickers which are coming to Tallahassee in the near future.

Magnificent Obsession has been re-made by Universal and this time in Technicolor starring Jane Wyman and Rock Hudson. MO was first done in black-and-white with Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor in the key roles. This is definitely a woman's picture and it jerks the tears like crazy. Lloyd C Douglas who penned the "Robe" did this as well. A fine film but not up to its parent.

Knock On Wood is a traditional Danny Kaye film with Kaye being the main interest throughout. He plays a ventriloquist whose dummies talk back to him and spoil all his romances. His doctor is Mai Zetterling (MY ZETTERLING) a beautious British import. Some spies put documents into the heads of the dummies and Kaye gets mixed up in some rather unbelievable espionage. Strictly a farce, the one thing that prevents this film from being a great Danny Kaye comedy is the absence of tongue-twisting songs which have long been associated with the entertainer.

Others: Ivanhoe which must've been lost on its way up here because I saw it two years ago. A fine classic nontheless. Betrayed, Gable's last for MGM after a 25 year association. His third with Lana. Pretty good intrigue. Vic Mature at his best.

Dawn at Socorro is Universal-International at its usual. A second-rate western top-heavy with young stars. Usual hero (Rory Calhoun) wants to hang up his guns but injustices by usual villian (David Brian) forces him to shoot it out. Has the equal long-street walk with the "who's going to shoot who" complex. The theater is air-conditioned. Gorilla At Large teamed with Rocket Man at the State is okay, but leaves you wondering why gorillas never run off with a man. Every time thay grab a girl. Alright, anthropologists so they are descendants of man, but——. Raymond Burr and Lee J. Cobb should get star billing in all their epics.

The Dissenter

Summer's Significant News Reviewed

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Although the first issue of The Florida Flambeau comes out at a time when we should be looking forward, it won't hurt to look back over the things that made the news this summer. The past few months have been crowded with events as momentous as they were unpredictable.

Two vicious hurricanes snobbed Florida and pulverized New York and New England. The Yankees tumbled ingloriously from the throne where they had ruled haughtily over baseball for five years, massacre victims of savages from the West.

But seriously, this summer has been very revealing. Ex-president Truman isn't joking when he suggests America had better elect a Democratic Congress if they want Eisenhower's program put over. The American people, however, are beginning to find out that putting over the Eisenhower program will really be putting something over—on the American people.

Of course, on some issues, notably the 18-year-old vote, the St Lawrence Seaway, and a stand for civil rights, the President was and is right. Granting some tax relief to parents of college students deserves praise. But his opposition to increase in personal exemption from $600 per dependent, and his shocking giveaway of atomic power rightfully belonging in the public domain by virtue of the public dollars invested in it defy all excuse.

The President's action in granting private power a concession in the TVA is unexplainable. Not much stock should be placed in Democratic Chairman Mitchell's charge that Ike's friendship with Bobby Jones has anything to do with the TVA deal. It's more plausible to write it down as disregard for the enterprise which miraculously raised the living and industrial standards of the people in the Tennessee Valley.

It was interesting, too, to hear Herbert Hoover denounce as socialism the policies which rescued the nation from the depression when he could not. THE NEW YORK POST expressed astonishment that a man could live to Mr. Hoover's age without achieving at least a little "humility."

Those who regard Senator McCarthy as a political opportunist and a demogogue as dangerous to the United States as Malenkov see hope for sanity in the strong parliamentary stand of the Watkins Committee. But the nation still smarts from the outrageous whitewash of the McCarthy-Army hearings. Who is McCarthy to scream of impartiality, when during the Army hearings he had most of the committee openly on his side?

The retirement of disappointed Thomas E. Dewey as governor of New York state touched off a classic political scramble. Democrats Averill Harriman and Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., are both noted liberals and Harriman, who got the nomination, is also likely, in my opinion, to beat Republican candidate Sen. Irving Ives. As pointed out by the NEW YORK POST, Harriman's election would insure the state's powerful bloc for Adlai Stevenson at the next Democratic National Convention, which in itself is a good thing.

One of the saddest debacles in the history of American politics came when liberal senators and representatives supported or dared not vote against a bill to make membership in the Communist party a crime. At least the bill was amended to strip civil rights from members of "Communist organizations," but

Cool Jazz Cats 'Send' Listeners At Opperman

By WILLIE SMITH

The session was in full swing. "Cats" were never playing cooler set. They were feeling music. The crowd could tell were witnessing "a once in time" affair.

Yet, there was something different, something strange about musicians and the spectators. They weren't rocking back and forth. They weren't jiving and yelling, "Go Man, go!" Instead, they were a reserved bunch and looked as if were concentrating on each musical flight."

Such was the occasion last Wednesday night when a few music minded individuals of the campus gathered for an informal jam session in the Union Building. These individuals marked the latest trend in the world of the "Cool Set" JAZZ. Danny Cunningham played the chair blowing the trumpet. Randy Canfield leaned up against the wall plucking away on his bass. Dave Friend, who previously arranged for Lee Konitz, took up the piano bench while MacDonald sitting in ex by piano a little later on and Jim Thomas bent the skins comprised the "cats."

This was a new phase in history of jazz. It has graduated from a ringing sweat and ecstasy to more deep and reserved phase. It isn't as loud and boisterous. It has toned down and quieted its violent new era is upon us.

Immediately after the war, while the nation was still moving at a terrific pace, the music in our nation typified the way in which our society was living. It came into being and with it sounds from the musicians were deafening, fast and wicked. Quality was there, but you had to listen to hear it above the racket.

As the pace slackened, the jazz gradually calmed down, and with the nation tired of war and wanting peace and solitude the music has slowed its pace.

New faces have come on to the jazz scene. Young faces, along with the old ones, seem to be setting the new style. Their playing reflects the trend in society. You can see it on the listeners' faces and bodily actions.

They call their music "intense." It's listening music. Its quality isn't lost, but brought out with better and softer lines. The musicians sit down, sit back and enjoy what they're playing without wearing themselves down with too much motion. The audience goes along with the jazz men and concentrate more on the music, as if each note played can be felt. It's softer now and can give an individual peace of mind, without wearing the listener down as it used to do.

This is the "new" trend in jazz. It has graduated another step and is now accepted by people who, a few years ago, never have considered it an American institution.

All-Male Chorus Is Looking For More Interested Singers

The ranks of the Collegiate PSU's all-male chorus are filling rapidly, according to Mr. J. Dayton Smith, choir director of the University's male choir.

The enrollment ended at 32 now but Smith said they would like to make it 50. The group is open to any male students on campus without audition.

"Anyone who is interested in singing with us may report to rehearsal today at 1:00 or see me at my office, room 203, School of Music any time Saturday morning," noted the Collegian director.

The 1954-55 program will include ten major concerts as well as many smaller performances.

Annual Collegian events include a serenade to the women's residence halls and several tours throughout the state of Florida. They will also appear as guests in the women's choral concert later in the year.

Summer's News

the fact remains that America is now admitting fear that the Communistic world otherwise with sweeping victories at the polls. In voicing same law the measure Congress also implied that democracy in itself is not a bi nwner of Communist oppression. That implication amounts to just plain cowardice.

Of course, the Democrats have refuted McCarthy's insane "20 years of treason" charge and penned so administration attack on organized labor with the Taft-Hartley bill. And of course it is true that world communism is a menace, not a political party. It also remains true that the way to prove you are not a fool is NOT to act you are, as Look Magazine and this summer.

However, America was treated to the spectacle of Joe McCarthy voting for the amendment which struck out the part about membership in the C. P. being a felony. After all, what would happen if every person he accused received a fair trial? That still remains the usual procedure when a person is accused of a felony.

Director R. Sedore Lists '54 Symphony Orchestra Schedule

With a "policy of high performance standards in mind," plans for the Florida State University Symphony Orchestra have been held last week and a ballot ensemble of 70 pieces was made by Director Robert Sedore.

The Symphony Orchestra is open to any student here at the University. Instrumental performers throughout the University, especially those who play string instruments, are invited to join," Sedore commented.

Rehearsals for this group are set Monday through Friday at 4:00 in the Music Building. Saturday rehearsals are held in the evening for two hours.

During the year, the orchestra will give two major concerts in addition to collaborating with the groups in two operas. Under the direction of Dean K. O. Kurtzmar, School of Music, they will be the nucleus of the State University of Florida, which plays a series of four subscription concerts per year.

Highlights of last year's concert season included Bizet's Carmen Suite No. 1; Debussy's Fetes, from Nocturnes and Jan Sibelius' Symphony No. 2 in D Major. The climax of the Orchestra's efforts came with their performance in conjunction with the University Singers' production of Hoewgarn's "King David."

Fran Stokes Asks Sandspur Scripts In Contest Prize

Sandspur, Florida State University's annual all-orig-inal musical-comedy which is written, directed and produced by university students is now open for completed scripts in the annual competition for the $50 prize.

The Sandspur production which is part of the special Sandspur Weekend is usually followed by the appearance of a nationally-known orchestra. Last year's Sandspur production of "This Is the Life" was followed by the Sandspur dance featuring Dean Hudson, recording orchestra.

Sandspur producer Frances Stokes has appointed Fall Pirates Jayleen Robertson and Carlos Fremaint as members of a committee to select a script. All scripts should be turned in to Fred Vogel, Comeier for Student Organizations, at his office in room 17 of the Langwire building. Deadline for the contest is October 26 at 5 p.m.

This is the second year that Frances Stokes has been producer of Sandspur although she has worked on the production since 1951 when she entered as a freshman. At that time she was a member of the dance chorus. the following year the dance director and ever since then.

Several scripts have already been turned in and are being read by the production committee. Publication will be reached until after the deadline.

Opera Guild Plans Broadway Musical For Opperman Hall

Tryouts for Carousel, Rodgers and Hammerstein's Broadway musical, will be held by the Light Opera Guild Monday and Tuesday, November 27 and 28, 7:10 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall. The play will be presented December 10, 11, 12 and 14.

All students who have singing and acting talent are invited to try out, according to Dr. Robert L. Briggs, director of the Guild. Since the chorus also consists of character parts, principals and chorus members will be selected at the same time.

Miss Betty Lou Grimm, assistant professor of voice, will be chorus and stage director of the Opperman production.

Dr. Briggs has announced that jobs are open in staging crews, properties, lighting, wardrobe and makeup. Persons interested in these fields are asked to get in touch the tryouts. He emphasized that a student need not be a music major to try out for a singing role.

Carousel is noted for such hits as "June is Bustin' Out Over," "If I Loved You," "Soliloquy," "This Is a Real Nice Clambake," and "You'll Never Walk Alone."

The Light Opera Guild presents one such musical each fall. Past productions are The Mikado, The Pirates of Penzance, Roberta, Sweethearts and Die Fledermaus.

Current Films Add Adventure To Tallahassee Movie 'Fare'

By JOYCE POTTER

Sir Walter Scott's Ivanhoe, which has enthralled generations of readers throughout the world, started at the State yesterday and will continue through tomorrow.

Robert Taylor, Elizabeth Taylor, Joan Fontaine, Gary Sanders and Emlyn Williams lend a cast of thousands. This Technicolor MGM production was filmed entirely in England.

Set in the England of 1200 A. D. when "knighthood was in flower," it is the story of one brave man's attempt to restore to King Richard the Lion-Hearted his throne stolen from him by his brother, Prince John.

Sir Walter Scott's book, the picture climaxes the most rewarding year of his career. As the Saxon knight, Ivanhoe, he fights, rides, jousts, laves, and performs his way through a role tailor-made to his talents.

As the lovely young Jewess, Rebecca, who sacrifices her love for a cause, the acting talents of Miss Taylor come into full maturity.

A combination of gambler, gun-fighter and saloon-girl leads the explosive screen drama in Universal's Technicolor adventure, Down At Socorro, which starts at the State Sunday and continues through Tuesday.

Starring RORY CALHOUN, PIPER LAURIE, DAVID BRIAN, KATHLEEN HUGHES and ALEX NICOL, this rousing story of a war of nerves on the frontier is told in a mood that is tense and fast from the open gun-fight in a Lordsburg casino-house to the final duel in Socorro.

Reported to be one of the most hilarious films ever made by Paramount's Rosch On Wood with Danny Kaye which opens at the Florida, Sunday.

Kaye, the main star of the film, is in his usual role—strictly for laughs. It is the first picture in years that allows Danny to indulge in sheer, unmitigated clowning.

The story has him as a famous ventriloquist who has to seek psychiatric aid when his dummy starts talking back to him. The doctor he consults turns out to be MAI ZETTERLING. Kaye promptly falls in love with her and at the same time gets himself involved with a group of international espionage agents.

Wozniak Presents TV Writing Course To Students, Public

A course in television writing has been made available to students and townspeople by FSU. The first of its kind here, it is being taught by the School of Journalism Tuesday evenings from 7 to 9:30 in the Journalism-TV radio laboratory.

Daniel F. Wozniak, assistant professor of journalism, teaches the course. Wozniak has worked on over 200 television programs and has worked in commercial and educational television and radio.

According to the School of Journalism, Television Continuity Writing is designed to acquaint the student with the principles of television-dramatic writing. This includes, they said, writing programs and spot announcements seen on local television stations.

Speech Department Plans Five Plays For Season

Drama Area Adds New Members To Faculty In Year; Plays To Include Children's Theater, Will Be Given

By DAVID DREIS

The Department of Speech's drama area headed by Dr. Lynn E. Orr, plans five productions for the theatre season this year. Only four, however, will be seen by the general public.

The theme of the plays to be produced has been selected yet although several conferences during the summer have come up with many suggestions. "It will all depend on the quality and quantity of student actors at the auditions," Dr. Orr commented. Auditions were held last Wednesday and Thursday.

This is the second year that general auditions for new students has been held. Formerly, the only auditions for students came at tryouts and several plays had to be cancelled be-cause of lack of students while others maintained small casts and many students had to be turned away.

The drama area has added new members to its faculty in the past few years. Dr. Orr became head when his predecessor left to take similar duties at Cornell University. Dr. Paul Davee began his teaching at Florida State only last year and directs the first play in the regular school season and the summer production as well. Mrs. Frances LeVine is latest addition of the faculty taking over the position of costume director for Douglas Russell. Russell has left for Great Britain as a winner of a highly competitive Fulbright Memorial Scholarship. Mrs. LeVine undertook her costuming duties at State University of Iowa and Oklahoma University. She did the costuming for "Horn In the West," outdoor summer theatre sponsored by the University of North Carolina before coming here.

As to increasing the number of productions, Dr. Orr added, "The additional production will be one for the Children's Theatre and will play to children only and not to the general public as will the other four plays. However, we intend to increase the number of plays for the general public in the near future but it will depend on the number of students available for productions."

As soon as the name of the first play is decided, it will be announced in The Florida Flambeau.

Radio-Television Class Introduced In Several Areas

Students who intend to major in Radio and Television at Florida State University may get a little confused with all the different departmental features, teaching in that field.

The School of Journalism is building up its R-TV facilities. Mr. Daniel Wozniak has prepared a program that included the building of a radio news studio in the school, the purchase of film and sound equipment and other materials in that field. Mr. Wozniak expects to use many of his projects in connection with WFSU-FM.

The Department of Speech maintains a full area of R-TV courses which include radio script writing for dramatic productions and actual technical radio acting and production.

The School of Music teaches a course called Broadcasting Music which has recently been increased to a three-hour course. Under the tutelage of Thomas Wright, the course discusses uses and techniques of broadcasting all types of music whether recorded or live.

The newly-formed Department of Advertising features a course in advertising techniques and survey of radio and television. Critiques of advertising techniques in use today are a major portion of the class work.

ter Cobb, Miss Cobb has always ked in college or industrial ronment.

The major part of her job was placement in Vocational Guidance at the University of Rochester. She also did some domestic work there. She has been with the training department of the Eastman Kodak Company and worked with the War and Manpower Commission in Washington, as well as the New York State Employment Service in New York.

Miss Cobb tells us that an upper class dorm differs from a freshmen dorm in that the girls have their way around more and have attained definite ideas as to their future. Consequently they are able to carry out projects and create in their own and the girls' experience, they are gradually allowed more privileges.

Miss Cobb feels that her work in counseling because a counselor can do much importance when she lives and shares her life with the girls.

There are but two of the counselors here at Florida State University. The students owe a great deal of gratitude to these women for their service.

Will The Freshmen Doff Their Caps Come Play Day? In The Meantime...

By MARY LIZ KING

Rat season is here again. Sophomores are shedding fresh dormitories to catch poor sport freshmen without caps and send them to Rat Court.

Sophomores on Rat Court are noted for their unique and time-consuming punishments. Last year, a girl was sentenced to recruit students to board cars crying "I AM A RAT WHO FORGOT TO WEAR MY RAT CAP." She also had to spend a few hours a day opening doors for upperclassmen at the Amber House.

Another fate met a boy year before last. He was given a toothbrush and soap and told to scrub the sidewalks in front of Westcott Building.

Rats can usually get rid of their caps by the following method: There's a Freshman-Sophomore Field Day near the end of October. Among the events held are softball throws, egg throws, caterpillar races, grease pole slides, relay and track dashes, and instead of the usual jitterbug contest, a bop contest.

If rats and rats accumulate more points (of course there are sophomore judges) they can throw away their caps. Dunking Paul Ort, president of the sophomore class, Dusty Rhodes, chairman of Rat Court, and any other sophomore that has been especially nasty in Westcott fountain is another winner's privilege.

Last year the freshman class won so the case isn't hopeless.

But if the freshmen do win they must wear their caps till after Homecoming or until January if FSU loses to Furman.

John Adams, former president of a sophomore class, was ready for his dunking two years ago. After being dunked in his swim suit he remarked, "You freshmen really have school spirit." Later, when he was fully clothed, those schoolspirited rats dunked him again.

"There's a definite purpose behind rat caps," reports Paul Ort, "which may not be obvious to all the dye freshmen. We hope that as the years progress the positive benefit and purpose of rat caps, court etc. will be clear to each of these students."

The sophomore class officers have conducted a survey of last year's frosh and will do another such survey with this year's freshmen in order to make a comparison of all phases of freshmen hellishness. With this information we hope to improve the hazing period for the future," Ort concluded.

FRESHMAN STUNTER performs for Freshman Stunt Night held last week. Miss Vock is shown here doing her interpretation of "In a Persian Market."

Frosh Shiver, Upperclassmen Gloat As New 'Frantic' Semester Begins

By OSCAR JOHNSON

What does it all mean?

Every time a new fall semester begins at Florida State University, Tallahassee is abruptly released from the doldrums of the summer and plunged into the sometimes - brawling, sometimes-bawling, but always unpredictable life of the university town. What does the new semester mean to those who have a hand in the Changeover?

The Freshmen: They shiver in agony through the ritual-like ordeal of orientation, registration, and above all, welcoming. After receiving two dozen assorted "Welcome to our campus, kids!" they grow weary of the various ceremonies connected with coming here and are revolted by the first hint of another.

WELCOME, FRESHMEN

The Upperclassmen: An upperclassman is the highest form of life to be idealized by all Freshmen. They find great amusement in the gaming Freshmen, who usually look at everyone else nervously, wondering if "He's the type that will report me if I don't greet him." A few—Sophomores for the most part, who remember the preceding year—go as far as to call down the frosh for their sins.

The Freeloaders: "Time to get more meal ticket in time for me to prepare another welcoming address?"

The Seniors: "Oh—just one—more year and I'll be out of this hole!"

Campus politicians: Another chance to stump valiantly, though the odds are hopeless, against the might of the Machine overlordized by the Ruthless Masters.

The professors: More paychecks . . . a chance to put into practice the evil schemes conceived over the summer . . . nightmares at banks, mailbox, quiet hours, basketball team wins at wins, the big class of the week: cold, end of courses we came out of registration with.

AND AN ANSWER: "Yours is the ground by students trying to

All the students: Cursing at buses, mailbox, noise during quiet hours, heat, football team wins, it loses, eight o'clock classes, exams and the courses we come out of registration with; blessing the buses, mailbox, quiet hours, heat, football team wins at wins, the big class of the week: cold, end of courses we came out of registration with.

AND AN ANSWER: "Yours is the ground by students trying to to do and die."

News For Veterans

Nearly 3,200,000 veterans and certain dependents of deceased veterans will receive a 5 percent increase in monthly compensation and pension payments effective October 1, 1954, under two bills passed by the President recently.

Flat increases in excess of 5 percent were granted to widows and dependent parents of wartime veterans whose deaths were attributable to service.

Veterans Administration said the increases are automatic and will be included in checks mailed at the end of October. VA requested veterans and dependents NOT to write to the agency concerning the increases because they are payable automatically.

VA explained that compensation is payable for service-connected disabilities or deaths and that pension is payable for non-service-connected disabilities or deaths.

Veterans planning to go to school this fall under the Korean GI Bill may have been told by the Veterans Administration that the money they earn in after-school jobs will have an effect on the GI allowances paid them by the Government. The Korean GI Bill does have a provision for on-the-job trainees only. It does not apply to veterans in the classroom.

While a veteran's on-the-job training wages plus his GI allowance exceed $310.00 a month, VA scales down the allowance accordingly, to bring the total within the $310.00 limit. Starting allowance rates for Korean GI Bill trainees are $70 a month, with no dependents; $85 with one; and $105 with more than one dependent. These rates are reduced at four-month intervals, as training progresses and veterans' earning abilities increase.

The rates for veterans in school full-time are $110 with no dependents; $135 with one dependent; and $160 with more than one dependent. VA explained that, since the law allows a veteran only one change of program, he should make sure he chooses the correct program. If in doubt he need only fill in the appropriate space regarding counseling on VA's application form for Korean GI Bill training will in advance.

The only World War II veterans still eligible to start training are those who were within four years after their discharge from World War II service WITH a few exceptions all World War II GI Bill training comes to an end on July 25, 1956.

The most disabled World War II veterans. Public Law 16 training must begin in time to be completed by July 25, 1956. But disabled World War II veterans in any of the three special categories will have four years added to the 1956 deadline. They must finish Public Law 16 training by July 25, 1960.

Meyer New Head Of Oceanographic Studies At FSU

Dr Samuel L. Meyer, Professor and head of the department of botany at Florida State University, has been named Director of the Oceanographic Institute by president Doak S. Campbell.

Dr. Meyer will replace Dr. Harold J. Humm, who resigned to accept a position as professor of botany at Duke University.

New members on Dr. Meyer's staff include Dr. Robert H. Williams, who will be professor of marine science in the institute; Dr R. Winston Menzel, assistant professor of marine science, who has specialized in studies of fouling and boring organisms in the Gulf of Mexico and the biology of oysters, and Dr. Robert K. Godfrey, associate professor of botany and curator of the Herbarium, who will have charge of the work in taxonomy of the higher plants and plant ecology offered by the department of botany.

FROSH: WEAR CAPS!

Freshmen must wear their rat caps to football games, Paul Ort, sophomore class president, has announced. In a notice to the freshmen, he said this means that caps must be worn arrive within a few days but that freshmen who are without them NOW will obtain written excuses until more caps are available. Sophomore Council girls or Alpha Council boys can write excuses, he added. Upperclassmen were asked to check the Rat Court rules and freshmen are warned they must present their ID cards when apprehended for infractions of those rules.

Half-time Show Featured Band, Majorettes

Florida State University's Marching Chiefs presented an intricate display of marching maneuvers, tempered with dancing specialty numbers, during their opening half time show Saturday night.

Their theme for the evening, in honor of the Georgia southerners as well as the Tallahassee rooters, was "Deep in the Heart of Texas." The band entered playing "Ditzie," and immediately presented a dance number to the Dark Town Strutters Ball," featuring the eight majorettes.

Temporarily out of their familiar Indian garb, two black, furry, Ed Franklin and Dick Puchett, performed a soft-shoe ballet routine to "Mr. Bones Over a Banjo," while the band formed a banjo.

Paula Parsons, Miami freshman, presented a baton routine, to Harold Alexander's trumpet interpretation of "Beautiful Dreamer," followed by a band maneuver to a number featuring the trombones.

"Dry Bones," a familiar spiritual was given a novelty treatment by the band, as they brought the sections of a mammoth skeleton together before the 19,000 grid fans gathered at Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

In honor of the Bulldogs, the band played the Georgia fight song, and immediately followed this with the FSU Fight Song, again featuring the majorettes in a dance number.

Climaxing the show was the Florida State University Alma Mater played from a triple FSU formation by the band.

Assistance Offered To U. S. Students For Spanish Study

Scholarships for study in Mexico during 1955 will again be offered by the Mexican Government it has been announced.

Open to graduate and undergraduate students with a knowledge of Spanish, the awards are made through the Mexico-United States Commission on Cultural Cooperation. Awards are for the academic year beginning March 1, 1955. Closing date for applicatio is November 1, 1954.

Requirements for the Mexican Government awards are: U. S. citizenship, knowledge of Spanish, a good academic record, a valid passport or passport and good health.

The five undergraduate and eleven graduate scholarships are expected to cover tuition and full maintenance. Applicants should have other funds for incidental expenses and travel costs.

For further information, applicants may write to the Institute of International Education which is administering the awards for study in Mexico.

Frosh Are Greeted By Faculty, Band, Orientation Week

With a bon and skup, robed faculty members came down the side of the amphi-theater on Sunday night, September 12 to greet the Freshman class at their first convocation.

Upperclassmen attending this frosh meeting were startled as the faculty progressed to the jivey beat of Dan's Town Strutters Ball in place of the usual "Pomp and Circumstance."

University Chaplain, Dr. Samuel Neel, gave a short devotional followed by Dr. A. B. Martin's address.

The Freshmen class was divided into two groups, one in the Amphitheater and one in Opperman Music Hall for similar meetings.

Cheerleaders lead by Betty Ann Monroe introduced FSU cheers to the group while the marching band under the director of Manley Whitcomb played the Alma Mater and other cheering songs.

The French Order of the Legion of Honor was established by Napoleon to recognize civilians as well as military service of distinction.

'International' Club Organizes For '54; Plan Meet, Outing

The first meeting and outing of the Florida University International Students' Club are planned for the near future, according to spokesmen.

The meeting will be held in the Student Lounge of the Union Building next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., the outing is planned for Sunday, September 26.

Eight cars will leave from Longmire Building front entrance between noon and 12:30 for Alligator Springs, and will return to Tallahassee at approximately 5:30 p. m. Spokesmen urged all members to attend, on time, and said that in the eventuality of rain, the outing will be postponed.

Students' Open Letter

By WILLIE SMITH

Her Students:

It look as if Florida State University has graduated from the "small time" to the "big time." You left your "small" stuff At the pep rally Friday night, there was displayed a terrific amount of enthusiasm and the spirit of the students has never been better. Everyone was behind the team one hundred per cent. It looked as if the student body would go right along with the move to make FSU a "big power" in the football world.

What happened ft the game, then? The frosh still showed the same amount of vigor and vitality that characterized the excellent rally. However, that's where it ended. With nineteen thousand people watching the team do justice to the school, student body, coaching staff, and to themselves, the crowd showed little enthusiasm of the proceedings.

We have a bunch of boys who are playing an excellent brand of ball and who have tackled a schedule that is an extremely difficult one. They have conditioned their minds to the fact that they are now in the "big time" and will do their best for the school. The students also have to graduate and condition their minds to the fact that, instead of going only half way in backing the team, we have to go all the way and stand in back of them, whether they do have a successful year or not.

It must be a funny sight for a student from another school to come here and witness a game where the spirit compares to a little school and not that of a large university where the enrollment is six or seven thousand.

Let's get with it students. There is definitely a lack of spirit on the campus and it certainly is essential for the team and will give to the visitor a much better impression of the student body. It will also look as if we want a team and will show the players that we are behind them instead of just giving out with a cheer when things are going our way.

Abilene-Seminole Battle Slated For Tomorrow Night

Seminole Spotlight

By Jimmy Joanos
SPORTS EDITOR

ooking Ahead—

The old saying goes, "Hitch your wagon to a star." d this seems to be the policy in regard to football at anda State University. This attitude has played high ands. Seven short years ago FSU played its first e of modern day football. Today she stands as one of ny nation's major teams.

Realizing that success in the future relies to a de- e on the outcome of the present first seasonal encount- to the big time, let's take a brief look at the Semi- es 1954 opponents.

Against a defensively strong University of Georgia m the Seminoles were impressive in their defeat Saturnight.

Abilene Christian enters the game with FSU tomor- night with virtually all of the men who handed the minoles a 20-7 setback in 1953. Twenty-six lettermen e returned to the ranks of the Wildcats from last sea- 's squad. The combination from quarterback Leondous n to end Von Morgan is a potent passing weapon.

SU Travels—

On October 2 FSU will journey to Louisville, Ken- cky to tangle with a University of Louisville eleven st on climbing back onto the road of victory. The Card- als will be led by quarterback John Unitas—a good man anybody's game. Unitas is an excellent field general, defensive standout, and takes a backseat to no one as a ser. The 1954 Cardinal team is composed of 15 letter- n, 10 other returnees from 1953, and around 30 first ars. Last year the Seminoles blasted Louisville, 59-0.

Villanova will bring a sophomore-laden squad to Tal- hasee on October 9 for its clash with the Seminoles. Re- ning standouts from last season include 205-pound full- k Jack Helm, halfback John Giordano, defensively ong center Nelson Marshall, and tackle Joe Leichweis, weights in at 225.

North Carolina State, with new coach Earle Edwards, s host to the Seminoles on October 16. NC State is at- pting to rebuild its team after a highly unsuccessful ason. Last year the Wolfpack failed to defeat one opponent—Davidson. The Seminoles in 1953 soar- over them by a 23 to 13 score.

burn Rough—

Auburn, FSU's October 23 opponent, appears at pres- to be the roughest team on the entire schedule. Au- n's versatile end Jim Pyburn rates as one of the na- 's best. George Atkins is a fleet, hard-charging, 198- ound guard. Star halfback Dave Middleton weight in at und can cover a hundred yards in 9.8. These are only ew of a host of stars on the Plainsmen squad.

The VMI Keydets, who will meet the Seminoles Octo- 30, in Lynchburg, have a serious line problem. The returning lettermen in the front wall are guard Boxley, tackle Bill Miller, and Co-Captain tackle Byrd. In the backfield however, Mike Foley and Servidio lead a host of gifted ball-carriers. FSU de- ted the Keydets last season, 12-7.

The Furman Purple Hurricane comes to Tallahassee mber 13 for the Seminoles' Homecoming battle. Fur- ny way of graduation has lost 17 men from the team defeated FSU in 1953, 14 to 7. Furman's hopes ride a powerful passing backfield and a rising group sophomores in the line.

rson Lacks Depth—

Stetson University (November 29 opponent of FSU) is ously hampered by injuries and lack of depth. Less twenty lettermen are back in dress for the team's opening game tomorrow with Davidson. Stetson is t heavily on an improved passing attack. FSU best- Stetson last season in a homecoming. Campbell Stadium ll be 6

Mississippi Southern, victors over mighty Alabama t week, will meet the Seminoles on November 27. They e several outstanding backs and the line is filled by capable men. In last season's meeting FSU fell at nands of the Southerners 21 to 0.

Tampa University, FSU's final season opponent (Dec.) defeated Mexico City College 31 to 6 last week. Last the Seminoles trounced the Spartans 41 to 6.

Going to be an interesting season for football, fans predictions, I like to feel that we are going to win the rest. but for the record I say that we will end the with a won 8' lost 3 accomplishment.

Gymnastics "Backbone" Back For '54 Competition

By BOB GUTTING

Victims of this year's veteran ing team will probably re- ding lettermen Don Holder, Ra- Hearn, Duncan McKee and Don Pretaser, all of Denver, Colorado, and Laird Anderson of Atlanta, ia. All have been active members and city wide competition and ve proven invaluable to the Seminole gym team.

Dick Gutting, National AAU and NCAA all-around champion, will roster competition on the trampo- line for the first time in two years. Gutting, who won the 1953 NAAU title and retired, was hired as an instructor for each of the coming Pan Americas Olympic games to be held in Mexico City next year. He was winner of last year's NAAU trampoline title and would be on the games, but Dick decided it might be a nice trip.

Also bolstering this year's team will be several returning numeral men, those who competed for Flori- da State but did not win enough points to qualify for a letter. Among these are Gordon Lynn, Wilder, Bob Murray, Francis Con- ley, and Tom MacDonald.

has, Texas where he graduated from Jesuit High School.

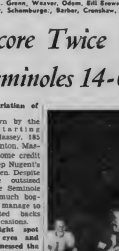
Georgia Bulldogs Score Twice To Beat FSU's 'Hard Smashing' Seminoles 14-0 Before 19,000

Dogs Score Early; Freshman Rodrigue Passes; Taylor Out

By PIERCE LEHMBECK

In their first bid for big time rating, the Seminoles of Florida State University lost last Saturday night to an outsized "University of Georgia squad, 14-0, in one of the most impressive battles ever staged in State's own Campbell stadium before a record crowd of 19,401.



From the fray's beginning it was evident that the Bulldog size was going to be a definite deciding factor, but in the battle that ensued, the homestanding Seminoles, through sheer courage and almost unbelievable individual effort, more than accomplished their purpose as they swung the eyes of the entire Southeastern United States to a heretofore unnoticed reservation of Indians (Seminole variety) in the capital city of Florida.

Coach Tom Nugent sent all of his varsity freshmen into the scrap and several covered themselves with glory as they performed unusually well, particularly every major newspaper in the south. Forwards, was freshman Ted Rodrigue, 192 pounder from Lynn, Massachusetts, who clicked nicely from the quarterback slot was the Seminoles' number one server in the back' of the Georgia offensive. In commenting on Rodrigue, Coach Nugent states that great things are expected from the former service all-star when he learns to master the FSU variatus of offensives.

Not to be outshown by the freshman upstart, starting quarterback Harry Massey, 183 pound senior from Canton, Massachussetts received some credit from his ability to keep Nugent's bag of tricks wide open. Despite the fact that the outsized Georgia line kept the Seminole razzle dazzle pretty much bogged down, Massey did manage to work his fleet-footed backs through on several occasions.

Actually, the bright spot that caught the eyes and hearts of all those watching the fray, was FSU's staunch defensive work, which, with exceptions of holding down George, six quarterback Jimmy Harper, who seemed to roam at will, was at a near-perfect stage. Georgia scored, Wally Butts, even went so far in commending as to point his finger at several Seminole linemen that he thought did a good job of keeping his offensive efforts pretty well cleared.

He specifically pointed out ends Tom Feamster and Jimmy Lee Taylor and guards Jerry Jacobs and Al Pacifico with a special pat on the back for tackle Al Mackowiecki who seemed to have a special knack for getting in the way of things. Although Butts didn't mention him, it must be noted that defensive halfback Leo Corso, second year man from Miami, assumed a virtual hero's role and put on a one-man defensive show stealing three of Georgia's thrusts from air and downing tremendous running power for his 185 pounds. Buck Mertz, 173 pounder from Sanford, also pulled down a Georgia aerial to add to the Seminole defensive show.

COLSO CARRIES—A sparkplug throughout the Georgia game, FSU's Leo Corso (No. 11) is shown above attempting to elude two Georgia tackles. Georgia won the game 14 to 0.

In commenting on the game, Coach Nugent stated that he was not entirely unhappy about the dubbing taken. "They were perfect," he said. "They (the Massey woulds's pass and they knew that was exactly what Rodrigue would do. When Massey was on the field, they used six eight man line, and you don't run against Georgia when they do that. When Rodrigue took the slot, they spread a sharp pass defense."

Nugent further pointed out that all linemen, whether starting or losing are never quite satisfied. His final comment? "Watch Abilene Christian!"

And this reporter's comment? Quite simple. "If it is possible to win on sheer courage and spirit, Mr. Nugent's boys will win more than their share."

Taylor And Metts Unlikely To Start

By ALAN WHITMARSH

Weakened by injuries to three of last week's starting players the Florida State University football team returns to the gridiron tomorrow night at Campbell Stadium, mingling with the Wildcats from Abilene Christian University.

Abilene Christian jumped into the nation's headlines last weekend when they amassed 41 points in the fourth quarter en route to smashing East Texas State, 41-19. This single quarter outburst sent the experts digging into the record books looking for a repeat performance of such high point tactics. To this date none has been found.

On the giber hand, the FSU Seminoles lost three of their starting players in dropping the opener to Georgia. Most serious of these losses was that of Jimmy Lee Taylor, outstanding FSU All-America end, who suffered a concussion and may be out for more than a week.

Also on the injured list is fullback Joe Holt who suffered a bruised hip and ankle. Neither he nor halfback "Buck" Metts, who has a dislocated shoulder, will start and both may be kept out of game action tomorrow.

On the bright side of the Seminole picture is the continued improvement of halfback Lee Corso and fullback John Ortner. Both were standouts in the Georgia game and will start Saturday's contest in place of Metts and Holt respectively.

One other change in the lineup is possible before game time. The outstanding work of freshman quarterback Ted Rodrigue has earned him a crack at the starting position held by Harry Massey. As game time approached, Coach Tom Nugent raised them "even" for the starting nod.

The Wildcats from Abilene are no strangers to Tallahassee, having journeyed here last year to stun the Seminoles 20-7. Although all of the members who helped beat FSU last season are back, licking for a repeat a week.

Like Florida State, Abilene also placed a man on the Little All-American squad. He's Von Morgan, an end who placed on third string last year, and is back looking for a first string berth this season.

Morgan caught more touchdown passes than any player in the country last year (10), and led his team in scoring with 78 points. He will team with his brother Leon, or Dick Lynsford at the ends. Lynsford also caught one touchdown pass last year.

The Wildcats are two deep in lettermen at every backfield position, providing them with one of the strongest benches in the nation. Quarterback Fry and quarterback, Tommy Morris and Jimmy Hirth at the halfbacks and Gene Boyd at fullback will probably compose the starting backfield.

However, right behind this combination is one composed of Joe Powell, Archie Campbell, Gene Cain and Paul Goad. Out of both of these combinations, only Morris is a senior, and Fry, Campbell and Cain are all sophomores.

One of the most potent Abilene scoring punches is the Fry to Von Morgan passing combo. Fry led the team in passing, completing 54 aerials last year, as a freshman.

Senior tackles Jim Cobb and Hadley Hooper lead the Christian line, which averages close to 200 pounds from end to tackle. Here again, the Wildcats are two deep at every position.

Meanwhile, in the Seminole camp, Coach Tom Nugent centers Hubert, Ackerman and Bill Cullom and of Frosh guards Al Makowiecki and Ray Mrazek has strengthened hopes of fortifying the middle of the Seminole line. Nugent is also backing on one or two occasions against Georgia.

However, junior Bob Crenshaw is still top man at center. Also in the picture is Jerry Jacobs will man the guards. Makowiecki and Bob Barber will cover the tackle positions, while Ben Leonard, substituting for Jim Richard Taylor, and giant Tom Feamster will probably open at the ends.

The starting quarterback slot will be manned by Harry Massey and Billy Graham will be halfback and Greg Grimes should start at full fullback. Dan Boudilas was outstanding in the opening encounter with the Bulldogs while Semnioles used all 15 freshmen in the opener, and most of them are expected to see action tomorrow night.

Both of these schools have young teams and are making their bid for big-time football recognition this season. This game is a big step up the ladder for both schools and could be one of the most interesting contests in Campbell Stadium this season.

Football Forecasts

By DAVID MORRIS

Florida State's ballooning football prospects continue to grow more and more comment in the annual national reviews as exhibited by this week's Sporting Event.

Probably the four best known reviews, Freddie Russell's Pinkin Preview in the Saturday Evening Post, Stanley Woodward in the Complete Football for 1954, Francis Wallace's Football Preview in Colliers, and Street and Smith's Pre-Season Review by Wilfrid Stewart, all point out the building job at FSU has already produced one of the top independent teams in the South.

Record watchers Florida State as threatening Mississippi Southern for the title of the giant killer, while Rolling the Seminoles in the above averages category.

Russell picked individuals Al Makowiecki and Buck Metts as star performers and Seminoles as a team more respectively for the Southeast.

Woodward favored the Tribe in seven of their eleven games, while Francis Wallace, after carefully making them underdog to Georgia, Auburn, Mississippi Southern, and strangly to Tampa. He named skyscraping end Tom Feamster to his All-American team. The well known sports scribe also selected Makowiecki as 4'ls Senth's top eighty players.

Wallace forecast a 7-4 total, which includes victories over Duke in his fifteen top teams of the Southeast.

Stewart, sports editor of the Memphis Commercial Appeal, favored State in the Southeast for only Auburn and Mississippi Southern in the role of favorites, while predicting a possible 7-4 season.

Seminole B Team Clashes With Tech Tonight In Georgia

Florida State University's junior varsity football team will swing into action tonight as it meets the Georgia Tech Yellow Jacket team in Montlerie, Georgia. The game is the first for the Seminole squad and it will give the Seminole coaches a chance to see what to expect in the future.

The event is scheduled to get underway at 6 p.m. in Moulitrie's new Rex Thorpe Memorial Stadium. More than 5,000 people are expected to be in the attendance.

The stadium was erected in the honor of Mack Thorpe, an All-American from Georgia Tech, that played for the Georgia Tech team in 1928. The building cost $100,000.

Mike Long, coach of the Baby Seminoles has named a starting number of high school gridiron stars that he hopes to make the varsity on his team.

The Seminole JVs will fun out in the following starting formation. These include the flash T. Tight T, and Double Wing. Tingy will also use the single wing formation.

Starting for FSU at the ends will be Bill Brown of Miami, Bill Hall of Sanford, and Bill Swilley of Albany, Ga. Tackles will be Jo-ha Craig, Tampa, and Jerry Bouchillas, Tampa. Panama City's Bobby Morris and Jerry Thompson of Birmingham, Alabama, will open at the guard slots. At the pivot slot, center will be Tom Bouchillas of West Palm Beach.

FSU halfbacks at the opening whistle are to be Jerry Henderson, Pensacola, and Emil Abood, Jacksonville. Fullback Bobby Barron Springs will get the starting nod at fullback. Mike Norman, Pensacola, will start the game at quarterback.

Presenting Dunkel Report; Abilene Favored

By DICK DUNKEL

College football will trot out its first full compliment of games this weekend, and special interest will center on the Notre Dame-Texas and Michigan State-Iowa collisions on Saturday.

Notre Dame, carrying over last year's 9-game Victory Index of 113.8, will open at home against it's traditional rival Pennsylvania with a 20-6 triumph over LSU.

Texas now rates 103.6, virtually points over the Irish figure. This means that on their comparative records since the beginning of the 1953 season, N. D. has been 9 points stronger, per game, against the same relative strength of opposition.

But this is a new year, and whether these figures will hold for a strong but untried Notre Dame squad, or an ambitious Texas is a matter that remains to be seen.

Michigan State (106.8), current Rose Bowl Champion, and Iowa (103.2), probably the nation's most improved team in 1953, will square off Saturday in Iowa City. There's less than a point difference in their ratings, and since both are expected to be better than good, their meeting may be one of the year's best.

Other top attractions of the weekend are listed below. The point-par or Power Index difference is given for each of these games. It is not a forecast. Instead, it shows how the opponents have compared to date, and by how much the favorite must win in order to maintain his rating.

Friday night: Denver 56 over Drake; Miami, Fla. 25 over Furman; and Southern California 16 over Pittsburgh.

Saturday—East: Army 18 over South Carolina; Columbia 1 over Brown; Cornell 8 over Colgate; Dartmouth 6 over Holy Cross 3 over Dartmouth; Navy 21 over Wm. & Mary; Princeton 8 over Rutgers; Syracuse 8 over Villanova; and Yale 19 over Connecticut.

Saturday — Midwest: Cincinnati 40 over Dayton; Colorado 37 over Colo. A & M; Detroit 3 over Bradley; Illinois 7 over Penn State; Kans. State 14 over Wyoming; Minnesota 15 over Nebraska; Northwestern 6 over Purdue; Ohio State 2 over Indiana; Oklahoma 15 over TCU; Purdue 6 over Missouri; UCLA 26 over Kansas; and Wisconsin 13 over Marquette.

Saturday—South: Arkansas 31 over Tulsa; Auburn 21 over Vanderbilt; Baylor 23 over Vanderbilt; Georgia 7 over Clemson; Ga. Tech 14 over Florida; LSU 2 over Alabama; Mississippi 2 over Kentucky; Miss. State 1 over Tennessee; No. Carolina 21 over N. C. State; Texas Tech 27 over West. Texas State; Tulane 1 over Mississippi State; and Wake Forest 15 over Va. Tech.

Saturday — Far West: California 15 over San Jose State; Oregon 6 over Pacific 2; and Oregon State 28 over Idaho.

The Power Index results from the combining of two factors—average scoring margin, and average rating of opposition.

P. I. pairings for next week-end's games to follow:

AIRPLANE CLUB

A hobby and model airplane club is now being formed at FSU. Officials for the club are Fred Yoest, Counselor for Student Organizations, had given approval to the present members to draw up a charter. The first meeting of the club will be held as soon as the charter members have consulted Fred Peacock at 721 West Hall.

The purpose of the club is to provide a means for students interested in hobbying, especially model airplane building, to get together. An early project is to secure a building for storing equipment and working on models.

Largest state fair in the country is the one pu; on each year by Texas. It drew 1,582,712 persons during a 16-day run in 1953.

Young Republicans To Form Club At FSU

By JEROME BERNSTEIN

"The inevitable (an idiom) occurred The Young Republicans of Florida State University are ready to submit before the Student Committee on Organizations a petition for approval to form a Young Republican Club on campus.

Members say it should prove very interesting to watch the club's procession to a full-fledged campus organization on this predominantly Democratic campus. Once approval is given, an aggressive campaign for student membership is expected to get under way. It should also prove an asset to the university founders say.

Daniel Gorham, organizer and founder of the Young Republican Club of West Palm Beach, and prospective member of the FSU organization, says that the club will offer a two-party forum on campus concerning local and national issues plus an opportunity for many students to take a close inside look at the Republican Party and find out what it really stands for.

Gorham went on to say that many students have shied away from anything resembling an elephant but that if they took a close look they would see not only what we are leaning for a challenge but serious intelligent people who want to improve their state government and feel the best way to do it is through the two-party system.

He clarified his last statement by saying that although there or four Democrats run in the primaries held throughout the state at election time, basically they are all for the same objectives and with not too much divergence in their methods toward reaching that goal. He added there were exceptions to the rule but few and far between.

When asked for more detailed information about membership, Gorham said that once the Student Committee on Organizations and Activities approvement is will be posted as to when and where the first open meeting will be held. The sign of the elephant will be predominantly displayed.

'Greek' Rushing Starts Tonight; 1200 Expected

Sorority and Fraternity rushing will get into full swing tonight when an estimated twelve hundred prospective rushees are entertained by the thirty-one "Greek's" here on the FSU campus.

Sorority rushing began last night and will continue tonight with formal receptions being held at the different houses. Tomorrow, each sorority house will give fies afternoon parties.

Sunday, the parties will begin at 4:45 p.m. and will end at 10 p.m. Schedules for 'Monday through Wednesday are the prerequisite parties starting at 5:30 p.m. and lasting until 9 p.m.

Dead day comes into effect Tuesday, September 28. During this day a sorority member can not communicate with a rushee. Wednesday, the rushee will sign a preferential card between 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. in the Panhellenic Office located on the fourth floor of the Alumni Building.

Thursday is another dead day. Girls who receive bids will be notified between 4:30-5 p.m. from the Panhellenic Office. Pledging will be held after 5 p.m. on Friday, October 1.

Organized fraternity rushing starts tonight with open house from 7 until 10 p.m. and continues Saturday from 2 until 5 p.m. Rush parties are scheduled from Monday, September 27, through Thursday, September 30. These parties may start no earlier than 5 p.m. and must be officially over by 9 p.m.

Informal open house may be held between the hours of 8:30 and 11 p.m.

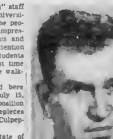
Quiet hours must be maintained Sunday through Thursday between the hours of 11 p.m. until 8 a.m. the following morning. Quiet hours are also in effect Thursday night at 11 through Saturday, October 2 at 8 p.m.

Fraternity rushees may pick up their bids from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. on Saturday in the Alumni Building. Pledging ceremonies will take place after 7 p.m. on Saturday.

'Freshman' Oglesby Is New Dean

By JERI BRADFIELD

Among the many freshmen who can be seen on our campus for the first time this year is another "freshman"—Florida State University's new Dean of Student Welfare, Dr. Ralph R. Oglesby, Dean of Students.



The new Dean likes to think of himself as just another freshman who has come to FSU to begin a "new adventure in life." Oglesby stated that he believes FSU is doing a marvelous job in the education of its students and is a firm believer in the fact that this University has "tremendous potentialities for the future."

Among the many reasons which Dean Oglesby said attracted him to FSU, were the "top notch" staff and faculty found at this University, and the friendliness of the people he has met. He is also impressed by the beautiful campus and the individual personal attention which is given to the new students who come here for the first time as well as to those who have walked these paths before.

Dean Oglesby transferred here from Oklahoma A & M July 15, where he held a similar position as Dean of Students. He replaces former Dean J. Roward Culpepper.

Kentucky is the home state of Dr. Oglesby. A graduate of Georgetown College in Kentucky and the University of Virginia, he earned his Ph.D. in political science at Duke and has done graduate work at Harvard and the University of Heidelburg in Germany.

Dr. Oglesby is a man of many travels across all sections of America, with an abounding knowledge about the counseling systems of other universities. He says he believes that FSU has one of the "very best systems in the country for counseling students" on the appropriate courses for them to take. He believes that this University is far ahead in its counseling system compared with other schools.

Dean Oglesby

According to Dean Oglesby, the University of North Carolina has just put into practice a counseling system very similar to our own. This makes U. of N. C. a competitor of FSU in the field of vocational guidance and counseling for what was going to make any immediate changes in his department, Dean Oglesby said that he believes his department has a fine basic structure and there will be no major changes made.

"My main objective this year is to become acquainted with the students and be able to cope with their problems as a friend rather than as a Dean of Students," the new Dean stated.

Florida Coeds Vie For Title, Cotton Queen

FSU co-eds are invited to enter the 17th annual Maid of Cotton contest, the National Cotton Council, Memphis, Tennessee, announced today.

The winner will be selected from a group of 20 who will be chosen to participate in the finals in Memphis January 3 and 4.

Contest entry forms, the Council said, may be obtained from the National Cotton Council, P. O. Box 18, Memphis, and must be completed and returned postmarked no later than midnight, December 1.

The winner, who will be chosen on the basis of "intelligence, personality, and poise" as well as appearance" will represent the Cotton industry on a tour of some 40 cities in the United States, Canada and Europe.

The 20 girls who will be selected from the entries will compete in the finals by means of personal interviews with members of the judging committee, photographs, luncheons, a dinner-dance and a public appearance at Memphis' Ellis Auditorium, the Council said.

Awards Announced By Fullbright Group For Academic Year

The United States Government Fullbright Awards for the academic year 1955-56 have been announced by the Department of State and the Board of Foreign Scholarships.

The awards are offered exclusively for university lecturing and for research at the post-doctoral level, and applicants must be U. S. citizens. Those applying for lectureships are expected to have at least one year of college or university teaching experience in the U. S. or abroad. Other qualifications include possession of a doctoral degree from a recognized institution, at the time of application.

Specialists in such fields as library science, social work, adult education, nursing and museum and art gallery methods may apply for either lecturing or research awards and will be considered eligible if they have completed their formal undergraduate and post-graduate training and have been established in their professions for several years.

Religious Groups Welcome New Students

By STAFF WRITER

A student's religious affiliations do not cease when he comes to FSU. Regardless of his denomination, there is a place for him on the campus.

The Wesley foundation located at 705 West Jefferson Street, is the Methodist Church on the University Campus. Under the directorship of Deaconess Alpharetta Leeper, the student house has varied events throughout the week.

Some of these are the choir, conferences, Wesley players, study groups, work shops, and informal recreation, besides the regular Sunday School and Fellowship at the center.

Of interest to the Baptist students is their student union which is located on 602 West Call Street. Its purpose is to link the University Baptist Student to a local Baptist Church while in the university.

Some of their activities are Vespers, YWA., Brotherhood, FSU Choir, Morning Watch, Baptist Players, open house, coffees and group parties. A library, radio, piano, ping-pong and other games are available. Marr Elizabeth Ainsworth, who lives in the student house acts as director.

Miss Miriam Wilson is the director of the Presbyterian Westminster Fellowship located on Park Avenue across from the Amber House. All wee-day activities take place at the house, but the Sunday services are observed at the First Presbyterian Church of Tallahassee.

This church is the eldest one in Florida still in use. The balcony which was once used to house the slaves when they came to church with their masters is still in use.

For the Episcopal students, Rose Hall is located at 655 West Jefferson Street, south of the University library. It is a student parish with a student vestry, chapel and chaplain.

Rev. Wailey K. Morley is chaplain, advisor and friend to the students. The South Lawn of Rose Hall will be the site of a new church which the Canterbury Club plans for the future.

In the meantime the lawn is used for recreation and outdoor gatherings. Students play volleyball, badminton and pingpong as well as practice golf on the per three "18th" hole which was established during summer school.

The Hillel Foundation for students of Jewish faith has many religious, social, and cultural activities planned for the coming year. All their services are held in the Temple Israel on South Augustine and Copeland Streets.

The Newman House Catholic organization is housed on College Avenue The Newman Players, well known for the many fine plays they presented last year, is one activity of the Newman House. Their three objectives are religious, intellectual, and social. Father Salvatore Profetta offers counsel to students at all times.

The famous St. Cyr Military Academy of France celebrates its 150 birthday this summer.

Dr. Koos Publishes Book On Sociology

Dr. Earl Lomon Koos, professor of social welfare at Florida State University, has published the second edition of his book "The Family of the Patient."

In his book, Dr. Koos discusses nurse's need for understanding patients as individuals. The 28,000 square feet in area have also patient relationship is shown as having a direct bearing on illness. He stresses that a nurse should understand the relationship of her patient to family, friends, school, job and community.

Dr. Koos is a member of the Advisory Committee for the National Council's study of nursing in the future.

Questionnaire Reveals Why Freshmen Chose FSU in '54

The old question—why a person chooses a particular college or university—may soon be answered through a questionnaire given to the freshmen last Friday.

Helicopter landing stations

The freshmen were asked to rate numerous factors of college life in relation to the importance these elements carried in determining their choice of university.

The Florida State University Department of Public Relations administered the questionnaire as part of a program conducted by District V of the American College Public Relations Association. Similar questionnaires were distributed at other schools throughout the Southeast, according to Lloyd "Dey" Olson, chief of the Bell News Bureau, who supervised the questionnaire.

The results, Olson revealed, will be compiled locally and made available to The Florida Flambeau. They will then be forwarded to the Association for analysis along with the information from other schools.

The freshmen were asked to rate such factors as publicity about the university, university extracurricular activities and similar publicity according to their influence on the student's choice.

Also rated were the influence of relatives, teachers, college representatives and other contacts. Special advantages and attractions of the college constituted a third category.

In addition, the freshmen were asked to fill in the three most important factors affecting their choices.

In FSU's case, the survey will also show how fraternities and sororities, use of the semester system, relative lack of Saturday classes, the school's being a state university and co-educational, and its size affected the freshmen's choices.

Frosh To Appear Before Rat Court For Punishment

Amphitheater Trials To Begin Tuesday Announces Paul Ort

Rat Court will hold its meetings in the music amphitheater, open to all students, according to Paul Ort, sophmore class president. The first meeting, he said, will be 7:30 Tuesday night.

A freshman apprehended for not observing the Rat rules will be required to present his ID card to the upperclassman, who, according to Ort, may report the violation and the Rat's bob number by campus mail to "Rat Court, 17 Longmire Campus Mail." At the Tuesday night meetings, he said, both the freshman and the accuser must appear, with the accuser acting as primary witness for the prosecution.

According to a bulletin distributed to the freshmen, they may be brought to Rat Court for any of the following offenses: Not wearing their caps until 5 o'clock each afternoon Monday through Saturday, not knowing the names of student body, sophomore class, and Honor Court officers, not knowing the words and tunes of the FSU Fight Song and the Alma Mater; not greeting upperclassmen; not knowing the Honor Pledge and not being able to quote the sophomores' definitions of both freshmen and upperclassmen.

According to Ort, both the accuser and defendant will be notified when they are to appear at Rat Court. The upperclassmore class officers and Rat Court would appreciate notification in the event that an accused freshman or his accuser will not be able to appear at court," he added.

Membership of the Rat Court, he said, consists of Dusty Rhodes, chief justice, Roger "Bear" Berry, Danny Rodrigues; Ruth Renshaw; Barbara Hughes; Shirley Morgan; Martha Sue Miller and Pat Moore, alternate. "In addition," stated Ort, "the sophomore class officers will serve on the Court from time to time."

Ort said that veterans will be exempted from the Rat Court rules if they request such exemption, and will be expected to cooperate in the freshman initiation program.

"Penalties will be issued so that they may be of some benefit to the students as well as the school," said Ort. "We will try not to make any punishment a hardship to the accused."

Ort is a traditional aspect of college life," he added. "We expect that all freshmen will realize the spirit of fun behind it and cooperate. We would like to remind them that they are the sophomores of next year."

Ort declined to describe the penalties which lie in store for recalcitrant rats, but noted glibly, "There is a rumor that in the event of an accused Rat's ignoring his summons to Rat Court he may have midnight visitors."

Agricultural fairs have been part of American life for nearly 150 years.

Date Extended For Campus Fund From October 10 To October 23

Campus Chest, Florida State's only charity drive, will be on campus October 10 to October 23, Mary Fenn Cawthon, publicity chairman, reports. "The time has been extended for two weeks instead of the usual one to allow each organization, sorority fraternity, and dorm to participate."

This year's chairman Shirley Traxler and her committee has set the goal of a dollar per student. The theme is "All Hands Help." Projects as in previous years will be used to raise money.

Among the annual projects are: Sigma Chi's Derby, Sigma Kappa's Variety Show, Tri Delt's Fashion Show, Pi Phi's Pie Sale, Alpha Xi's penny sale; Pi Kappa Tau's balloon sale at the October 9 Ball Game, and Sophomore Council's Faculty Auction on Oct. 18.

Last year over $2,700 was raised and appropriated for the following: 50% United World University Service, 10% Heart Fund, 10% United Negro College Fund, 10% March of Dimes, 10% International University of Japan, and 10% Tuberculosis Society.

The Campus Chest committee made up the allocation of money, which was indorsed by the Student Body Senate.

"The purpose of Campus Chest, organized in 1947, is to eliminate all various charity drives during the year and give students a chance to share their material possessions with others," reported Shirley Traxler, general chairman.

Next meeting of Campus Chest will be Tuesday, Sept. 28, at 4 o'clock in the Student Leange of the Longmire Building. "All students," says Miss Traxler, "are urged to participate in the drive and receive some of the enthusiasm and inspiration the committee has."

This year's emphasis is on foreign students and international relations. Already the International University of Japan has expressed their appreciation for our donations by sending FSU a cherry tree to plant on campus.

A Campus Chest Dance will be held on Oct. 15, from 8 till 12 p.m. in the Suwannee Room. Three combos and one orchestra including the Ravens and Commoders will play continous music for dancing.

Campus Chest committee chairmen are: Jimmy Jones, fraternities; Mary Grace Sheehan, sororities; Harriett Lowe, women's dorms; Dick Wagner and Clyde Walker, men's dorms; Barbara Kading, treasurer; Susan Limebaugh, organizations; Cookie Turknett, dance chairman; and advisers, Mrs. Dutchess, Fred Veyel, and James Carr.

Camp Hostess Issues Call For Parties, Group Reunions

By RUTH M. DEKALB
Camp Hostess

There are so many "must do's" for a freshman that adding one more might seem heaping insult upon injury but this is an important addition to that list. Start Getting The Camp Habit Right Now.

Already, even before school began, "The Reservation" has resumed activities. Seventy-five Baptist students in session from Friday to Sunday to link themed their Training Union Program, and board addressed by Dr. Sam Neel and Mrs. Doak Campbell, Tonight, September 24th, Jane Sapp, heading Women's Sophomore Council, will pilot that group through an overnight party in Cabin Four.

For such groups, and for all students, faculty and staff members, the camp operates year round, full time during school sessions, but on a curtailed basis and for faculty-staff only during vacation periods. Although Mother Nature has temporarily withdrawn her support there's still enough Lake Bradford left to furnish a pleasantly watered view, and canoes are still piping, but swimming — shall we say?—is optional.

Barbecue ovens for cook-out parties, and lots of picnic tables constantly draw interested food hunters, while the sports-minded camp-comer may play shuffleboard, badminton, volleyball, ping pong or fling the horseshoe till he's exhausted. When he gets that way there's a snack bar for his patronage.

Students pay no money, need no mysterious pass word to get into camp, but you must have your "ID" card with you.

If students want the use of one of the two dormitory-rec hall-kitchen-equipped buildings for a group six or more is the rule; they must be sure to make a reservation soon in the office of camp director Miss Mary V. Alexander, Room 212, Women's Physical Education Building. Miss Alexander is in her office on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.

For information students may telephone Dr. DeKalb, camp hostess at 2-2212, but all reservations must be confirmed personally in the camp office two weeks ahead of the date desired, if possible.

Gene Austin, Song Writer And Stylist, Performs At Party

Gene Austin, famed song stylist and composer, entertained at a small party Tuesday night in the home of Professor and Mrs. Earl Vance.

Noted perhaps best for his popularization of "My Blue Heaven" which has sold over 4 million copies, he has been a popular figure on the American musical scene since the 20's.

He has a gold record of this tune on display in the Smithsonian Institute. Among his most famous numbers are "Look Down That Lonesome Road" and "When My Baby Walks Down The Street".

In addition to his wide repertoire of songs, Austin told of experiences stemming from his long relationship with other musical figures. Fats Waller, Jimmy Welker and Louis Armstrong.

He and his wife stopped over in Tallahassee for a new days to visit before going on to Miami. While here, they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Cobb, FSU alumni.

Progressive Construction Plans For FSU Advancing

FSU To Spend Six Million In 'Latest' Building Program

Westcott Auditorium Near Completion; Two Others Ready

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

With increased enrollment heightening the overcrowded situation, FSU plans to spend close to 6 million dollars for construction alone in a building program now under way.

Already completed are the new Demonstration School on Call Street across from West Hall and the new prolon) building on Woodward Street across from the Student Center. Westcott Auditorium is nearing completion and is slated for use by the time of the first Artist Series Program in December.

Work has begun on a men's physical education building and gymnasium between West Hall and Campbell Stadium, and a general classroom building on W. Call Street across from Landis Green. The north end of Landis Green will be the site of the new library. Awards to the office of the resident engineer. Bids on the library are to be let within a month.

Grady W. Rea, university comptroller, lists the estimated cost for construction alone at $5,770,000. Broken down, the estimate shows an approximate $335,000 for Westcott Auditorium; $350,000 estimated for the Geology Building; $1,035,000 for the Demonstration School; $2,100,000 planned for the library; $1,000,000 for the men's gymnasium, and $650,000 for the classroom building.

Westcott Auditorium will seat between 1600 and 1650 persons, according to university sources.

Delivery of the chairs was held up, these sources illustrate, because the produce of the low bidder proved unsatisfactory, and the University had to rebid the order. A new manufacturer has been selected and the agent handling the line is under performance bond to complete the project although the order has not been written, according to the Flambeau's source. It is expected that the auditorium will be ready shortly.

Roughly three-quarters of the audience will be accomodated in the orchestra with the remainder of the seats in the balcony, a trial to the uncompleted hall revealed. The auditorium is constructed similar to Opperman Music Hall, so that no two surfaces are parallel, thereby improving acoustics by removing possibility of echo. The auditorium boasts numerous convenient exits and a lobby replete with marble flower boxes.

Westcott Auditorium replaces an earlier auditorium which stood until 1953, when settling of the building's foundation cracked the structure in half, causing it to be condemned.

The geology building, whose classrooms are in use now, consists of three main floors and a basement floor, all well lighted and ventilated. A statistical laboratory is housed in the basement. Construction began in the spring of 1953 and the building was completed during the summer of 1954.

The Demonstration School consists of nine connected units, including a gymnasium - auditorium and cafeteria. Each classroom is adjoined by its own rest room. Removal of the school to its new building releases the old structure on the main campus for university classes. It is now being used mainly by the English, Modern Language and Philosophy and Religion departments.

The new library, which will absorb the largest single amount of money, will be four floors high, topped by a penthouse which will contain air conditioning equipment. All present departments of the library will be accomodated in the new building. Added features will be seminar rooms and space for the School of Library Science which is presently located four blocks from the library building.

The classroom building will have space devoted to biological science and biological equipment, including laboratories faculty and graduate research laboratories, offices, a herbarium, aquarium, animal room, dark room, greenhouse, departmental offices, and auditorium.

TO SANDWICH WEST CALL STREET—Shown above are artist's conceptions of two new buildings which are to rise on opposite sides of West Call Street. In the top drawing is the new $2,000,000 library which will occupy the North end of Landis Green. Bids are to be let shortly for its construction. In the lower photo is drawn the new classroom building which is now under construction. The building, which will be located between Sanor Hall and the library, will house equipment and classes for botany and zoology.

MEN'S GYMNASIUM TO RISE ON EAST CAMPUS—Shown above is an artist's conception of the new men's gymnasium on which work has begun. The building will be located just west of the R.O.T.C. area between West Hall and Campbell Stadium. Radio and TV facilities, ample gym area, classrooms and offices for the department, and folding spectator bleachers are among the advantages of the proposed edifice.

The building is to be air-conditioned, according to the Engineer's Office. It will be 3 floors high on one end and two on the other, according to blueprints.

The new men's gymnasium will be reached from Wildwood Drive, which will be paved and improved, according to Assistant Resident Engineer W. M. Bishop. Fill dirt taken from the construction site just West of the ROTC building will be deposited in the low area east of Campbell stadium, he added, and noted that the State Road Department will improve and pave all approaches to the gymnasium. A practice, par-3 golf course is also being built, he said. Gymkana, according to Bishop, will have a special outdoor amphitheater of its own.

The classroom and office part of the building, sections of which will be adaptable to air-conditioning, will flank the gymnasium area, which is 244 feet long. The gym floor will be spacious enough for three practice courts and a varsity court.

In addition to housing the departmental and athletic business offices, the building will have classroom space, radio and TV facilities, folding bleachers in the gym area, lockers, equipment rooms and bowling alleys.

This building program, since it involves non-residence construction, is financed by state appropriation, according to official sources. The buildings covered in this story are completed now, under construction or slated for construction in the near future. Envisioned in the more distant future is a new Home Economics Building.

FSU Rushing Scenes Bring On Controversy

By WILLIE SMITH

The hour of rushing is upon us once again. The bevy of rush and transfers are in a dither as to what to do. Time already seems short before Spirit have to choose to go "Greek" or remain independent. Their associates and friends are trying to talk them into going "my way." Things seem to be continually getting more and more complicated. To choose going one way or the other can be a most frustratin' experience.

The independents on this campus offer more for the fellow students than on most campuses. Usually, he not belonging to a frat or sorority at another university there is "nothing" for the student in the way of social or athletic life.

However, this is not the picture at FSU. The "Independents" here carry on a wide selection of social functions throughout the year. Their athletic setup is as good and often as much competition as do the "Greek Organizations." An independent on this campus should never feel that he is left out. There are enough varied activities for everyone to get his fill and have all the fun he or she wishes.

There are fifteen fraternities and sixteen sororities on the FSU campus. All offer essentially the same program: scholarship, athletics, and social activities. The organization is a tight little group made up of "Brothers or Sisters," who have similar interests and do most of their campus activities together.

When one considers joining the "Greeks," he must consider the obligations of affiliating with that organization, such as the extra monetary expense incurred which is not too much of an expense but an overpresent one.

As a pledge, he or she will have certain things to do that may seem purposeless at the time but which will have a definite meaning as to whether the individual fits into the organization or not and whether the organization fits around the person.

No matter what the new or old student chooses, there is fun and opportunity for all. This should not be a blind experience. Each and every student who is faced with this choice, should consider all the factors involved and should see to it that he or she has seen the ways of life of both sides.

A decision can be made in a second, but the effects will last throughout college, and that's FOUR YEARS.

Tampa Honor Grad Wins Fellowship Offered By Rotary

A Rotary Foundation Fellowship for graduate study abroad has been announced by the Florida State University Office of Vocational Guidance and Placement.

The Tampa Rotary Club, with 38 other clubs in this district, will submit a candidate for the fellowship. To qualify, a student must be an honor graduate, male or female, of the 1954-55 term, and be a resident of Tampa. The winner will receive one year of graduate study abroad.

All Senior students who meet the requirements and expect to be on the honor role are advised to contact Mrs. Bell at the Placement Office, 203 Westcott.

Senate Meets Tomorrow At State Capitol

State Of University Subject Of Address Slated For Nimkoff

The State Senate Chamber in the capitol building downtown will be the setting for President Pete Nimkoff's "State of the University" address to the Student Body tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Nimkoff's address was slated for that meeting of the school last Wednesday but was postponed tomorrow, when it became known that Senate would not have its session in the capitol.

Rules will leave from behind Broward Andierson at 4 p.m. for the capitol, the Flambeau learned. All interested students who wish to attend the meeting are asked to do so.

The Senate gallery seats several hundred and the chambers are air-conditioned.

President Nimkoff told The Flambeau yesterday that his address will recommend no special legislation, but that he will make no attempt to dictate to senate."

Nimkoff commented that "the Senate is particularly helpful and this session valuable," as he stated student interest and attendance.

Mayor Bill Stencil proposed here at last week's meeting that he had full support of University administration for

A positive vote for the award the way for holding meeting this week in the Senate chamber.

Stencil said that holding the meeting in more dignified surroundings would be educational as well as stimulating. According to the senator, if a town's meeting produces the desired results some Senate meetings might be in the capitol.

Stencil's recommendation for holding the meeting in the Senate chambers downtown in the Student Senate meeting echoed off as argument by Senator Jim Sales. Sales remarked that actions, not a unique setting, would improve the body and claimed that several floors on campus have a greater seating capacity than the Senate gallery.

According to a report in last Florida Flambeau, Senator Bobby Temple agreed partially with the suggestion that the Senate action unit just be Freshman elections.

Temple again said he was not in favor of the idea, but claimed that several floors on campus have a greater seating capacity than the Senate gallery.

'Authority' The Only Salvation For Students

By J. STANISLAUS PETROPOULASKOVITCH

(As told to Oscar Johnson)

NOTE: The following is a brief resume of material which Mr. Petropoulaskovitch is preparing for a thesis prospectus, intending to use it later in obtaining his doctoral degree in Socio-Ecological Methods of Quasi-Political Analysis.

It will call for three branches of government and delegate authority to each. It will include by-laws, the most important of which have already been mentioned.

To be headed by a President of the Student Body who shall supervise all actions taken under authority of the constitution. Election shall be by Council of Electors, appointed by the previous president. (In practice, the president's main duty will probably be merely to assume the powers listed under the By-laws.)

The executive branch will be the Secretary of Classes, Secretary of Faculty Control, Secretary of Administration, Conservation, Secretary of Discipline and Secretary of Public Relations. Appointed by the president, each will make daily reports and be responsible to him.

The Senate shall be composed of eight male and eight female representatives from each class elected by the alumni, who shall be presided over by the president of the university. The Senate shall have the power to pass any law necessary to the achievement of its purposes, on the basis of at least majority vote after written notice has shall be subjected to no form of veto.

The Senate shall have authority over student publications, which will have full right and duty to publish all material given them by the UGA.

The Senate shall have control over all rights of the students.

The Legislative Branch of the UGA shall be made up of men drafted from Florida high school graduating seniors, any students necessary to attain a 25 per cent increase in enrollment in the university each year.

This branch shall be composed of one court, the Court of Appeals. Presidential action shall not be referred to the court for decisions unless there exists written notice of objection by 25 per cent of the student body. Presiding in such cases will be the President of the Student Body, who shall act as Judge.

Senate laws will likewise be referred to the court if 95 per cent of the student body objects by written complaint. In this case, there will be no judge, but a jury composed of the 16 Senators who originally passed the law.

All decisions of the Court of Appeals shall be final.

There is considerable calling for the above to put into effect. Florida is overcrowding and has a big time university."

Walker Says Enrollment Is Not Complete

By BOB FOLSOM

Final enrollment figures are still incomplete, Registrar Charles S. Walker said yesterday.

He noted that people are still registering for classes and "wanted to wait until figures were complete, in about two weeks."

Information released last Thursday temporarily set enrollment figure at 9,611 students. This note a new all-time high for enrollment at Florida State University.

Mr. Walker said the number of veterans to enroll is climbing again. In giving a breakdown on veterals, he said 550 were enrolled under Public Law 550, while 100 were Public Law 18, and 340 for a total of 890 veterans enrolled at FSU. The last previous high for vets was 1,308 in 1947.

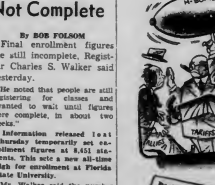
Also included in this breakdown are 212 sub-collegiate or special students.

Yesterday, the University released a report that more than 2,000 officers and airmen and marines from five service units are now taking courses via "Operation Bootstrap."

The "Bootstrap" program is a national training program of the Air Force in which instruction in college courses is provided for AF personnel in both undergraduate and graduate levels through arrangements with local universities, the release said.

Mr. Walker did not comment as whether this figure was also included in the total enrollment.

He said he was pleased with the increased enrollment, and that he had received no complaints about the shortage of living space on campus. During the first week of school, 400 men students were housed in the basement of West Hall. Twenty-two women students are still living in Cawthon Hall recreation room. Those students belong to Alpha Xi Delta sorority, which is waiting for completion of their sorority house.



The temporary figure of 9,611 students is an increase of 2,641 over last Fall's student enrollment of 6,970, or approximately a 23 per cent increase in overall enrollment.

The Florida plans FSU about 1,400 behind the enrollment at this time last year, when 11,000 had been taxed to capacity and many students were turned away because of the housing problem.

Court Rescheduled For Next Tuesday

The first meeting of Bat Court, "The Court Jesters," has been postponed because of the illness of Chief Justice Jerry Paul Ort, president of the Sophomore Class announced today.

Ort requested that anyone who have received summons to report next Tuesday, October 5, in the establishment of the first session on their respective summons. We think it best to postpone Bat Court for a week, thus avoiding absences and confusion," stated Ort.

Cheering Section Reserved; Freshmen On 45-Yard Line

Seats on the forty-five yard line are being reserved for a cheering section at future football games here, announced officials,recently. This section is to be composed mostly of freshmen "because freshmen have more spirit than upper classmen," revealed Mr. Fred J. Vogel, counselor for student organizations.

Any freshman who wants to sit in this section may pick up his ticket at Room 17 in the Longmire Building. This room is located in the Student Lounge in the basement. Any upperclassmen who want to help cheer may also sit in this section.

Mr. Vogel also suggested that any fraternity, security or other group that would like a block of tickets may obtain them there.

All students not working to sit in the special cheering section may pick up their tickets in the Athletic Office in the Student Center. They may be obtained from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day, starting Tuesday until 1:00 p.m. the day of the game.

"It must be emphasized that every student has to obtain his ticket at the Athletic Office before office closes because no tickets can be obtained at the gate, stressed Vogel.

More seats are now available since the band event moved out of the stadium to provide more room for students.

The object of the special cheering section is to encourage spirit and to offer more organized support for our hard-working team, commented Vogel.

Eight new plans are in progress to hold a large bon-fire pep rally before the FSU-Furman game October 2, on the south side of the Student Center. The band, cheerleaders and football team will all participate.

Head cheerleader, Betty Ann Mosley, said, "We are pleased with the way the students have improved in spirit" and would "like to see the whole school in each game throughout the year."

STUDENTS MUST MEET AT FLAMBEAU OFFICE

All students who have definite interest in working on the reporting staff of this paper are requested to attend a short meeting at 4 p. m. this afternoon in the Flambeau Office, second floor Longmire.

Annual 'Derby' By Sigma Chi To Start Drive

'Dollar Per Student Is Goal,' Chairman Traxler Announces

The Fifth Annual Sigma Chi Derby will be one of the first all-out fund-raising events during the Florida State University Campus Chest, only official charity drive held on campus.

This year's Campus Chest drive is scheduled for October 10 through 23 and the goal is one dollar per student. Last year $2,700 was raised.

The Sigma Chi Derby will be held on the band practice field Saturday afternoon, October 16 at 2 p.m., according to Graham Carothers, general chairman.

All sixteen sororities will compete for top honors in a variety of field and field events designed to entertain spectators.

As an added attraction, this year, a sorority-wide beauty contest will be held to select "Miss Derby of 1954." The winner will be crowned at an open dance at the Student Center at which Sigma Chi fraternity will be host and the "Devilaire," a five-piece combo, will furnish the music.

Other projects to be held in connection with the Campus Chest during the year are Sigma Kappa's Variety Show, Phi Delt's Pushton Show, Pi Phi's Pie Sale, Alpha Gamma Rho, Pi Kappa Tau's balloon sale at the October 9 football game and Alpha Omicron Pi's Beauty Action slated for October 19.

Publicity Chairman Mary Fean Cawthon agreed all fraternities, sororities and dormitories to decide on a program and turn it in to a committee chairman so that a misunderstanding will not be created for distribution on campus.

Committee in this matter are Jimmy Janos, fraternities; Mary Grace Shoemaker, sorority; Mary Fean Cawthon, women's dorms; Dick Wagner and Clyde Walker, men's dorms.

During the meetings, members of the University's administrative department, instructors, and student leaders are scheduled to be the guests. The meetings are held twice weekly in the Opperman Music Hall, with half of the faculty present each meeting. It is compulsory that all freshmen women attend these meetings.

"Stretch Your Religious Horizons," theme of the orientation meetings held September 28, and 29, will be Rev. Neal Underwood, Methodist Campus Minister, and Dr. Reuben Boyce, principal of the University High School, respectively, featured speakers.

The next of the series, "Look and Be Your Best," will be conducted by Mildred Morgan and Miss Lucy Lynn, October 5.

The final discussions will be conducted October 12, and October 14, under the direction of Dr. Hester Beard Members, with the theme, "Your Future Role in Student Government." At this meeting, Jerry Travel, Vice-President of Student Government in Charge of Women's Affairs, will be the speaker to the freshmen.

Miss Lynn feels the meetings have been very beneficial to the freshmen women and describes them as "a wonderful opportunity to help students find themselves in their new environment."

These meetings will be conducted in the Opperman Music Room in each hall, and subjects for discussion and explanation will include "Honor Code," and "Non-Academic Activities."

Lynn, Director 'Orientation' For Freshmen

A special orientation program for freshmen women on the FSU campus is being carried out this year, under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Lynn, Assistant Dean of Women.

Two of the series of meetings have been held, and two more are scheduled before October 14, the purpose of the program is to introduce the freshmen women to some of the new concepts of college life, which are not brought out in standard curriculum, Miss Lynn claims.

During the meetings, members of the University's administrative department, instructors, and student leaders are scheduled to be the guests. The meetings are held twice weekly in the Opperman Music Hall, with half of the faculty present each meeting. It is compulsory that all freshmen women attend these meetings.

"Stretch Your Religious Horizons," theme of the orientation meetings held September 28, and 29, will be Rev. Neal Underwoth Campus Minister, and Dr. Reuben Boyce, principal of the University High School, respectively, featured speakers.

November 13 Set For Graduate, Law Schools' Entrance Exams

Preliminary entrance examinations for Graduate and Law Schools have been announced by J. E. Terral, Director of Test Administration of the Educational Testing Service.

The Law School Admission Test, required of applicants for admission to a number of leading American law schools, will be given at 1,000 centers throughout the United States on November 13, 1954 and at four different times to be announced in 1955.

A candidate must make separate application for admission to each test center he wishes to attend and should inquire of each whether it wishes him to take the Law School Admission Test and when.

Since many law schools select their Freshman classes in the spring semester on the basis of candidates for admission to next year's classes are advised to take the test in November or the February test, if possible. The latter will be given on the 16th. Bulletins of applications for the test should be obtained four to six weeks in advance of the desired testing date from Law School Admission Test, Educational Testing Service, Box 592, Princeton, N. J.

The Graduate Record Examination, required of applicants for admission to a number of graduate schools, will be administered on October 30 and coming year at points throughout the country. During 1954, 54 nearly 8,000 students took the GRE in partial fulfillment of admission requirements of graduate schools which prescribed it.

This fall candidates may take the GRE on November 20, or in 1955 on January 27 or later. The Educational Testing Service advises each applicant to inquire of the graduate school of his choice which of the examinations he should take and on which dates.

Lambda Chi's Bell Will Toll FSU 'Scores'

When the Four-mastead schooner "Bert S. Bartlett" ran aground on Lambda Chi Alpha's lawn during a storm in December of 1926 the people of Florida were not to hear the last of this ship. Part of the ship was recently appeared on the Florida State Campus.

Once again the ship's bell will toll for the scores. This time not from a ship on the high seas but from the cheering section of the FSU-Furman game.

This summer the seventy-five year old bell was donated to Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity by Thomas Fountain, Jr., by an action by Lieutenant James B. Tippin of Vero Beach.

The presentation was made during which time not only be presents at all Seminole home games but will travel to Auburn, Sewanee and Furman games. The bell also will have the task of ringing the scores of the Big Orange will make a touchdown. They will also be in charge of keeping the bell's gleam agow.

TALLY-HO PICTURES Appointments Are Made

Appointments for Tally-Ho pictures have been made in the Tally-Ho office, announced Dec. 15. Office hours are from three to five, any day this week.

All students who haven't made appointments are urged to do so. Students are asked to be punctual, as the pictures are paid for in the student activity fee and every student will receive a copy in the spring.

Film To Reveal Strange Uses Marine Algae

Strange and surprising uses for Marine Algae of Florida will be revealed in a film of that name and subsequent discussion at a meeting tomorrow evening at 7 p. m. of the Biology Club in 306 Biology Building.

Dr. Robert H. Williams, professor in Marine Science, will present the film and explain the uses of the algae as well as the food cycle of the sea, as well as the economic uses to which marine plants are being put in the United States and the Western Hemisphere, the Flambeau learned.

"The human usually thinks of algae as a slimy and smelly type of marine life." Dr. Williams said, "but actually when growing they are, interesting and colorful and collector's items and for study."

Seaweed is producing the "Soilless Agriculture" of many cosmetic, pharmaceutical and food products," he related Dr. Williams. He added that these seaweeds constituents form the important colloidal substances and make them more valuable and useful than they were before seaweed was introduced.

"Commercial advertisers are trying to hide the facts that they have a superior product by using the scientific name of the particular seaweed derivative to our competition," commented Dr. Williams.

The meeting, film, and refreshment discussion hour are open to interested students and the public as well as members of the Biology Club, noted Dr. Williams.

Last Census Reveals Changes Affecting United States

By ORCHID ALONSO

(Ed's note—the following material is taken from a report from the Associated Press in many parts of the country. The report appeared in the July 7 issue of The Washington Post and Times Herald.)

It has been four years since the last census was taken, and enough data has been collected, according to census, to fill many more volumes than a five foot shelf with published summaries.

The first and foremost bit of news to come out of this last census is the population growth during the 1940's the birth rate picked up from its low mark during the depression to the point of hit its first high in 20 years. The highest increase to date has been recorded for 1950 with figures well over the most recent high in 1930, with 18 million more babies recorded for those two dates respectively.

According to these figures, the 19 million increase of 1950 is more than the total 16 million population was in 1840.

The report also revealed that the American people are growing older. Representing the claim figures which show that the proportion of people older than 65 has doubled between 1900 and 1950. Also, it was noted, by 1950, the life span had increased to 68 years, an increase of 2.3 years per person in a decade, to reach that age.

According to the tabulation, the trend towards older persons is expected to continue for at least two generations more.

The gain in life expectancy, it was pointed out, has not been equally divided between the sexes, however. In 1900, for instance, a girl child at birth is 72.6 years, for a boy it is 46.4 years. The difference in life expectancy means that the preponderance of female babies will rapidly after 50.

Another interesting addition to the census figures is that more and more people are getting educated. And incidentally, the greatest gain was where the 14 had previously been prominent—New York, California and Florida experienced a total gain of 2.5 million and 1.1 million respectively.

Every census, with the exception of 1940, has shown a large increase in urban areas over rural areas, and even today, with the shadow of thermonuclear destruction on large cities, cities are being built and existing ones are being treated. In 1900, the United States recorded 60 per cent of its population as living in urban areas, while in 1950, the recorded percentage showed a gain of approximately 10 per cent, with 70 living in urban areas, nearly reversing the figures.

Also, since 1930, the heavy Negro migration has resulted in more rapid urbanization of Negroes than whites. By 1950, 43 per cent of the Negro population and 57.5 per cent of the white population lived in cities. By 1950, 96 per cent of both groups were city dwellers.

Also noted in the census report was the various changes that have taken place in the industrial world. Notable is the rapid specialization and the progress in industrial machinery.

Another change in occupations and specialization is farm machinery. Now, 10 per cent of the nation's population is employed 20 per cent of all the farm products.

We Need Improvements In Our Football Seating

By WILLIE SMITH

It was noted last Saturday that 17,000 persons attended the FSU-ACC football game. Some individuals had bad tickets. The stands were not to near capacity. Yet, these people crowded themselves sitting near and even on the end zone. Everyone has to be spread out, when there was no need for it.

If student section was roped off seating arrangement students could be on the first serve boats. It would seem like a more suitable in the eyes of the students, if the student does find himself in a good seat, he will have only himself to blame.

Could this be one of the reasons why the school spirit at football games is at such a low ebb? When one finds himself next to a stranger, the inspiration is slowed and half as nearly as strong as when you're with a group you are more familiar with.

The cheerleaders are doing their part to arouse the normalized spirit of the spectators. Perhaps if some of the cheerleaders would go right into the stands, the student would get with it. Well, it works at other schools, and at this point anything would be an improvement.

Freshman Parsons Shows Superior Twirling Talent

By BERT BRAUN

A new figure marches with the FSU twirling maidens when the band takes the field for football Saturday this year. This tall lass is Miss Parsons, a freshman who the Seminoles clashed with the Auburn Tigers. Parsons, Freshman from Miami.

Her outstanding twirling technique won her an FSU scholarship. Basketing on her "career" in 1948 as a trainee under Bill Allen, then the National Baton Twirling Champ, she has since received much recognition.

Miami's Boy's Drum and Bugle Corps was the first marching group. Paula was a winner in the South Eastern Baton Twirling Contest for girls in 1950; the National Baton Twirling Championship in 1951; the Southern Championship in 1952; and '53; and '54; as a feature twirler at the Chicago All Star Game in 1953 and the Jamboree Republic West Indies Fair in 1953. She left Miami during the past summer.

National Baton Championship contest at the Chicago Musical Festival, 1951.

She graduated in the FSU Baton Championship, 1950, '51, and '52. For the past three years she has been a twirler solo rating in the district and state contests.

Working in conjunction with the Miami Jackson Baton Band, she met the present band director Bill Allen, then the National Baton Twirling Champ, she has since received much recognition.

State Party's Far-Reaching And Liberal Policy Needs Attention

Last spring the State Party won only 21 out of 75 student offices in the campus elections. Newly organized, it showed nonetheless that it could become a threat to the firmly entrenched Student Party, generally recognized as the leading party in student politics.

The State Party has now emphasized this threat by recently issuing what they term "The New Look," a program with ten progressive items.

These items display a liberal policy towards the student's welfare, and should not go unrecognized. They are:

1. We strongly advocate revision of the present "Cut" system which penalizes absences before and after holidays.

2. The State Party opposes any prior censorship of student publications in the form of a publication board. The publications should be responsible to the student body which finances them.

3. We favor student representation at meetings of the faculty Senate. Open doors could aid in improving faculty-student relations.

4. We favor a reorganization of the Court system. The University Court is cumbersome. It should be streamlined.

5. We advocate a reappraisal and reinforcements of The Honor System.

6. We oppose compulsory housing.

7. We favor an FSU Student Government charter from the Florida Legislature.

8. Some method should be devised whereby students are able to get a fair return on books which are not to be used again. The student's pocketbook should be considered.

9. A program of monthly forums on WFSU to encourage student interest and participation in student government activities.

10. We favor the organization of a day-student group to strengthen democratic representation at parties and in Senate.

Each of these items has a definite and far-reaching meaning, and if supported wholeheartedly by the students, would greatly enhance their position on this campus. We urge, now, at the beginning of the school year, that students participate in student government, regardless of party affiliation. In that way they can more readily learn of and support policies which will benefit them.
